However, the workers are awaking to the real nature of the capitalist government. The Young Workers (Communist) League of Kenosha intends to carry on an intense campaign amongst the national guardsmen to refuse to participate in strike-breaking activities against the heroic locked-out workers. At the same time the League will renew its efforts to rally the youth to support the strike by helping picket the mill. And along with all this, it will continue to expose the vacillating policies of the reactionary leaders. It will put forth more than ever before its militant policies of calling out the unorganized and all day mass picketing around both mills of Allen-A so that the strike will be won.

BIRDS OF A FEATHER

BERLIN, July 2 (U.P.).—Charles E. Hughes, who is visiting here, was received in audience today by President Hindenberg.

SAY PILSUDSKI AIM TO CRUSH POLE CHAMBER

See Resignation As a Mere Trick

KOENIGSBERG, East Prussia, July 2.—That the resignation of Marshall Pilsudski, premier of Poland, "because he was disgusted with parliamentarism," is a carefully calculated play directed towards a sudden crushing of even the semblance of parliamentary rule in Poland, has been virtually substantiated both by the turn events have taken in Warsaw within the last forty-eight hours, and by the statements which Pilsudski himself has not hesitated to make public. It is believed by well-informed circles here that the former premier's maneuver is calculated to allay foreign and domestic fears while the plans for the crushing of parliament are being effected.

Pilsudski has resigned in name only, reports from Warsaw reveal. He insists that he will continue to direct Poland's foreign policies.

"I asked myself whether I should crush parliament or retire," Pilsudski stated formally to representatives of the press, "and I chose the latter course."

Reports that Pilsudski and his followers are preparing an immediate coup against parliament are rife and it is expected that Pilsudski will attempt to rule alone in future.

Girl Hosiery Striker Shot by Allen-A Thug, Mill Correspondent Reports

SLUGS LODGE IN VICTIM'S NECK; WORKERSAROUSED

"Athletic Director" Arrives

(By a Worker Correspondent)

KENOSHA, Wis. (By mail). — I want to tell you that we thank you for printing the stuff that I sent you. Many strikers at the Allen-A mill get The DAILY WORKER now and are glad to read about Kenosha in your paper.

I am sending you a copy of the Kenosha Hosiery Worker. It is an extra published when Emil Mittman, one of the scabs at Allen-A shot Siama Helli, who works for the Kenosha Steam Bath Company.

Girl Shot by "Scab."

One of the most brutal assaults in the series of attacks by "scabs" of The Allen-A company of Kenosha citizens took place at midnight last night.

Miss Siama Helli, 20, an employe of the Kenosha Steam Bath company, was riddled with shotgun slugs while riding home with her escort, Alan Steele, 6123 35th avenue. Miss Helli was shot from ambush by Emil Mittman, 60th street, a strikebreaker for the Allen-A company. She was taken to the Kenosha Hospital by her escort, where she is now confined. It is too early to learn the exact condition of the victim. It is known that she has received a number of shots in her face and neck, which may disfigure her for life.

Mr. Steele and Miss Helli were returning from a dance. While passing Mittman's residence on the way to Miss Helli's home, they were attacked without warning. Shots rang out, and Steele was shot in the hand, pluckily driving the more serously injured victim to the Kenosha Hospital. The couple were unable to defend themselves, as they had no firearms or other weapons with them.

Before noon today, scores of telephone calls had been received at union headquarters and by locked out workers, in which citizens of Kenosha express their indignation at the outrage.

"Athletic Director."

All citizens will want to know of the numerous characters of mysterious origin who are being added to the population of Kenosha by the Allen-A company.

One of the most conspicuous of these is the new "athletic director" of the company, sometimes answering to the name of Hoffstetter. What mystery lies behind this man no one knows. But it is an eloquent fact that he did not wish his true name to be known to the authorities when he applied, in the usual Allen-A routine way, for "protection."

What need this physical giant and gorilla-appearing "director" had for "protection" likewise remains a mystery. He accompanies the strikebreakers to the courthouse and haunts that place.

Many have wondered, as they looked upon him, how he came to lose his trigger-finger. Others have wondered what connection he had with "Yellow-Dog" MacDonald and the 60 gunmen whom he promised to send into Kenosha. Perhaps the mystery will be unravelled in a few days.

Red Front Fighters, Terror of German Capitalists

The picture shows a group of Red Front Fighters resting. The Red Front Fighters, the terror of the German capitalists, is the idol of the working class. Recent attempts of the German government to disband the militant workers' organization caused so great an outburst that they had to be abandoned.

TRAINING THE YOUTH FOR CLASS STRUGGLE

The important role that the young workers play in the economic and social life of this country is now being universally recognized. Hitherto, the employers were the only ones who paid any attention to the youth in industry and in schools, and attempted to win them under their influence. In the attack against the American workers, the capitalists concentrated at first on splitting away the young from the adult worker and generally training the minds of the young workers with anti-labor propaganda, trying to prevent them from realizing the real conditions of the American working class, and particularly of the American youth. In the past the youth question did not receive the attention from the labor movement which it deserves, possibly because the young workers were not such an important factor in industry, and were mainly employed as white collar slaves. At the present time, with the close of immigration, the young workers have became the only source of cheap labor and with the introduction of machinery and the simplification of production are entering, in ever larger number, the shops, mills and factories.

To win the youth under their influence, the employers use all kinds of means and methods. They utilize the school, press, movies, and all other propaganda means to make the youth of this country more obedient and docile slaves.

In addition to this they set up special agencies to which the youth can be trained more effectively to help the capitalist class of this country to maintain itself in power. During the summer months we have numerous camps set up in various parts of the country which are supported by the most vicious anti-labor interests in the United States. Into these camps, the employers by their skillful propaganda recruit yearly thousands and tens of thousands of young workers. We also find that practically every big industrial concern has its training schools for young workers. There the youth get its training in all sorts of efficiency schemes and also is imbued with anti-workingclass ideology.

The Young Workers (Communist) League, fighting militant organization of American young workers, is constantly carrying on a campaign to counteract the influence of the employers and win the youth for the struggles of the American working class. We want to bring to the attention of the American workers the fact that we alone will not be able to solve this important task. Every labor organization, every class conscious worker must recognize the important role of the young workers in industry and how they are being exploited by the capitalist class. The duties of the labor organizations are not only to take cognizance of this task, but to take immediate steps to win the youth on their side.

Y. W. L. Training Schools.

The young workers must be made familiar with the tasks, problems, and conditions of the American workers, and be trained to take an active part in our struggle. The education the young workers receive in their public schools does not in any way prepare them to become active fighters for the cause of labor. For this purpose, the Young Workers' League is organizing Training Schools in all parts of the country where young workers will first be acquainted with the problems facing the American workers, and also acquire the necessary organizational and political knowledge to become effective fighters in the American labor movement.

Such training schools will be opened in the state of Illinois, arranged under the jurisdiction of District 7 and 8, Young Workers (Communist) League. Today more than ever before is it necessary for the labor movement of the mid-western states to train the youth for participation in the struggle.

The employers of this state are carrying on a vicious campaign against the labor movement as is manifested in their attack on the United Mine Workers.

From our past experiences with these schools, we know the great benefit the organizations helping to build the schools receive as a result of the training of these young workers. The students after going thru such a training school become active leaders in their community. We are sure that the results of this year's school will be still greater than in the past.

WHITING MEAD CO. WORKERS SLAVING 16 HOURS A DAY

Have to Speed-up to Live

(By a Worker Correspondent)

LOS ANGELES, Cal. — A young man was sitting on a bench outside the public library today reading The DAILY WORKER. The writer spoke to the worker, a Czecho-Slovak, and gained the following information:

Organize I. L. D. Branch.

There are over 3,000 Czecho-Slovaks in Los Angeles, I was told; nearly all organized. A Czecho-Slovak branch of the I. L. D. is in the making—for a starter, he said. The first meeting may be held at Party headquarters next Wednesday, June 27. Many workers have lined up already, and numerous letters have been sent to others.

Factory Conditions Bad.

The Whiting Mead Co., Vernon and Santa Fé Sts., is operating a foundry, lumber yard and a house wrecking plant. From 30 to 50 Czecho-Slovaks are working there. A few highly skilled mechanics are guaranteed $1 per hour. A number of mechanics are doing piece-work, however, and they are forced to speed up a great deal in order to make $5 for a day of 9 to 10 hours. The pay for common labor is 50 cents per hour. This concern is a strictly open shop outfit.

The hours are from 8 to 16 a day. At other times no work at all. The roof of the plant is in such condition that no work can be done in rainy weather. Piece-workers are worse off than common laborers. Hiring and firing of workers every day.

Workers Beginning to Kick.

Every mechanic used to have a helper. In the last two weeks, however, an efficiency scheme has been put into effect. Each helper is now expected to be the handy man for two mechanics. That means that the helpers must move twice as fast as they did in the past. So the helpers and piece-workers are beginning to kick, my informer, who used to work at said shop, declared.

Booze and Forget, Boss Says.

Answering the kicking, the head boss, on one occasion, advised his men to drink, feel happy and forget the conditions in the shop.

Well, the program is: First an I. L. D. local, and then organization on a "never-forget-plan."

D. W. Salesmen Needed.

My new-found friend just left the library. He went home to prepare an article for the "Daily" about his present job—in one of those so-called co-operative chain restaurants—the Leighton outfit. So it looks like competition in the field of Worker Correspondence from this paradise of the plunderbund. Glad of it, indeed. The Worker Correspondence editor will be pleased as well to deal with new names in this connection. But Los Angeles needs distributors of The DAILY WORKER as much as writers. Comrades and sympathizers, what are you going to do about it?

NASH MOTOR AND CHALMERS SERFS DRIVEN 12 HOURS

Thousands Tramp Street for Jobs in Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (By mail). — Speaking before the meeting of the Machinists' Union, Local No. 66, the International Organizer Schoenberg complained about the lack of response on the part of the workers. Only a few of them respond to the call to attend organization meetings, he said. He expected to find the workers of this city more militant, more radical than in other cities, but it is quite the opposite.

Those who live in Milwaukee are not surprised at this. The "socialist" fakers controlling the labor movement here have sapped it of every trace of militancy. No attempts are made to develop an organization campaign among the great masses of the unorganized workers. Wages here are at the lowest level. Hours are long. In the big manufacturing plants like the International Harvester, Nash Motor Co., Allis Chalmers, A. O. Smith Co. the night shifts are working twelve and more hours while thousands of unemployed are looking for jobs.

Whenever there is a struggle by the workers themselves to establish an organization or to defend the existing union, the "socialist" fakers content themselves with meaningless speeches instead of mobilizing the entire labor movement for the support of these struggles. No action was taken by the Federated Trades Council in support of the locked out Amalgamated members in the Adler clothing shops.

In our union, the Machinists' Local No. 66, the business agent is a "socialist." At our last meeting he was opposing a motion from the floor to instruct the delegates of the union to the Federated Trades Council to request this body to take action against the attempt of the open shoppers in Kenosha to have the governor send the National Guard to suppress the strike of the hosiery workers. In the course of discussion Schoenberg stated that the Federated Trades Council was dead from its neck up and that it failed to give him any help whatsoever in his organization work.

The fate of the striking workers under the attack of the exploiters did not worry the socialist business agent of our union. He was more concerned with securing credentials to the State Federation Convention which will be held on July 17 in Kenosha. He induced the already elected delegate to make a motion that credentials be issued. The reason given by that delegate in making his motion was that the business agent was very much interested to attend the convention.

NEEDLE TRADE SCHOOL CONTROLLEE BY BANKS

(By a Worker Correspondent)

It was a recent Thursday evening when the thing occurred. It was raining heavily, nevertheless the Central Needle Trade School held its graduation exercises.

The program was introduced with the playing of a march. The graduates entered a small auditorium decorated with American flags. The girl graduates were dressed in white while the boys wore black.

Those astonishing, curious, happy and sad faces reminded me of people in a theatre waiting anxiously to see what would happen next.

The heat in the auditorium caused many disturbances. Here and there fans were raised by many in the audience, handkerchiefs were taken out to wipe the sweat from their faces. On the platform were seated a group of people.

Among those honorables were some well known Wall St. bankers, millionaires, members of manufacturers' associations and delegates from various unions.

The program was begun by the welcome of our principal, "Mr. Ritter," to all our guests and graduates. He introduced as first speaker Mr. Seigel, well known in Wall St. and director of continuation and evening schools. He told us some trash and appealed to the labor betraying "unionists" to grant us apprentice books free of charge, which would force us to work for less than a union man, in other words to lower the standard of living.

The second speaker was also a well known Wall St. man and in addition vice-president of the board of education. He told us the history of his early life and mentioned that "it is no difference where you work, in a factory or in an office. If you are not ashamed to wear those beautiful clothes then you should not be ashamed to make them."

It seems strange that all wealthy people begin in life exactly the same way. They all say they were poor in their early life, but worked hard and thus attained wealth. Why, this man said that he earned only $1.50 per week, of which sixty cents was spent for fares. The main point in his speech was, "Honor thy father and thy mother."

A man representing the dress manufacturers' association then spoke. He aired the same stuff. He had earned very little when he was young. He said: "You have no kick coming because years back I worked from 7:30 A. M. to 7:30 P. M. and you work from 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. and only five days per week.

Of course we had many left wing sympathizers there but they could do nothing for the place was surrounded by police and plain-clothes men, who were ready to bounce us if we should show any signs of protest. Although they could do nothing much they showed their dislike by buzzing while the different capitalist speakers addressed the audience.

After all the hardships we overcame in listening to all those speakers our principal introduced yet another speaker: Miss Cohen of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

She spoke a great deal, but I didn't feel as disappointed as the rest when she didn't mention a work concerning organization of the unorganized students and graduates of the trades school.

As usual the graduation was closed by the pledge to the flag. To me it did not seem as a successful graduation but as a dismal failure.

Students of all trades schools, organize yourselves under the only youth labor league that fights for your interests, the Young Workers (Communist) League. Demand only true union representatives who stand elected by the workers and stand for them to speak at our graduations. Let us all stand together and once for all get rid of capitalist society.

FAT PROFITS FOR AUTOMOBILE BOSSES

By LELAND OLDS, Federated Press

That five automobile companies made multimillionaires of their owners in the short space of four years is revealed in a Wall Street Journal analysis of the increase in the market value of their securities between 1924 and 1928. In the interval, according to the journal, the market value of these motor stocks increased by $3,925,240,046, or more than ten times the increase in the book value of the assets behind them.

This huge addition to the wealth of stockholders in these concerns represents in large measure a capitalization of increased profits or good will as it is termed in the financial world. The combined net income of the five corporations rose from $83,507,129 in 1924 to $294,400,114 in 1927, an increase of 250 per cent. But the increase in market value is also due in part to the surplus of capital now looking for profitable investment.

The five companies included in the comparison are General Motors, Studebaker, Packard, Chrysler and Hudson. In 1924 the book value of their combined assets was $617,467,088 while the market value of their securities aggregated $741,734,511. By the high point of 1928 their book value had only increased to $980,870,661 but their market value had increased to $4,666,974,557. Here we have the extraordinary picture of the market value of securities exceeding the book value of the real investment of the owners by $3,686,103,896 or more than 350 per cent.

General Motors has been the chief coiner of wealth for the Morgan-DuPont financial clique. In the four-year period its market value increased from $475,624,570 to $3,824,649,660 or about 700 per cent while the assets behind its securities increased from $430,370,000 to $714,047,375 or only about 66 per cent. Its market value now exceeds its book value by $3,110,602,294 or 370 per cent.

General Motors profits in 1927 amounted to $235,104,826, an increase of about 350 per cent over 1924.

Fat Profits

A recent compilation by the Chrysler corporation throws more light on the profits of the owners of motor stocks in the last fi[illegible]rs. Assuming that on Jan. 2[illegible] an investor put $100 into the s[illegible] of each of the corporations listed [illegible] the value of the equivalent stoc[illegible] June 15, 1928, exclusive of dividend[illegible] received, would have been: Chrysler, $1,756; General Motors, $903; Packard, $879; Hudson, $390, and Studebaker, $143. Adding dividends received in the interval the $100 investment in each of these stocks would have produced $1,977, and in the case of Chrysler, General Motors, $1,034; Packard, $1,002; Hudson, $469, and Studebaker, $200.

Soviet Agricultural Purchases Increases

MOSCOW, (By Mail).—The value of total purchases of agricultural products by Soviet marketing agencies for the first six months of 1927-28 was 965,000,000 rubles, an increase of 21.5 per cent over the first half of 1926-27. Purchases of wheat for the period amounted to 3,299,000 metric tons, a decline of 12.9 per cent from the preceding year, while purchases of rye totaling 1,673,000 metric tons showed a gain of 9.6 per cent. Purchases of meat increased 200 per cent, seeds—75 per cent, sugar beets—61 per cent, hemp—55 per cent, wool—[illegible] per cent, tobacco—40 per cent, [illegible]—36 per cent, skins—30 per cent, cotton—20 per cent, hides—20 per cent, butter—18 per cent, flax—13 per cent.

MOSCOW, July 2.—The Grozny [illegible] of northern Caucasus, capacity 21,000 [illegible], which was commenced in [illegible], will be completed in October, [illegible] at a cost of $4,500,000.

U. S. S. R. Large Scale Industry Increases

Production of large-scale industry in Soviet Russia supervised by the Supreme Economic Council for the year 1926-27 was valued at 8,339,000,000 rubles, an increase of 16 per cent over 1925-26. Since a reduction of industrial prices of 5 per cent took place during the past year, the increase measured in physical volume of output was somewhat greater.

The value of the output of state large-scale industry for the first six months of 1927-28 was 4,897,000,000 rubles, an increase of 15.2 per cent over the first half of 1926-27. The physical volume of output increased 21.2 per cent.

HEAVY CANAL TRAFFIC.

BALBOA, C. Z., July 2. (UP).—Panama Canal traffic for the fiscal year set a new record. Commercial ships passing through numbered 6,450 and paid a total of $26,000,000 in tolls. The previous fiscal year record was a thousand ships less and a total of $3,600,000 in tolls.

LANSING MINERS SHOW SOLIDARITY AT BIG MASS MEET

To Back Save - Union Movement to Limit

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

LANSING, O., (By Mail).—At a meeting held on June 4th in Lansing, the miners showed what real solidarity meant. Fully three hundred and fifty of them packed the hall where only two days before the deposed sub-district officials, aided by the women-jailers, sheriff Hardesty and his deputies, and a representative of the American Federation of Labor, could not get fifty men in, altho they sent trucks and cars to various parts of the sub-district to transport Lewis men to the meeting.

The meeting was opened by Frank Sepich, the new sub-district vice-president, who spoke on the need for the rank and file to control the union and its officers.

John Barto, one of the local men and also one of the new trustles, was interrupted thruout his speech by applause and it was very soon proved to him that we could hold a meeting in peace for the Lewis gang did not have nerve enough to come down and break up the meeting. So we did not need sheriffs to protect us.

Brother Weber told of the school training received by the children and pointed out that each child would have a chance to be president if he first became a nationally known strikebreaker. He told of governor Danahey and his "milk men" who protect the scabs and his democracy in Ohio by using clubs, jailing women and starving babies.

When asked if they were willing to give up now and go back where they were thirty-eight years ago when the union was built, there was a murmuring dissent and not a single man was in favor of doing it.

Miners Behind Save-the-Union.

In conclusion, president Bob Matusak, of the sub-district, spoke. Here more than anywhere else the miners showed that they are all for the Save-the-Union movement.

Bob speaks in a convincing tone and has no flowery speeches to make. One amusing incident he told was as follows. At Duncanwood he and the vice-president were present to hear what the fat boys had to say. There was quite an argument and in the course of it, a man who used to work in a non-union field got up to defend the chairman, who was a reactionary.

The chairman, evidently mistaking his intention, said, "You shut up, damn you. You used to be a scab." This so enraged the man that he finally changed to the Save-the-Union bunch on the other end of the hall and it was very soon proved to him that we can hold a meeting in peace.

A speaker emphasized the difference between the reactionary officials with their sheriffs and the Save-the-Union meeting with so much enthusiasm. He told of the money that was being used by the reactionaries in taking away the charters and seals while the babies go hungry. He also proved that Lewis must break up the union or face charges of embezzlement in the next convention.

Brother Joe Weber, who is very active thruout the sub-district, was the next speaker. His opening words were, "I am very much disappointed, my good friend and women jailer, Mr. Sardesty, is not present." But he was not to be disappointed for altho the sheriff could not be present the chief of police of Bridgeport was there. He did not stay long, however, when he found he was not wanted.

At the conclusion of this meeting, this appeal was made: Fight for your kiddies! Give support to your new sub-district officers!

The way the applause sounded it would take more than a few of John L. Lewis' scab dollars and more than a few blows on the head from clubs of strikebreaking county and state officers to change their minds.

FIVE NOBILE AIDES HOPELESSLY LOST

OSLO, Norway, July 2. (U.P).—Lieut. Einar-Paal Lundborg and five members of the crew of the Polar Dirigible Italia drifted helplessly toward death tonight while the agencies of five great nations fought desperately but futily to save them.

Arctic experts were pessimistic regarding chances for the rescue or of finding the nine other members of the Italia's crew or the six including Roald Amundsen—who were lost attempting to find Nobile.

[illegible] Hansen, companion of Amundsen when he discovered the South Pole, told Peter Freuchen, [illegible] Danish explorer, that he believed Amundsen dead. The Latham seaplane, he said, was able to float only about two hours. He believed Amundsen was forced down in the open sea, the machine turned turtle and the passengers were drowned.

Fascist Flight Ill-Planned.

[illegible] deplored the mishap to the Nobile expedition, saying its failure likely would hurt the future of Arctic exploration. He also deplored the fact that many of Sweden's, Norway's and Russia's best arctic explorers were risking their lives for the sake of the Italia. He insisted [illegible] expedition was ill-planned and said Nobile was warned not to [illegible] in view of the fact he was not [illegible] explorer and lacked ex-

Photo shows the crew of the fascist dirigible, Italia, at Kings Bay, Spitzbergen, before the flight to the North Pole, on which the dirigible was wrecked. The photo was the last taken of the crew before the start of the expedition. Efforts to rescue the lost fascist flyers were due to the fact that various expeditions disregarded the advice of USSR experts.

NO CLUE YET TO MURPHY SLAYER

CHICAGO, July 1.—Gangland has been silent and little progress has been made in the investigation of the murder last week of "Big Tim" Murphy, gangster, labor betrayer and recognized "King of Racketeers," police admitted today.

Several men have been questioned and one, John Hand, organizer of a Cleaners' and Dyers' organization into which Murphy had attempted to "muscle in," was arrested, but further than that police have made no headway towards solving the most recent underworld murder.

Hand was released under bond of $10,000 Friday and his hearing set for July 6, but the attorney for the state practically admitted he had little incriminating evidence to hold the accused on a charge of murder.

Murphy was shot and killed by four men who fired a volley of bullets from a curtained automobile last Tuesday night.

200 BARBERS WIN STRIKE IN NEWARK

About 200 of the 500 striking journeymen barbers of Newark have returned to work, after compelling the master barbers to renew the agreements with them.

The return of nearly half of their number to work marks an important victory for the barbers who went on strike last Monday against the efforts of the boss barbers who went on strike last Monday against the efforts of the boss barbers to cut wages and lengthen hours. The agreement which the bosses refused to renew calls for wages of $35 a week and 50 per cent of all sums over $50 which the barbers collect at their chairs during the week.

Those men still out on strike are determined to enforce union conditions and are conducting a vigorous organization drive among the non-union shops.

HOLD MILLINERS MEET IN CHICAGO

Hundreds Pledge Fight Against Zaritsky Gang

CHICAGO, July 2.—Hundreds of millinery and cap workers of Chicago gathered at a mass meeting in the Capitol Building in answer to a call issued by the Women Millinery Workers Union of Chicago. The purpose was for consideration of the present situation in the International and to lay plans how to continue organization activities in Chicago.

The speakers pointed out the role of Zaritsky and his clique, and the ruination policy they were pursuing. They called upon all conscious cap and millinery workers of Chicago to stand solid behind their progressive leaders and to continue the splendid organization campaign they were conducting before general officers came to Chicago. They stressed the fact that though the obstacles are now greater than heretofore, that the rank and file will have to fight bosses and officialdom's clique, they must at the same time defend their Union and build it up.

A pledge was given to the New York representatives to continue to build the millinery and cap makers union in Chicago, to give all support to the locals carrying on a fight against Zaritsky and the clique.

The meeting was addressed by J. Feingold, leader of the Cap Makers Local 5 of Chicago, Gladys Shecter, organizer of Local 43, Women Millinery Workers, Max Goldin, Manager Blockers Local 42 of New York, J. B. Salsberg, general board member, and Anna E. David, sec'y. of the Chicago Joint Board and organizer of Local 52, Women Millinery Workers of Chicago, was Chairman of the meeting.

BROACH MACHINE STEALS ELECTION IN ELECTRIC UNION

Applying the expected methods of intimidation, exclusions and other forms of coercion, officials of the Broach-Wilson machine in Local 3 of the Electrical Workers' Union Saturday counted out the progressive opposition slate headed by Christian Houlihan, who with four members of his ticket had previously been barred from meetings of the union.

Although failing to break through the steam roller tactics and election stealing methods of the Broach-Wilson officialdom the progressives were able to come within a few hundred votes of victory. Tellers of the machine were forced to record Houlihan. 1618 were counted for Frank Wilson, president and Broach henchman of the local.

Progressive spokesmen saw reasons for encouragement at the showing made by their ticket in spite of adverse obstacles. Under any fair election, they declared, the Broach-Wilson clique would have been overwhelmingly defeated.

Information of the full details of the methods by which the election steal was put over is in the possession of The DAILY WORKER and will be published in a later issue. Evidence is at hand which proves conclusively that the Broach-Wilson machine among other things, cooperated with boss-contractors to force men on their jobs to vote the administration ticket. Slips handed out by these bosses under this method of coercion are now in the possession of The DAILY WORKER.

Tactics of the administration were described as "the most open and unashamed steal" in the history of the organization. Tellers to count the votes were appointed (nominally elected) at a meeting of the union from which hundreds of the progressives were excluded. The candidates on the progressive ticket immediately upon their nomination were likewise excluded from the meeting.

(EDITORIAL NOTE: The DAILY WORKER has learned upon reliable authority that the Broach-Wilson gang is planning a systematic process of reprisals against the progressives on the jobs and within the union. The DAILY WORKER as in the past will conduct a fearless campaign against the betrayers of the workers in Local 3, and will give detailed reports of their activities.)

A "Clean Campaign"

The republican and democratic parties are curiously unanimous on one point—both want what they call a "clean campaign." It is delightful to hear that organ of "Peaches" Browning, the New York Evening Graphic (not the Evening Pornographic) proclaim the need of cleanliness in the campaign contest between the Tammany candidate and the Teapot Dome candidate. Says the Graphic:

> "Thinking voters on both sides will be disappointed if this campaign is not conducted on the highest level of calm objective discussion, as far as Smith and Hoover are concerned.

The New York World also has come out for a clean campaign, and what it fears more than anything else is an election campaign which will bring to the surface the facts and connections of its favorite son, Al Smith, acknowledged head of the most corrupt political ring in the history of the country. Accordingly the World has combined a sort of frantic appeal with an open warning to the republican politicians that this campaign must be fought out cleanly.

There has been no campaign in this generation where so much hysteria has lain just under the surface, the World declares. By this statement the World admits under the peculiar cloak of its characteristic verbiage that there is more than a little which it would rather not have disclosed. So it seeks to strike a bargain with the republican grafters: Quid pro quo. Very likely the bargain, if not already consumated, will be agreed upon between the two camps.

But The DAILY WORKER naturally is not bound by this "gentlemen's agreement." The DAILY WORKER will do all in its power to expose not only the graft infested character of both candidates of the old parties but it will strive equally to bring to light their activities to defeat the working class and their relations with the big business interests whom they serve.

As the election campaign develops the spot light will be thrown on that sanctimonious figure beneath the brown derby. Tammany Al from the days when he was paid by the democratic machine to make up for the "pittance" of $1,500 a year which he then received as assemblyman to the days when he sat in secret conference with the traction interests; from the days when he opposed workingmen's compensation legislation and struck a bargain with the Barnes republican machine to bring back the corrupt state nominating convention, to his activities in paving the way for increased fares in practically every upstate city; from the days when he carried out the orders of "Boss" Murphy to railroad Governor Sulzer, to his frantic efforts to put over the billion dollar traction steal—in an attempt to hand over the new city subways to the B.-M. T.—from the beginning to the end of the career, Al Smith will be exposed for what he is: one of the slickest hypocrites in politics and the truest servant of Wall Street.

The activities of Herbert Hoover, engineer of international finance-imperialism, his connections with the Ohio gang, his contemptible part in Hungary assisted by his tool, Gregory, in putting down the workers and peasants' republic of that country in 1919, his more recent bargains with the Vare machine of Pennsylvania, will receive equal attention.

When the World says that in the choice of Herbert Hoover and Al Smith democracy has proved its capacity for self government, it is necessary only to point out that Vare and Olvany gave the final push by which these illustricus sons were put over the finish line.

"TEN MINERS TOMBED"

"Ten miners tombed!" small headlines weakly cry.
(It was twice ten.)' That a lone man should die
Is sometimes news enough to fill a page,
While twenty miners caught beneath a rage
Of falling coal is but a passing note.
A scandal fills the newsboy's raucous throat,
While twenty dead men get but one slight glance
From eyes that scan the headlines' daily dance.
Now twenty workers lie beneath the ground
In self-made tombs where they at last have found
Their rest from toil. These hunkies and these wops
Who mangled lie beneath the fallen props
Were but the victims of the mighty beast
Who preys upon the workers and makes feast
Upon these dead, who sets his profits high
Above the lives of workers—let them die.
"Ten miners tombed!" small headlines weakly cry!

HENRY REICH, Jr.

How Long?

As once a carpenter fashioned a cross on which to crucify
one of his craft, as a member of his own union drove the train that bore Gene Debs to prison.
And workers toiled long to make the chair
in which the martyrs died.
They spun the noose,
they built the scaffold,
they reared the jails,
they forged the shackles.
How long, O workers of the world, will you stand
one against the other obeying the commands of the masters?

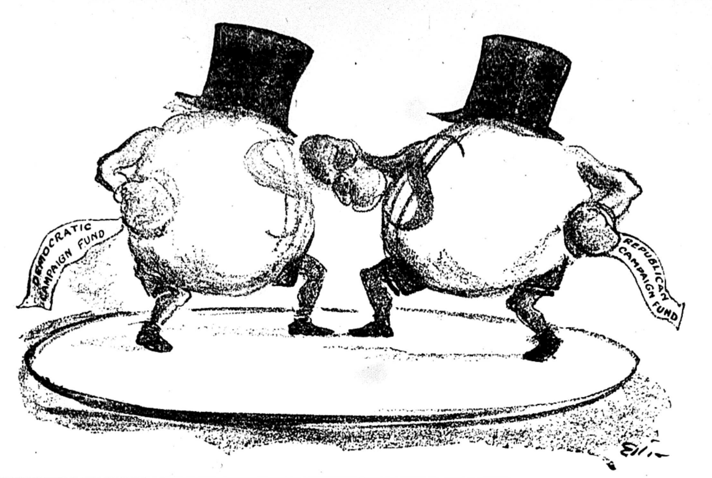
THESE BOYS WILL SETTLE THE CHAMPIONSHIP

By Fred Ellis



U.S.S.R. Workers Manage Mills

By CLARINA MICHELSON

Thirty thousand textile workers in America find it impossible to live on their wages, and are on strike in New Bedford, Mass. This follows the long struggle in Passaic, N. J., where other thousands of textile workers fought for a union, for better working and living conditions. What about the textile workers in Russia? What are their conditions?

We have just visited the city of Serpuhov, two and a half hours by train from Moscow, where there are three textile factories, employing 13,500 workers. After a 2 mile drive from the station behind a fat izvoshtihik, in a long black woolen coat, gathered at the waist, past rows of one-story wooden buildings, past churches, past an old fortress, past some peasant women washing clothes at a river's edge, our droshky drew up at the gates of the Krasny Textilschik, the largest of the factories, where 6,500 workers are employed, two-thirds of them women.

The director, a stocky blond-haired Russian, greeted us. It seems he had worked there at the age of 12, had been in the war, was in a German prison four years, came back to Russia, was in the Red Army, went back to work in the factory, became assistant director, and had recently been given his present job. The assistant director was also a former worker in the factory. We went all through the factory seeing the bales of raw cotton, bought for the most part in America, coming in from the station, to the finished product, which is turned out at the rate of 210,000 meters a day. Some of the machines are new, improved models, but many are old.

This year $930,000 is being spent to improve the machines, to install better systems of ventilation, etc. The factory runs on two shifts of 8 hours, although there are some apprentices who work only 5 hours a day. The 7-hour day will also be introduced here, as it is being done in the majority of textile factories throughout Russia. 97 per cent of the workers belong to the union. "It is not 100 per cent," our interpreter told us," because some are new, some are seasonal workers, and some are behind in their dues."

Have these workers done anything to improve their conditions?

Up a street opposite the factory are two rows of large, red brick houses, set in big yards, homes for the workers, owned by the factory. The workers receive money for rent above their wages—if they live in these houses they get less than if they live elsewhere, as these rooms, which are in great demand, are the cheapest in the neighborhood—$3.50 a month for a room, with electricity, and generally a radio thrown in for good measure.

A short walk from the houses is a large one-story wooden building with two wings, in one of which is a kindergarten and in the other a restaurant able to accommodate several hundred people. There we had soup, veal meat balls, rice, tea and bread—very good—for 20 cents. The workers now want a kitchen which will serve 12,000 2-course dinners a day, at 11 cents, for the workers of the 3 factories. This will cost $450,000. They have raised $150,000, half from the textile trust and half from the Cooperative and the Soviet. They will get a long term loan from the government but before the building can be started they must raise $57,000 more. This they will do by all donating 2 days' pay. It was so voted at a recent meeting of representatives of the workers of the three factories.

There is one Cooperative in Serpuhov with a membership of 12,000. Members can get credit from the stores through the factories, the director agreeing to deduct from their wages the amount credited. One large cooperative store, with a monthly turnover of $50,000, handling groceries, dry goods, shoes, samovars, etc., is directly opposite the Krasny Textilschik. A sign flapped gloomily across the street hung out by a private shopkeeper, "I am closing my window. I am no longer in business." The cooperatives are fast displacing the private stores, to such an extent in Serpunov that during the last year private stores fell off 50 per cent.

Near the store is a year-old one-story brick building. Here the women come, hundreds of them a day, take off their clothes, check them, and go into a huge room, where naked as the day they were born, they do the family washing. There are big tin wash tubs and plenty of boiling hot water. Soap they bring. It is given them at the factory, so much a month. Quite a change from scrubbing in the cold water of the river. The woman in charge was so efficient, and our Russian so shaky (our male interpreter was not allowed to enter) that it was only by the merest chance that we too did not join the crowd of naked women and begin washing.

Another brick building nearby is a bath house where women can go and take the weekly Saturday-night. Both these establishments are free.

A few minutes walk from these buildings is the library. On the outside wall the workers are greeted daily by a big sign, "Are you a member of the library?" Near this is a huge map of the world, which can be illuminated at night, and a space for news of the day. The librarian told us they had 14,000 books and could and did get any other books wanted. On one wall is a box for readers to place questions about the books they have been reading. Above are the answers. A large streamer reads, "Books will help us build a real commonwealth of labor." Nearby a booth carries local and national newspapers.

A small park with a statue of Lenin, adjoins this. Here there is also a booth for a summer library. Another large park not far away features moving picture shows every evening in summer. For this a worker pays $1.63 for his season ticket.

There are 3 kindergartens for the children of the workers of the Krasny Textilschik, and 2 nurseries. One we visited is an airy, sunny one-story building, managed by a woman doctor. Children from 2 months to 3 years come here to play, sleep and eat while their mothers are at work. As the children are brought in, their clothes are removed and placed in individual bags, they are weighed, looked over by the doctor and put in fresh clothes. In a room whose walls are covered with educational charts and posters concerning baby hygiene, the nursing babies are visited by their mothers who are given time off from the factory. "The mothers are well taken care of," the doctor said. "They are released from the factory 2 months before and 2 months after the baby's birth, with full pay. They are also given $15 to buy the necessary things for the baby, and get an additional $4.00 a month during the nine months they nurse the baby." (Some of the textile workers of Passaic give birth to their babies at the machines.)

Another achievement of these textile workers of the Krasny Textilschik is a clinic and hospital with a staff of 28 doctors, also within a short walking distance of the factory. The director of the hospital showed us thru the spotlessly clean wards, explaining that besides the medical and surgical work, the staff makes special studies of fatigue, posture, etc., of the workers at work, and also studies industrial diseases. They had recently made a report on the effects of dyes in one of the textile factories and made recommendations which were already in operation. Every two years these doctors go to one of the large cities for a 4months'course of study. The entire staff of the hospital—doctors, nurses, cleaning women, cooks, etc., are union members.

All these achievements have been organized and carried through by the workers of this one factory, these 6,500 weavers, spinners and other workers of the Krasny Textilschik—and all since 1922, through their trade union organization, the Communist Party nucleus and the Cooperative, with the help of the government.

They have also organized a club where a large auditorium is the scene of debates, plays, musical entertainments and frequent reports by the factory director. The latest one had been "Rationalization in the Factory." There are also classes in sewing, physical culture, etc. This is by no means their only cultural achievement. There are classes to liquidate illiteracy, evening schools, special technical schools and political schools. One of the most interesting of their educational activities is a month's course where 100 "activists" from the factory, such as dues collectors, chairmen of departments, etc., go each month to learn how to become more efficient union members, and to understand the problems of their factory. A beautiful estate 20 miles from Serpuhov is where these textile workers are getting trained. We told a group of them, 50 men and 50 women, something of the Passaic strike and something of the textile strike in New Bedford. A sturdy, barefooted woman, with a red kerchief round her head, stood up and said: "Before the revolution conditions were very bad for us workers. But now we can live. Please take our greetings to our struggling brothers and sisters in America. Now that we are free it is our duty to help them until they also become free."

Girls in Polish Fascist Jail

By S. KAEMRAD.

ON the outskirts of Polish towns there are low and gloomy buildings surrounded by high palings and watched by armed guards. They are situated amidst the miserable hovels of the poorest of the poor amongst the town population. Only picked people who have earned the hatred of the Polish secret police ever come here. There is one such building on the outskirts of Byelostock. In the evenings when the short twilight is slowly turning into dusk the few passers-by may often hear the faint strains of a song borne from the windows of this building out into the still air.

Young girls, members of the Young Communist League of Poland and political prisoners, are the singers. The song is one of our songs, a song of the revolution, of the victorious workers and peasants. On the first of May the singing of revolutionary songs was the only way in which these girls could express their solidarity with the masses of revolutionary working men and women outside the prison walls.

Many young girls are incarcerated in this prison, several dozen. They are all accused in the process of the "133." This process has been postponed from month to month and finally fixed for the middle of April.

Vera Khorunshaya is one of these young girls. She has not gone thru the hard school of the factories, but life itself showed her face to face the most brutal terrors that a degenerating capitalism is capable of producing. Vera saw the drunken bands of Bulak-Balakhovitch plundering and raping in the towns and villages of West White-Russia. She heard the groans and shrieks of the workers and peasants maltreated by the elegant Polish legionnaires. This experience lighted the fire in Vera's breast which has not yet burnt out, but burns clearly and persistently, the fire which has made her the revolutionary fighter for the cause of the workers and peasants she is today.

Before she took up the struggle with the master class Vera supplied herself with a thorough knowledge of the working class cause. She went to the school where Marx, Lenin and Plechanov were taught, where revolutionaries were provided with the knowledge necessary to carry on their struggle.

Over her books she never forgot the idea of revolutionary work. This idea was summed up in the one word—quicker! Quicker, quicker, finish off the lessons and then to work! Finish with the books and commence the practical work!

Vera overcame all hindrances. Some of these difficulties were of a nature that would seem absurd to those out side, but for conspirative work they were very important and played a very considerable role.

Vera had short hair. This form of friseure usual amongst young Communists was compromising for conspirative work, it aroused suspicion. And in general the whole attitude of Vera was not at all in accordance with the role which she was to play in the illegal movement, i. e. the role of a daughter of a "highly respectable" family. She, however, was the embodiment of a young Communist in these times of stress and strain.

The winter of 1924 found Vera at last engaged in the illegal work she had longed for.

Considerable organizational capacities quickly put her into the front ranks amongst the best workers of the Young Communist League. She carried out a tremendous amount of work with untiring energy and resourcefulness. The Polish secret police already knew of Vera, but she was not to be found.

"Defying the power of the Polish master-class we are growing and strengthening to the delight of the Young Communist International," Vera wrote. "We are winning the masses of the working class and peasant youth and driving new roots deeply in the factories and in the villages."

"We are not only recruiting new members, and organizing new groups and districts, but we are winning more and more the sympathy and support of the working population. This fact gives us immeasurable strength and increases our courage and daring . . ."

The illegal work against the regime of terror of the Polish master class is difficult and dangerous, almost unbelievably difficult. Much has already been written upon the subject, but the brilliant examples of heroism and self-sacrifice will never be exhausted.

"Our most dangerous and merciless enemy is the Polish secret police. This enemy has so many faces, so many ears, so many eyes and so many arms that it seriously hinders us in our work.

"The quicker we work, the quicker disappear the few legal possibilities of work which still remained for us, and we are then compelled to work still more illegally, and still deeper underground. We must use our leaflets still more often. Prohibitions must mean nothing to us. Almost every week out proclamations are pasted up onto the walls of the towns and the villages and in the soldiers barracks.

"It is a feeling of deep satisfaction and pleasure the next morning to see swarms of police with pails and pots washing off our work or smearing it over with black color. But innumerable leaflets have disappeared into the pockets of the workers on their way to work in the morning, and these leaflets are lost for the police.

"From its underground political world, from the small towns and the far off villages of West White-Russia our Young Communist League which never loses its energy and courage, calls over the heads of the Polish secret police to the Communist youth of the whole world:

"Long live the fearless and courageous activity of the Young Communist International all over the world!"

While Secretary of the Navy Wilbur was on his way to lunch at the Congressional Club in Washington he saw three Negro caddies in a hot battle with clubs. With the righteous gait he learned as a Sunday school teacher, the secretary strode out and stopped the fray. After lunch back in his office he denied to newspapermen the report that the United States intended to withdraw the 3,900 marines from China. He then busied himself with his campaign to get several millions more to build death-dealing battleships.

A man doesn't have to be very smart to know that Americanism stands for wage cutting for workers and coupon cutting for capitalists. This is the kind of a burlesque show that looks bright to the capitalists down in front and tawdry to the workers behind the scenes. Whenever you hear anyone shouting his throat hoarse for the American system you can be sure he hasn't mopped many American floors.

The bosses of the McCord Radiator Company of Detroit were so anxious to ladle out a couple of spoonfuls of opiate to their workers that they stopped the plant for half an hour and gathered the men together. After a speaker had proved by statistics and oratory that it was better to be an American wage slave than a capitalist the following card was passed around for the workers to sign:

"Broadcasters of Americanism

"I hereby register as a member of the Broadcasters of Americanism. As a token of my loyalty to the country wherein I live, I agree to do all within my power to combat every movement which attempts to destroy our present form of government. I also subscribe to the following creed:

> "I believe in the United States of America as a government of the people, by the people, for the people; whose just powers are derived from the consent of the governed; a democracy in a republic; a sovereign nation of many states; a perfect union, one and inseparable; established upon those principles of freedom, equality, justice and humanity for which American patriots sacrificed their lives and fortunes.

Our indisposed contemporary, The Nation, has often proudly described Ben Stolberg as "one of the keenest students of the American labor movement." Conclusive proof of this fact is found in the following letter printed in a recent issue of that liberal weekly:

"To the Editor of The Nation:

"Sir: In my article The Tailors and the Scientific Method, in The Nation for June 13, I said that "During the last two years (Sidney Hillman) told the convention (of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers) the union has in three instances given financial assistance to manufacturers exposed to the danger of liquidation. These three firms employed more than one thousand workers." These three firms employed more nearly four thousand workers. I gave the resources of the Amalgamated Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago as close to $9,000,000. Its resources are about $3,500,000. I mentioned an election quarrel in the "Buffalo Joint Board." It should have read the "Rochester Joint Board."

MILL COMMITTEE DEMANDS PART IN STRIKE PARLEYS

Mediators Call Confab; T.M.C. Warns Workers

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., July 4.—As signs rapidly multiply to show that a majority of the mill owners are exceedingly anxious to resume operations at any cost, the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration has issued a call to the mill bosses and the officials of the Textile Council of the United Textile Workers to come to a conference tomorrow for a discussion of a basis for a strike settlement. Despite the fact that the Textile Mills Committee here represents and is leading the vast majority of the 28,000 on strike, they are not invited. The T. M. C. strike committee, however, issued a public statement yesterday demanding participation in the conferences.

Elect Officers

A strike committee meeting last night elected Elulalia Mendez secretary, Andres Izyk, treasurer; Antone Costa, Ellen Dawson, A. Mackham, Mary Correia and Eli Keller as a negotiations committee which will seek admittance to the conferences in the name of the majority of the textile workers out on strike. The conference is to be held in the New Bedford City Hall.

In the official statement of the T. M. C. strike committee the workers are warned of an attempt by the Textile Council leaders to betray their heroic struggle. This charge is backed up by reminding the workers that the officialdom had nothing but the highest praise for the "labor extension" scheme proposed at a recent conference called by the citizens' committee. His scheme, which also had the bosses' hearty endorsement, was merely a highly intensified speed-up system by which the workers would produce much more.

At that time the bosses refused to obtain endorsement of the plan by the union misleaders. This they readily got. Now, when they can no longer stand the pressure of the market for cotton goods, they may go so far as to withdraw half of the wage cut order, some observers believe.

The Textile Mills Committee also points out these dangers, saying to the strikers, "The bosses cannot hold

Unrest Due to Strike Forces Strong Tactics

ATHENS, July 4.—The critical situation in Greece and the continued state of unrest may lead to an almost certain dissolution of the Chamber of Deputies on Saturday. Eleutherios Venizelos, the war-time premier, is again being pushed to the front by the reactionary forces.

The Conservatives are very much alarmed at the state of affairs following the tobacco workers strike, which almost assumed the proportions of a general strike and a probable revolution. The strike, starting among the tobacco workers, spread to the dock workers, threatening to draw other workers from nearly all industries into the walkout, and even won the support of the Greek sailors. Greece is still in a state of ferment and has alarmed the government considerably.

Anti-Jingoist Poster Shocks Boston Swells

(Special To The DAILY WORKER.)

BOSTON, July 4.—Boston patriots woke this morning to the horrifying sight of huge posters and stickers exposing the Citizens' Military Training Camp and denouncing this and other militaristic schemes of American capitalism. They were signed by the Young Workers (Communist) League.

The fake attractions blazoned forth on the numerous army and navy recruiting signs were obscured by the anti-militaristic pasters stuck on. They were also prominently posted on the State Capitol door, and even on Governor Fuller's office. All public buildings, the armory, and even the naval base did not escape the stickers.

No arrests have as yet been reported.

DEFY SIGMAN AT BOSTON MEETING

Members Demand Right to Hold Own Election

BOSTON, July 4.—Membership meetings of the two Boston locals of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, held here Monday night, repudiated the action of their Sigman controlled Joint Board and elected a committee to take charge of the union elections despite specific instructions to the contrary.

Because the membership of the two locals had, by an overwhelming majority, voted down the proposal to endorse the Sigman yellow dog contract the Joint Board had sent a communication to the International asking them to send a special committee to take charge of the Boston elections. The "yellow-dog contract" is a document Sigman requires every candidate for office to sign and which states that he is not a Communist, nor a Communist follower or sympathiser.

Not only the membership of the two locals, which are the Dressmakers' Local 46 and the Cloakmakers' Local 56, had rejected the use of this document, but even a recent meeting of all the executive boards of the Boston locals had repudiated this degrading order. Even the right wingers, the joint executive board members, had at that time declared that no organization work could be carried out successfully as long as active union members cannot run for office.

Despite the decisive action of the membership and the executive boards, the Sigman agents may try to impose their specially sent committee to supervise the elections.

BIG CONVENTION RAISES ISSUE OF NEW MINE UNION

Elect, New Rank and File Officers

ARMA, Kan., July 4.—Rank and file miners of District 14, meeting here Sunday in an enthusiastic convention, ousted the corrupt Lewis-Burr-Skahan machine officials, elected temporary officers to carry on the business of the union and voted to prepare for the miners' national convention to be held in September, which is to lay plans for a new miners' union.

Lavery, former president and International Board member, together with McCluey, vice president of the district, ousted officials and some of their henchmen, stood on the corner near the convention hall while the ousting proceedings were in full swing. Their henchmen reported affairs to them. The convention was open to the miners of Kansas and no gunmen or thugs were guarding the door. All were welcome to hear the proceedings.

Large Attendance.

SENATE 'PROBES' SINCLAIR AGAIN

To "Look Into" Salt Creek Activities

WASHINGTON, July 4.—The senate public lands committee today prepared to start another so-called investigation into the oil operations of Harry F. Sinclair.

The Committee plans to send a sub-committee to Wyoming this month to investigate the case of Royalty Oil from the Salt Creek Field to the Sinclair Crude Oil Purchasing Company.

While Sinclair's Teapot Dome lease was cancelled, the oil magnate has continued to obtain millions of dollars worth of Royalty Oil yearly from the Salt Creek tract under a five-year lease he holds with the interior department.

The sub-committee will also "investigate" to learn whether there was any fraud in the leasing of Salt Creek Field oil rights.

Sinclair was acquitted several weeks ago of "conspiracy to defraud the government" in the Teapot Dome oil lease, despite weighty evidence proving his guilt.

THEREMIN, MUSICAL WIZARD, AT CONCERT

"The Russian Edison" was what they called Prof. Leon Theremin after he had demonstrated a television apparatus before the All-Russian Congress of Physicists in 1925.

Now they are hailing him thruout the world as even greater than Edison because of his remarkable invention by which musical sounds can be drawn out of the air without the aid of a musical instrument. Prof. Theremin's first appearance in New York last January, after numerous triumphs in the leading cities of Europe, was acclaimed by the foremost musicians and scientists as marking a revolutionary discovery that would completely change musical development in the future.

Musical Experts Amazed.

"I am amazed," said Sir Henry Wood, famous English musician. "The whole thing seems inconceivable, yet there is no doubt about its authenticity. Its musical possibilities are infinite."

MINOR UP FOR HEARING TODAY

15 Other Jailed Workers to Be Tried Monday

Robert Minor, editor of The DAILY WORKER and Workers (Communist) Party candidate for U. S. Senator, will appear this morning at the First District Criminal Court, Center and Franklin Sts., to answer charges in connection with the anti-imperialist demonstration in Wall St. Tuesday afternoon, which was attacked and broken up by the police. Together with 15 others Minor was slugged and jailed, but was released on $500 bail, furnished by the New York Section of the International Labor Defense.

The others arrested were all released Tuesday night on the recognizance of the lawyer, Jacques Buitenkant, representing the I. L. D., with the exception of Nathan Kaplan, who was released on $1,500 bail after being charged with felonious assault. Kaplan was slugged by a policeman and two plainclothesmen. They will all come up again for a hearing next Monday.

PARTY APPEALS FOR AID IN WAR ON IMPERIALISM

Calls For Support of Workers and Farmers

Pointing out that the Workers (Communist) Party enters the election campaign as the leader of the workingclass struggle against capitalism, the Central Executive Committee of the Party has issued a statement announcing a drive for a $100,000 election campaign fund.

The statement follows in full.

Big business, trustified industrial and finance capital, rapacious, brutal, bloody American imperialism has spoken. They have nominated their two candidates. Mr. Herbert Hoover—who has won fame crushing the revolutionary working-class uprisings in Europe, an exponent of capitalist rationalization, efficiency speed-up, etc., through the intensified exploitation of the workers—is the candidate of the Teapot Dome Party, the Republican Party. Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York—Tammany Hall politician, favored son of the New York traction interests, Wall Street bankers, etc.—is the candidate of the Democratic Party.

Big business, says Mr. Rascob, general manager of General Motors, one of the largest industrial combines in the United States, has nothing to fear from the election of Smith. Mr. Schwab, head of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, declares: "'I am not afraid that politics is going to hurt business." Of course not. The two old parties are the Gold Dust Twins of big business, its most faithful servants. It is the workers and poor farmers who sweat and toil who have everything to fear from the oppressive and corrupt rule of Republican and Democratic politics.

Aides of Capitalism

Mr. Norman Thomas, a minister of the Gospel, is the candidate of the Socialist Party. The Socialist Party no longer recognizes the class struggle. It no longer nominates a worker and a fighter like Debs for its standard-bearer. It bows before the labor fakers. It blesses the class collaboration, the friendship and co-partnership between the capitalists and the labor bureaucracy. It opposes working-class, independent political action. It stands for capitalist law and order. It is opposed to proletarian revolutionary action, and loudly proclaims its support of capitalist democracy.

The Socialist administration in Reading has assured the capitalist exploiters, open-shoppers and enemies of the working-class that it will defend its property against attack on the part of workers during strikes The Socialist Party libels the name of Socialist.

It has degenerated into a petty-bourgeois party of capitalism. It has driven out of its ranks the valiant and heroic fighters in the American class struggle. The party is to be despised and bitterly fought by every militant, class-conscious worker. It is a party of betrayal and treachery to the workers.

The Workers (Communist) Party is the only party in the United States that is conducting a campaign against the capitalists and their strikebreaking government. It has nominated two valiant fighters in the class struggle, William Z. Foster and Benjamin Gitlow. Both are workers and members of trades unions. Both have been the objects of hatred and persecution on the part of the capitalists.

Champion of Workers

The Workers (Communist) Party, the party of the class struggle, enters this campaign as the champion of the workers and poor farmers, of Negro and white workers, and of foreign-born and American-born workers. Its interests are identical with the interests of these millions of oppressed and exploited masses in the United States who comprise the majority of the population.

American imperialism, whose hands are dripping with the blood of Nicaraguan workers and peasants, fat with the profits extracted from the millions of workers employed in its trustified industries, and from the tribute it collects from all parts of the globe—can no longer boast that its mass production, efficiency methods and world expansion are in the interest of the great masses of the people. Capitalist prosperity is now exposed for the fake that it is. Over four million workers are unemployed in the United States. No provisions whatsoever are made by the capitalist government for these unemployed.

The Capitalist State

In a land boasting billions in profits a drive is being made against the workers to further speed them up and to reduce wages.

The competition of the European and Japanese imperialists must be met by a ferocious drive against the workers to further lower their miserable living standards.

The whole power of the state is being used against the workers and their organizations in this drive. Government by injunction, denial of the right to organize, jailing of the workers and their leaders, brutal use of the police and military, absolute denial of freedom of speech and assembly, the evictions of workers and their families from their homes, and numerous other tactics are used by the strikebreaking Democratic and Republican government to browbeat the workers into submission.

The reactionary officialdom of the labor movement, the willing tools and lackeys of American imperialism stands between the masses and the capitalists, fights every manifestation on the part of the masses to take a militant stand, fights to accept the terms of the capitalists fights every move to strengthen the workers' organization, with the result that the trade unions are today in a crisis and the workers are subjected to one demoralizing defeat after another.

Bloody Imperialism

American imperialism, desirous of extending its dominance over new fields, has embarked on an aggressive imperialist policy. In Latin America it crushes the workers and peasants. Opposition to its rule is met by the machine-gun fire of the marines and the bombing of defenseless villages. The murderous bloody campaign of the marines in Nicaragua is an example of the savagery of American imperialism in its mad desire to subjugate and bring completely into its sphere of exploitation and robbery Latin America.

It crushes revolutionary movements of the masses with gunboat fire, troops, bayonets and machine guns, as for example in China.

It is the factor leading to increased militarism, enormous expenditures for the army and navy. American imperialism is the driving force in world politics leading the world into another world imperialist slaughter.

It fights the Soviet Union, refuses it recognition and lines up with the forces that are now energetically doing everything to provoke a war against the Soviet Union.

It supports Fascism and supports with loans of hundreds of millions of dollars the fascist governments of Italy, Hungary, Rumania, Poland, etc.

It refuses to recognize a Workers' and Farmers' Government—the Soviet Union.

It is this imperialism that in the campaign the Workers (Communist) Party will fight with all its determination and power.

The election campaign of the Communists issues calls to the workers and farmers to rally against imperialism, at home and abroad. Its slogans are:

Down with imperialism! Down with capitalist militarism! Against the imperialist war!

Full support to the poor workers and poor farmers in their fight against American imperialism!

Solidarity with the workers of all countries against the imperialists!

Full support to the revolutionary workers and peasants in the colonial and semi-colonial countries in their fight for freedom and liberation from imperialism!

Recognition of the Soviet Union! Rally to its defense and defeat the attackers of the only workers' and farmers' republic in the world!

Mobilize Workers

The campaign will be a campaign to mobilize the workers and farmers to fight in their own interests. The powerful combines of American industry must be met with powerful industrial organizations of the workers. New trade union organizations of the workers must be built. The unorganised workers in the basic and key industries must be organized.

Wage cuts must be fought. The miners' fight against the drive of the capitalists and the strike of the New Bedford textile workers must become the fight of the whole working class in the United States.

The needle trades workers' and miners' struggle for a union under militant leadership, free from the reactionary, corrupt and treacherous Lewis and Sigman machines, will be made part of the election struggle to indicate the need for a militant fighting unionism in the United States in opposition to the company unionization of the trade unions resulting from the class-collaboration policies of the reactionary officialdom.

In the election campaign a fight for the unemployed must be made with the demand of work at union wages for the unemployed or else full support to the unemployed in the form of union wages during periods of unemployment.

The Strikebreaker Government must be fought, and government by injunction and police and military terrorism against the workers ended.

The issues of the campaign are many. The election battle between the workers and poor farmers, on the one hand, and the capitalists will be a bitter one. The Workers (Communist) Party will be the champion of and fighter for the workers and farmers. Wall Street with its billions will be championed by Hoover and Smith. The Wall Street gang will have millions to spend to maintain their rule. The Workers Party needs thousands to mobilize the workers against capitalism.

The Workers (Communist) Party is, therefore, launching a drive for a $100,000 campaign fund.

$100,000 needed to make the campaign a red nightmare to the corrupt capitalist politicians and their bosses the capitalists.

$100,000 for a campaign against wage cuts, longer hours, rationalization and all exploitation of the workers.

$100,000 against imperialism and imperialist war.

$100,000 to fight for the unemployed.

$100,000 to fight the Klan, lynching, all race discrimination, for social, economic and political equality for the Negroes.

$100,000 for militant industrial unionism.

$100,000 for organizing the unorganized rubber workers, automobile workers, textile workers, steel workers, transportation workers, miners etc., into powerful industrial unions willing and ready to fight the capitalists.

$100,000 for the recognition and defense of the Soviet Union.

$100,000 for a campaign to arouse the workers and poor farmers to revolutionary struggle against the capitalists and their government to the end that we establish in the United States a Workers' and Farmers' Government.

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party appeals to you, the workers and poor farmers of America, to raise this fund of $100,000.

Textile Militants Shake Hands After Trial

Beal and Dias are shown here before the former was jailed on a thirty day term. Beal is one of the courageous leaders of the Textile Mills Committee which has been fighting for the demands of the 30,000 textile workers who have been on strike for 11 weeks in New Bedford. Dias, a loom fixer, was one of the earliest workers to join the militant movement.

RIGHT WING FUR UNION OUSTS 3

Leaders of Bloc Get 3 Years Suspension

Isidore Winnick, business agent, Julius Strauss and M. Abramowitz, who are part of the leadership of the progressive bloc in the right wing Joint Council, were officially suspended from that organization for three years for their "detrimental conduct." This is understood to refer to the open struggle they launched against the reactionary socialist-A. F. of L. allies who oppose the one union movement in the right wing dual union.

Winnick and the other two have been suspended without trial after he had refused to go to a pre-arranged "grievance board," claiming it had no jurisdiction over his activities. The particular issue used for his expulsion was the holding of a caucus meeting of his bloc recently. Winnick declared that the International general executive board had ruled that caucuses were legal. "What Stetsky and McGrady object to is not against caucuses, because this measure was passed so that they as the ruling group can hold caucus meetings. Stetsky objects to the fact that we held a caucus meeting, and a somewhat larger one at that," Winnick said.

In a statement Winnick, who is also a vice president of the International, said, "Long before the three years are up the people who voted for my suspension will have long been separated from the union." He then explained, "We are in this battle for one union and honest elections, and we will fight to a finish to attain our objectives. He then declared that he doesn't recognize the suspension, since the ouster is merely an attempt of the controlling clique to maintain themselves in power.

PILOTS HURT.

WASHINGTON, July 4 (UP). — Lowell S. Harding, 34, General Manager of the Potomac Flying Field, and W. P. Cassidy, 30, a pilot, were seriously injured here yesterday when a hydroplane they were testing dived into the Potomac River.

Cab Driver Is Fined $10 for 2-Minute Bite

Charged with disorderly conduct and with soliciting calls, Martin Neilson, taxi driver, of 1664 Nelson Ave., Bronx was convicted and fined $10 by Magistrate Dodge, in West Farms Court. Magistrate Dodge, according to Neilson, branded 95 per cent of all taxi drivers as "fresh guys."

Neilson was arrested two weeks ago by Officer Echartz, of the Bronx Park Police Station, after an argument with the officer at the corner of Tiebout Avenue and Fordham Road. He had succeeded in having his case postponed twice and had obtained legal aid in his attempt to fight what he termed "an absolutely false charge." To win his case he had been depending upon the testimony of his fellow taxi drivers who witnessed the arrest, but at the last moment they failed to appear in court.

Intimidation.

Friends of Neilson point out that had they appeared in court they would all be chased from the corners of Fordham Road and it would not be a hard task for either officer Echartz or his brother Tammany cops to frame these hackmen on trumped-up charges and to have them all "on the carpet" before Commissioner Ruttenberg in charge of the Hack Licence Bureau, with the certain result of either the suspension or revocation of their licences. At any rate their failure to appear brought Neilson a conviction.

The driver was arrested after he had left his cab in front of a coffee pot on Fordham Road and Tiebout Avenue and had stepped inside to get a bite to eat. He remained in the coffee pot not more than two minutes but when he came out the cop was waiting for him.

As Neilson approached his cab, the cop said: "Now I have you. Let me have your license." The driver gave the cop his license without protest and the cop then proceeded to "strip" the cab. When the driver protested against the cop stripping the cab the officer started to beat him across the legs with his night stick.

Neilson was then taken to the Bronx Park Police Station and booked on a charge of disorderly conduct. His hack license was taken from him and he was put in a cell.

Fake Charge.

In the morning when his case came before Magistrate Dodge, Neilson discovered that he was being charged not only with disorderly conduct, but with "soliciting calls from other than a hack stand," which is a violation of the hack regulations.

Neilson's conviction and fine by no means ends the case. His license which was taken from him at the police station was not returned to him, and Neilson must again face charges before Commissioner Ruttenberg in the Hack License Bureau for the same "offense."

These are the conditions which the hack drivers daily encounter.

ZIONIST MACHINE TRIUMPHS; LIPSKY RE-ELECTED HEAD

Famous Labor-Baiters Active in Convention

PITTSBURGH, July 4.—The steamroller of the bureaucracy in power in the Zionist Organization of America flattened out every vestige of the so-called opposition with the reelection of Louis Lipsky as president of the organization at the concluding session last night of the organization's 31st annual convention.

Lipsky had prior to the opening of the convention been declared unfit to hold any office by a commission of leading Zionists which investigated the finances of the Zionist organization and found considerable fund juggling with Lipsky himself involved in several shady transactions. Lipsky had also announced at the beginning of the convention that he would not be a candidate for president. His sudden change of mind and consequent re-election are regarded in reliable circles as an indication that the Zionist Organization will continue its present policy of complete subservience to Great Britain's imperialistic ambitions in Palestine.

A prominent part in the closing session of the convention was played by Deputy Police Commissioner Nelson Ruttenberg, well-known for his persecutions of New York taxi drivers. Judge Otto Rosalsky famous labor baiting jurist, notoriou for the vicious sentences he impose on striking cloakmakers last yea was also active in work connecte with the convention.

START DRILLING AT PLATTSBURG

Train Youths For Next Imperialist War

PLATTSBURGH BARRACKS, N. Y., July 4.—The training of nearly 1,500 youths for cannon-fodder in the next imperialist war began in earnest here yesterday when the last of the arrivals, young men tricked to the camp by promises of "free vacation," "build your health" and other false rhetorical phrases, changed their civilian suits for the olive drab uniforms used in the U. S. army. The youths were tutored in the arts of saluting, drilling, and killing fellow workers by officers from the Twenty-sixth Infantry, the camp's "parent organization."

Despite the intense heat, the army fledglings were forced by the camp officials, to undergo a severe period of military drill on the sun-baked field. Of the 1,484 young workers and students duped into attending the camp, only six were rejected, the authorities said, because of "extreme physical unfitness." The rest, even though cases of physical weakness were discovered among them, were given orders to remain, so ardent is the desire of the imperialist organization to train as many men as possible for future warfare and the suppression of colonial freedom.

Tomorrow the youths will be awakened by the Twenty-sixth Infantry band at 6 o'clock in the morning, and at 9 a. m. they will hear the formal "address of welcome" by Colonel John F. Madden, jingo-in-charge. They will take the oath of allegiance to the U. S. Army and its imperialist principles, and will be greeted by a representative of the Chamber of Commerce.

out much longer. Stick to your demands for a wage raise."

No Compromise

The overwhelming sentiment for struggle against all compromise proposals on fundamental strike issues give rise to the general belief that the U. T. W. officials will not succeed in selling out the strike.

Forrest Bailey, of the American Civil Liberties Union, yesterday telephoned a statement by his organization, which denounced in the strongest terms the breaking up of the T. M. C. parade by police last Saturday. Minken, a local attorney, refused to help in the defense of the 28 strikers arrested at the parade, or in the trial on the right to parade, when the American Civil Liberties Union attempted to hire him.

Huge Picnic

Thousands of strikers will today participate in a huge picnic arranged by the women's section of the New Bedford Textile Workers Union of the T. M. C. The picnic will be held on the Madieros Farm outside of the city. The use of the farm was donated free of charge. Even for this the city authorities refused to grant a permit till payment for two police guards was guaranteed by the union.

James P. Reid, organizer of the Fall River unit of the Textile Mills Committee, conducting a bitter fight against the police officials for the right to conduct an organization drive there, spoke at the mass meetings held here yesterday. The mass meetings held here daily are becoming so crowded as to tax the capacity of the fields upon which they are held.

Aid John Porter

A general call issued by the T. M. C. to a conference for the organization of a defense committee for John Porter is being received with an enthusiastic response from many workers organizations as credentials continue to come in. The U. T. W. Textile Council officialdom, however, refused to participate in this united front conference which will seek the release of a striker who faces a long term of imprisonment for army desertion because of his activity in the strikers' cause.

RESULTS OF N. Y. MINE TAG DAY TO BE ANNOUNCED

Returns Still Coming in From Sections

Result of the Tag Days Drive held by the Miners' Relief Committee are not yet obtainable, it was announced yesterday. Most of the stations have not turned in their boxes. Many of the workers who collected last Saturday and Sunday for the relief of the striking miners are holding on to their collection boxes, so that they can be used on the 4th of July at the various beaches and nearby summer resorts. According to Fannie Rudd, Secretary of the National Miners' Relief Committee, over $5,000 will probably be collected.

Besides the proceeds from the Tag Days, relief funds to the National Miners' Relief Committee are coming in daily from the sale of Solidarity Certificates. These certificates, ranging in amount from 25 cents to ten dollars, are being bought by workers thruout the city as an evidence of their solidarity with the striking miners in their fight against the open shop operators.

The National Miners' Relief Committee has urged all workers to buy and sell the booklets of Solidarity Certificates, which may be obtained at 799 Broadway, Room 237. Reports from the striking areas indicate the need for relief to be greater than ever,—especially among the miners' children who are suffering from the heat and lack of shelter from the sun.

German Communists to Vote No-Confidence in "Socialist's" Rump Cabinet

USSR DELEGATE HITS POLICY OF AMSTERDAM INT'L

Increased Wages Far Behind Bigger Expenses

(Special Cable to The Daily Worker)

VIENNA, July 4.—Yesterday's session of the International Congress of Food Workers here was characterized by sharp discussion and debate between delegates from the Soviet Union and the executive committee of the food-workers union.

The delegates from the Soviet Union attacked the policy of the International Federation of Trade Unions, which is splitting the labor movement in all the countries where it is in control, and sabotaging labor struggles. The International Federation of Trade Unions is concentrating on the International Labor Office in Geneva and on the League of Nations, neglecting completely the struggle of workers all over the world against the war danger, the Soviet delegates said.

Spotnikov, the second Soviet delegate, proved by quoting recognized statistics that the petty increases in wages are limping weakly behind the rising cost of living. He declared that the Foodworkers International had no fighting policy, and pointed out of the 90,000 Swiss francs of the union's money, only 2,000 had been spent in fights for bettering the conditions of the workers within its ranks. The rest of the money, 88,000 Swiss francs, had been expended on "administration expenses" which might very easily have been cut down.

After he had completed his speech, Schifferstein, secretary of the International Food Workers, answered with a violent attack upon the Soviet Union, declaring that the situation of the working class there was worse than in the rest of Europe. This, however, was denied by the Soviet representatives, who again offered statistical proof to defend the Soviet situation.

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

VIENNA, July 4.—The Food Workers International Congress opened here to-day. The Congress represents seven hundred thousand European food workers. This includes the workers of the food industries of the Soviet Union.

A furious campaign against all places where night-baking is prohibited is being waged by the employers, according to the report of Secretary Schifferstein.

sent his name thruout every portion of the globe. In this country, however, only the few, the wealthy, have hitherto had the opportunity of seeing and hearing this sensational invention.

First Appearance Before Workers.

Now for the first time Prof. Theremin is preparing to appear before a real working class audience in this country. And it is fitting that this distinguished representative of the only workers' and peasants' republic should give his first concert before American workers on a revolutionary holiday, July 14, the anniversary of the fall of the Bastille. And it is also fitting that his first appearance should be before a mass gathering of militant workers—25,000 of them—all of whom will be present at Coney Island Stadium July 14 at the greatest proletarian musical event ever held in the United States.

But Theremin will be only one of the performers at this concert. Arnold Volpe with his famous symphony orchestra will be there and a wonderful ballet and—but we can't divulge all of the great program just now. The tip for all workers is: get your tickets early.

U. S., BRITISH FUNDS SEEK VENEZUELA OIL

MARACAIBO, Venezuela, July 4.—A hundred-mile pipe line with a daily capacity of 20,000 barrels, from the Tara field to Lake Macaraibo, Venezuela, will shortly be laid by the newly formed Colon Oil Corporation, organized by the Royal Dutch Shell group and the Carib Syndicate. The new Royal Dutch subsidiary will take over the entire capital stock of the Colon development company. Thirty wells have already been completed on the property. This will open about 2,100,000 acres of hitherto undeveloped oil fields. The financing of this new enterprise will be done through the American investment bankers, Lee Higginson and Co. and Hayden Stone and Co., who will place on the American market $10,000,000 of convertible debenture bonds of the new company. While American capital will participate in this British oil venture in Venezuela, the British have provided for keeping control of the company by the issuance of 2,200,000 shares of authorized common shares, the majority of which will be owned by the Royal Dutch Shell group.

The Royal Dutch group represents the most important and oldest oil interests in Venezuela, where the British have still greater oil investments than the Americans. The latter, however, are entering into Venezuelan oil exploitation and almost all other oil companies organized later are American controlled. At present American capital, which had only a very small interest in the Royal Dutch Shell group is joining in a larger measure the British enterprise.

Venezuela has outstripped Mexico in oil production and has no laws restricting foreign exploitation.

Mexican Government Fears for Loans

MEXICO CITY, July 4.—Mingled with messages of good will to Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow, on his return from the United States, where it is understood that he consulted with New York bankers concerning the advisability of further loans to the Mexican government, the newspapers here are carrying expressions of fear that the meeting of the All-American-Anti-Imperialist League, which is scheduled for this afternoon, may interfere with co-operation with the American financial interests.

The demonstration which the League is planning will protest against the presence of American marines in Nicaragua and other Latin American areas.

The New York Times Contradicts Itself

In a news item appearing in the New York Times yesterday, dated from London, the buying of grain on the world market by the U. S. S. R. government was interpreted as evidence of a crisis in U. S. S. R. grain and the possibility of a famine. The item cites information from Riga reports, one of the most unreliable news centers for news of the Soviet Union. The news itself is probably broadcasted by Reuter's, the British government dispatch agency.

A few days ago the New York Times carried a report from Walter Duranty, Moscow correspondent for the Times, which emphasized the favorable crop prospects, and cited favorable reports from all parts of the main grain centers of the Soviet Union, such as Southern Ukraine and Siberia. The latter report is far more reliable, especially since it is reinforced by oficial Soviet government reports.

ried on by the machine, 29 delegates representing all sections of the district were present.

Tom Wakefield was unanimously elected temporary president; Stephen Walsh was unanimously elected secretary-treasurer and Joe Stoddard temporary vice president. The rank and file miners of Kansas discussed the situation in the district. Freeman Thompson of Illinois gave a report on conditions in the east pointing out what steps would have to be taken by the miners to remedy their plight.

No Democracy.

Delegates showed that no democracy was left in District 14. The remedy was the removal of the Lewis machine throughout the country and the building of a big powerful union, they declared.

An indictment of the officials of District 14 was read and adopted.

Delegates pointed out the need of political action along with the building of a powerful union of the workers. They showed that the "Sun" and the "Searchlight," local evening and morning papers printed on the same press, are the republican and democratic mouthpieces of the operators. At the same time it was pointed out that Burr was a republican and Skahan a democrat and both sat in the newspapers' office regularly and gave their printing to this concern.

MANAGUA, July 4. — While information received from the interior reports that the army of independence under General Augusto Sandino continues to operate successfully against the American marines despite the rainy season, every effort is being made here today to distract the minds of the Nicaraguans from Sandino and center it on the American Fourth of July celebration and the coming elections.

With a view to impressing the country with the power of the American marine forces now in Nicaragua, reviews and parades are being held in all the towns and districts where American forces are stationed.

MUELLER TO GET ADVERSE BALLOT IN NEXT 48 HOURS

Expect Further Action to Follow

BERLIN, July 4.—After careful deliberation, the Communist members of Reichstag today decided to submit a motion of no-confidence in the new cabinet formed two days ago by Chancellor Mueller. Formal notice will probably be given in the next 48 hours.

The no-confidence vote is felt to be a dramatic criticism by the Communists of the class collaboration policies of the German social democrats and has caused great excitement thruout the country.

Chancellor Mueller formed his "rump" cabinet, the so-called "cabinet of personalities," after the failure to secure a coalition among the leading German parties in the Reichstag.

The formation of such a cabinet called forth unusual comment among the workers and their leaders, as reflecting the complete betrayal of the working class by the social democratic party.

It is believed that further action will be demanded by the Communists within the next few days. A dissolution of the present cabinet as at present constituted is seen as not improbable.

Union Officials Wrecked Connecticut Car Strike, Traction Correspondent Says

MEN MILITANT AS MISLEADERS ACT TO STOP WALKOUT

Bosses' League, Press, Aid Treason

(By a Worker Correspondent)

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (By mail).—The traction workers of the state of Connecticut, with headquarters in New Haven, five days ago voted almost unanimously to strike on Tuesday morning, June 26, unless the Connecticut company, a huge monopoly of the trolley system in the entire state, and a subsidiary of the N. Y. N. H. & H. R. R., acceded to the following demands: (1) recognition of the union; (2) reduction of hours of work to 8; (3) an increase in wages, and (4) an improvement of the conditions of work.

Official Treachery.

When the men cast their vote, they did this with unmistakingly militant determination to fight for what they thought was their right. This action of the men was at once met with alarm by the union officials. First by the smaller fry and then by the big ones. They suddenly realized that these men meant it all. But would they allow such an embarrassing thing as strike to happen? Oh no. This is the age of "the higher strategy of Labor." Such an undesirable event is not allowed by the officials. And so from the very beginning they prepared to maneuver that turned out to be one of the lowest pieces of treachery ever pulled off.

When the workers took the strike vote, it was admitted even by the capitalist press that it was unanimous. The actual vote was seven to one thru the entire state. Such a powerful and almost uncontrollable sentiment in favor of a strike produced a very undesirable effect, not only among the company officials and the employers generally but also among the socalled labor "leaders,'" which culminated in the line-up of three powerful forces, determined to teach the workers a lesson for their "unexpected" move, namely the labor "leaders," the company officials and the open shop manufacturers' association.

Forced Arbitration.

Two of these union officials were Mr. John H. Reardon, international organizer and member of the international executive of the union and John L. Sullivan, member of the state board of the union and chairman of the local union of Middletown. Mr. Sullivan has a very interesting history in connection with his past activity as an official of his own local of Middletown. In 1926 and again in 1927, this man Sullivan reversed a unanimous decision of the local executive board for a strike for union recognition and forced it to accept arbitration, which materialized in a very peculiar silence on the part of the arbitrators. In 1925, the entire crew of officialdom strained every effort to convince the workers to accept arbitration. The workers accepted it. The result was the workers belonging to the union got nothing and the award was handed down to the non-union bus drivers. This the arbitrators did purposely, in order to discourage the workers from joining and belonging to the union.

In the present situation the union leaders, for reason best known to themselves, assumed the attitude of favoring a strike. Suddenly a peculiar situation was created. The company officials refused to arbitrate altogether. The union leaders insisted and "threatened with a strike" unless the company agreed to arbitrate. Originally and when the men voted for the strike, the demands were: recognition of the union (the union is not recognized officially by the company): eight-hour day and an increase in wages, the first of these being the outstanding one. But according to a preconceved plan on the part of the union leaders a consistent propaganda was began for arbitration and this the company "refusing" to consider, resulted in focusing the entire attention of the workers away from their real demands. This in my opinion was a very profound and clever maneuver on the part of the misleaders of the union. They themselves showed to be master Judases and played their game worthily and will be rewarded generously for it.

Up till the very last moment, the company stood its ground, refusing to budge in accepting arbitration.* At the same time all preparations were made—and this was officially and openly announced in order to scare the workers into submission, about which the union leaders kept silent—to bring in strikebreakers to replace the men in case of a walkout. Meanwhile the open shop manufacturers' association publicly declared that a strike of the trolleymen at this time would not be tolerated, that in case of its actually occurring, it would lend the Connecticut company experienced men, now employed in the factories, who formally worked on the street car lines.

Bosses United.

This sounded like a solid front of the bosses against the workers, but again the labor officials, in the face of this direct challenge to labor, kept silent, did nothing and said nothing. Instead of mobilizing the entire strength of the union and put up a real fight to realize the demands of the workers, they dilly-dally, only too willing to yield to the company's least resistance.

The bosses here presented a solid united front and prepared for a well aimed and crushing blow to labor. At exactly 7 hours before the time set for the walkout the final link of the chain of betrayals was forged.

Mysteriously, a delegation of the Hartford local claiming to represent the majority sentiment of the local, suddenly appeared before the headquarters in New Haven, and notified the international officials, who were evidently waiting for such a delegation, that the Hartford local, the biggest in the state, would not strike! They claimed that the men did not know what they were voting for at the time, and that the whole business was misunderstood! This was evidently a very clever trick. But it was a bombshell for the rank and file and caused a great convulsion.

This also made it obvious that there would be no strike, and the international officials perfected the way out of this situation by hastening to announce that the strike was called off and that there would be another vote taken on the question the following week. In the meantime the propaganda against the strike was intensified thruout the entire capitalist press, strongly emphasizing the fact that the men misunderstood the whole procedure of the vote and, anyhow, this, that or the other local was not in favor of a walkout. This propaganda resulted into a confusion of the worst kind. Locals were pitched against each other, each blaming the other for causing the calling off of the strike. Besides this, there was actually a terror prevailing and the situation created as the result was not the best for a vote in favor of a strike. And no sooner were the ballots distributed and long before the vote was completed, the press thruout the state carried the story to the effect that the men had voted almost two-thirds against the strike. The leaders, of course, welcomed it and without any announcement of any kind went away, leaving the workers to the mercy of the company officials.

And so ended another tragic episode of the American Labor movement!

PIONEERS AID IN WALL ST. DEMONSTRATION

(By a Pioneer Correspondent.)

The demonstration reached Broad and Wall St. at about 12:20 P. M. The first line consisted of a group of members of the Young Workers (Communist) League and of the Young Pioneers. Immediately the cops took away our signs. In the meanwhile about 300 people had gathered about the demonstrators. The same thing happened to the other groups that arrived. Then about 2,000 people gathered there.

A meeting was opened by some of our comrades. A hundred or so workers grouped about us. Two policemen and several detectives broke up the meeting.

There were some German seamen from the Int'l Seamen Club. They protected our group of Pioneers. When the "dicks" took away our signs we went over to the debris on Broad St. and started to hold a meeting. A whole lot of "dicks" came over, big tall fellows, and started to chase the little people away from the meetings, they didn't go near the big people. These seamen came over and they wanted to protect the meeting. One of them, a readheaded fellow, went over to the detective, the biggest one, and gave him such a sock in the jaw and another in his nose, that he lost a couple of teeth and his nose started to bleed. After that the dicks didn't bother our meeting any more. The people listened with much more attention. All the office boys were laughing at the dicks and he said he would arrest them.

More meetings were begun and similarly broken up by the police and the detectives. The Pioneers were the most harassed because the brave police thought they were more dangerous than the grown-ups! And the seamen were always on the job; always ready to protect us.

One huge seaman punched the biggest detective in the jaw and nose so that the latter lost a few teeth and bled at his nose. But the representatives of "law and order" didn't bother us any more. When the cops took away our signs we went over and organized meetings on the rails that were lying in the street. They thot we were just a bunch of kids and they didn't bother us much. We had about 4 meetings. The dicks didn't bother us after the seamen beat them up. The pioneers gave out the Party leaflets in the meanwhile.

Over 300 Now on Mas Afuera Islands

LIMA, Peru, July 4.—Forty more men have been deported by order of the Chilean dictator Ibanez to the Mas Afuera islands, where 300 Communists and anarchists were deported after the coup d'etat by which Ibanez established his dictatorship of Chile.

Repeatedly news comes from Chile that the deportees have been allowed to return, but actually permission to return has been granted only to those renegades among the labor leaders who promised to support Ibanez.

USSR to Make Clocks

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., July 4. — The Supreme Council of National Economy of the USSR has recognized it necessary to establish a new factory for the manufacture of timepieces in the Moscow district. The production of this new plant is calculated at first to reach 1.5 million ordinary clocks, 400,000 alarm-clocks, 45,000 electric clocks, 25,000 regulators, etc. per year. Besides, these works will, for the first time in the USSR, manufacture watches, beginning with a yearly production of about one million pieces.

A special commission is being detailed to Germany, Switzerland and America to study the latest methods of production and ascertain the possibility of entering into an agreement with the respective foreign firms concerning technical aid in establishing the production of watches in the USSR.

BOSSES VIOLATE MINIMUMPAYLAW IN LOS ANGELES

$1.50 Per Day for Best Paid Workers

(By a Worker Correspondent)

LOS ANGELES, Cal. (By mail).—California has a minimum wage law for women. And like many other so-called labor laws, it was made to be broken by the employers, it seems. The document prohibits the "weaker sex" in the manufacturing industry to work for less than $16 a week—after they have passed the 6 months apprenticeship period.

Piece-work in the home is not allowed without special permission of the state industrial welfare commission. The state standard of the local commission requires that at least 33½ cents per hour be paid for all home work done by women.

$1.50 a Day.

The following letter was published by a local liberal daily recently.

"I understand there is a minimum wage scale for women here which prohibits less than $16 per week pay. There are hundreds of garment workers who work piece-work at their homes, and the price per piece of goods is so low that the best of them make no more than $1.50 per day. My wife, born and raised in Mexico, is an expert in the work and was employed before our marriage in a fine shop here at $24 a week. Recently she found some spare time and took work from a shop on Los Angeles street.

"The owner gave her a complicated piece of work to do at home, but would not tell her the price, as he wanted to sample her work. She spent a good four hours on it and they allowed her 80 cents. The manager was not in when she called to get the money and she waited two hours before they said they would send it by mail.

"My wife does not have to work, but there are dozens of refined girls (mostly Spanish) who do, and because of lack of the English language are handicapped, and these employers put things over.

"Some are poor and must keep themselves and children alive, and must accept anything, almost, for their work, sometimes 25 or 30 cents for two hours' work. What can be done to remedy these situations and sweatshop practices?"

Mrs Edsen's answer, for the state, follows:

"It has been impossible to apply this $16 a week wage for home workers who are working by piece.

Order 11-A.

"The industrial welfare commission has ruled (see order No. 11-a in the manufacturing industry, section 11) that 'No employer shall give work to women or minors to be performed outside the place of business of said employer except upon permit issued by the industrial welfare commission.'

"It has been most difficult for this department to find the employers of women for home work who do not have regular shops in which women are employed within the shop.

"In fact, the only way that we get the names of the employers giving out home work, who do not have regular shops, is when a complaint comes to this department, which we are always glad to get and investigate.

"I assure you that we will immediately look into the question of home work referred to by the Trentway resident."

"Honor" Instead of Bread.

This commission has done a lot of "investigations" in the last few years. The benefit to the workers, however, has always been next to nothing.

About 3 years ago, female movie extras were granted a hearing concerning the miserable conditions under which they worked (or, rather, starved) in the picture industry—ruled over by Will Hays who, as a flunky of Wall Street, helped to make Harding president and Daugherty and Fall cabinet members. Some of the girl were very militant at that time and started a near riot in the chamber of commerce building. But all they got out of it was the "honor" of being called "artists" instead of "extras"—something they neither demanded nor cared for. In the opinion of most empty stomacks, fake honor is a poor substitute for bread, anyhow.

Loop-Hole in Law.

The apprenticeship clause in the minimum wage law is the loop-hole through which many employers escape the responsibility of paying the minimum wage, $16 a week, to women and girls. They do it by discharging the workers as soon as their apprenticeship period of 6 months is up. Then they hire "green" hands to take their places. This has been done in laundries and other lines of work in this city and state.

Mrs. Edsen says "that it has been most difficult" for her department to locate violators of this law. Why? It it because they are employers? Workers, who are wanted, are generally easily caught by the authorities.

Jewish Girls Not Wanted.

Jewish women and girls are not popular in the eyes of wage-cutting slave drivers of this city. Employment sharks have orders to turn them down, according to an article in a morning paper, not so long ago, by a Jewish girl in behalf of a number of female workers of her own race and class.

Why do the open-shoppers of this burg act that way? Is it because the Jewish women generally are more radical than the rest of their sex?

It is suggested that Mrs. Edsen hire a few militant workers to catch violators of the minimum wage law.

THREATEN TO CUT WAGES OF 40,000 IN COKE MINES

Progressives Forming Strong Union

(By a Worker Correspondent)

UNIONTOWN, Pa., July 4.—The H. C. Frick Coke Co. threatens to cut the wages of almost 40,000 unorganized coke miners in Fayette and Westmoreland counties. Notices have already been posted at the mouths of each of their mines. Almost every day miners are killed or permanently crippled in coke mines. Elmer Wilson was burned from his neck to the soles of his feet in a coke oven at a mine near here, only a few days ago.

Rank and file progressive miners are secretly organizing coke workers in all four unorganized counties of Pennsylvania. Miners from Pennsylvania, Ohio and Illinois are organizing the coal diggers of West Virginia, Kentucky, Kansas, and other unorganized mine fields into a strong union which will not only fight wage cuts but demand better wages. The National Miners' Relief Committee is doing its share by supplying relief to the families of thousands of miners who are striking for union working conditions and a living wage. All funds sent to their headquarters at 611 Penn avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa., are used for this purpose.

From the beginning of spring, there have arrived to the Birsk-Bidjany district about 600 Jewish settlers who have been settled, partly, in the Birsk test field and, partly, in the rice fields of the Ekaterino-Nikolsk district.

EACHERS HELP EXTILE BARONS IN NEW BEDFORD

Senator Butler Buys Up Sky-Pilots

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. (FP), July 4.—Former Senator William M. Butler, through private detectives, has ordered New Bedford preachers to tell workers to return to the cotton mills under a 10 per cent wage reduction. Indirectly he has promised to "take care of" them if they will help break the strike from their pulpits.

At least a dozen ministers have confirmed the story of the Rev. Linden H. White, pastor of St. Martin's Episcopal Church, who revealed activities of the Butler-bossed private detectives. J. Aspin Reed, head of a Boston detective agency, called on White and urged him to help call off the strike. He was to call on manufacturers to open their mill gates to hungry workers, although they had already published their intention of opening July 9.

Bribe Preachers

"Will the manufacturers take down the wage cut notices," asked Linden.

"No," was the detective's immediate reply. Turned down, Reed came back the second time. The minister stuck to his guns, and then Reed remarked pointedly and cooly:

"Do you mind, Mr. White, if I take your answer back to Senator Butler? You know he is interested in the mills here."

Reed also offered to "take care of" the pastor. To some he offered automobiles. Bribery unavailing, Reed threatened White that he would call up the mill treasurers and notify them of the preacher's refusal to serve them.

Linden's public statement followed a plea from Father Noon, Catholic clergyman, imploring the mill workers to stick it out. He asked the bosses to rescind the cut, asserting that even the previous wages had been far too low.

Uses Private "Dicks"

Butler, former chairman of the National Republican Party, former U. S. Senator from Massachusetts and confidante of President Coolidge, is a firm believer in the efficacy of private detectives in breaking up strikes and smashing unions. Between 1918 and 1922 he paid $250,000 to the Sherman Service to disrupt the union, corrupt leaders and tear down resistance to wage cuts.

The attitude of the New Bedford Council of Churches in urging arbitration of the dispute has been officially commended by the State Church Federation. The Federal Council of Churches is understood to be deeply interested in the New Bedford struggle and is making a preliminary study of the struggle to determine whether it should conduct a formal survey.

One worker was killed and 40 injured, when a crowded Bergen Street trolley jumped a switch and crashed into another trolley at St. John's Place and Ralph Ave., Brooklyn. BOSS DISCOMFITS HILLMAN MACHINE

Says 50,000 Garments a Week for Scab Shops

Despite all the ballyhooing of the Jewish Daily Forward, who together with Sidney Hillman of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union are trying their utmost to convince the world that workers in the trade are prospering under the Hillman regime several uncomfortable facts come to light to expose the chaos in the trade First it was the graft scandals that were exposed, and now the almost complete disorganization of the industry becomes known through the admission of the bosses.

As many as 50,000 garments per week are being sent to non-union contracting shops from New York manufacturers, is the announcement made by the manager of the Children's Clothing Contractors' Association.

Not only can this traffic be stopped. the workers bitterly complain, but even if it couldn't, the officialdom should launch organization drives to unionize the out of town open shops To prove that it can be stopped, it is then pointed out, all it is necessary to know is that the material shipped out is all cut goods, and a strict and honest control of the cutting end of the work would prevent this work from going to scab shops. It will be remembered, however, that the recent graft exposures showed the union officialdom as aiding and helping to ship these orders out of town for a cash consideration.

BERLIN, July 4.—Telephonic communication with Mexico was opened yesterday at 267 marks for three minutes of conversation—considered a prohibitive price.

Imperialism and Fourth of July

By LELAND OLDS (Federated Press)

To millions of workers slaving throughout the world to provide the tribute exacted by the American dollar empire the 4th of July will loom as anything but the birthday of liberty. They will view it as the day set apart by the world's greatest exploiters to glorify their rise to power. Gradually it will be transformed into Empire day, demanding worship of imperial power, wherever the dollar has established its dominion.

The change in the character of the 4th has been in progress many years. But it has proceeded most rapidly since the world war enabled American capitalism to declare its financial independence. This transformation is reflected in the recent expulsion from the Daughters of the American Revolution of a member who protested the blacklisting of scores of prominent persons for professing the principles of the declaration of independence.

Prior to the world war the United States was still in part an economic colony of Europe. Its workers had each year to produce the tribute required by European capitalists on the five to six billion dollars which they had invested in America. The greater part of this tribute went to England which held about $4,000,000,000 of American securities.

War Profits for U. S.

Huge war profits shifted the balance of power to American capitalists. They bought back a large proportion of the American securities held in Europe. They bought the investments of England and other European countries in Central and South America. They established New York as the moneylending center of the world and with the end of the war began to pour dollars into all parts of the world, taking mortgages on governments, buying up industries, engrossing power resources, building railroads and factories.

The latest census of America's investing dollars shows $5,200,000,00 invested in Latin America, $4,300,000,000 in Europe, $3,900,000,000 in Canada, $700,000,000 in China, Japan and the Philippines and $400,000,000 in other parts of the world. These dollars, which extend the domination of American capitalists over the economic activities of other peoples, are increasing more than $1,000,000,000 a year.

Enslave Latin America.

The growth of imperial power over Latin America is evident in the increase in dollar investments in Cuba from $220,000,000 in 1912 to $1,400,000,000 in 1918, by the increase in dollar investments in Mexico from $800,000,000 in 1912 to $1,288,000,000 in 1928, by increases in China from $15,000,000 to $451,000,000, Brazil from $50,000,000 to $388,000,000, Peru from $35,000,000 to $169,000,000, Venezuela from $3,000,000 to $162,000,000 and so on all the way down to ments increased from $3,000,000 to $20,000,000.

U. S. Investments First.

In total foreign investments the United States is still second to Great Britain, if British investments in the dominions are included. But American foreign investments are increasing more rapidily and in economic power there is no comparison. The annual income of the United States at $90,000,000,000 is nearly equal to the entire national wealth of Great Britain which is estimated at $100,000,000,000. American wealth is estimated as high as $550,000,000,000. In productive power the United States stands preeminent.

U. S. Dollar Controls World.

The dollar has stabilized capitalism in Europe, blocking the spread of bankruptcy and social revolution. It is recognized even by British bankers as the world standard of value. American bankers, bulwarked by the federal reserve system, are capitalizing the situation. Under their direction American dollars are boldly storming the economic defenses of other nations or filtering in as the situation requires. And behind the dollars are the American marines and the enormous potential war strength of the American people.

All this is summed up in the celebration of 4th of July 1928. It marks the development of empire worship.

POLISH AIRPLANE PILOTS STRIKE

Pilsudski Government May End Walk-out

BERLIN, July 4.—Pilots of the Aerolot Company, a Polish commercial airplane concern, have walked out on strike, according to dispatches received here from Warsaw.

Repeated demands for increased wages had been disregarded or refused by the company, the reports state. The men finally lost all patience and declared the strike.

The company made an immediate appeal to the government and it is believed that action will be taken to force the men to resume work at once.

Leaders of the strike declare that the men will not go back to work until the company complies with their demands.

PHILLIPS, SEWER GRAFT KING, DIES

Tammany Ring Still in Control

John M. Phillips, dictator of the corrupt Tammany Hall political machine in Queens and under indictment in connection with the $29,000,000 sewer graft scandal, died at Atlantic City yesterday from acute kidney trouble.

Phillips was to have gone on trial this summer in federal court charged with failure to pay income taxes amounting to nearly $1,000,000.

He also was to have appeared in Supreme Court this month to answer an indictment charging him and Maurice E. Connolly, former Borough President of Queens, with conspiring to defraud the city of millions of dollars in the letting of contracts for sewer construction. Phillips had the exclusive agency in Queens for a special type of sewer pipe which was sold to the city at exorbitant rates.

The Queens political ring, controlled by Connolly and Phillips, was one of the most powerful in any city borough. Phillips dictated the city sewer contracts. An investigation which stalled for many months recently was finally force to return indictments.

Tammany Hall did some window dressing in preparation for its national nominating convention by forcing out the too brazen Connolly. It was noted, however, that the same machine is still in power as was proven by the character of the committeemen sent to the convention at Houston all of whom were attached to the string manipulated by Phillips.

STORMS IN WEST KILL FIVE PERSONS

More Than 20 Hurt; Reports Incomplete

ST. PAUL, Minn., July 4 (UP).—Hail, wind and rain storms over Minnesota, Wisconsin and North and South Dakota during the last two days left five deaths in their wake and property damage amounting to more than $2,000,000, reports indicated today.

It is definitely known that five persons have been killed and a score or more injured. Communication still was disrupted to parts of the states and the complete toll probably will not be known for several days.

Reports last night were that nine persons had been killed, but with the establishment of more complete communication, the death list was cut down.

Amundsen Reported Rescued By Yacht

TROMSOE, July 3 (UP).—An unconfirmed report received here tonight said the British yacht Albion had rescued Raold Amundsen near South Cape, Spitzbergen. The Albion had reported early today that she heard faint radio signals which might have been sent out from the seaplane in which Amundsen and his companions started on an expedition to the relief of the crew of the dirigible Italia.

The reports, which were without other confirmation, said a Norwegian sealing vessel assisted the Albion in the rescue and that both vessels were proceeding to Tromsoe.

FLOODS DESTROY CROPS OF MINE STRIKERS IN OHIO

Situation Becomes Desperate

(Special To The DAILY WORKER.)

RENDVILLE, Ohio, July 4.—The striking miners of Hocking Valley are standing by helplessly, watching the flood destroy their summer food supply. Thousands of coal diggers have worked on little garden patches for weeks, looking forward to the vegetables to supplement their one-meal-a-day fare, only to see it all carried away by the high waters.

Picket lines are active on every road leading to the mines. The attempts of the Ohio Collieries Coal Co. and the Sunday Creek Coal Co. to operate to their mines open-shop are meeting with complete failure. No matter how hungry they are, the coal diggers are on the line morning and evening.

Now that the gardens are gone, appeals more poignant than ever before have come to the National Miners' Relief Committee, urging that their locals be included in the relief lists. Conditions in this part of Ohio are probably more desperate than in any other section of the strike area. The National Miners' Relief Committee is appealing for more funds, so that it can expand its activities to take in these camps. All funds sent to 611 Penn Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa., are immediately converted into food and send into the strike camps.

The Socialist Leadership of the New York Times

An amusing editorial—and in a certain sense an instructive one—appeared in the New York Times last Tuesday. While this authoritative newspaper of the New York bankers is not precisely a socialist party organ, nevertheless it descended just for one moment to fill the function of "Comrade" Oneal's New Leader.

The editorial starts off:

> "Among the working classes of Europe the standard of living is higher than before the war, according to a survey conducted by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace."

The Times then quotes "Comrade" Sidney Webb for a testimonial in testimony for the magnificent helpfulness and generosity of capitalism to the working class. And then a scolding of "other British labor unionists and Socialists," who,

> "though in a minority, find it hard to concede that the capitalist devil is not quite so black as they believe Karl Marx painted him."

The Times is merely stepping into that necessary backyard of capitalist political activity which is called the "socialist" movement, to apply a little discipline. The Times says plainly that it wants its socialist servants to hearten up their fight for opportunist revisionism, their fight against their masters' enemies, the Communists. The Times continues:

> "For it is now more than thirty years since the German Revisionist Socialists broke with the Marxian creed of the increasing poverty of the masses under capitalism. Today it is only the fanatics of the Cook type and the preachers of Communism who cling to the dogma of a working class sinking deeper and deeper into destitution and servitude. Responsible and intelligent Socialists have not left it for 'capitalist' investigators like the Carnegie Endowment to proclaim that life has been growing easier and fuller for the workers. Higher wages, shorter working hours, the security of social insurance, larger opportunities for recreation—these are undeniable facts which have convinced Socialists in every country that the Marxian 'truths' of 1864 stand in need of serious revision. Instead of poverty and enslavement they now stress justice and democratic control of industry.

So the New York Times was a "socialist" organ Tuesday. On Wednesday it came back to the Republican-Democratic fold after the little excursion into its "servants' hall."

Is there a single honest worker left in the "socialist" party that cannot learn from this that the cause of Revisionism—which is to say, the cause of Hillquit, Berger, Oneal, Thomas and Maurer—is the cause of capitalism, as advocated within and on the fringes of the working class? In other words, the so-called socialist party has precisely nothing in common with Socialism, nothing in common with Marx, nothing in common with the cause of the working class. The Times defends the "responsible and intelligent socialists" who, it says, take the position "that the Marxian 'truths' of 1864 stand in need of serious revision." And the Thomases and Maurers, in turn, defend the "democracy" by which bankers rule.

The cause of socialism is represented solely by the party which struggles to make the working class the ruling class; it is only after the establishment of the rule of the working class that it becomes possible to begin the building of socialist society. The only party that fights to establish the rule of the working class is admittedly the Communist Party; while the socialist party fights for the continuation of the present governmental system of capitalist "democracy"—so eminently satisfactory to the New York Times and finance-capitalism.

When the socialist party's candidate for the presidency, "Comrade" Reverend Norman Thomas, openly writes in the organ of the socialist party that he is not an "orthodox" Marxian, of course it cannot be disputed that his reverence means that he and his party are the Revisionists of whom the Times speaks with such approval.

Workers who hold to the views of Marx and Engels and want to fight for Socialism have precisely one way in which to realize their hopes. They must join the party of Marx and Lenin, the Workers (Communist) Party.

Let this red election campaign result in drawing many thousands of new members into the Workers (Communist) Party, the American section of the world party which fought for and established the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

Or are you a "socialist" of the kind approved by the New York Times, organ of Wall Street?

Southwest Miners Fight Fakers

By HUGO OEHLER.

The miners of the southwest coal fields in District 13, 14, 21, 24 and 25 have endured several years of the worst labor betrayal and treachery that an organization as militant as the miners could live through.

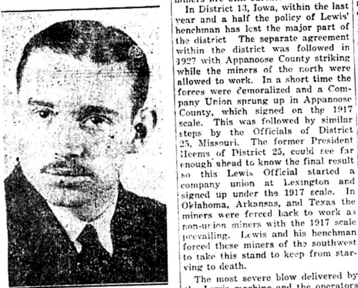
In Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas where the miners were well organized they enjoyed conditions better than workers of other organizations. The organized miners of these states proved what a body of men in an industry can do if organized and fighting as a unit against the operators.

Result of Treachery.

But for the last several years, the Lewis administration of the United Mine Workers has shown what a reactionary grafting set of "labor leaders" can do to a powerful organization. From an organization that challenged the operators at every turn, the union has changed to one which day by day relinquished points won through bitter years of hardship and struggle. A once militant organization has been transformed into a Semi-Company Union because of a leadership which has grafted itself upon the organization.

Today, the miners of the southwest stand on the crossroads leading either to complete destruction if the path of Lewis is continued or to the rebuilding of the organization if the path of the left wing, the road of class struggle is followed.

Some years ago Districts 21 and 24 were lost to the union when the miners of Oklahoma struck and were betrayed by the Lewis Machine. The same policy of leaving one district work while the other district was on strike lost Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas at the beginning of the struggle. While the Oklahoma miners were fighting the operators Lewis was cutting down their forces.



HUGO OEHLER

The meetings of the operators with the union officials in the Keith and Perry Building in Kansas where contracts were signed were usually transformed into booze parties. In Kansas City Lewis perpetrated his betrayal of the eastern miners by signing up separate agreements. This policy was later perfected by district officials until now they have it down to a science with individual mines signing up in such a way that the forces of the miners are still further weakened.

In District 13, Iowa, within the last year and a half the policy of Lewis' henchman has lost the major part of the district. The separate agreement within the district was followed in 1927 with Appanoose County striking while the miners of the north were allowed to work. In a short time the forces were demoralized and a Company Union sprung up in Appanoose County, which signed on the 1917 scale. This was followed by similar steps by the Officials of District 25, Missouri. The former President Heems of District 25, could see far enough ahead to know the final result so this Lewis Official started a company union at Lexington and signed up under the 1917 scale. In Oklahoma, Arkansas, and Texas the miners were forced back to work as non-union miners with the 1917 scale prevailing. Lewis and his henchman forced these miners of the southwest to take this stand to keep from starving to death.

The most severe blow delivered by the Lewis machine and the operators against the miners of the southwest was the combined attack of the industrial court law and the Lewis betrayal of the Howat-Dorchy, Kansas miners' strike. After the defeat of this strike and the coming of Van Bittner the back of the miners of the southwest was broken and it was only a matter of time before the miners' organizations of the nearby states, mainly Oklahoma, Arkansas, Iowa and Missouri would be strangled. And such did follow until now the bulk of these miners are non-union; others are in company unions while the United Mine Workers of America is no more than a semi-company union in the entire southwest.

The first blow against the miners by the operators and the Lewis machine was delivered in District 14 and today after years of betrayal, treachery, graft and corruption on the part of the officials we find that the first battle of the rank and file in line with the struggle of their comrades in the east is taking place.

Repeat Struggle.

Seven years ago the miners of District 14 put up a heroic battle against the operators and Lewis machine and today these same miners are repeating this struggle.

Yesterday it was at the head of the attack by the operators. Today the miners are attacking the operators by calling a rank and file convention to oust the reactionary officials of District 14 and to lay the basis for the new miners' union of the southwest in line with the national miners' conference.

New Life for National Minorities Under U. S. S. R.

By I. AMDUR.

The October Revolution has undoubtedly done much for the Russian workers and peasants. Only under its own dictatorship could the working class, together with the wide masses of peasants, have reached the comparatively high level of cultural development and economic emancipation that they now enjoy.

However, one must turn to a survey of the existing conditions among the numerous national minorities—scattered throughout the four corners of this vast expanse, with one foot embedded deeply in the modern, contemporary achievements of western civilization, and the other just as firmly entrenched in the ancient mysticism of the East—that the far-reaching effects of the October clash for the rights of self-determination may be properly judged.

More than a hundred national minorities live on the territory of the Soviet Union. Until 1917, these numerous peoples and tribes (in some of which are no more than two or three hundred people) existed under conditions that had undergone no change for hundreds of years; without schools, without literature, with no public institutions, no modern culture, many of them even without an alphabet. They were indeed little removed from the early Tartar and Mongol hordes that swept through the eastern portions of Russia centuries ago.

Darkness Under Tsarism.

Tsarism made no attempt to civilize these semi-barbarous tribes. It was not the policy of the Tsarist regime to introduce reforms among them; such a policy would have entailed enormous money grants, and, besides, it was a dangerous business to have the light of knowledge brought to the minorities as this light could quite easily set the spark to their consciousness of their conditions, and the resultant awakening would not at all have been for the good, or profit, of the Romanovs and the preceding dynasties.

The only time when the powers that were turned their attention to these peoples was when the latter, having experienced a particularly poor harvest, were unable to pay the taxes in kind which were demanded. Then bands of cossacks were despatched to these regions, and a bloody lesson taught to these "refractory" tribes.

The problem of the cultural development of the national minorities was, and is, one of the principal and most difficult tasks of the Soviet Government.

New Life Under U.S.S.R.

A Commissariat of Nationalities (since reorganized as the Council of National Minorities) was set up immediately after the seizure of power by the Bolsheviks. Expeditions of ethnographers were sent out to study and gain the confidence of the tribes. The Commissariat issued an appeal for social workers, and hundreds of men and women teachers and instructors volunteered to go out and work among them. Schools were opened, and this great mass of oppressed illiterates, representing almost 33 per cent of the entire population (46,000,000) entered into a new life.

Special commissions of scientists and men of letters were set up to create alphabets for those of the minorities who were devoid of them. Literature was unknown among many of the tribes, and some of them had never before seen a printed book.

A publishing house catering solely to the national minorities was founded and many schools opened. This publishing house is, despite its untold difficulties, successfully grappling with a work that no institution of a similar character has ever before attempted. At the present moment, it is publishing literature in 42 languages. During 1927, almost 40,000 elementary readers in these languages were printed.

Along with educational development, these backward peoples find a gradual upliftment of their culture.

Libraries and schools have been opened in nearly all autonomous states. Travelling cinemas and theatres have finally roused the once semi-barbarian tribes to a desire for their own native folk-lore and culture, and today theatres with native performers, staging their own plays, can be found in every decent-sized town. Authors and poets have appeared from among them, and with each year the number of native publications is increasing.

The right of self-determination of peoples is being enjoyed by the national minorities, and the able brotherly aid that is extended by the Soviet Government has awakened feelings of the utmost confidence for the central government and co-jointly with it, share in the great task of socialist construction.

KILLED IN STORM

CAMDEN, N. J., July 4 (UP).—A freak electrical storm left one dead and three hurt in South Jersey today. Aldo Bruno, 14, Philadelphia, was killed by a bolt while riding a horse at the farm of Umberto Batchino near Vineland, N. J. The horse was uninjured, but Batchino was stunned and his feet blistered.

HANdOuTS

The fourth of July did not turn out to be so hot, after all. The spirit of revelry about which the capitalist press delivers its annual ballyhoo on the day before the Fourth, was noticeably absent yesterday. From the editor's window, on the fourth floor of the Workers' Center, a few straggling figures could be seen wending their listless way across Union Square. The dredges that are being used in remodelling the little "park" in the center of the square were silent, and lended to the general appearance of somnolence.

The ear-shattering reports of firecrackers failed to materialize. A few taxis bleeted with their soprano musical horns. A few American flags waved tiredly in the sky.

Finally, at six o'clock, the skies began to weep—for the wrongs perpetrated by the imperialist America of 1928 in the name of the Revolutionary America of 1776.

In Church Too!

There are a lot of thinks going on in church besides the manufacture and distribution of religion. The preachers are usually impartial to labor and capital until a struggle breaks when they decide it is more pious and profitable to line up with the bosses. In the church shown above the pastor's wife and a handsome choir singer busied themselves teaching the workers the tactics of christianity; that is if the boss slaps you on one cheek, instead of biting him on the knee, give him the other cheek to disfigure. These two however did find time to hold hands once in a while underneath the hymn book. They used to spend a hard day giving out morality and then, when they had none left, they would meet clandestinely it is said. Things then transpired only distantly related to the theory and practise of Christianity. The pastor is now suing for divorce charging infidelity. The reason the wife wanted a little new company is shown below. He is the Rev. John R. Reeves of the Reformed Church of Hawthorne, N. J. The wife's name is Margaret and the choir singer is Charles D. Petrie. The members of the congregation are pretending to be extremely shocked. They haven't been found out yet.

Kindness of Rich

You can look in any capitalist paper and find proof that the workers are getting a lot more than they deserve. If you couldn't what would be the good of a capitalist paper? In the above picture which appeared in the capitalist press we see the orphans desporting themselves at Luna Park. Some people might think that orphans are forced to live in cheerless and unsanitary institutions. But this picture is proof that they are being well provided for by getting a ride on an elephant's head once every solitary year. Perhaps you think the unemployed are left starving and forgotten. They may starve a little, but they are remembered in some of the most sympathetic resolutions ever passed in the history of buncombe. The poor are lucky too under capitalism. Every Christmas they get a basket of groceries that the rich don't get. The baskets are filled right up to the top too to provide for a family of five until the next Christmas. After such kindness anyone who criticizes the capitalist system can be proved ungrateful by any capitalist reporter.

URGE WORKERS TO SUPPORT $100,000 RED ELECTION FUND

Appeals to Workers and Farmers to Rally to Workers (Communist) Party

Statement By Agitation Department Denounces Capitalist Parties

In connection with its nation-wide election campaign with Foster and Gitlow as candidates for president and vice-president, the department of agitation and propaganda, the "Agitprop," of the Workers (Communist) Party yesterday issued a statement denouncing the parties of capitalism and pointing out the necessity of the working class to support their own cause in the coming election.

The statement in full reads:

The two parties of American imperialism, smeared with oil graft and polluted with sewer graft, have finished the task of nominating their national candidates for the next Presidential term. Wall Street is well satisfied with both—with Al, the ex-fish peddler and leader of Tammany Hall, and with Herbert Hoover, the efficiency man who came from some tumbled-down shack in the west—as they like to boast.

The Republican Party recently went through the farce of holding a convention to elect standard-bearers. Wall Street had already decided that Hoover was the man, so after a few native [illegible] were carried out on stretchers no other than the "unholy" Bill Vare of Philadelphia was used as Wall Street's instrument in breaking down all obstacles against the nomination of finance-capital's favorite son.

The Ohio Gang

It was Harry Daugherty, the [illegible] Ohio politician, afterwards red-baiting attorney general, who brought about the nomination of President Harding for the Presidency. And under the Harding regime the Ohio gang became notorious. Now the Pennsylvania gang under Vare will probably take the place of the Daugherty crowd.

And if Tammany Hall gets into the White House what a story there will be to tell four years hence! The Democratic Party is as corrupt as the G. O. P. and equally willing to serve the interests of the capitalist class.

Wall Street's "Liberal"

The Democratic Party is also backed by Wall Street. Al Smith, who has been considered liberal in the liberal and socialist press, enjoys the complete confidence of Wall Street.

Both parties are equally corrupt. While the Republican grafters took to the oil fields, the Democratic grafters dove into the sewers for their loot. The Democrats did not have a chance for eight years to loot the national treasury, and the Tammany Tiger is now purring with pleasant anticipation of four years of national pillage.

Exploitation Chief Robbery

But while the graft and corruption that goes on under those two parties makes good copy for the press and proves that capitalist politicians are frauds and hypocrites when they talk of patriotism, the robbery that chiefly concerns the Workers (Communist) Party is the robbery of the workers at the point of production.

The capitalist governments function as strikebreakers for the employing classes, and it does not make a particle of difference to the workers which set of politicians are in power. Both will break strikes, issue injunctions through their compliant judges, persecute the Negroes and the foreign-born, and wage war against the peoples of weak nations in whose territories are deposited resources that can be exploited to the profit of American imperialism.

Challenge Capitalist Parties

It is on these fundamental issues that the Workers (Communist) Party challenges all other political parties in the field, including the degenerate Socialist Party, and calls on the working class to organize for the overthrow of the system which those parties serve.

The Socialist Party has repudiated the class struggle, nominated a canting clergyman for President and supports the reactionary officialdom in the labor movement, which constitutes the strongest bulwark between the [illegible] class and the revolutionary [illegible] which aims to overthrow [illegible]. Under a socialist administration the government apparatus [illegible] be used to crush strikes and [illegible] warships to Nicaragua and [illegible]

LAUNCH ELECTION DRIVE IN DIST. 2

Successful Open-Air Rallies Held

The election campaign of District 8, Workers (Communist) Party, was launched Wednesday night, July 4, with open-air rallies in various sections of the city. They were among the most successful meetings held by the Party during recent weeks and proved to be real demonstrations for the Workers Party against American imperialism.

The subject of discussion at these meetings was, "Our Heritage from the American Revolution, the Struggle Against American Imperialism and the Program of the Workers Party."

Bronx Meeting

In the Bronx a meeting was held at Intervale and Wilkins Ave., the principal speaker being Rebecca Grecht, candidate for assembly in the 5th Assembly District, who was arrested at an anti-imperialist demonstration in Wall St. the day before. Other speakers were Harry Eisman, of the Young Pioneers, and Goldman, a member of the Laundry Workers' Union. About 500 workers listened attentively to the speakers and a collection of over $17 was taken.

Another open-air meeting was held

NEW PLANS LAID TO SAVE ITALIA

Russian Icebreaker is Still in Ice-Pack

VIRGO BAY, Spitzbergen, July 5 (UP).—The work of rescuing the stranded men of the transpolar dirigible Italia was placed upon a new basis today when it was decided to have the Swedish seaplane Uppland establish a gasoline and food supply station nine miles from the ice encampment from which General Umberto Nobile was rescued.

The Uppland will establish this station on the coast of North East Land.

Meanwhile, the rescue ship Braganza disembarked the seaplanes which Captain H. Riiser Larsen and Lieutenant Luetzow Holm will fly. The Braganza started for North Cape, carrying a Finnish airplane which will be used at the new base to be established by the Uppland.

The Russian icebreaker Krassin has been unable to extricate herself from the packed ice.

Michigan Governor May Pardon Rich Criminal

LANSING, Mich., July 5 (U. P.)—Gov. Fred W. Green said today that he has taken under consideration a plea of George R. Rich, wealthy Battle Creek steel manufacturer, to pardon his son.

Arthur Rich, the son, is serving a life sentence in Jackson state prison for an assault and beating administered to Louise King, of Washington, Pa., Battle Creek college co-ed.

The governor told the United Press that he had ordered x-rays, introduced by the state at Rich's two trials as those of Louise King, taken to Ann Arbor and examined by a dental expert at the state hospital.

The father has claimed that the x-rays were not Louise King's, the governor said.

Governor said that the x-ray report would be considered with other data on the case in the application for a pardon.

MINOR DENOUNCES POLICE ATTACK ON PROTEST MEETING

Workers Party Nominee Shows Tammany Role

Robert Minor, candidate of the Workers (Communist) Party for U. S. Senate from New York State, who together with 14 other participants was arrested on Tuesday, July 3, at the demonstration in Wall street in front of J. P. Morgan & Co., organized by the All-American Anti-Imperialist League as a protest against the war of American imperialism against the Nicaraguan people, issued through the New York State Election Campaign Committee of the Workers Party the following statement yesterday:

"The tyrannical action of New York City police in breaking up the demonstration against Wall street and its oppression of Nicaragua, in assaulting and arresting workers peacefully demonstrating their solidarity with the oppressed peoples of Haiti, Porto Rico, Cuba, the Philippines and China, on the day before July 4, the very day on which the American people themselves, 152 years ago, overthrew their foreign oppressors, shows very clearly the real role of the American government as the government of Wall Street, the government of the bankers and manufacturers.

Police Tools of Capitalists

"The Tammany police, as the republican administration in Washington, are at the beck and call of Morgan and Rockefeller to attack workers, their meetings and their strikes in this country, just as they are carrying out the wishes of the financial interests with 4,000 marines in Nicaragua today.

Demand His Release

Thousands of New Bedford textile mill strikers will take part in a huge mass meeting today to demand the release from prison of John Porter (above), member of the Young Workers League and textile strike leader. Porter, held in Fort Adams military prison, Newport, R. I., faces a 99-year sentence for his strike activities.

PORTER PROTEST MEETING TODAY

New Bedford Strikers to Fight For Release

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., July 5.—Plans for the huge mass meeting called in protest against the imprisonment of John Porter in an army jail are completed, the International Labor Defense committee announced. The meeting is to be held tomorrow afternoon on Sauliner's open field.

Many thousands of striking textile workers are expected to turn out in a demonstration for the release of Porter, who is a vice-president of the New Bedford Textile Workers Union of the Textile Mills Committee.

It was because of his activities in the strike here that he was thrown into jail by the army authorities and now faces compound charges of desertion, participation in a strike and several other points, any one of them punishable by long prison terms, according to army statutes. Porter is also a member of the Young Workers (Communist) League.

Paul Crouch, young Communist ex-soldier who himself served a prison term for his activities as a Communist while in the army, will be the chairman of the meeting. Other speakers are Jack Rubenstein, strike organizer; Theresa Valente, from the union, and representatives of the International Labor Defense.

Theresa Valente, who is secretary of the Provisional National Committee for Porter's Defense, announced that a national conference of sympathetic labor and youth organizations will be called in New York soon, with the date of the official call to be issued later.

Complete Shut Down

HAZELTON, July 5.—Nearly nine thousand miners employed by the contractor system mines of the Lehigh Valley Coal and Navigation Company near Mauch Chunk walked out on sympathetic strike today when the company shut out its employees in collieries 4, 5 and 6 in what is believed to be an attempt to force down wages and weaken the power of the union. Progressive miners of District 1 have advocated the calling of a general strike against the contractor system which the reactionary officials of District 1 are refusing to fight.

WILKES-BARRE, July 5.—One hundred-fifty representatives from fifty local unions of the anthracite attended a rousing conference called by the Save-The-Union Committee at Luzerne, and after listening to speeches by leading militants of the districts resolved to unite behind the struggle of the bituminous miners and to support the National Miners' Relief Committee.

Elect Officers

Bill Gebert was elected chairman of the conference and George Papcun secretary. Mike Harrington, from Avella, Pa., District 5, spoke in the name of the striking miners of that region and told the miners picturing the true situation in that region where striking miners have to fight not only the coal operators, state police, but also the reactionary machine.

Papcun pointed out that the mining industry in both sections in anthracite and bituminous are in crisis. "The officialdom of the union do not even attempt to help the situation," he said.

In District 1 miners are on to

"MEDIATION" MEET BARS DELEGATES OF MILL STRIKERS

"Batty, Binns Do Not Represent Workers; Parley Decisions Invalid," Says Mill Committee

Mass Sentiment Demands Return of 10 per cent Cut Before Union Goes to Conferences

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., July 5.—Following a conference held today by Mayor Ashley, Chief of Police McLeed, Major Winslow and Lieutenant Perry of the 101st Field Artillery, an announcement was issued by Mayor Ashley to the effect that 40 national guardsmen, as much a mounted force as is obtainable will be used to assist the police Monday, when the mill owners will try to reopen the mill gates. In addition the entire police reserve and the civil service force will be called out to augment the police forces.

Monday is scheduled to be the real test day of the strike as tens of thousands of strikers are being mobilized to picket duty at the 56 mills.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., July 5.—In an attempt to clear the road ahead for an attempted sell out of the 28,000 textile workers on strike here, the State Board of Conciliation Conference, in which officials of the Textile Council and mill owners participated, refused admittance to the eleven representatives of the Textile Mills Committee on the grounds that they were not invited.

The strike committee of the T. M. C. upon learning of the exclusion, issued a statement declaring that the conferences are not valid since the Textile Council is not representative of the vast majority of workers on strike.

Secret Confab.

Although the conference was called for 10:30 a. m. in the City Hall, an announcement was issued by them that sessions will start in the afternoon and will be held in secret, not even representatives of the capitalist press being permitted admittance.

In view of the heretofore expressed eagerness of the Council officials to end the strike on any degrading terms offered, this move for secrecy merely emphasizes the charge that the conference is engineered as an attempt to betray the heroic fight of the workers.

COOK VOTE RAPS LABOR SELL-OUT

Fights to End Against Official Treason

LONDON, July 5.—A. J. Cook, militant miners' leader continued to struggle against the action of the officials of the Trade Union Congress in conference with business leaders headed by Lord Mond, by casting his vote against the report providing for the establishment of an industrial council.

Cook, who sees in the industrial council the latest maneuver of the industrial leaders and union officialdom for class collaboration has fought the measure from the start.

The report which deals with trade union recognition and the prevention of strikes was drawn up largely under the direction of the business leaders headed by Lord Mond. In the fall it will be submitted to the Trade Union Council and the national confederation of employers' organizations who are expected to accept it.

Strikes are throttled under the provisions of the report. Though the idea of compulsion is discarded, it is specifically stated that no stoppage of work is permissible while the national industrial council is reporting.

Under the phrase "rationalization of industry," it is believed that Lord Mond and the group he represents and leads intends to introduce a nationwide speed-up and increase in efficiency, with corresponding elimination of workers.

Characterizing the measure publically, Cook declared it to be "a mere fig-leaf upon naked capitalist autocracy in industry."

WASHINGTON, July 5.—Only one witness remained today to clear the decks in the Federal Trade Commission's power trust "investigation," prior to taking on the summer recess.

Frank M. Cuppy, Lafayette, Ind., will be questioned at a short session tomorrow. Cuppy, a power trust executive, was shown in previous testimony to have received substantial sums in connection with lobbying activities in behalf of Indiana utilities interests. He will be questioned regarding disbursement of the money.

When the commission has finished with Cuppy, it intends to recess open hearings until September, when Pacific coast and northeast utilities propaganda activities will be investigated.

Klansmen Fail to Hear Heflin; Can't Burn Cross

Klansmen gathered at Bailsley Park, South Jamaica, Queens, waited for several hours yesterday for the appearance of Senator Heflin, who had been scheduled to speak to them. Heflin, however, did not appear, sending a message that he was detained in Jackson, Michigan. Over 3,000 members of the Klu Klux Klan waited patiently in the hot sun, until they got tired of waiting.

Finally, when they had just about decided to burn their hundred-foot cross, it began to rain, making the affair a complete failure.

Watt Exposes Move of Lewis Machine to Force Back Miners to Scab Pits

MILITANT LEADER SHOWS FISHWICK BEHIND BETRAYAL

Coal Diggers Will Not Be Stampeded

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 5.—"John L. Lewis is now ready to surrender the Jacksonville scale," John Watt, chairman of the Arrangements Committee of the National Miners' convention called for September 9-16 to organize a new miners' union, declared in a statement issued today. "Lewis's whole strike policy was aimed at bringing the miners to the point of exhaustion, when a wage cut could be forced on them, and he is now taking the final step. This is the real purpose of the meeting of the policy committee called by Lewis," Watt said.

In his statement Watt showed that the ostensible reason for the meeting of the policy committee, the demand of Fishwick's executive board that the Illinois district be allowed to "negotiate a separate agreement," is obviously false, since Lewis's publicly declared strike policy was based all along on negotiating separate agreements.

Opposed by Militants

This policy was fought from the very beginning of the strike by the progressives in the U. M. W. A. as leading to the isolation of the miners of western Pennsylvania and Ohio, where the main attack on the miners' union was taking place.

Fishwick's executive board really demanded permission to abandon the Jacksonville scale, and this was given support in resolutions passed within the past two or three weeks by a number of locals in Illinois which are still controlled by the Lewis-Fishwick forces. According to Watt, Lewis will now submit to the "pressure" from the Illinois miners, engineered by himself and Fishwick, and will abandon the Jacksonville scale, although the public statement that will be issued by the policy committee following its meeting may be couched in vague and evasive terms.

Miners Undaunted

The effect of this on the membership of the U. M. W. A., Watt said, will be to increase their determination to get rid of their false leaders and to bring larger numbers of them to the new progressive union which will be organized at the September convention.

FERRY-WORKERS WIN WALK-OUT

Tie-up of July 4 Crowds Forces Victory

When sixty men, employed by the Brooklyn and Richmond Ferry Company on their four boats, walked out on strike, at 10:30 a.m., July 4 crowds being at their thickest, traffic to Staten Island was held up for the day. The men asked for an increase of five dollars per week and time and a half for overtime, but a slight improvement on their present earnings.

The motorists, angered at this power of the ferry-workers to spoil a perfectly good day for them, waited in ever-increasing lines for hours.

Commissioner Goldman delayed a prespective pleasure trip long enough to act as a scab-herder for the ferry company. He put the city ferries at the disposal of the company.

But to no avail, since all traffic could not be accommodated. The company was finally forced to grant the workers' demands and the lines began working again at 6 p. m.

chinery can never serve the purpose of the new order which will be set up when the workers seize power, as was done by the workers and peasants of the Soviet Union, and proceed with the reconstruction of society on the basis of the interests of the workers and exploited farmers.

The Workers (Communist) Party alone of all the parties in the field raises the revolutionary banner and urges the workers to organize themselves for a militant struggle for immediate improvements in their living conditions and for the final overthrow of the capitalist system and the organization in its place of a Workers' Soviet government in the United States.

Revolutionary Candidates

In this national election campaign the standard-bearers of the Workers (Communist) Party, William Z. Foster and Benjamin Gitlow, with a lifelong record of struggle in the American labor movement, will sound the call for the organization of the American workers into the Communist Party to fight against the strike-breaking injunctions issued by Republican and Democratic judges, to fight against the reactionary bureaucracy of the A. F. of L., to oust it from control of the unions and to organize the workers into powerful, militant unions under a leadership that will recognize the class struggle and oppose class peace and class collaboration.

The Fighting Party

The Workers (Communist) Party will fight for the immediate recognition of the Soviet Union, the immediate withdrawal of the armed and governing forces of Wall Street from Nicaragua and other colonies, to support the struggles of the striking miners and textile workers, to organize the Negroes for a fight against racial discrimination as well as industrial exploitation, to fight against the persecution of the foreign-born workers, to urge the organization of a mass Labor Party, and to demand the immediate release of all class-war prisoners.

These are only a few of the issues that the Workers (Communist) Party will bring before the masses in this campaign. The contest between the only party of the workers and poor farmers and the parties of the capitalists will be a bitter one. The billions of Wall Street will be behind Hoover and Smith. The dollars of the workers and poor farmers will be behind the Workers (Communist) Party ticket.

The Workers (Communist) Party is launching a drive for a $100,000 campaign fund to fight the mighty Wall Street powers with their billions.

The billions of Wall Street will be used to befuddle the workers with poisonous propaganda and to purchase votes on election day.

The campaign fund that the Workers (Communist) Party is raising will be used to carry the fight against wage cuts, longer hours, rationalization, and the exploitation of the workers into every corner of the United States. The Workers (Communist) Party is asking the exploited masses of the United States, whether in factory or farm, to contribute to this fund.

Workers and exploited farmers! Get behind this drive for the $100,000 Communist Party Election Campaign Fund!

July Defense Bulletin Is Mooney-Billings Issue

The July issue of the Labor Defense Bulletin, which has just been published by the New York Section of the International Labor Defense, is a "Free Mooney and Billings" number. Articles in its pages trace the history of the frame-up of Tom Mooney and Warren K. Billings; stresses the long struggle against a labor-hating and imperialist government to free the two militant workers, and appeals to the workers of New York to help in the mass drive that has been inaugurated by the New York Section of the International Labor Defense.

The cover design shows Mooney and Billings caught in the spider web of dollar diplomacy.

STRIKERS BARRED FROM CONFERENCE

ers against the 10 per cent wage slash.

Another fact indicating the purpose of the conference was presented by qualified observers who said that the mill owners hope thru the calling of this hearing to demoralize the ranks of the strikers in preparation for the coming Monday. According to a recent decision of the mill owners they will make an attempt to reopen the mills then.

Big Demonstration.

The Textile Mills Committee leaders, however, are confident that the picketing demonstration arranged for this Monday will be so tremendous in size as to compel the bosses to again close the plants. The sentiment among the striking tens of thousands shows that New Bedford will see the greatest manifestation of working class solidarity in the history of New England's labor struggles, the union leaders declared.

That the union leadership participate in no conferences, nor join in calling one until the mill barons are ready to give a preliminary guarantee that the 10 per cent wage cut order will be withdrawn, is the sentiment of the strikers.

"If negotiations are to be held," the workers say, "let there be negotiations over our other demands." This refers to the demands put forward by the Textile Mills Committee and among which are a 20 per cent wage raise and a 44 hour week.

"Impartiality."

An interesting fact that can be related is that one of the members of the State Arbitration Board is at the same time the chief official of the Mule Spinners Union of the Textile Council, Samuel Ross. His membership on the board requires that he be strictly impartial in a controversy between the workers and the bosses. Not only are the bosses satisfied with his impartiality, but his speeches to the strikers, in which he scolded them for not wearing cotton instead of silk stockings, shows him to be more than partial—to the bosses.

This morning saw large and enthusiastic picket lines covering many mills at both ends of the town.

At the Whitman Mill about several hundred pickets of the Textile Mills Committee marched. Suddenly from around the corner came a line of about half a hundred pickets of the Textile Council. They tried several times to outmaneuver the Textile Mill Committee pickets and cut them off from the mill gate. Their leader stated that under no circumstances would their line leave before the Textile Mill Committee members. But by about eleven o'clock all the Mill Committee members were still there while the Council pickets had completely faded away.

VERMONT FARMER RUINED BY FLOOD

Land Destroyed, Stock Gone, Lot Hopeless

The devastated condition of the farmlands of Vermont constitute a serious drawback to the rehabilitation of these farms, according to a survey completed by the United States Department of Agriculture.

The floods of last November, followed by the spring floods, have wrecked havoc with the small farms and meadowlands. In spite of the serious danger of further erosion and back-sliding of the river banks, the government has as yet done nothing. The task is too great for the farmers to handle alone, since it requires the building of dams, dikes and jetties which is quite out of the question for the already exhausted farmers, who are threatened with complete annihilation.

Many of the farms were covered with a layer of unproductive earth and gravel, livestock washed away homes ruined and huge boulders taking the place of chicken-houses and barns. It is estimated that 10,000 acres of meadowland have been entirely ruined, and the remainder require complete reseeding.

AUSTRALIA GOVT. PASSES DRASTIC ANTI-STRIKE LAW

Reactionaries Aim to Wipe Out Unions

SYDNEY, July 5.—The Australian parliament has just passed a labor law that is even more severe than the British anti-strike legislation. This instrument of suppression has been passed in a land whose six states either have a "labor" government or had one for a short time.

The new law forbids everything which has "the character of a strike or an uprising," not approved by the Higher Court of Arbitration. The penalties are set at 1,000 pounds fine for an organization and 50 pounds for a single person, but when the organization excludes its militant leaders the fine may be cut from 1,000 pounds to 100. So when a union in Australia gets rid of its most revolutionary leaders it can save itself a cost of 900 pounds sterling.

The law further provides for a nullification of organization charters, which practically means that a union, at the time of an industrial conflict, is recognized only as a collaboration partner. If the law would only go one step further it would mean the entire destruction of legal unions.

The law also provides for the wiping out of union laws that are judged to be dangerous, and can override the will of the union leaders. Anyone who publishes anything against the lawful carrying out of these decisions will be fined 100 pounds.

workers in Wall street, at which 16 workers and speakers were arrested, while Hoover, the republican candidate for president, is pledged to carry on the policy of the Coolidge government which is today waging war against Nicaragua.

Fights for Workers

"The only political party which fights for the exploited workers and farmers and against the invasion of colonial countries by American imperialism is the Workers (Communist) Party. In the coming elections all workers and poor farmers should protect their own interests by rallying around the platform of the Workers Party and its standard-bearers."

The case of Minor, which was supposed to come up for a hearing yesterday, was postponed until Monday when he will come up, together with 14 others arrested at the demonstration. Reports published in the capitalist press that he had forfeited his bail of $500 are untrue.

Postpone Case

The case of Rose Plotkin, 13-year-old member of the Young Pioneers arrested at the demonstration, was also scheduled to be heard yesterday. She appeared before Judge Samuel D. Levy in Children's Court, 127 E. 22d St., but the case was postponed until Tuesday. In the meantime she was confined to the Hecksher Foundation, 5 E. 105th St. Jacques Buitenkant, representing the International Labor Defense, who is defending all those arrested, is preparing a writ of habeas corpus to secure the release of the young militant.

ISSUE APPEAL TO DEFEND WORKERS

Scab Mines Indifferent to Life

An appeal for funds to help defend the 16 workers who were arrested Tuesday afternoon when police attacked an anti-imperialist demonstration in Wall Street was issued last night by the New York section of the International Labor Defense which has taken charge of the defense work. The appeal, signed by Rose Baron, secretary of the section, says in part:

"The International Labor Defense secured the temporary release of all those arrested and they will come up for hearing Monday. The I. L. D. also furnished bail of $500 for Robert Minor and $1,500 for Nathan Kaplan. For all this defense work immediate funds are necessary. Not one of those arrested must be sent to jail for even a single day, or a precedent will be set which will be used against militant workers in the future. The International Labor Defense appeals to all class-conscious workers to save their comrades from the 'justice' of the capitalist courts by sending funds for their defense to its office, 799 Broadway, Room 422.

"The I. L. D. also asks all workers to aid its work by attending en masse the great outing which it is arranging in Pleasant Bay Park for Saturday, July 21. All the proceeds of this outing will be used for the defense of workers in the clutches of the capitalist courts."

Children of Poor Find It Hard to Keep Cool

While the children of the rich disport themselves at exclusive beaches, hundreds of thousands of poor children in New York City are compelled to resort to all sorts of makeshifts in their effort to escape from the heat. Photo above shows children playing in an improvised pool.

TAXI NEWS IN MONDAY ISSUE

Many Feature Stories of Cabmen's Lives

Organization tasks of the 60,000 New York taxi drivers, the role played by the police in ruling the lives of these workers, a reprint of a letter sent out by the Taxi Bosses' Association, enclosing the blacklist against hundreds of drivers—these and many other features will be published in the Monday issue of The DAILY WORKER.

It is planned to get a copy of the paper into the hands of every cab-driver in the city on that day. This is a great and important task and requires the co-operation of thousands of workers.

Every Workers Party member and sympathizer, every reader of The DAILY WORKER is asked to join in this plan by purchasing one or more extra copies of the paper next Monday and pass them to a taxi driver.

Go to your newsdealer today and order your Monday copies in advance. Do not delay but act now, so that we can know how many papers to print. Ask the newsdealer to send in the order immediately. Do this for your paper and your class.

COMMUNIST VOTE AGAINST MUELLER

Socialist Will Carry On Former Policies

BERLIN, July 5.—Speaking before the Reichstag today, Chancellor Mueller emphasized that his government would continue its predecessor's foreign policy.

Mueller's statement was made in the face of the vote of non-confidence which was given him by the Communist members of the Reichstag. One hundred and thirty-four deputies voted against the Mueller government. Twenty-eight abstained from voting.

Mueller, a social democrat, formed his rump coalition when his efforts to form a grand coalition failed.

FIND MORE GRAFT IN DEMOCRATIC MACHINE IN N. J.

Erie Railroad Inspector Admits Pay From City

The republican-controlled State Legislative committee of New Jersey, seeking to forestall exposure of G. O. P. corruption moved yesterday to make public the huge graft in Mayor Frank Hague's regime in Jersey City.

According to a statement by the committee, an analysis of the payrolls of Jersey City contains enough political dynamite to blow up the Hague democratic machine. Hague is vice-chairman of the Democratic National Committee in addition to being mayor of Jersey City.

An investigation now being conducted by the committee revealed that John Quirk, 820 Pavonia Ave., who has been an inspector and supervisor for the Erie Railroad for forty-five years, has at the same time been on Jersey City or Hudson County payrolls intermittently since 1911, and that since last April 1 he has been drawing $7 a day as a street construction inspector for the Hudson County Boulevard Commission.

Mayor's Kin on Pay-Roll

At the hearing last week, it was brought out that a sister and a brother of the mayor are drawing salaries from the city for "services" that have not yet been definitely discovered.

During the questioning, Quirk admitted that his job on the Erie railroad was supervising the loading of freight of eight stations and several docks in Jersey City, and that he had about 80 men under his control. For this he receives, he said, $262 a month.

Can't Remember His Job.

Considering the time that this work requires, the fact that he has held many other "city jobs" for years has thrown the question of graft into the foreground. He testified that in 1911 and 1912 he was employed by the Fire Commission at $1,000 a year, and for a half year in 1913 by the Police Commission. After that he was given "odd jobs" as "inspector of streets and public works" at $6 a day. Since then he has had city jobs "whenever there was a chance to get one."

Under examination, however, he was unable to give any details of the work he was supposed to inspect.

Revolt of Indian Peasants and Land Workers in Northern District of Bombay

THOUSANDS HOLD DEMONSTRATION IN CITY AT NEWS

Tax Extortion Brought About Outbreak

BOMBAY, India, July 5.—An uprising of peasants and agricultural workers in the Gijerat, the northern agricultural region of the Bombay presidency, is defying the British authorities and organizing more than 80,000 land workers for revolt.

This information, which was received here yesterday evening, was the occasion for the most enthusiastic demonstration that Bombay has seen in many years. Thousands of workers, many of them striking textile workers, of whom more than 30,000 are on strike at the mills here, paraded through the city in sympathy with the revolting peasants and land workers in the northern districts.

While the British government is taking every precaution to prevent news of the revolt from reaching the south, it has been learned that the immediate cause of the outbreak of the peasants was the recently imposed land tax. Brutal attempts by the officials to extort the tax precipitated the revolt.

It has also been learned from unofficial sources that the revolutionary organization in the Gijerat has forced the resignation of seventy-nine headmen who were attempting to enforce the tax collection.

Mohandis K. Ghandi and Vallababhai Patel are reported to be active in the outbreak.

Grave alarm is reflected in the measures which the government is reported to be taking to crush the uprising. According to reports from Delhi, the call for troops will be dispatched to the scene of the revolt at once. It is believed here that men are already entrained.

The attitude which the Indian railway workers may be expected to take in the present situation is causing the greatest excitement among the workers. Recent unrest among the strikers in the shops at Howrah and other centers, which was suppressed by troops from the Northwestern Rifles, has incensed the railway workers.

In event of their refusal to man the trains carrying troops against the revolting peasants, it is expected that the government will use troops to run the trains.

DEATH TAKES NEW TOLL OF MINERS

Labor Defense Seeks Aid for Victims

JAMESTOWN, Pa., July 5.—Michael Rabick was crushed and instantly killed while working in Mine No. 28 of the Pennsylvania Coal and Coke Corporation, when a five-ton fall of rock buried him under its weight. His widow is now faced with the problem of being bread-winner and keeping house for her eight little children.

Young Frank Walters also died yesterday in the Big Mountain Coal Company plant, near Columbus, Ohio. He was electrocuted as he attempted to place a fuse.

The death toll is constantly mounting since inexperienced scabs have been working the mines that union men struck fifteen months ago. Accidents in the unorganized fields, coal dust explosions, gas blasts and coal and slat falls continue daily. Comparatively inexpensive safety precautions like rock-dusting the mines, are rarely taken unless union pit committees demand them.

Miner Fatally Injured

SHENANDOAH, Pa., July 5.—John Hughes, 36-year-old miner, was fatally injured Saturday, when he fell down a slope entering the Park Colliery mine here. Besides many serious internal injuries, he suffered a fractured skull, lacerations and contusions of the head and body.

Another Death

WELLSBURG, Pa., July 5.—Coal miners at the West Virginia-Pittsburgh mine near here discovered the body of John Colatine lying beside the tracks in the mine, dead.

The 24-year-old driver of the man-trip was covered with marks which indicated that he had been squeezed between the side of the entrance and the cars and crushed to death.

Pittsburgh Workers to Hold Picnic on Sunday

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 5.—Thousands of workers of western and central Pennsylvania and West Virginia are expected to gather at the Workers (Communist) Party's third annual picnic to be held July 8 at Nicholson's Farm, Swiscville, Pa.

All-day dancing, music, games, good food, including roast lamb, European style, are some of the attractions. A special program has been arranged for the youth, who are expected at the picnic in large numbers.

RETRACT PERMIT FOR SPORT MEET

Czech Officials Alarmed by Red Celebration

(Special to the Daily Worker)

PRAGUE, Czecho-Slovakia, July 5.—Losing its head completely over the coming celebration of Red Day thruout Czecho-Slovakia, the government officials have retracted their permission to hold a Red physical culture demonstration in the stadium here.

The authorities alleged the political nature of the sports demonstration as grounds for their refusal.

Permission to hold the physical culture meet was barely 12 hours old, having been granted to the Sports Federation the day previous.

URGE INDUSTRIAL LOAN IN U.S.S.R.

Called Fitting Answer to Don Plotters

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., July 5.—Appealing to the government of the Soviet Union to answer the sabotage of the counter-revolutionary technicians in the Donetz basin and other centers of sabotage organization with a mass response, scores of meetings held thruout the Donetz valley in the last few days have urged upon the government the advisability of launching a new industrial loan.

The appeal has been put in the form of a resolution by numbers of meetings who urge that the funds acquired in this way would go far towards the building up of industry thruout the Soviet Union.

the situation and beginning to fight. The general discontent of the rank and file is capitalized by the fake progressives, Brennen and company.

Many rank and file took the floor and told the condition in their local unions and mines, pointing out that bosses are on the offensive and that the officialdom of the union is not taking up the fight for the miners.

Miners were urged to subscribe and distribute the "Coal Digger," the official organ of the militant miners. Many miners subscribed.

The conference elected a committee of 21 composed of the outstanding rank and file leaders thruout the district.

Brother Chas. Killinger from Portage, District 2, told the miners that if it had not been for the National Miners Committee, miners in that section would have been forced to go scabbing.

Detail Lewis' Treachery

Joe Kislyn, candidate for vice-president in District 7, greeted the conference in the name of the progressive and the militant element in that district. He assured delegates that 90 per cent of the membership of District 7 are against present reactionary Lewis, Kennedy, and Mattey machine. He told the brothers in District that the Lewis-Kennedy-Mattey machine in District 7 have taken out an injunction against the local union in MacAdoo. He condemned this action and said that we do not need an injunction to oust Lewis, that the rank and file will do the work.

The conference closed with a short speech by chairman Gebert urging the miners to organize themselves for a future fight and to give a 100 per cent support to the National Miners' Convention.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., July 5.—Local 1616 at Plains, after a plea of Brother Mike Harrington, and Chas. Ziniewski, voted $100 for the striking miners in the bituminous fields.

NANKING TROOPS SHOOT OWN MEN

Mow Down Soldiers Who Ask Pay

SHANGHAI, July 5. — Troops of the Nanking government yesterday surrounded and mowed down by gunfire seventy soldiers of the former northern army at Tientsin.

The men had professed their allegiance to the Nanking government but demanded $20 per man before they would retire to a village outside Tientsin where the Kuomintang officers wished them to take up quarters.

The men were surrounded by Shansi soldiers and killed unmercifully.

The incident has become the pretext for patrolling the streets of Tientsin with hundreds of troops and armored motor cars.

PEKING, July 5.—Chang Hsuehliang, son of the former northern warlord, Chang Tso-lin, has telegraphed the Nanking leaders that he is preparing to withdraw all his troops north of the Great Wall.

BALLET TO DANCE AT BIG CONCERT

Thousands Expected at Coney Affair

make this great concert a musical event such as has never been witnessed by the workers of this country.

The name of Prof. Theremin is already well known to most workers. This young scientist, a product of the Soviet Union, has astounded the scientific and musical world with his new invention by which he draws the most beautiful music out of the air without the aid of a musical instrument. Theremin will appear before an American working-class audience for the first time at Coney Island Stadium and will demonstrate how he produces music merely with movements of his hands.

The program of symphony music by Arnold Volpe's Symphony Orchestra of 50 musicians will itself be equal to the best of concerts. Volpe, founder and first conductor of the stadium concerts, has gathered together one of the leading orchestras in the country.

Tickets for this unusual concert should be secured at once by all those who want to make sure of being among the 25,000 militants who will pack Coney Island Stadium July 14. They are on sale at the Workers Center, 26-28 Union Square.

AUSTRIAN SOCIAL DEMOCRATS MAKE BID FOR POWER

Attack Seipel's Stand With Fascists

(Special To The DAILY WORKER.)

VIENNA, July 5.—The political struggle for power between the Austrian fascist government and the social democrats, who are seeking to succeed it in office, took a new turn yesterday with the public censure in a social democratic organ of Prime Minister Seipel's policy in kowtowing to Mussolini on the Tyrol question.

Choosing an issue where they believe they can rely on the nationalist feelings of many Austrians, the social democrats believe that they can win power for themselves by a strong criticism of Seipel's administration at this time.

The prime minister's action in effecting the recall of the Italian ambassador to Vienna was accomplished without the knowledge of parliament, the social democrats urge.

At the same time they demand an immediate convening of parliament to deal with the Italian issue.

The maneuver on the part of the social democrats is causing the most widespread discussion here in public and in the press. The prevailing opinion is that the maneuver is an attempt of the social democrats to overthrow Seipel. In this way they calculate to obtain the support of the Austrian diet, especially the Tyrolese diet, it is believed.

About 1,000 workers were present at an open-air rally in Union Square This was an unusually successful meeting. Speakers were Max Shachtman, John Sherman, Laurence Ross, Emanuel George, a striking miner, and Nathan KaKplan. Shachtman George and Kaplan had been arrested at the anti-imperialist demonstration and received ovations. Many copies of The DAILY WORKER and of various pamphlets were sold.

Ray Ragozin, candidate in the 23d Assembly District; Sam Liptzin, candidate in the 22d Assembly District and D. Benjamin, candidate in the 7th Senatorial District, were the chief speakers at an open-air meeting at Bristol and Pitkin Aves. More than 500 workers were present. Several socialists tried to heckle the speakers but they were booed down. A generous collection was taken.

Three Negroes joined the Workers Party at an open-air meeting at Myrtle and Prince Sts. Edward Wright was the chief speaker at this meeting.

DONETZ PLOTTERS TO GET VERDICT SHORTLY

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., July 5. — The final speeches of the defendants in the case of the engineers and technicians accused of sabotage work in connection with mining operations in the Donetz basin, were completed yesterday.

A courtroom crowded to the doors by hundreds of workers heard the majority of the defendants admit their complicity while, at the same time requesting leniency.

The accused German engineer, Otto Meier pleaded not guilty, however. While the German technician, Badstieber, admitted his guilt. He declared that he had committed his offenses under pressure from German engineers.

Verdict in the case is expected within the next twenty-four hours.

GOVT. WILL SELL ALL ITS VESSELS

May Hand Ships Over to Capitalist

WASHINGTON, (UP) July 4.—Eight alternative methods for purchasing the United States lines, the American Pelmetto Line and the American Merchant lines, have been offered ship operators by the U. S. Shipping Board.

The board hopes private concerns are now ready to succeed the government in running three of America's greatest shipping lines, but unless satisfactory bids are received the government will continue to operate the two services.

Advertisements of the sale will be issued late this month and bids will be opened September 1. Twenty-three ships, including the Leviathan, are offered and the board expects them to bring at least $25,000,000.

Storm Causes Damage To Communication Lines

OMAHA, Neb., July 4 (UP).—Telephone and telegraph communication suffered severely, trees were uprooted, and damage to farm property was reported throughout Nebraska and parts of Iowa by a severe wind storm which struck the two states today.

Sharp lightning, accompanying the 60-mile gale, struck trees and house chimneys but no deaths or injuries were reported.

Wires of the A. T. & T. company were hit hardest in this section but the damage will not cause any serious interruption in communication, the company reported.

A heavy rain accompanied the wind. Only slight delays were caused in railroad schedules and after the storm had passed, practically all trains were running on time.

The fast Chicago-Denver train No. 10 on the Urlington Road, arrived here at the height of the storm and was held for 45 minutes until the wind had abated.

The rain brought some relief from the heat in Omaha and surrounding territory.

800 MARINES FOR NICARAGUAN WAR

Practice Bombing of Helpless Villages

SAN PEDRO, Cal., July 5.—Eight hundred more marines, under the command of Lieut.-Col. Gerard M Kincade, sailed aboard the repair ship Medusa for Nicaragua today. The marines have been in training with the battle fleet here for more effective bombing of Nicaraguan villages and are now considered ready to join the forces operating against the revolutionists under Gen. Augustine Sandino.

The coming election in Nicaragua serves as an excuse for the dispatch of more United States troops, which are supposed to guarantee a "safe and fair election," but are in reality engaged in an attempt to crush the revolutionary movement and to insure the existence of a puppet regime headed by Gen. Moncada.

Progressives Offer Program to Adler Shop Workers, Correspondent Writes

OFFICIALS SEEK TO DISCREDIT MILITANT GROUP

Rank and File Would Build Amalgamated

(By a Worker Correspondent)

MILWAUKEE, Wis., (By Mail.—I am enclosing the leaflet of the amalgamated progressive group addressed to the locked-out workers of the Adler Shops in Milwaukee which has aroused the anger of the Amalgamated officials here.

The officials are trying to persuade the members of the union that: 1. There is no progressive group in the union. The leaflet is the work of the "outsiders," the Communists. 2. The leaflet is the work of the agents of the Adler Co. who seek to disrupt the ranks of the union. 3. The facts in the leaflet are not correct.

In making all these accusations the union officials are sidestepping some of the important points contained in the leaflet.

The main question is: Is the program outlined in the leaflet of the progressive group a correct program, a program in the interest of the members of the Amalgamated union? The demands of the progressive group are:

No promises by the union to make the bosses prosperous. A 100 per cent union shop. Higher wages. A 40-hour week. Elimination of piece work. Elimination of the arbitration clause from the agreement.

What is wrong about these demands?

Instead of answering this question the union officials engage in Red baiting and accuse the progressive group of being the agents of the Adler Co.

It is proper to ask the question: Who are the agents of the Adler Co.? The progressive group which says: "No promises by the union to make the bosses prosperous"? Or those, who like Sidney Hillman, the president of the Amalgamated, says: "The policy of the Amalgamated is to make the firm (that is the Adler Co.) as prosperous as possible"?

The union officials question the correctness of the facts contained in the leaflet. Is it not true that "the policy of the union officials preceding the strike was "close co-operation with the bosses, giving in on almost every demand made by the bosses at the expense of the membership"? Is it not true that the union officials instead of making an appeal to the workers of the Latin shop in Wisconsin Rapids to join the union and to help the Adler workers to win their struggle were appealing to the boss Latin, the man who conspired with the Adler Co. to break the Amalgamated union in Milwaukee?

The time of the struggle is no time for criticism of the leadership, say the officials of the union. We say: the advocacy of the policy of co-operation between the union and the bosses is especially dangerous at the time of the union's struggle for its existence and must be combatted if the union is to survive. Some of the Amalgamated officials do not hesitate to practice such criticism in regard to other unions engaged in struggles as for instance Mr. Krzycki, when he criticizes (justly) the Lewis machine in the United Mine Workers for its betrayal of the workers. But when the Amalgamated officials become involved in the same policies they must not be criticized. Why?

The best guarantee for the success of the union is the militancy of its membership. It is this militancy that built the Amalgamated into a powerful union. The progressive aims to keep alive the militant traditions of our union. Despite the statements of the officials it is a bona-fide group uniting those who stand for militancy in the trade union movement and against class collaboration (the cooperation between the union officialdom and the bosses). The progressive group is here to stay and will strive to win the confidence of the rank and file on the basis of its correct policies.

A PROGRESSIVE.

Train Crash Kills 2, Injures Score, Report

CALIFORNIA SOCIALIST CONVENTION PITIABLE

(By a Worker Correspondent)

LOS ANGELES, Cal. (By Mail).—The "Socialist" Party State Convention was held here recently. About 70 people were present in the convention hall, 126 No. St. Louis St., including visitors, curiosity-seekers and children. The speakers' stand, and other parts of the small hall, were carefully decorated with national colors—stars and all. So, of course, the cops didn't attend the meeting. Communists, only, have police "protection" here.

The literature in evidence consisted of the Labor World, a very small "Socialist" weekly, anti-rodeo-cruelty leaflets, and so forth.

Nominations

Lena Morrow Lewis, San Francisco, was nominated for U. S. Senator and Chris Sorensen, Pasadena, and Harry Scherr, Los Angeles, were named as candidates for Congress in the 9th and 10th districts, respectively. Thirteen presidential electors were also nominated to cast their votes for the preacher candidate, Norman Thomas, and James H. Maurer.

A rich woman, who declined to accept the nomination for U. S. Senator, sent the S. P. her $1,000 check "as a starter." But if Mrs. Lewis is going to make a real fight for the senatorial shoes of Hiram W. Johnson she may be compelled to spend more than that amount for shoestrings in order to keep up the expensive style of the "progressive" ex-Bull Moose.

Mass Meeting in Name Only.

A "socialist" mass meeting was held the day before the convention. Although the southern part of this state is the "stronghold" of "socialism" in California, according to Cameron H. King, editor of The Labor World, who acted as chairman—only about 150 people attended the meeting, mostly Jewish.

"Many 'socialist' have lost interest," King said. "They think that nothing can be done. Might be able to get them back—but we have not time to do it," he continued.

Funerals to Be Life of S. P.

So the editor of the official S. P. organ in this state recommended the formation of a temporary campaign organization, an insurance scheme and the establishment of the necessary "machinery to look after 'socialist' funerals." The lack of the latter is a "draw-back to our party," he pointed out. Mr. King may be of the opinion that a dead "socialist" is a better organizer than a live one. After giving up the class struggle, the S. P. went on its "sick bed," it seems.

No, Mr. King didn't mention labor banks—but the possibility is that Matthew Woll, vice-president A. F. of L., is the "inspiration" back of the proposed (S. P.) insurance business, rumors say.

Paper Pays $15 a Week.

Editor King said that The Labor World is "not a going concern." The paper pays no wages, except $15 a week to Lena Morrow Lewis, the s. p. state secretary.

Attack German Communists.

Saul Ellstein spoke (Jewish) about his visit to Russia and other parts of Europe. The social democrats are going to take over the affairs of the world very soon, according to the speaker. Pointed to the last election in Germany in that connection. This lead Secretary Lewis to blame the Communists for drawing large numbers of workers away from "socialism" of the murderous Noske brand and into Communism.

Upton Sinclair was the principal speaker at the s. p. banquet.

MILITANTS ARE EXPELLED FROM JEWELRY UNION

Welfare Club Growing Stronger

(By a Worker Correspondent)

It's a long time now since the reactionary "socialist" cliques, in conjunction with the corrupt A. F. of L. officials started the drive against the progressive elements in the trade unions. They smashed union after union in their dastardly attempt to rid them of the militants.

Brother Beardsley, organizer of Local 1 of the International Jewelry Workers' Union, the local of the platinum and gold mechanics, was busy helping in their "noble" work wherever he could. But not even his own local was able to stand such treacherous work. For this reason he could not do more than raise some noise against the 'Reds."

Now, however, the "prodigal son," Beardsley, who withdrew from the A. F. of L. during the fight against the corrupt international secretary-treasurer, Greenstein, has returned, together with the locals which once also withdrew, to the fold of the A. F. of L. He likewise decided that he must earn a name in the inner circles of the yellow union. So the game began:

He made a move to organize a jewelry workers' welfare club and workers in allied trades. In other words, a mutual-aid and social club. This club was illegal in view of the fact that in 1926 we passed a resolution to forbid the formation of groups to discuss local union questions.

That the club did not discuss such questions did not matter to Beardsley and his right wing clique which misleads the local. In their argument they pointed out that the club was a menace because it might discuss local union questions and that it might have an opposition slate in the election, so it's illegal anyway. The active members of the club were not given a chance to answer all their "arguments" and now Beardsley & Co. are kicking the life out of the union.

Brother Abe Rubin, one of the most active members of the local for years, has already been expelled for this "crime." The writer of these lines, a member of good standing since the inception of the union in 1915, is slated to be pushed out. With us several other active members were called before the (Inquisition) Executive Board. All were expelled. That the resolution which they drew up is contrary to the rules of the constitution and illegal from every point of view any logical member can see, but such trifles don't disturb the sleep of the "democratic" s. p.-ites.

However, the expelled members are not going to bow to the vicious union-wrecking activities of the reactionary clique. We will insist on our right to membership in the union and are confident that in a short time that the rank and file of the local will see through this dirty game and will compel them to reinstate us, in the interest of our mutual protection against these disguised attacks of the bosses.

The Jewelry Workers' Welfare Club grows rapidly despite the attacks of the yellows and will continue to spread its influence among the workers of the jewelry and its allied trades. We will have our first picnic on Sunday, July 15, at Interstate Park, for which an interesting program is being arranged.

1,784 VETERANS SEEK SITUATIONS 177 GIVEN WORK

Ex-Service Organization Forced to Feign Aid

(By a Worker Correspondent)

PHILA., Pa., (By Mail).—What is the lot of the men who risked their all for J. P. Morgan and Co. in 1917-18 in the so-called city of brotherly love? How are they faring? Are the much feted heroes of "the war to end war" properly appreciated by the great government of Andy Mellon ten years later?

There have been murmurings and slight rumblings of discontent. It seems that about two years ago many men were thrown out of work and that the number has been constantly increasing. And the fact that a man gave part of his chin or part of his thigh to "make the world safe for democracy" and incidentally to pile up profits for the capitalists doesn't help him to get a job or to hold one.

These murmurings have increased and today an explosion burst forth—in the capitalist press.

What the weary, job-hunting veterans have known for a long time could no longer be kept quiet.

One Samuel J. Karsevar spilled the beans. It became known that the situation is so bad that the organization called the "Veterans of Foreign Wars" has been compelled to establish an employment bureau to show the veterans that some sign of interest is being taken in them.

Despite the well-known antipathy and fierce dislike of many, in fact of the majority, of the veterans to be in any way connected with veterans' organizations, 1,784 men applied for jobs. And out of this number only 117 were placed, according to Karsevar, who charges that many manufacturers and business people flatly refuse to cooperate with his employment bureau.

Now that so much publicity has suddenly been given the situation, it would be interesting to know what number the 1,784 applications for work has swelled. But those who know their Philadelphia know that both Karsevar and the local press will keep positively mum in the future.

Billie Burke, in "The Happy Husband," will close this Saturday at the Empire Theatre.

Annette Earl, now understudy in "The Silent House," will play the leading role next season in a new melodrama by John G. Brandon and George Pickett, who are also the authors of the Chinese thriller at the Morosco.

SHOW BALANCE OF TRADE FAVORABLE TO BOSSES ONLY

Owning Classes Exploit Internationally

By LELAND OLDS (Fed. Press).

CHICAGO, Ill., July 5.—Trips to Europe and the South Seas for the wealthy and their hangers-on. Foreign securities for their strong boxes. With these America's ruling class compensates for the excess of exports over imports. This injustice to American producers is apparent in a report of the U. S. department of commerce on foreign transactions of the United States in 1927.

The report shows that the international business of the country in 1927 reached $18,236,000,000 but that only $9,826,000,000 or a little more than half of this was exchange of goods. At least $6,000,000,000 of the remainder involved the tribute paid by American and foreign workers to the international owning class. Another $1,000,000,000 involved the expenditures of persons privileged to enjoy foreign travel.

In 1927 the United States exported $5,037,000,000 of the products of its workers, grouped by the department under the general head of commodity exports. This should have entitled the workers to receive in exchange the same value in products of other lands. But instead the imports of commodities amounted to only $4,489,000,000, leaving a balance of $548,000,000 to be made good in other ways.

This $548,000,000 excess of exports over imports is called a favorable balance of trade. But it is favorable only to the privileged owning class and its well paid retainers. To the workers and farmers who produce the goods it is an unfavorable balance because it means that they get less goods in return for what they produce.

An important feature of the report is the magnitude of investments in the United States by foreigners during 1927. In a single year foreign investors purchased nearly $1,000,000,000 of American securities. Foreigners are also collecting $281,000,000 a year in income on the American securities they already hold. Such figures show the international character of the owning class. The wealthy exploiters in the United States, England, Holland, Germany, France and other capitalist nations are all skinning the workers not only of their own but also of foreign lands. All are living in luxury on the products of the workers throughout the world.

PRESENT RUSSIAN FILM IN CHICAGO

The Russian Revolution Opens at Playhouse

CHICAGO, Ill., July 5.—No event in the history of the world has started such a mass of contradictory stories as the Bolshevik revolution in Russia. Factions opposed to the Soviet government in every nation have distorted the facts to suit their own purposes.

Now for the first time, an authentic documental motion picture history of the event has come to the screen. It is called, suitably enuogh, "The Russian Revolution," and it will open for a limited engagement at the Playhouse, 419 South Michigan Blvd., Chicago, beginning July 5.

"The Russian Revolution" is an intense vivid drama of the events leading up to and including the overthrow of the czar, the establishment of the Kerensky menshevik government, its overthrow, and finally the establishment of the peasants' and workers' government under the leadership of Lenin. It is an account of human suffering in oppression, of a people driven mad by imperialism, of people who sacrificed their own lives for the generations to come.

Every scene in the film is authentic and was photographed during the stormy days of the revolution.

Fighting to Save Survivors of Fascist Nobile Crew Stranded in North

Several countries have joined in the direct effort to save the followers of Gen. Nobile who are stranded in the icy wastes of the North as well as the lost Amundsen party. The Soviet Union has played a prominent part in this rescue work, sending the ice-breaker Maligin and the aviator Babushkin out over the treacherous frozen seas. The upper left photo shows the plane of Major Umberto Maddalena, who first found Nobile and his party of five, arriving with the news at Kings Bay, Maddalena conferring with Nobile's brother (left) and Commander Romagna (center). Right, Lieut. Einar Lundborg, Swedish aviator, who rescued Nobile and is now stranded with the Nobile party.

FORD SETTLEMENT STIRS UP BRAZIL

PARA, Brazil, July 5.—Widespread attacks against the governor of the state of Para for virtually giving away huge rubber concessions to Henry Ford continue with the arrival here of the first technicians and materials for the establishment of the Ford colony.

To ensure a healthy supply of workers, Ford's engineers have planned hospitals and general sanitation work to render the feverish Amazon river country into a colony where white workers can survive.

In line with this policy, hospitals will be among the first buildings constructed.

Hostility to the Ford rubber project is causing widespread hostility to the present Para administration. A number of similar "gifts" to American investors in all sections of Brazil has recently incensed public opinion.

Campaign Funds

There are indications that campaign funds this year will be bigger and busier than ever. This country is richer than it was four years ago. That is, the rich are richer and the poor are poorer. The individual worker is producing more wealth than before, and his portion of it is less than ever. Several new millionaires have been created by the aeronautic industry. Prohibition is more remunerative than ever. The capitalist groups behind each party will throw in their coin into a great gamble. Special favors may mean millions in additional profits. An humble garbage contract in New York surreptitiously let to a friend of the administration with a bid netted the favored one over a million. If a million can be made out of a heap of dung, what could not be gotten out of a contract to feed the army and navy?

Yes, hundreds of millions will be spent by the democrats and republicans in the coming contest. It will be used to befuddle the masses and to corrupt them. It will be used to purchase votes on election day. It will be used to purchase corrupt leaders of foreign-born communities, who are base enough to barter their influence with their people for a mess of pottage.

The Workers (Communist) Party, on the other hand, though standing for the interests of the millions of wage-earners and exploited farmers is out to raise only $100,000. If the workers and farmers were class conscious, this sum could be made $100,000,000. Some day they will be and then there will be no more need of raising campaign funds to contest the elections with the parties of Wall Street. There won't be any parties of Wall Street.

But sufficient unto this day are the duties thereof. The Workers (Communist) Party must raise that $100,000 to help put its national and state tickets on the ballot in every possible state in the union.

This is the biggest campaign the Party has ever undertaken.

Tons of literature must be printed.

Hundreds of speakers will be routed.

The whole Party will be mobilized to bring the message of Communism into every corner of the country, to organize the workers for the struggle against capitalism, and, in doing that, to expose the republican and democratic parties as Wall Street's puppets and the socialist party as a betrayer of the interests of the working class. Let's have that $100,000.

Those Ambulance-Chasers

Big Business's complete control over the machinery of government in the United States is again indicated by the recent "ambulance chasing" investigation in New York. After having punished several lawyers, doctors and policemen involved in fleecing the worker by instigating suits in which the worker receives less than fifty percent of the damages recovered by the lawyers, the big corporations announce that damage and negligence suits have decreased about 50 percent since the inquiry began.

This is exactly what the New York courts wanted to accomplish by its inquiry. The entire investigation was begun and overseered by the big corporations of the country in an attempt to throttle suits of this nature—suits in which the worker demands reimbursement for the loss of limb and even life in industrial accidents.

But the worker should not be fooled by the announcement that these suits have decreased by 50 percent. They should not think it is a victory for them. On the contrary, this move, which will save millions of dollars yearly for the big corporations, is really a slap in the face of workers whose lives are imperilled daily in industrial plants. It is an act of legal intimidation against the worker.

The punishment of a few corrupt lawyers, doctors and policemen who prey upon the worker by taking more than half the "recompense" for lost flesh and blood, should not blind the worker to the fact that the authorities, in fighting "ambulance-chasers," are trying to beat injured workers out of all instead of only half of such damage-money.

Such are "reforms" that come from above.

Textile Strikers Determined

(Reprinted From July Labor Defender)

With a spray of lilac in each picket's buttonhole and the longest picket lines since the strike began, New Bedford strikers answered the bosses' move to open the mills, and the mills did not open. Portuguese workers remembered that flowers have always been the symbol of victory for their armies, so lilacs picked in the country yesterday were handed out today when the pickets first came on the line.

At least 2,000 strikers at the south end and 3,000 or more at the north end picketed or watched at the gates of the Hathaway, Page, Nonquit and other mills. As the long line of pickets, marching two by two, moved up and down past the big red brick buildings, police watched silently and [illegible] of other strikers across the [illegible] stood unmoving for an hour and a half. Green picket cards of the [illegible] Mills Committees entitling [illegible] to food at the relief stations were punched by members of the New Bedford committee. Children in the line got their cards punched before hurrying on to school.

Lines of pickets from different mills at the south end marched on to a great meeting on Sauliner's lot, singing to the tune of John Brown's Body:

The men all stick together and the boys are fighting fine,
The women and the girls are all right on the picket line,
No scabs, no threats can stop us when we all march out on line,
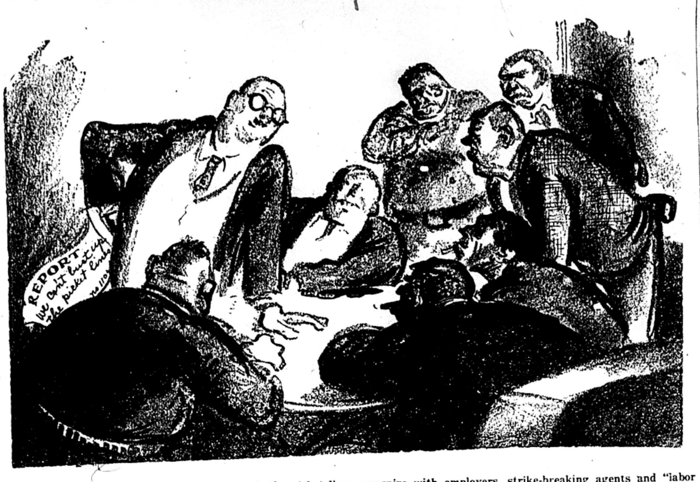
In One Big Textile Union.

The young song and cheer leader, Elizabeth Donelley, is out on the picket line again. She is tireless in mobilizing the singing brigades of children, grown ups and young workers. Antonio Adao, speaking in Portuguese, keeps the strikers laughing and applauding. He is a former I. W. W. man and led 5,000 Portuguese strikers once before.

William T. Murdoch, whose sentence to 90 days for "disturbing the peace" is appealed to a higher court goes back and forth with Fred Beal from north to south end speaking at the hall and then at Sauliner's lot. Ann Craton of the Workers International Relief visits relief stations and holds the fort at headquarters.

"DON'T CALL IT A CONSPIRACY, CALL IT A CONFERENCE."



REPORT
We can't bust up the picket lines

New Bedford textile barons, unable to break the picket lines, conspire with employers, strike-breaking agents and "labor leaders"—and call it a "Conference."

Tasks of Red Labor International

MOSCOW.—Conferences, plenums and meetings of the International Committees for Propaganda and Action were commenced immediately after the conclusion of the Fourth Red Labor Union International Congress. Their activities were to study and take up in a concrete fashion those questions and problems outlined by the Fourth Congress as a basis for the trade union movement during the next few years. Below we give a brief survey of the work of these conferences, plenum sand meetings of the International Committees for Propaganda and Action.

WOODWORKERS' PLENUM

A marked veering to the right on the part of the reformists has been observed of late (Switzerland, Belgium, Poland, Germany and France), while arrests are on the increase (Rumania, Yugoslavia, Hungary and Latvia). Trade union activities in England, Norway, Italy and in the Balkans have been undermined.

In those countries where the woodworking trades are experiencing a depression, wages are being lowered and hours lengthened. The curtailment of production is causing unemployment in countries like Czecho-Slovakia, France, the Balkans and Hungary. In Germany, where general business conditions are relatively more favorable, the workers in the woodworking trades have to contend with the ever increasing pressure of the employers.

In view of this situation the plenum stressed in its resolutions the necessity of intensifying and defining all class contradictions, to prepare the masses for the coming struggles, to reinforce the fight for unity and strengthen our political influences by penetrating the reformist unions, by putting up revolutionary candidates at elections and by combating the expulsion of revolutionary elements urges the necessity of transforming the factory committees into genuine proletarian organizations, to organize them where they do not exist, to from the unions, etc. Outlining organizational measures the plenum set up a single Woodwerkers International and to enhance the activities of the I. C. P. and A., etc.

The same questions and decisions were examined from the point of view of their practical application in various countries

BUILDING WORKERS PLENUM

Noting the general strengthening and growth of the building workers' movement, on one hand, and existing defects and shortcomings in trade union activities, on the other, the plenum in the main recognized the necessity of putting greater energy into the work, and of enhancing same. The defects observed, which the plenum considers must be eradicated at all costs, are: The weak connections of the I. Cä P. and A. with the various countries, the poor supply of information, the weak reaction to events and inadequate publicity activities.

Outline Tasks

The basic tasks outlined by the Building Workers Plenum are: To direct all activities to achieve the united front, to organize the unorganized workers, to set up organized and centralized leaderships in all the minorities, to reinforce the factory committees, to extend activities among the unemployed, to enhance cultural educational work and to set up mutual aid funds.

Examining the position of building workers in various countries, the plenum in its resolution drew up ways and means and instructions on realizing in a practical fashion the decisions of the Fourth Congress in accordance with the conditions obtaining in each given country, as, for example, in the United States, France, Jugoslavia, Holland and Czecho-Slovakia.

TRANSPORT WORKERS PLENUM

Sizing up the present position of the transport workers, the plenum considered that capital's attack on them has increased in all countries. Their position is becoming increasingly worse. The 12 and 13-hour day is being introduced. Wages are coming down, standards are being lowered and these measures are receiving the active support of the reformists. Meanwhile, however, the influence of the I. C. P. and A. is growing. At the Fourth Conference the I. C. P. and A. registered that the number of countries with which it had connections had grown from 15 to 43. Especially has its influence grown in the Far East.

In view of the situation at the present moment, the plenum urged first of all that the struggle against the reformists be increased, to struggle for trade and union unity, for better labor conditions and to raise the living standards of the transport workers. The following were outlined by the plenum as basic demands: The 7-hour day, social insurance at expense of employers, supply of special working clothes, workers to be engaged through the trade union organizations, etc. It has been recognized necessary likewise to conduct a campaign to increase wages, to abrogate laws prohibiting strikes and the right of coalition, to get the factory committees or corresponding organizations recognized and to get equal rights for colored and white workers.

Having discussed a whole series of organizational questions, the plenum recognized the necessity of establishing a single Transport Workers International and committees of friendship and fraternity, and of enhancing organizational and agitational activities of the unions. Furthermore, the establishment of opposition groups in the reformist unions was also considered essential. A struggle must be waged against the expulsion of left wing elements, to set up Transport Committees of Action, control points and International Clubs which will serve as organizational bases for the transport workers' struggle. It was also considered necessary to reinforce the press.

MUNICIPAL WORKERS MEETING

This meeting was held to make preparations for the conference and its convention in Germany. The agenda drawn up for this conference can be summarized as follows: Reports from the locals, I. P. C. report, organizational questions (connections, publicity activities, organization of minorities), the question of unity and attitude to Amsterdam.

NEEDLE WORKERS' MEETING

The characteristic feature of the present moment is the fact that most of the gains that the needle workers won during the last few years are being filched from them, thanks to the increased onslaught of the capitalists, and the treacherous policy of the reformist leaders. In their struggle against the workers these leaders are either utilizing the policy of mass expulsion of left wing elements from the unions, like in Germany, or are uniting with the police, as in America!

This meeting, therefore, urged the following vital tasks: To recruit new members for the unions, efforts to be made first of all among the unorganized workers to achieve this. To get control of the strike movement, to set up strike committees and factory committees and local trade union branches at the enterprises. By carrying out concrete tasks to struggle for the united front. As women are mostly employed in the needle trades, the necessity was recognized of including in the general program demands to defend the interests of women workers—equal pay for female and male labor, pregnant women to receive 8 weeks' leave previous to and after confinement, etc. To enhance organizational activities among the unorganized, to reinforce publicity activities, to set up firmer connections between the I. C. P. and A. and the locals and to increase the I. C. P. and A. funds!

The keynote of the Food Workers' meeting was to exchange information. Eighteen delegates from the Fourth Congress attended this meeting. The question of the union's affiliation to the International Food Workers' Federation was discussed. Organizational questions of a purely internal character were likewise taken up.

Building the Young Workers League in the Factories

By C. MILLER
District Organizer, Young Workers (Communist) League of Philadelphia

The Young Workers League at the present time is engaged in the task of entrenching itself among the masses of the young workers. At this time more than ever before must we take concrete organizational measures to build our nuclei in the factories. In accordance with this a series of shop nuclei organization conferences are being held throughout the country.

In our district the conference will take place on Sunday, July 15. The agenda for this conference will be:

1. Report of the district organizer on situation in the district in connection with shop activity.
2. Reports of the delegates from the factories and mines.
3. Concrete tasks in each factory.

Wide Representation

The following will attend this conference: Unit organizers, unit industrial organizers, comrades working in large factories, young miners, representatives of the party shop and mine nuclei, representatives of the District Executive Committee and a representative of the National Executive Committee.

The possibilities of building the league in this district are great. We find here the following industries: Anthracite coal, textile in Philadelphia (the largest textile city in the country with over 80,000 workers) steel, including the Bethlehem Steel mill in Baltimore, in which the party has a shop nucleus; rubber industry in Trenton, N. J., where the league has recently organized a unit, besides a large manufacturing industry In Philadelphia and vicinity alone there are about 10 per cent of all the workers engaged in manufacturing in the whole country.

The conditions of the young workers in this district are very bad. In the silk industry in the anthracite the young girls receive as low as 10 and 15 cents per hour. This is no exaggeration. The girls here, in order to make several dollars per week are forced to work 10 and 11 hours per day. In other industries the conditions are not much better.

In the anthracite where the Lewis-Cappelini machine and now the Brennen machine are engaged in the process of wrecking the standards of the workers, the young miners have their part to play. It will be up to the Young Workers (Communist) League to mobilize the young miners to resist the joint attack of the bosses and union bureaucrats. Thru the organization of mine nuclei we are in the best position to mobilize these young miners.

This conference will have as its aim to take concrete measures for the building of the shop nuclei. This task must be connected with some concrete form of activity if we are to be really successful.

In the city of Philadelphia the league is taking the initiative to organize a working youth conference. This working youth conference unlike the one called by Brookwood College is expected to take active measure in establishing a machinery for the unionization of the young workers. In the work for this conference it will be the league that will have to take the initiative. The shop nucleus conference will help to mobilize the league for this work in the factories. Similarly in the anthracite where a working youth conference is being called.

At this conference we will also have to answer how we will mobilize the young workers in the factories for the relief of the miners, for the support of the Communist candidates in the election campaign, and for the other campaigns of the league. Above all the struggle against the war danger and for the defense of the Soviet Union must be brought into the factories.

This conference will have to lay the basis for the actual building of nuclei and for the bringing of the different campaigns into the factories.

This conference is a step in the process to "Make the Factory the Fortress of Communism!"

The "Mental Hygiene" Bunk

By MYRTLE DE MONTIS.

Not only is there real danger to the working people through the exploitation of little children of the poor as is carried on through the juvenile courts under Dr. William Healy in Massachusetts, and of the helpless shell-shocked veterans under Dr. William A. White, head of the national asylum called St. Elizabeths Hospital, Washington, D. C.—these two men being prime-movers of the Lunacy Trust of America—but also in the new-fangled "Mental Hygiene" laws being passed in many different states because of the teachings of these experts, which are pernicious.

This is Dr. Ralph Hamill, president of the Illinois Society for Mental Hygiene, speaking to the representatives of large industrial and commercial enterprise whom I quote:

"If the mental health of the worker is normal he functions efficiently and falls into the category of contented employes.

"If his mental health is impaired his efficiency suffers and the employe develops a complex and becomes grouchy, or suspicious, over-bearing and over-sensitive; he worries, day dreams, loses the power to concentrate and becomes a burden to industry." Dr. Hamill said. But you don't find the learned doctor discovering any fault in industrial conditions, do you?

He continues "Why does a worker kick? or suffer other forms of mental and emotional disturbances that cause many losses of millions of dollars annually?" So if you kick, you're just simply cookoo, that's all!

It is to be noted that where "Mental Hygiene" flourishes the strongest is in the New England industrial centers, and that there are more unfortunate victims locked up in the wretchedness of asylums there than anywhere else in America.

Workers, beware of the Lunacy Trust! It comes hand-in-hand with industrial exploitation. It grabs little children for child labor to compete with adult labor. It waxes fat on the plight of our gassed and shell-shocked soldiers, and now through the laws it is passing everywhere it can grab you if you are dissatisfied and kick about the conditions under which you are forced to work!

HANdOuTS

Struggle for existence of the American capitalist class is vividly presented by the announcement that the Postum Company, Inc., makers of the famous hay and molasses drink which is supposed to taste like coffee, has just declared a dividend worth $300,000,000.

America is a free country. Anybody who is industrious can enter business and work his way up to the top. The Taggart Corporation has just been organized on a $25,000,000 basis to manufacture paper. Any worker who wants to get out of the ranks of the proletariat and is willing to work hard can compete with the Taggart Company on a fair basis if he happens to have $25,000,000 in the bank.

How surprised the British leisure classes will be when they wake up some morning and find they have a Workers government is suggested by the fact that when John Hennessey appeared before them to play tennis for the Davis cup in a pair of striped flannel trousers they were unutterably shocked. A few years ago another American player tried to take the same advantage over his British opponent at Eastborne and was required by the South England championship committee to change into white trousers before the match went on.

Cal Coolidge says he is undecided as to what he will do when he retires from office. It has been suggested he get a job as standing before a cigar store as an Indian, breaking in hobby horses or testing arm chairs.

Workers who for any reason have a slight lack of confidence regarding American courts should be reassured on hearing that Judge Allesandroni, who last March absentmindedly sentenced Irving Cohen to a term of 34 years, yesterday admitted his mistake and freed the man.

A picture of sport under capitalism is painted in the following words of Charley Paddock regarding the Olympic Games of 1924:

"It was suggested that the American who drew the inside lane that day, the moment that he was set, should start running. The rest of us would know what to expect and could save ourselves. But Abrahams, the Englishman, in order to protect himself would have to go, too, expending his energy. Of course if the first American was not called back he would undoubtedly win. But if he did not get away with it, then the next American would try, and the next, until each American would have started twice, while Abrahams would have had to start hard eight times. In that many chances it was very probable that one American would get away. But if no one did, it would not make any difference, because Abrahams would be so worn out from his eight trials that an American would win anyway."

Why didn't they just let him run in a pair of rubber boots and be sportsmanlike?

Harry F. Sinclair, central grafter in the Teapot Dome corrupt political-financial orgy, is slated to appear again before an investigating committee on charges of being involved in shady transactions in the Salt Creek Oil Fields.

There are two morals to this: the first is, that America's so-called "investigating committees" aren't worth a plugged nickel, insofar as real investigation goes. The second is that (in these glorious U. S. of A.) you can't keep a good grafter from rising to the top of the financial world.

Mine Women Fashion Silken Relief Banner

(Special To The DAILY WORKER.)

RENTON, Pa., July 4.—The striking miners' wives are gathered in front of the Renton barracks, planning a silken banner which they will embroider and send to the Detroit, Michigan, branch of the National Miners' Relief Committee. It will be awarded to the organization affiliated with the committee that collects the most funds for relief purposes in a special campaign Detroit is planning for the near future. Mass meetings, house to house collections and tag days are being considered. Complete plans will be announced soon.

According to Mrs. Anna Mondale, the Renton women have decided to use red silk as the background and embroider the letters in gold.

DEATH SENTENCES GIVEN TO ELEVEN DONETZ PLOTTERS

Commutation for Six Is Recommended

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., July 6.—After a deliberation of forty-eight hours sentences of death have been handed down on eleven of the half a hundred citizens of the Soviet Union charged with sabotage in connection with counter-revolutionary activities in the Donetz coal fields and other sections of the U. S. S. R.

Of the eleven men sentenced to death, the sentences of six have been recommended for commutation.

Less severe sentences, in proportion to the degree of criminality of the various sabotagers, have been passed upon the other defendants. These are chiefly terms of imprisonment.

Several of the Russian prisoners have been paroled by order of the court and, of the three accused German engineers, two have been acquitted while one has been paroled.

The sentencing of the eleven sabotagers concludes a trial which has gripped the attention, not only of the Soviet Union, but of the entire world, for weeks. The seriousness of the offense and the ramification of sabotage organization has aroused workers throughout the world and led to the belief that the government would demand the severest sentences to put a final end to similar treachery on the part of its technicians.

Generous Politician.

BERLIN, July 6. — The German section of the League for the Rights of Man has prepared a petition to the Soviet government urging that a number of the engineers convicted of sabotage and counter-revolutionary activity in the Donetz basin be spared the death penalty.

A second petition, which is reported to be in preparation, is signed by Heinrich Mann, celebrated German novelist, and several other notables.

THOUSANDS TO BE AT BIG CARNIVAL

Proletarian Athletes in Many Sports Events

All roads will lead to Starlight Park today. Workers from every part of the city will throng to the huge sports carnival and jamboree of the Joint Defense that promises to mark a turning point in the history of proletarian sports in this country.

The great carnival will be a social event with a serious underlying purpose. Militant needle trades workers have been framed up by the union-smashing right wing cliques in co-operation with the bosses. Immediate funds are needed for their defense and these funds will be supplied by the great carnival today.

The carnival will be the greatest gathering of proletarian athletes ever witnessed in this country. The leading workers' sports clubs of the city are cooperating in the affair. Baseball, soccer, swimming, boxing, wrestling, gymnastics, are among the athletic events included. In addition to the athletic program there will be dancing all afternoon and evening, a concert by the Hungarian Symphony Orchestra, a children's ballet by the Non-Partisan Workers' Children's schools and a literary open forum by members of the young group of writers known as "Union Square."

Fifty thousand workers from every part of the city, every trade, every nationality, will be in Starlight Park today. Admission is only 50 cents, and half price for children.

25,000 WORKERS TO ATTEND BIG CONCERT

Coney Island will be the center of the map of the world for 25,000 workers on Saturday evening, July 14. This is the evening when the great concert and entertainment of the left wing movement of New York will take place in Coney Island Stadium. And it will be the night when 25,000 fortunate workers will for the first time see and hear the greatest invention of the century that enables the most beautiful music to be drawn out of the air without the aid of a musical instrument.

Prof. Leon Theremin himself, the great Soviet scientist responsible for this sensational discovery, will be on hand to display his invention. Merely by moving his hands he will draw forth tones of unrivalled beauty and play the most difficult compositions. Coming from the country where the realization of the proletarian revolution has made this great invention possible, Prof. Theremin will greet the revolutionary proletarians of this country for the first time at Coney Island Stadium.

Prof. Theremin alone would be attraction enough, but in addition other famous artists will perform. Among them will be Arnold Volpe and his noted Symphony Orchestra and the Roxy Ballet. Tickets are selling fast and all those who want to make sure of being at this great proletarian concert should secure them at once at the Daily Worker office, 26-28 Union Square.

SUPPORT MINE DEFENSE CALL

Labor Defense Drive On July 22-29

An urgent appeal for support to the joint miners' defense and relief drive to be conducted by the International Labor Defense and the National Miners' Relief Committee was today issued from the national office of the I. L. D. at 80 E. 11th St., by assistant secretary Martin Abern.

Plans are now being perfected for the drive, which is to last from Sunday, July 22, to Sunday, July 29, inclusive.

The I. L. D. statement points out the pressing necessity for adequate means to carry on the defense of the hundreds of miners who have been arrested, indicted or imprisoned in the present miners' struggle. Among the most important cases cited are those of Anthony Minerich, chairman of the National Miners' Relief Committee, whose appeal is now before a higher court; John Brophy and Pat H. Toohey, the framing up of Frank Brbot, a striking miner of Triadelphia, W. Va., the cases of the 51 women in St. Clairsville, O., and hundreds of others who are victims of the violent llass "justice"

Friends and sympathizers are requested to send funds for the joint drive during that week to the National Miners' Relief Committee, 611 Penn Ave., Pittsburgh.

SIGNATURE DRIVE MAKES PROGRESS

Communist Drive To Get on Ballot

Much progress is being made in the campaign for signatures to put the Workers (Communist) Party on the ballot in New York State, according to reports received from the Red Essex, the special automobile which is touring various parts of the state. Donald Burke and George Pearlman, who are in charge of the Red Essex report great interest in the Workers Party campaign thruout the state.

Burke and Pearlman have also been doing some organization work in addition to securing signatures. They organized a Workers Party branch in Poughkeepsie with about a dozen members. This is the first time a Party branch has been organized in Poughkeepsie.

Progressive Miners Victorious in Elections

ILLINOIS COAL DIGGERS DEFEAT LEWIS MACHINE

Fishwick Gang Resorts to Terror

(Special To The DAILY WORKER.)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 6.—Incomplete reports of the elections now being held in the Illinois local unions of the United Mine Workers of America show widespread victories of the progressive forces, despite the terror resorted to everywhere by the Lewis-Fishwick machine.

The most complete returns so far received come from Sub-District 9, Franklin County. The Vallier local elected a full progressive slate. Christopher Local, No. 2376, all officials progressives. Coello, No. 232, all progressives. Buckner, reactionary. Orient No. 1, Local No. 303, reactionary officials appointed by Lon Fox, Fishwick's sub-district president, after revoking charter and reorganizing local. In the Orient No. 2 local, the reactionaries resorted to one of their characteristic tricks to invalidate the election.

Large Attendance.

A count of the members at the meeting showed 1192 present. The election of three tellers, all progressives, was sufficient warning to the reactionaries that the progressive slate was certain of winning, and three reactionary officials constituted themselves part of the board of tellers. The reason for this became clear when the ballot boxes were opened.

Before the ballots were distributed they were marked by the three elected tellers with their initials. But when the ballot boxes were opened 1392 ballots were counted, 200 of them without the tellers' initials. These had obviously been put in by the reactionaries, but in an attempt to conceal this they marked some of them for the progressive candidates.

Game Exposed.

The progressives demanded that the vote for the candidates be counted, feeling certain that even if 200 votes cast for the progressive candidates were disregarded the progres-

Fight For His Release

Eugene Barnett, one of the eight Centralia I. W. W. prisoners at Walla Walla, Wash., who were condemned to life terms in 1919 at the instigation of the American Legion and the lumber interests of the northwest. The International Labor Defense, in co-operation with a number of other labor organizations, is now waging an intensive campaign for their release.

Fight to Free Eight Victims of Centralia

Renewed interest and a determination to "see the fight thru" are being shown throughout the organized labor movement in the northwest and even more easterly points in the case of the eight Centralia I. W. W. prisoners now confined in Walla Walla, Wash., penitentiary. This case is at present being considered by the Washington state parole board.

Among the labor organizations which have already passed resolutions advocating the immediate release of these framed-up labor fighters are the Seattle Central Labor Council, the Spokane Central Labor Council, the Tacoma Central Labor Council, the Everett Central Labor Council, the Seattle Labor College, the Western Progressive Farmers' convention in Washington, and the Milwaukee central labor body. In most cases the resolutions were unanimously adopted.

The next step in the fight is to a certain extent waiting upon the decision of the Parole Board which has the case under review. At its session a little while ago, Mr. Finn, representing the Spokane unions, Charlotte Todes of the Seattle I. L. D., Elmer Smith and Mr. Taylor, representing the Tacoma unions, spoke strongly for the imprisoned workers.

MILITARY LAW AS MILLS WILL TRY TO OPEN MONDAY

Jingo Apparatus Called Mere Gesture of Bosses, As No Strikers Will Break Ranks

Tens of Thousands Expected to Turn Out For Picket Demonstration at 56 Mills

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., July 6.—Virtual military rule will grip this city when the National Guard units, Battery D of the 101st Field Artillery, and a special mounted force of more than 100 march in to reinforce the police and reserves mobilized by Mayor Ashley and the mill barons as a sinister threat against the tens of thousands of strikers who will picket the 56 mills when they attempt to reopen Monday morning, July 9.

The decision to call in the troops was "officially" reached after a conference between Mayor Ashley, Chief of Police McLeod, Major Winslow and Lieutenant Perry of the 101st Field Artillery. But the mayor, whose friendship to the mill bosses can be dated to before the time he received a $20,000 gift from them, got his unofficial instructions, it is stated, before the above mentioned conference.

Expect Many Pickets.

The resentment of the masses of strikers, and even of the general public, toward this threatening gesture, is so intense that it conclusively in-

COMMUNISTS GET POSTS IN BRITISH MINERS' UNION

Secure Majority on the Executive Committee

(Special Cable to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, July 6.—The election of officials in the Lanarkshire Miners' Union here yesterday resulted in an overwhelming victory for the Communists, when both the highest offices of the union were obtained by members of the Communist Party of Great Britain.

McAnulty was elected president of the union and Allan was given the post of secretary. Both are members of the Communist Party. Hunter, who was elected vice president, is a close sympathizer with the left-wing movement in England.

In addition to procuring the two highest offices, the Communists also secured the majority of places in the executive committee of the Lanarkshire Miners' Union.

RAP NEW YORK POLICE TERROR

Communist Children Issue Call

The Communist childrens' organization in America, the Young Pioneers, District 2 issued a statement yesterday calling upon all workers and the children of workers to protest against the recent arrests and clubbings of its members for participating in a demonstration against American imperialism in Wall St. The statement says:

"On July 3 a demonstration called by the All American Anti-Imperialist League was held in Wall Street.

"This demonstration protested against the sending of marines by the American capitalists to the American colonies and to Nicaragua and China to murder and oppress the workers and their children for the benefit of insuring the profits of Wall Street.

"While the workers were protesting, the police brutally attacked the workers and children present, and arrested many of the most active ones.

Rose Plotkin, an active member of the Young Pioneers and a member of the leading committee, was one of those arrested for participating in the demonstration.

"The demonstration was arranged on the anniversary of the fight of the American people for freedom against colonial oppression, in that case British oppression. This shows how the capitalist class treats those who on July 4th, so-called Independence Day, dare to raise their voices in the fight for freedom against American oppression in the colonies.

"Rose Plotkin has been arrested and is being held in the Children's Court because she dared to distribute leaflets demanding that the marines be withdrawn from the Philippines, Nicaragua, China and other American colonies.

Calls For Protest

"The Young Pioneers of America call on all workers and workers' children to protest against the arrest of Rose Plotkin.

"The Young Pioneers call on all workers and workers' children to support the fight against colonial oppression, and to join hands with the rest of the workers and their children in the colonies against their common enemy the American bosses.

TAMMANY GANG UP FOR TRIAL

Connolly Pleads Not Guilty

NEW YORK, July 6 (UP).—Maurice E. Connolly, former borough president of Queens, and Frederick Seely, former sewers engineer for the borough, pleaded not guilty today when they were arraigned charged with conspiracy to defraud in the construction of sewers.

Supreme Court Justice Tompkins, in Long Island City, set their trial for September 4.

"Investigation" Nears End

Testimony was completed yesterday in the hearing of charges against Frank C. Gannon, suspended superintendent of the Brooklyn street cleaning department, who is accused of violating the city charter provision against a city employe having a financial interest in companies handling city contracts. Magistrate Dale reserved his decision until next Friday.

Gannon and his partner have been shown to have raked in hundreds of thousands of dollars in the current Tammany Hall graft scandal.

The principal witness today against Gannon was Edward Yunker, his brother-in-law, of 120-20 209th St., Bellaire, Quenns.

He said that he had received sums ranging from $2,500 to $6,500 from the Brooklyn Ash Removal Company, with which the prosecution has tried to connect Gannon.

Graft and Reaction Mark Sessions of Massachusetts Old Political Parties

SACCO, VANZETTI HANGMAN SHOWN AS RECORD CROOK

Republicans, Democrats For Power Interests

BOSTON, July 6 (FP).—Surrender to organized gas and electric interests, continued subservience to the banking clique in control of rapid transit in Greater Boston and the outbreak of noisome scandals at the state house mark the passing of the long drawn out session of the Massachusetts legislature.

Expose Grafter

The session's high light was the impeachment of Attorney General Arthur Reading, found guilty by a special committee of extortion and misconduct in office. A brisk, go-getting political climber, Reading was well on his way to the governorship when it was proved after a sensational trial that he had used his high office to collect secretly and by extortion 446,000 from the Decime Club, a get-rich-quick outfit, and $50,000 or more from an auto finance corporation. Faced by impeachment, Reading resigned.

Reading will be remembered by friends of Sacco and Vanzetti for his part in the conspiracy to kill the two labor men. Half an hour before midnight of August 22 defense lawyers sought Reading's help to stay the execution a few hours to give them time to reach a federal judge by airplane. They claim he promised help. While they waited at the East Boston airport for his reply, news came by telephone that the two men had been executed.

Crook Defends Hangman

Later Reading defended Judge Thayer and the Massachusetts courts before the American Bar Association at Buffalo. It is reported he asked the bar association to endorse the conduct of the judicial witchhunters in Massachusetts and to censure William G. Thompson, counsel for Sacco and Vanzetti for "unethical conduct" in accepting money from "Reds."

Despite all efforts to smother it, scandal broke out concerning the disposal of seized liquors to Republican politicians for use at banquets and outings. Other charges that legislators staged a drinking bout under the golden dome itself were also whitewashed.

NOBILE RESCUER SAVED BY PLANE

USSR Vessel to Resume Search For Amundsen

STOCKHOLM, July 6. — Lieut. Einarpaal Lundborg, the Swedish airman, whose plane overturned while he was attempting to rescue five survivors of the Italia crew, has been rescued from the ice near Foyn Island.

The Soviet ice-cutter Krassin had succeeded to reaching within fifty miles of the stranded fliers, but was delayed by ice and fog, and a broken propellor. In good condition again the Krassin, with the Soviet flier Babushkin who had recently returned to the ship when he was believed to have been lost, is resuming its search for Amundsen and his five companions. Babushkin is preparing for another flight.

LOOSE POLE KILLS WORKER.

ASHBURY PARK, N. J., July 6.—George J. Woodruff, night linesman for the New Jersey Bell Telephone Company, died of injuries received when a pole upon which he was working fell. Woodruff called at midnight to eliminate cross-wire trouble and was found crushed beneath the pole which had been loosened by recent storms and not repaired by the company. He died in the hospital two hours later.

MILITIA CALLED TO STRIKE AREA

Bosses Will Try to Open Mills Monday

dicates that the turnout to the picket lines will be far greater than if the police mobilization had been confined to the city's own resources.

The leaders of the Textile Mills Committee reiterated their frequent statement that on Monday the mill owners will clearly demonstrate their utter inability to resume operations in even one of the 56 manufacturing plants.

One of the reasons for this elaborate mobilization of strikebreaking machinery is the knowledge of the mill owners that they will be unable to open the mills. The whole military apparatus with full war equipment basis is being called in to create the impression here and outside that many strikers are ready to return, but are in need of "adequate protection." Nothing is further from the truth, the union confidently declares. The ranks of the 28,000 on strike are as solid as on the first day of the strike, when not one worker remained working in the mills.

Barons Desperate.

Everywhere the belief is expressed that the mill owners have become desperate with the sight of the remarkably solid strike ranks. They have therefore decided, with the beginning of the thirteenth week of the strike, to resort to desperate measures. The military has been mobilized for a wild attempt to shatter the strike by an attack launched against the picket lines, it is seen.

At all the daily strike meetings, picket demonstrations, picnics and thru the distribution of leaflets, the Textile Mills Committee has been rallying the strikers for Monday's demonstration.

More than six thousand strikers came to the July 4th picnic of the T. M. C. Interspersing the games and other pastimes speeches were made by their union leaders and other labor organizers, calling for Monday's mobilization. Theresa Valente of the strike committee was chairman, Paul Crouch, ex-soldier and Communist, A. Lamieres, Donneley, Kelley, Jack Rubenstein, Pachede, Cabral, Peleazar and Pachece of the T. M. C. spoke as did Nat Kay of Boston.

ILLINOIS MINERS WIN ELECTION

Lewis Machine Resorts to Terror

sive slate would still have a majority. But for this very reason the reactionaries could not accede to this demand. They called in the sheriff and had the ballots removed to the bank.

It is certain that the election will be declared void by the sub-district and that they will take some means to put their reactionary tools in charge of the local.

Similar reports, though less complete, come from the other sub-districts in southern Illinois. Wasson No. 1 and 2, Carrier Mills, and Old Gary No. 10 elected the progressive slates. At the Harco local there were two elections held and two sets of officials elected. The bulk of the members of this local live at Harrisburgh and they held a meeting there and elected progressives. But the reactionaries insisted on holding an "election" at Harco with the few members who live there and claim the election for their candidates.

Progressive Victory.

In the Staunton Sub-District No. 6 five locals have elected progressives. A report as yet unverified mentions another three locals as having carried the progressive slates.

In Springfield the terrorism of the reactionaries was successful. Joe Loda and Hindmarsh, who formerly posed as progressives, showed their real face. They made the rounds with a squad of gunmen, threatening and warning the miners to vote for the machine candidates, and they now claim a complete victory. But there is keen resentment among the miners which will soon make itself felt.

The National Miners' Convention Arrangements Committee has requested all progressives to send in immediately all information of the elections in their sections, giving the locality and number of the locals and the names of the officers elected. All reports should be addressed to the Convention Arrangements Committee, Room 411, 119 Federal St., N. S., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Roumanian Workers Are Planning Picnic

The Roumanian Workers Educational League will hold a picnic on July 15 at Witzel's Park, 2d Ave. and 10th St., College Point, L. I., for the benefit of "Desteptaria," the weekly Roumanian language Workers (Communist) Party paper.

Besides dancing, which will begin at 2 p. m., there will be songs, recitations and refreshments. J. O. Bentall will talk on "The Labor Movement of Today."

Fascists See Ex-Kaiser

DUBLIN, July 6.—Baron Huenefeld, trans-atlantic flier and member of the German fascist organization, Steel Helmets, departed yesterday from Ireland after a brief visit here to pay his respects to the ex-kaiser. Fitzmaurice, Huenefeld's Irish partner in the Bremen flight, refused an invitation to go to Doorn, where the ex-kaiser is in exile.

Major Fitzmaurice is to receive a two years' leave of absence from the government with full pay, during which time he will study aviation, it is reported. A lecture tour in the United States will also be included in these two years.

INDIA PEASANTS SEIZE LANDS IN SPITE OF EDICT

Excitement Spreads to Other Sections

BOMBAY, India, July 6.—Peasants in the Gijerat, the northern section of the Bombay presidency, are harvesting the crops on the lands declared forfeit for unpaid taxes in spite of reports that the government is rushing troop trains to subdue the district. Information to this effect reached here last night.

The peasants are reported to have streamed spontaneously into the fields for the harvest, and the action has ben sanctioned by the peasant organization acting in the Gijerat.

The proportions which the peasant results has assumed in the last few days is reflected in the number of villages headmen deposed. Of the eighty-eight headmen, seventy-nine have been driven from office by the peasants. These village officials have been opposing the revolt of the peasants and the expulsion of the government tax collectors which preceded the outbreak.

While no definite information permitted to leak thru by the government, reports that troop trains are already en route from a number of points north and east of Gijerat continue to arrive here. Estimates of the number of forces entrained have not been made, but it is believed that they are large, as the government fears a dangerous situation.

Widespread excitement still prevails in Bombay City over the news from the north. Following the huge demonstration yesterday, in which thousands of striking textile workers participated, the enthusiasm over the outbreak in the northern section of the presidency is reported to be spreading to other industrial centers. Sholapur, the second largest textile center in India, has been especially aroused by reports of the revolt in the north.

I. MILLER MAKES IMMENSE PROFITS

Competition Talk Is the Bunk

(By a Worker Correspondent)

Mr. Chas. Miller has been threatening to hire Goodyear stitchers on a piece-work basis and if they produce more than the time-work stitchers he will put them on a piece-work basis or else speed them up.

He has also been hiring lasters for the miserable low price of fifty cents a pair. He also demands as good a job as that for which he pays seventy-seven cents a pair.

I. Miller & Sons, Inc., have been giving their workers wage-cut after wage-cut, depriving them of a decent standard of living. The excuse is they find it impossible to compete with the cheap shoes made in Europe. He gives promises of steady work with his wage-cuts. He makes good his wage-cut promises but falls down on the steady work.

The I. Miller Co. lies when it says it cannot compete with the cheap European shoes.

In 1926 the company made the enormous profit of $412,204.84. In 1927 the profits went up more than 25 per cent to $520,516.09. In the first thre months of this year, 1928, it increased the profits to more than $210,000. At this rate the profits for this year will be $840,000. More than double it was two years ago.

These figures are the net profits after all expenses had been deducted. These figures are correct and can be proven.

These profits have been made out of us who work in his factories. It is we who make these profits for them.

Dont believe Charles Miller's lies about his poverty and competition. In the last three and a half years they have made two million dollars clean profit from our work.

I. Miller & Sons, Inc., can afford to give everyone of his worker's an increase in pay and a decent standard of living.

Organize and fight to get back what I. Miller has stolen from us. Join the newly consolidated organization: the Independent Shoe Workers of Greater New York.

ALLEGE PLOT ON ALBANIA LEADER

VIENNA, July 6.—Alleging that a new and daring plot against his life has just been revealed by the Albanian police, Ahmed Zogu, president of Albania, did not dare to leave his palace yesterday.

Using the alleged plot as a pretext the police have rounded up a number of suspects, chiefly Macedonians, and Major Ismail Shanin, who is said to represent the former premier, Hasan Pristina. The men are in jail.

Zogu, who depends upon Italian support for his safety, is reported to be greatly alarmed at this attempt.

MOTHER JONES LAUDS DAILY WORKER FIGHT

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Mother Jones, veteran revolutionary fighter of the labor movement and with Mother Bloor the only women members of the United Mine Workers Union, has declared her praise of The DAILY WORKER and the struggle which it is making. The letter, written to Roger Baldwin, director of the American Civil Liberties Union, indicates Mother Jones' keen interest in the crisis through which the paper is passing.

Mother Jones is very ill at the present time, but is confident that she will soon be well and as active as ever.

The letter follows:

My dear Mr. Baldwin:

Your very kind letter reached me some time ago, but owing to my health could not write to you. I appreciate your kind consideration of me with all your other responsibilities.

Hopes It Will Survive

I hope the New York DAILY WORKER will survive. It is a very good paper. They come out fearlessly and show up the mistakes being made and I want to say that this is the time the workers want an awakening. I would not miss that paper, as I enjoy it very much.

I hope some day to be in Los Angeles and stir those fellows up a little bit. I have been invited to go out there. I wish I could go to New York and see you, but I am not well enough to take the trip.

Convey my best wishes to the boys on The DAILY WORKER and tell them I appreciate their kindness in sending me the paper every day. Tell them to keep up courage and keep up the fight. A fight that is easily won is not worth the winning. When the battle is over, then you feel that you have done your share to right the workers.

With my best wishes to all friends. I hope some day to see you.

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) MOTHER JONES.

RUMANIA TERROR IN BESSARABIA

KISHINEV, Rumania, July 6.—The Rumanian police arrested Mme. Kollantay, aunt of Alexandria Kollantay, U. S. S. R. Ambassador to Norway, on the pretext of "plotting" for the returning of Bessarabia to Soviet Russia.

The arrest followed the murder of the editor of a monarchist newspaper, who, it was charged, while pretending to act as a spy for the Soviet government, was actually connected with the Rumanian foreign service.

LEGISLATURE IN INDIANA BRIBED BY POWER TRUST

Spent $3,500 in 1927 On "Entertaining"

WASHINGTON, July 6 (UP).—An Indiana utilities lobbyist spent $3,500 in 1927 on entertainment of members of the state legislature and utilities men, the Federal Trade Commission learned today. Most of the money was spent on dinners and theatre parties, Frank O. Cuppey, Lafayette, Ind., testified.

Cuppey said he was employed by the Indiana Utilities Association as a registered lobbyist at the state capitol and had formerly done similar work for Indiana telephone interests.

The agreement was, Cuppey said, that he would receive $3,500, of which $1,500 was expenses and $2,000 salary. However, Cuppey testified, the entire $3,500 was spent for expenses in entertainment of the legislators and others.

'ORDER' BLACKMER TO APPEAR OCT. 15

Sinclair Pal to Face Contempt Charge

WASHINGTON, July 6. (UP)—An order directing Harry M. Blackmer to appear in District of Columbia Supreme Court Oct. 15, to show cause why he should not be adjudged in contempt of court for failure to appear as a government witness in the last trial of Harry F. Sinclair, was signed today by Justice Bailey

Bailey also signed an order directing U. S. Marshal Snyder to seize $100,000 worth of Blackmer's property and hold it pending the proceedings.

A similar order had been issued when Blackmer failed to obey a subpoena to testify last fall in the conspiracy trial of Albert B. Fall and Sinclair. Blackmer's attorneys placed $100,000 in bonds in the National Savings and Trust Co. to cover that first action.

PAINT IS DEATH TO AUTO WORKERS

Benzol Destroys Bloodmaking Powers, Causing Hemorrhages

By ROBERT W. DUNN.
(Federated Press.)

In addition to suffering a high accident and severity rate, workers who build Hudsons, Chryslers, Buicks and Hupps have to worry about very definite dangers to health.

Health dangers vary from factory to factory and operation to operation. One of the worst lies in the spray painting of auto bodies and chassis and in the use of benzol, wood alcohol, lead and other injurious ingredients in auto paints and lacquers. Spray given off by the use of these substances is highly injurious. "And during this hot weather," the auto body paint sprayer will tell you, "it is torture to wear the mask," provided as a partial protection against the poisonous spray.

Despite superficial measures taken to reduce dangers of spray painting, the Workers Health Bureau experts declare that "even where carried on in specially constructed booths with provision for 100 feet of air constantly passing by the working face of the booth and where lead, benzol and wood alcohol have been removed from the materials, there is no assurance that workers will not be poisoned." It must be remembered in this connection that Michigan in particular has no adequate health protective legislation applying to automobile workers. It is all left to the whim and "good intentions" of the giant motor corporations.

Other dangers to motor workers' health are lead poisoning growing out of the dry sandpapering of auto bodies and the dust and industrial poisons common to wood workers—skin inflammations caused by the acids, oils and varnishes used in treating wood. Those working in the drop-forging plants suffer from the dangers of intense heat, sharp changes in temperature and the breathing of dust, smoke, fumes and fuel gases.

High power machines and speed-up systems in many departments lead to excessive fatigue, nervous disorders and broken health. In brass foundries and in electric and acetylene welding departments the air is frequently so thick from fumes that the workers can scarcely see each other. The gas exhaust from motors under test is often heavy in carbon monoxide and leads to the same choking and nauseating effects noticeable among workers in garages and repair shops.

Can workers speak out against occupational diseases and detrimental conditions in open shop auto plants of Detroit where according to the Employers Association there is no "labor problem"? Perhaps the chief reason little protest is heard lies in a story told by a student who worked two summers in the River Rouge plant of the Ford Motor Co. In talking with a worker one day he was told that two others employed on the same kind of work had been poisoned. The worker himself was afraid of the same fate.

"Why don't you say something about it," asked the student. "One word of complaint and I'd be fired," was the reply. This happened at a time when bosses were telling men that "40,000 men in Detroit want that job if you don't."

COMMUNIST PARTY ELECTION CAMPAIGN FUND OF $100,000

All Sections of the Working Class to be Drawn In; To Rally Masses Behind Platform of the Class Struggle

Both the Republican and Democratic Parties will spend millions in the coming election campaign. Hoover and Smith are the candidates of the Big Capitalists and Bankers. Schwab and Morgan will give support to both candidates. The Wall Street Interests, the Coal Barons, Steel Barons, Oil Kings and other Industrial Barons know that only the workers and poor farmers will lose, that they will be the winners whether Hoover or Smith is the next president of the United States.

The Socialist Reverend Thomas will have his election campaign chest filled by the small business man and the professionals that make up the base of the petty bourgeois Socialist Party. It is true their chest will not be a very heavy one for the nature of the petty bourgeois soul is to measure everything by success, and they have no faith in their party and its standard bearers as far as the results of the elections go.

The candidate who will receive the greatest favors from the bankers and the big business interests will be the candidate that will win the elections. This has been done since 1892 with only one exception in 1916, when Wilson was re-elected on the platform: "He kept us out of war," only to expose the hypocrisy of the Democratic Party and the Democrat Wilson a few months later when the United States was plunged into the war.

The sums spent by both parties since 1896 are as follows:

Republicans		Democrats
1896—McKinley	$3,500,000	1896—Bryan	$675,000
1900—McKinley	2,500,000	1900—Bryan	425,000
1904—Roosevelt	1,900,000	1904—Parker	700,000
1908—Taft	1,655,518	1908—Bryan	900,000
1912—Taft	1,070,000	1912—Wilson	1,130,000
Roosevelt (Prog.)	$670,000	1916—Wilson	1,958,000
1916—Hughes	3,829,000	1920—Cox	1,318,374
1920—Harding	5,319,729	1924—Davis	903,908
1924—Coolidge	3,063,952	La Follette	$221,977

That these figures are only given as official figures and that many times this sum is spent goes without saying, but the sums spent are no doubt in proportion to the sums officially recorded.

The outstanding fact remains that the party with the largest campaign fund is the party that wins the election.

WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY

The Workers (Communist) Party is the party that fights for the interests of the workers and exploited farmers. The Workers (Communist) Party is the deadly enemy of the capitalist system. It works for the overthrow of capitalism through the setting up of a true Workers' and Farmers' Government in the United States, through the dictatorship of the proletariat.

Our party appeals only to the workers and poor farmers of this country for support in this campaign. This party calls upon the workers and poor farmers to rally to the support of their party. In entering the election campaign the Workers (Communist) Party has no ullusions as to the possibility of abolishing capitalism through the ballot. Just the opposite, our party exposes the sham capitalist democracy as in reality a capitalist dictatorship in the interests of a few and against the great mass of workers and exploited farmers. Our party enters this campaign with the main object in mind of utilizing the elections as a means to agitate among and mobilize the masses for a struggle against capitalism and the capitalist government. When we seek the election of our members to the legislature, we do so with the object of utilizing the legislatures of the states and nation as a forum from which to better mobilize the masses against capitalism and the capitalist legislature.

It is on this basis that our party comes to the workers and poor farmers asking them to support their party in the election campaign.

It is on this basis that we ask the workers and poor farmers to mass their pennies and their dollars to make up the the Communist Campaign Fund.

A $100,000 campaign fund for the platform of the class struggle.

WHERE WE WILL COLLECT OUR $100,000 CAMPAIGN FUND

1. From the trades unions.
2. From the workers fraternal organizations.
3. In the shops, mills, mines, etc.
4. In the workers homes.
5. In the street, among the workers.

HOW WE WILL COLLECT OUR $100,000 CAMPAIGN FUND

1. 1928 Election Assessment levied on all members of the Workers (Communist) Party. Every member must buy a 50 cent Communist Election Campaign Assessment Stamp.

2: Through donations from trades unions and other workers organizations, such as Workers Fraternal Societies, Cooperatives, Womens Councils, etc., and through donations from shop committees and individuals.

3. Through the sale of Communist Campaign Stamps, to be sold in all organizations, shops and to individuals. These stamps to be used to paste on all mail sent by the workers throughout the campaign to advertise the Communist campaign. A book of stamps for a dollar will contain 100 stamps on ten pages, to be sold to workers at 10 cents a page.

4. Through contribution lists to be circulated everywhere among the workers and workers' organizations.

5. Through affairs, picnics, etc.

6. Through two huge National Communist Campaign Tag Days.

7. Collections from mass meetings, open air meetings, shops, unions, fraternal organizations and from workers social affairs.

8. Income from mass meetings.

9. Income from literature.

10. Income from sale of campaign buttons.

11. Income through collections by the Communist press.

WHAT $100,000 CAMPAIGN FUND WILL BE USED FOR

1. To place the Communist presidential ticket (Foster for President and Gitlow for Vice-President) on the ballot in as many states as possible. The capitalists provide the most difficult laws to make it most difficult for the workers to place their candidates on the ballot.
2. To Publish Literature:
   Communist platform, campaign pamphlets, campaign leaflets.
3. Mass Meetings:
   For hall rents, railroad fare, advertising.

We are planning to send dozens of prominent speakers throughout the country. We are planning to break into new territory in the South and West. The capitalists control halls and the railroads. We must have funds to make the national tours of Foster and Gitlow and Scott Nearing and many others possible.

4. Publicity:
   Posters with appropriate cartoons and slogans, campaign buttons, throwaways, press publicity.
5. Campaign Committee Expense:
   Printing and office expense, campaign workers and organizers, publicity workers, campaign field organizers.

MUST HAVE MONEY IMMEDIATELY

While we feel certain that the workers will provide the party with the $100,000 fund to carry on the work, it is now a question of the immediate need of money.

The following is a schedule of how we expect to raise the funds:

August 1st	$20,000	October 1st	$75,000
August 15th	30,000	October 15th	90,000
September 1st	40,000	November 1st	100,000
September 15th	50,000

While most of the $100,000 fund will have to be spent before the 1st of November, we will be able to contract debts to the amount not raised by that time as the need arises, with the hope that the money that will come in up to November 1st will complete the $100,000 and we will make good our debts, but we are working on the basis of

A HUNDRED THOUSAND-DOLLAR CAMPAIGN FUND

Organization for the Drive:

The success of the drive will depend upon the organization work of our party and its closest sympathizers who must be drawn in actively into the campaign. If we succeed in mobilizing the party we will be able to rally the left wing and progressive workers for our Party Election Campaign.

Every shop nucleus.
Every street nucleus.
Every sub-section executive.
Every section executive.
Every city executive.
Every sub-district executive.
Every district executive must in addition to electing a campaign committee select one comrade who is charged with being the director of the $100,000 Communist Campaign Fund Drive.

In all trades unions there must be organized a campaign committee and there must be elected a Campaign Fund Drive Director.

Where the union supports the Party election campaign, such a committee must be elected officially at the union meeting.

Where we are in the minority, the supporters of the Communist Election Campaign must be organized and everything done to draw in as much of the union membership as possible. As the campaign develops non-party workers must be given leading positions in the campaign committees, organized by the unions or in the unions.

Likewise in all other mass organizations of the workers we must organize campaign committees no matter if we are in the majority or in the minority. This holds true for cooperatives', womens', and other workers organizations.

LANGUAGE ORGANIZATIONS

All language bureaus of the party, national and local, must form a campaign committee and appoint a special Campaign Fund Drive Director.

The bureaus are responsible for the organization of sub-committees in all workers mass organizations of their language, whether officially or of the left wing minorities.

In the factories, mines, mills, committees drawing in non-party workers should be formed with a drive director. In the neighborhood, thru the initiative of our street nuclei, campaign committees drawing in non-party masses must be formed.

Thruout the campaign, great care must be taken that the Negro workers, women, young workers and the working class children become an organic part of the drive.

CENTRALIZATION AND CONTROL

The National Campaign Committee in charge has worked out a whole system of centralization and control of the finances raised. Accurate bookkeeping has been set up and all donations and contributions will be recorded in the entire party press. 20 per cent of the funds collected will go to The DAILY WORKER. The rest of the fund will be divided for work of the National Campaign Committee and for work in the state and local organizations.

Workers support your party—Support the Platform of the class struggle—Support the $100,000 Communist Campaign Fund.

$100,000 is needed to make the campaign a red nightmare to the corrupt capitalist politicians and their bosses, the capitalists.

$100,000 for a campaign against wage cut, longer hours, rationalization and all exploitation of the workers.

$100,000 for militant industrial unionism.

$100,000 for organizing the unorganized rubber workers, automobile workers, textile workers, steel workers, transportation workers, miners, etc., into powerful industrial unions willing and ready to fight the capitalists.

$100,000 for a campaign to arouse the workers and poor farmers to revolutionary struggle against the capitalists and their government to the end that we establish in the United States a Workers' and Farmers' Government.

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party appeals to the workers and farmers of America to raise this fund of $100,000.

TRUEFOOD WAITER STRIKE STILL ON

Demand Higher Wages, Union Recognition

The strike of the waiters and waitresses of the Truefood Vegetarian Restaurants, Inc., located at 153 W. 44th St., 110 West 40th St., and 524 Seventh Ave., is now entering its second week.

For a long time before the strike was called the working conditions in the restaurants were reported to have been unbearable. The waiters worked from 11 a. m. to 12 p. m. every day, a period of thirteen hours a day, for the miserable wages of $12 a week. The case of the waitresses was even worse. They worked 10 hours a day, and were paid a dollar for each day's work.

Demand Human Conditions.

Now that the workers in the Truefood Restaurants have organized themselves, they are demanding human conditions. These demands include the recognition of their union, 8-hour day for men and an 8-hour day for women, $20 per week for the men and $15 for the women.

In a letter sent out recently by the owners of the restaurants the waitresses are told that their jobs are still open to them under the same conditions that they had before.

"The next county, Putnam, was a tough one. Our best source of signatures was among auto mechanics. A few of the farmers signed.

"We then turned our wheels toward Chatham, hoping to glean an occasional signature here and there. One may imagine our surprise and pleasure when two and one-half hours in Chatham netted 55 signatures.

To Continue Campaign.

"There is no doubt that thru participation in the elections, thru campaign literature, thru personal conversations with workers at the time we ask them to sign our petitions and thru open-air meetings, we are getting to the exploited masses.

"The Red Essex still runs and its passengers are carrying on the campaign. We will cover Albany, Troy and Schenectady during the next week. Noon-day meetings will be held before factories and in other ways we will try to assist local comrades in the campaign work."

Venizelos, popular with the conservatives because he is calculated to be able to wield strong-arm methods for the "stabilization" of Greece, urged "harmonious relations between capital and labor" and "efforts to augment the national resources by productive labor" by a thorough speed-up system.

Kansas Coal District Throws Out Corrupt Lewis Officials, Miner Writes

PROGRESSIVES TO FILL POSTS PENDING VOTE

Delegation to Help in Organizing New Union

(By a Worker Correspondent)

ARMA, Kan. (By mail).—In spite of the efforts of the Barr-Skahan machine, Lewis' tools in Kansas, to sabotage the special district convention of the UMWA, a good convention was held on July 1st here and the reactionary district officials were indicted and removed and temporary district officials elected.

Although some locals were held back from sending delegates through the lack of finances, the convention met with 29 delegates present from over 15 locals. The interest of the rank and file was manifest in the large attendance of miners throughout its proceedings. From beginning to end the convention showed real fighting spirit and proved that the Kansas miners will no longer submit to the terrorism and bulldozing of the Lewis clique.

Delegates after delegates took the floor to expose Lewis' treacherous policies which wrecked the miners' union in District 14 long before the present strike. The effect of these policies nationally was brought home to the delegates and visitors in a scathing indictment of the Lewis outfit by Freeman Thompson, progressive leader of the Illinois miners, and member of the National Convention Arrangements Committee.

A resolution of indictment was adopted unanimously, charging the officials of District 14 with inefficiency, incompetence and misbehavior, and their offices were declared vacant. It was pointed out that secretary-treasurer, Harry Barr, was arrested in 1926 and held in jail for "intoxication." The temporary officials elected are: Tom Wakefield, of Mulberry, president; Joe Studdard, of Arma, vice president, and Stephen Walsh of Pittsburgh, Kansas, secretary-treasurer.

The reports of the delegates showed that the Kansas miners are determined to send a large delegation to the National Miners' Convention to be held at Pittsburgh on September 9-16 and to help in organizing a new, militant miners' union.

I am sending you, also, the indictment against the Lewis gang.

Indictment of District 14 Officials.

Whereas, the officials of District 14 have served the interest of the operators and have been a millstone around the necks of the miners, having betrayed the miners time and time again, and

Whereas, Harry Burr, secretary-treasurer, is incompetent and is charged with drunkedness and disorderly conduct while in office, in Feb., on the 24th day, in the year of 1926, he was arrested and held in jail for "intoxication"; and the stealing of elections by the holding up of the mail, as was done in 1924 to keep a miner from running for Joint Board member who had a sufficient number of votes at the post office to assure his election; to the throwing off the ballot all oppositional candidates in order to have his name listed to assure his election. In all cases where unions nominate men who stand for the rank and file Burr used any method to eliminate them from running for office. In the 1926 election Corona Local 1963 was induced to withdraw the name of Brennan and put up another candidate whose name was thrown off on technicalities. This practice has been carried out and all the rank and file candidates have been swept before election, thereby enabling Burr to perpetuate his rule and stifle all democracy in the union. The unseating of bona fide delegates at convention is a regular practice to retain office and power.

Whereas, James Skahan, known to us as president of District 14, is charged with doing nothing but surrendering job conditions in the district until we have reached the stage of a semi-company union, and

Whereas, the other officials, international board member, international organizer and all other appointees and henchmen and hangers-on of the Lewis machine and Burr and Skahan are charged with upholding the separate and individual agreement which is crushing our union. They are also guilty of lavish expenditure of our funds.

Whereas, the officials are deemed guilty of these crimes against the membership of District 14 and in so far as the members concerned are so charged and hereby indicted, therefore be it resolved,

That we declare their offices vacant and place on the order of business of this convention the election of a temporary president, vice president and secretary-treasurer to serve until an election can be held when the truly rank and file selection of all district officials can be made, when appointive power will no longer exist.

Scab Operator Forces Work On Coal Miners

CADIZ, Ohio, July 6.—Because Dan Rensi, scab coal operator, did not carry insurance on his mine near here coal diggers employed there will be forced to rebuild the tipple which was burned down yesterday morning, on their own time, according to reports received by the National Miners' Relief Committee. The mine is operated non-union.

Type of Leaflet Distributed at Adler Shops

To the Strikers of the Adler Co.

Our strike can be won. Our struggle for 9 weeks has shown our power. We have succeeded so far in keeping the Adler shops closed to the scabs. But to make sure of victory, we must see that our General Executive Board organizes those shops where our bosses are trying to have our work made. We must smash the injunction.

WRONG POLICY BEFORE THE STRIKE

The policy of our officials preceding the strike was close co-operation with the bosses, giving in on almost every demand made by the bosses at our expense. This the bosses interpreted as weakness on our part, and they decided to crush us completely by declaring a lock-out. We must emerge from the strike victorious not only in forcing recognition of the union, but also the elimination of the policy of co-operation with the bosses at our expense.

SMASH THE INJUNCTION

The present injunction is hailed as a victory for us by our officials. It permits us to picket. But how? We cannot disturb the scabs from entering the shops. How can we stop Adler Co. from working when we permit the scabs to enter the shops? We must do real mass picketing to prevent the scabs from going into the factory. We must ask the support of the rest of the labor movement in Milwaukee to fight with us against the injunction and the open shop.

STOP WORK OUT OF TOWN

Our victory depends upon our ability in stopping Adler Co. from making their work in out of town shops. Wisconsin Rapids is one of the places where Adler Co. is having some of their work made. Waukesha is another place. Wisconsin Rapids and Waukesha endanger our chances of victory. We must call upon the national office to immediately organize these towns. Our national organization has sufficient forces and resources to successfully stop Wisconsin Rapids and Waukesha scabbing upon us.

FIGHT FOR THESE DEMANDS

The experiences of other strikes in other cities must serve as a lesson for us. The strike of the International Tailoring Co. in Chicago brought a victory that was almost a defeat for the workers in that shop. When the workers returned to the shop they found that their conditions were even worse than before the strike, because settlement made by the officials was not made for the interest of the workers. We must not permit such situations to happen to us. Our victory must be based upon the following demands:

No promises by the union to make the bosses prosperous.
A 100 per cent union shop.
Higher wages.
A 40-hour week.
Elimination of piece-work.
Elimination of arbitration which works in favor of the bosses.
Stand together! Fight to the finish! Smash the injunction!
Victory shall be ours!

BOYS IN U. S. FAIL TO GET SITUATION

Some Are Lucky but Many Hunt in Vain

(By a Worker Correspondent)

The work of our public school teachers for the season is ended. They are packing up for their summer trips—out into the wide and balmy spaces—for the much needed rest.

From amongst the millions of children they have been teaching hundreds of thousands have graduated. And for once the worried and hard-working father and mother let their faces light up with a broad smile, and press their kisses on Johnny's cheek. "Good for my boy." This is their holiday.

But just as every other holiday has its termination so has graduation day. Our young friend all of a sudden stands face to face with a new world. His way through life has just begun.

He will have to answer newspaper ads for jobs, wait for the boss an hour. See our boy being hired, him and the rest turned away. He will be reprimanded by his parents for failing to obtain a position, for being a load around their neck. His life will not be what he expected it would be shortly before his graduation.

For did not his teacher and principal in their lectures expound the opportunities a young American boy has in our great prosperous and glorious country, providing he is industrious and honest? He must be thankful to destiny for having been born in this land.

Well, let us be fair and admit that every boy in our land is not out of a job; let us admit that the majority are employed. But what about the hundreds of thousands of youth who are compelled to leave their parents' home to shift for themselves, a great many who go to the bad. Does our government care very much if they become criminal tramps, etc.?

It is always ready to send them to prison, state farms, the crazy house, hospital. Does it see to it that they get a job, a vocational training to fit them for life. It is the business of a real government, a workers' government to take care of its unemployed; and how much more of its youthful unemployed, who are not yet strong enough to resist temptations which lead them to ruin?

But we cannot expect a change in this problem—as long as our bosses hold the power. When all real men and women will realize, that the emancipation of the worker is the mission of the workers themselves, then we can look forward for a brighter day.

DRIVE MONESSEN TIN MILL SERFS TILL THEY DIE

Sick Men Are Fired for Going Home

(By a Worker Correspondent)

MONESSEN, Pa. (By Mail).—Herewith I will enclose some of the details of the death of one steel worker in the mill in which I work.

William Hanan, tin mill worker, died at his home on 431 Reed Ave., Monessen, Pa., recently. He was a roller in the American Steel and Tin Mill and was in the best of health before his death. Mr. Hanan went to work Tuesday night and was played out or all in when he got home. He got a cramp in the stomach and lay sick for about 10 hours before he passed away. He is survived by a wife and one child.

It sure is terrible here in the mills, because when a man plays out and can't work any more if he asks the boss for a helper or says that he is going home the boss will tell him, 'If you go home you can stay there." That is one reason why the steel workers here play themselves out or get sick so they have to lay off for days, sometimes weeks.

We have also the speed-up system here, which makes it so much harder. The roller's job is about the best paid job in the tin mill and a man has to work quite a number of years before he gets a job as roller.

NEGRO ACTORS TO HAVE A UNION OF THEIR OWN

A new actor's organization is on its way. Acting on the advice of Frank Gilmore, executive secretary of Equity, the Negro actors are forming an independent organization patterned on the lines of Equity. The new union will probably obtain a charter from the Four A's—the international organization.

Salem Tutt Whitney, a colored actor, and Billy Pierce are the sponsors for the new movement which aims to unionize all Negro actors. At the present time, colored actors who are members of white companies are permitted to join Equity, but otherwise Negro entertainers have not been encouraged to join the chief organization of the white actors. Efforts in the past have been made to organize the Negro actor, but nothing came of it. This time, however, it may prove successful.

Marie Callahan has retired from the Boston company of "Good News" in order to join the new Schwab and Mandel musical play, "The New Moon."

Arthur Hammerstein yesterday signed Dan Healy for an important role in his musical play, "Good Boy."

"The Silent Assertion," by Butler Davenport, is the current bill at the Davenport Theatre on East Twenty-seventh street. The play will continue for three weeks.

Norma Shearer, in her new starring vehicle, "The Actress," with Ralph Forbes and Owen Moore, comes to the Capitol Theatre today. The story is Arthur Wing Pinero's "Trelawney of the Wells" and has been adapted for the screen by Albert Lewin and Richard Schayer.

"The Grip of the Yukon," starring Neil Hamilton and Douglas Fairbanks Jr., will be shown on the Hippodrome screen beginning Monday.

In the "Greenwich Village Follies," the revue now current at the Winter Garden.

"The House of David," a new film, will be shown at the 55th St. Playhouse the week beginning today.

Ernst Lubitsch has been assigned to direct John Barrymore in a film version of Frederick Lonsdale's "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney." The play was produced on Broadway two seasons back.

"The Man Who Never Missed," based on a story by Mildred Gram, will be Emil Jannings next picture for Paramount.

Emil Jannings will appear in "The Street of Sin," at the E. F. Albee Theatre this coming week.

"The Loves of Jeanne Ney," a new UFA production, will be presented at the Cameo Theatre today.

THOUSANDS OF COMMUNISTS ROT IN FASCIST CELLS

Party Leaders Sent to Dark Dungeons

From Rome comes a report that Mussolini had ordered the lately convicted Communists to be transferred to the prison of Volterre (Toscana).

This prison is known as the worst of all Italian prisons. The prison has awful dirty and mouldy single cells under ground in which even the healthiest of men could not last very long. D'Annunzio, once many years ago, described this prison in gripping words. He called the prison of Volterra the spot of shame of modern Italy and demanded its immediate close-down.

To this prison Mussolini has sent the convicted Communist functionaries and members in order to get rid of them the sooner.

ILLINOIS BOSSES IN DOUBLE DRIVE AGAINST UNIONS

Use Blacklist and Stock Ownership Scheme

By CARL HAESSLER

CHICAGO, July 6 (FP).—Within a single week the Illinois Manufacturers Association has permitted the curtain to be drawn back from two subtle activities against organized labor. The first binds the worker to his job by stock-owning substitutes for good wages. The second keeps him out of a job by the blacklist disguised as physical examination.

The Old Stock Scheme

The association, which has always been hostile to unions under the leadership of the late John M. Glenn, has a president who doesn't care where he spills his beans. "There is nothing like a financial interest in a business to stimulate the best efforts of the working force, from the bench hand to the president," declares President James D. Cunningham of the association, glorying in the extent of the employe-ownership drive.

Figures accompanying Cunningham's statement show that employes constitute about a fifth of all stockholders in the 487 Illinois corporations studied in the association's survey. They own 18 per cent of the stock. Everybody on the corporation payrolls is counted as an employe which explains Cunningham's further statement that "in quite a number of companies all the stock was held by employes." It means that the president and other high employes of the corporation are the boys that hold most of the stock and control the works

Here and there the wage workers hold a share or two apiece, tied to the corporation by a tiny financial interest, unwilling to risk a strike to improve wages or shorten hours. Stockowning "gives employes a better understanding of industrial problems," Cunningham candidly remarks.

"Live-Longer" Racket

The other development is a campaign by director Samuel M. Hastings of the Illinois Manufacturers Association to have corporations join the Live Longer Club. This is a camouflage for enforcing physical examinations on all their employes.

"You can require your employes to take physical examinations on their application for employment," Hastings declares in an open letter to the association members. "Urge them to continue these examinations once a year. Twice a year would be better." Then to conceal the real purpose of the live-longer racket, he adds:

"Promise that physical examinations will not interfere with the employes' jobs or chances with the company."

Hastings enumerates as benefits to employers from the examination of their men reducing accidents, keeping contagious diseases out of the factory, fitting the worker to the job where he can make good, etc. But the most valuable feature to the boss, Hastings says, is that it "gives employers a valuable record of physical conditions."

The value of that record is almost as great as actual fingerprints. A union man can dye his hair, shave his moustache, get artificial teeth to get around the blacklist, but he will find it hard to alter or even to recognize the various body marks that a doctor, keen on the scent, will discover in the physical examination and add to the "valuable record of physical conditions."

The infinite detail of company blacklisting and espionage systems, maintained with great intelligence and persistence, has recently been exposed by Frank Palmer, Federated Press correspondent, in his book, Spies in Steel. The blacklist and spy operations of the Oliver Iron Mining Co., the Minnesota steel trust subsidiary, are there described. The Universal Portland Cement Co., another steel trust subsidiary, is represented on the board of the Illinois Manufacturers Association.

HALT MEET FOR VIENNA REBELS

Social Democrats Stop Memorial

(Special Cable to The Daily Worker)

VIENNA, Austria, July 6. — The social democratic party, growing more reactionary and anti-laborite as time goes on, again perpetrated a bit of official trickery when it prevented Vienna yesterday when it prevented the Communist Party from holding a memorial meeting at the graves of the workers who were shot down by the agents of the fascist government in the huge workers' revolt last year.

The Communist Party of Austria had arranged a memorial meeting to be held at the graves of the victims of last year's revolt on the first anniversary of the shooting, July 15. In accordance with the plans, a notice of the meeting was given to the authorities.

Call Similar Meet

After this notice was made public the social democratic party announced its intention of holding a similar meeting at the same time and at the same place.

Today the social democratic party informed the Communist Party that there would be a social democrat municipal guard at the cemetery which would form a cordon around the place and preevnt members of the Communist Party from entering the grounds.

Police Keep Workers Out

Later the police prohibited the Communist Party from meeting, because the social democrats had informed them of their meeting and asked for police aid in keeping the members of the Communist Party away. This was done in spite of the fact that the Communists had been the first to announce their intention of meeting, and in spite of the fact that they had been the first to arrive on the field.

The social democratic party, it can be recalled, had condemned the uprising in Vienna last July and would never have thought of holding their "memorial" meeting if the Communist Party had not intended to do so. As a result the police are now preventing Communist meetings all over the city while at the same time permitting such rank actions on the part of the social democrats.

BEHRENS' DRIVERS OUT ON STRIKE

Call on Housewives to Boycott Firm

The chauffeurs and helpers of the firm of A. W. & H. H. Behrens, wholesale grocers, 370 Vernon Ave., Brooklyn, who have been on strike for 14 weeks, issued a call to workingmen to help the strikers by boycotting the firm.

The workers are striking for shorter hours and more wages. They were paid 30 cents per hour for chauffeurs, and helpers received from $22 to $27.50 per week. Nothing was paid for overtime. The company will not allow the workers to organize and protects the scabs by a force of from six to eight policemen daily.

Declaring that while the firm has money enough to pay for the police they refuse to pay the workers, the call issued by the strike committee calls upon the housewives to help the workers in their fight by refusing to buy in those stores served by Behrens. The Behren trucks are painted red and are all guarded by policemen.

Gets Slight Sentence for Murdering Negro

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 6.—For the murder of a young Negro in cold blood a white man was sentenced to no less than ten years nor more than twelve years in the state prison, but with the recommendation of a parole after five years.

The slayer was only pronounced guilty by the jury after it was told by the judge that it was the only verdict acceptable under the circumstances.

YOUTH TO HOLD BIG CONFERENCE IN PHILADELPHIA

Philadelphia Meeting July 20

PHILADELPHIA, July 6.—Delegates from a large number of unions, fraternal organizations and sport clubs, it is learned, will assemble in Philadelphia Friday evening, July 20, for a preliminary youth conference at which the problems of youth will be discussed.

The conference call, which is sent out by the Provisional Committee for a Working Youth Conference, 2605 No. 33 St., is signed by a number of representatives of trade union organizations. Three delegates from each union or other body will be represented at the conference, which will be held at Free Lets Hall, 531 No. 7 St., at 8 p. m.

11,000,000 Young Workers

At the present time there are about eleven million young workers gainfully employed. Every year more young workers come into industry.

The bosses realize the importance of the young workers and the company unions are developing such activity as sports, dancing and others that appeal to the young workers. The bosses also utilize the young workers who work for low wages to reduce the standard of living of the workers.

"In the last few months," the call declares, "two conferences were held on this problem in connection with Brookwood Labor College. The shortcomings were that the young workers themselves were not in the lead at the conference and that no steps were taken as a result of the conference. Most of the members of this committee have participated in these youth conferences. Realizing the importance of such a conference we have taken the initiative to call it.

"We hope that you will send the delegates. We propose that you include as many young workers in your delegation as possible.

"Fraternally yours, Dominick Flaiani, Amalgamated Clothing Workers; Norman Kiesewetter, Plumbers and Steamfitters Helpers; Jack Cooper, Machinists Union; M. Stepansky, Furriers Union; E. Kornfeld, United Textile Workers."

GROWTH OF SOVIET UNION PAPERS HAS BEEN RAPID

Circulation 3 Times That of Czarist Russia

MOSCOW, July 6.—Today 550 newspapers are being published in the Soviet Union, and their total circulation is 8,250,000, which is three times the total pre-war newspaper circulation in Russia. This is the statement of the Soviet Union Review for July, published in Washington.

The most remarkable part of this development is the growth of newspaper circulation among the peasants. Almost one-third of the total circulation is in rural sections. One farm out of ten, on the average, subscribes to a newspaper. Before the revolution peasant readers were virtually unknown.

Another, and peculiarly Russian revolutionary development is the creation of a volunteer army of peasant and worker correspondents for these newspapers. There were last year 192,768 peasant correspondents and 115,607 worker correspondents writing for the press.

Magazine circulation in the Soviet Union has reached 8,403,000 copies, distributed among 1,291 magazines of all kinds. Scientific and satirical magazines have the larger vogue, but the art magazines have many times the number of readers that were secured before the war. In all, 49 languages are used as the medium for reaching the readers of newspapers.

Big Business Trusts Al Smith

"Big business won't fight Al Smith. Wall Street won't fight Al Smith. That portion of big business which is not for him will adopt a pacifist attitude in this presidential campaign."

It is Grover Whelan speaking. Grover, the official glad-hand man of the City of New York, who greets kings, queens, presidents of small European republics, and celebrities of all kinds who do not have to get chalk-marked on Ellis Island before setting foot on the pavements of the Metropolis.

Grover delivered himself of this bit of information in New Orleans on June 30. He further added that big business had a high regard for Smith's sanity, which means that Al believes big business has a perfect right to run the country as it sees fit without being embarrassed by political interference.

Whalen is right. Big business trusts Al Smith and will open its coffers to him. Wall Street feels perfectly safe in plunging on Hoover and Smith. It is playing a sure game. Heads the working class loses; tails the capitalists win.

It is no new innovation in American politics to have the employers finance the candidates of both parties. Indeed it is a tradition. In Illinois Samuel Insull spent huge sums of money on democrat and republican alike. He knew what he was doing. His money was not wasted. He is now the dominating influence in the state. The politicians eat out of his hand.

Smith and Hoover are the darlings of big business, the former insurgent republicans and progressive democrats have is engaged in singing hymns to democracy. There is only one being engaged in singing hymns to democracy, there is only one party in the field in this election campaign that deserves the support of the working class and the exploited farmers.

The Workers (Communist) Party, with its national ticket, William Z. Foster and Benjamin Gitlow, and its candidates in the states, goes before the masses with a revolutionary program which calls for the abolition of the capitalist system and the substitution therefor of a Workers' and Farmers' Government.

The Communist campaign will wage war on the hypocritical pretensions of the capitalist politicians and the fake socialist party. It will rally the workers against the strikebreaking injunctions, against the imperialist war in Nicaragua. It will fight against wage cuts, and will call upon the masses to support the heroic struggles of the striking bituminous miners and the textile workers in New England.

To bring the many burning issues that confront the working class today to the attention of the millions of workers and exploited farmers in the United States a large fund is necessary. For this reason the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party has organized a drive to raise a Communist Campaign Fund of $100,000. This drive is now in full swing.

Everywhere throughout the country Communists and sympathizers are urged to collect money for the $100,000 Communist Party Election Campaign Fund. Money writes, talks, and does lots of other things. It takes money to print literature, route speakers, and perform the hundred and one other tasks that a national election campaign calls for.

Against the millions of Wall Street, thrown in behind both Al and Herbert, the workers and exploited farmers must raise thousands. Big business trusts Al Smith but does not relish a $100,000 Communist campaign fund.

The ten-dollar bill or even the dollar bill that may be contributed to the campaign may be the means of introducing a worker or a poor farmer to Communism. Where is the class-conscious worker who would hesitate to make a contribution—no matter how small—to the Communist Campaign Fund, if he thought that this contribution would be the means of winning a wage slave away from the ideology of capitalism?

Yet every contributor may rest assured that his contribution will share in the conversion of the thousands of workers who will join the Communist movement and the Workers (Communist) Party in the course of this election campaign.

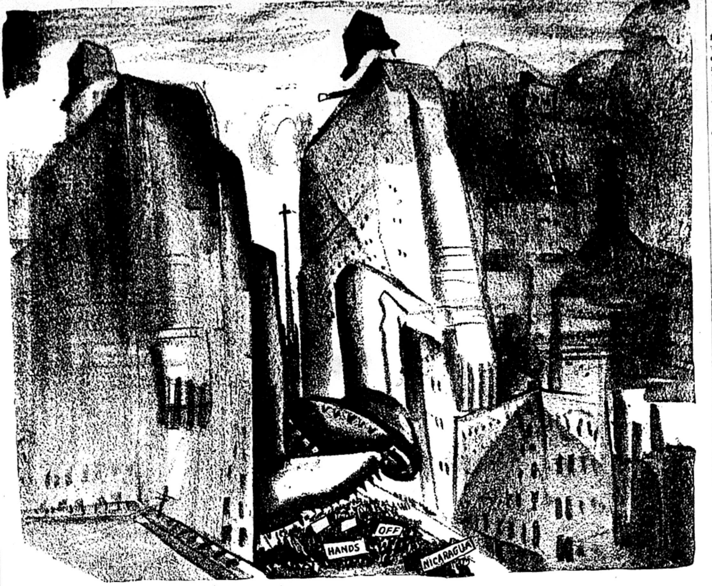
Tammany Hall, that political cesspool of graft and corruption, will dig into its financial sewers for the sinews of war to cover the country with propaganda for its leading candidate. It will have the millions of finance-capital behind it, or a section thereof.

The oil magnates who made hundreds of millions out of the concessions given them by the republican administration, the coal operators who were aided in their fight to crush the miners' strike and smash the miners' union, the automobile magnates, the bankers who have moneys invested in foreign countries—will swell the treasury of the republican party.

To the exploited workers and farmers the Workers (Communist) Party appeals. The dollars of the many against the thousands of the few. Help put the $100,000 Communist Party Election Campaign Fund over the top!

THE SIDEWALKS OF MR. MORGAN

By Fred Ellis



On the Island of Death

(Translated from the German by Sol Auerbach.)

The two brothers Ruffi lived in Bologna. Vittorio, the youngest, worked as a compositor in a local printing shop and Mario was a draftsman for the government. Both were married, had children, and lived a quiet family life. The brothers Ruffi did their best to satisfy hungry stomachs with pea-soup and macaroni, working from morning to night. Always working, always weary from work, Vittorio and Mario saw each other very seldom, often no more than twice a year.

When they saw each other at the beginning of November, 1926, the countenances of the Ruffis bore signs of utmost anxiety. It was shortly after the attempted assassination in Milan. A wave of persecution and pogroms was set in motion by the fascisti over all Italy. All who were suspected of "being unfriendly to fascism" were thrown into prison. Vittorio Ruffi, although not belonging to the Communist Party, had made some contacts with one of its leaders and had occasionally shown his friendliness to the Party Cell of the printing shop where he worked. The day after the brothers had met, Vittorio was arrested by the carbineers, dragged out together with five other workmen under blows of the gun-butts. They were not, however, taken to prison. All the prisons were so overcrowded that there was no room for newcomers. The carbineers changed the route of the prisoners most of them being led for the purpose of "dispatch to Pisa." The "convicts made attempts at escape," said the police, and they were "accordingly shot by the accompanying guard." That also happened to Vittorio. . . .

People who did not belong to the category of "suspicious characters" but were relatives or on friendly terms with them were ranked as "criminals of second rank." Mario numbered among these. Suddenly and unexpectedly he found himself where, according to his understanding, his brother Vittorio should be found.

The "Defense of the Fatherland"

At this time the law of the defense of the fatherland was put into effect with lightning speed. The law gave the authorities the right to banish prisoners to uninhabited, devastated islands scattered on the Mediterranean Sea. Banishment was allotted without any kind of trial or investigation. A dialogue, such as the following, can easily be imagined:

"Are you a Communist?"

"No, I am not a Communist!"

"Do you sympathize with fascism?"

"I am a workingman, your honor, and I have to sweat hard for my bread."

"Aha, so you are a revolutionary. Enough, take him away!"

Enemy of Fascism

After this hearing Mario Ruffi was labeled as "an enemy of fascism" and as one "suspected of revolutionary deeds." Like thousands of others, he was banished on the ground of such and similar statements to the island of Ustica, where, it was explained to him, that "he could travel about freely" but must be at home from 6 o'clock in the evening until 8 in the morning; must not visit any of the other exiles or receive them at his house; not be seen in restaurants saloons or other public places, and must not correspond with any one without the permission of the police etc.

At first Mario Ruffi tried to get along with the few pennies that he had accumulated by the sale of his coat, hat and boots. The climate of the island seemed to allow him to do without these articles of luxury. But this miserly fund was soon used up—and Mario worried about his family. Privation threw him on the sick bed.

He was sick for two months. For the whole period he lay entirely alone in the fisherman's hut assigned him as a dwelling. When he felt himself strong enough to get up from his bed and to make a few steps Mario decided to no longer bow to the cruel rules for exiles and to undertake something.

In the first place he wanted to write to his people. Not a letter which looked like a stencil, written under the gun-supervision of the police, but a letter which told everything that must be told, which asked everything that must be known. And Mario also wanted, if only for a moment, to have a few words with the other exiles in order to tell them what must be done if they wanted to survive.

Mario Ruffi tried to carry out his plan.

The Conspiracy and the Conspirator

In order to send the letter to Bologna, Mario had a hasty talk with a fisherman who did not live far from his hut. He told him his story, showed him the pictures of his children and called upon the brotherly union of the workers. At first the fisherman was afraid, but later, moved by the pleading and the tragic story of Mario, he agreed to forward the letter to Italy past the lines of the police. At the same time Mario tried, at first timidly but then always bolder and more thoroughly, to hold conversation with the other exiles whom he encountered on the shore or on the small streets of the fishing village. Mario already began to have good hopes, when suddenly everything that he had built up with such care crashed to the ground. Among the "suspicious characters" were spies. The police held the strings of the plot in hand.

On the day when Mario wanted to give his letter to the fisherman he, the fisherman and six other exiles were thrown into an underground cell which, at that level of civilization, was called a prison. The police sent a report to Rome and attempted to make from this opportunity a sensational trial against the "banished Communist conspirators."

In Rome the "efficiency" of the Ustica police was approved. The miscreants must be strongly punished. The principal thing was that everything should be done without too much noise. The prisoners were taken to Beggio and in this small town were taken before the Special Court. It performed its duty quickly. The defendants were sentenced to from 15 to 30 years of prison, and Mario, as ring leader of the conspiracy, to lifelong term.

Everything took place without noise and in miniature form, almost like the trial in Rome against the Italian Communist Party.

ELECTION SIDELIGHTS

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

John J. Raskob, chairman of the finance committee of General Motors, which has the backing of the House of Morgan, reached New York on the same train as Al Smith. This is the Raskob who recently stated that big business had nothing to fear from Al Smith. Raskob is quite right.

The executive council of the A. F. of L. will meet in Atlantic City on August 31 to outline the policies and program to be followed in the campaign. The report will be something like this:

"The executive council of the A. F. of L. confirms the wisdom of the policy of non-partisanship which has secured so many beneficial results for labor. As hitherto we advise trade unionists to study the records of candidates on the democratic and republican tickets and to vote only for those who have shown themselves to be friends of labor. As in the past, 'Reward our friends and punish our enemies' shall be our slogan in the coming campaign."

Hoover, it is said, will be favored by railroad labor leaders, because he tried to force a settlement of the railroad strike in 1922 on terms which would have saved the faces of the leaders. He will undoubtedly have the support of John L. Lewis, whose face he saved at Jacksonville, in 1924, when he induced the operators to sign an agreement on the old scale.

Claude G. Bowers, editorial writer of the Evening World, set a good many people thinking when keynoting at the Houston convention. "To your tents, O Israel," he perorated, while the befuddled delegates didn't know whether they were being advised to go to bed or to charge the enemy with empty bottles. It may have been the custom in Biblical days for the favored of the Lord to spend some time in prayer before picking up their scimitars with the intention of carving up the foe. In this case the foe was the Republican Party, whose chief sin is insisting on squatting on the treasury in Washington and taking therefrom hefty fistfuls of coin which the Democrats dearly desire to take into their jeans.

A newspaper headline reads, "Smith to make his stand clear." One would imagine that a man announcing the fact that he intended to tell the truth when delivering a speech on his attitude towards the various public questions would receive no more attention than if the same man said that he scratched his ear when that organ receives the attentions of a mosquito. But evidently it is big stuff when a capitalist politician even promises to tell the truth.

Smith will not tell anything that is liable to lose him a vote. He is convinced that a certain number of voters will vote for Hoover anyhow, and every good politician knows that the fellows who make a virtue of regularity must have some hot stuff to keep their danders up. Smith is for enforcing the Volstead law in the South and for winking at it in the North. He will tempt the voters of the industrial sections with the suds and in the arid areas he assures the natives that he will keep an eye on their cider. Hoover, on the other hand, though a member of the party that has a former whiskey distiller as cabinet member, must come out strongly for prohibition enforcement lest he offend the Anti-Saloon League, which was suckled by the Ohio gang of odoriferous memory. So this is capitalist politics.

Plan for Great Miners' Relief Campaign

To combat the onslaught of police and coal operators who are attempting to destroy the miners' union and break the strike by forcing hundreds of militant leaders out of the fight and confining them to prisons, the National Miners Relief Committee and the International Labor Defense are entering a nationwide campaign. National Miners Relief and Defense Week has been set for the week of July 22 to 29. In every city of the United States workers are being mobilized for the monster drive. Hundreds of thousands are expected to participate.

To All Miners' Relief Committees and Contributing Organizations.

Greetings:

We are face to face with a situation that demands immediate attention of all those who sympathize with the miners in their historic struggle. Thousands of striking miners' families are starving. Local miners' relief committees telephone our office daily appealing to us for just a little flour for bread for the striking miners' children. Electricity, gas, and water has been shut off in thousands of miners' home. Evictions continue. Miners' families are being thrown out of their homes into the roads of the coal operators.

And police terrorism continues. The arm of the law, at the bidding of the coal corporations, has entered into subtle maneuvers to break the spirit of the strikers. Threats of deportation, threats to take children and babies away from mothers, threats to foreclose on homes that the miners have built with their hands...

Starvation and Terrorism.

This starvation and terrorism, throughout the strike area must bring us all to our feet at once ready to lend a hand. Without the loss of a moment we must enlist and fall into line to assist these fighters.

A decision has been reached to make the week of July 22nd to July 29th inclusive a National Miners' Relief and Defense Week. The National Miners' Relief Committee, which has fed hundreds of thousands of families during the miners' strike, and the International Labor Defense which has defended thousands of working class prisoners, will join hands to make this the biggest week ever held for the support of workers engaged in defending their wages, their homes, their very lives, against unscrupulous employers and their courts and police. Every City Miners' Relief Committee, Language Miners' Relief Committee, Women's Miners' Relief Committee, Negro Miners' Relief Committee, Youth Miners' Relief Committee, Children's Miners' Relief Committee, every organization that has given support to the miners' struggle; every local and branch of the International Labor Defense, will take part, is actually duty bound to make this the most successful event ever entered into for the benefit of workers engaged in struggle.

Plans for the campaign follow. Read them carefully! Hold closely to the line! Mobilize!

1. Every city is to hold a joint conference of all City Relief Committees and affiliated bodies, together with the International Labor Defense and its affiliations, plus all leading workers, on July 8th, or during that week. This will be a preliminary mobilization conference. Plans for the Miners' National Relief and Defense Week are to be thoroughly discussed. The names of all relief workers who can take part in an excursion to the strike area on July 14th and 15th, are to be taken. A mobilization of automobiles for this purpose must be made.

2. Automobile excursion to Pittsburgh, Saturday, July 14th, and Sunday, July 15th. Expenses for this excursion to be borne by those participating.

Final Mobilization.

3. Immediately upon returning from Pittsburgh, and up to July 22nd, the representatives that came to Pittsburgh shall report to their organizations. On July 22nd every city shall hold a final mobilization conference at which the representatives returning from Pittsburgh shall again report. At this conference final plans shall be made for all activities to be undertaken during the National Miners' Relief and Defense Week—July 22nd to 29th inclusive. All affiliations of the City Relief Committees and International Labor Defense, additional Workers' Fraternal Organizations, and all interested workers shall participate. The conference of July 22nd must be a mass conference, to which every delegate from every sympathetic organization and every worker who will aid during the week will be invited.

4. Every possible activity for the collection of funds shall be undertaken during the week of July 22-29th.

(a) A thorough canvas of al lorganizations of the city for relief and defense funds shall be made.

(b) Relief and defense collections shall be undertaken in all shops, mills, and factories; collection at shop, mill and factory gates shall be made; collections shall be made at all labor union meetings, meetings of workers' fraternal organizations, and wherever else possible.

(c) A thorough circularization by mail of al. lists of sympathizers and organizations shall be made.

(d) Street meetings, and meetings in the various sections of the city shall be held during the week for the purpose of mobilizing workers for the campaign. Shop meetings, meetings before factory gates shall be held.

House To House Collection.

(e) The activities of the entire week shall concentrate upon a maximum mobilization of all forces for a stupendous house to house collection or tag day on Saturday and Sunday, July 28th and 29th. In the larger cities relief collection stations must be established in each section of the city for these two days to which all the collectors operating in that section shall report. In the larger cities organizational forms for successfully prosecuting the house to house or tag day collection for these two days shall be devised.

(f) Sunday night, July 29th, each city is to hold a hunger banquet to which all collectors, representatives from organizations, and workers who took part in the campaign are to be invited. At this gathering a general report of the week's work is to be made and the question of further relief and defense activity to be considered.

Special Literature.

5. The National Miners' Relief Committee and the International Labor Defense jointly will issue special literature for this campaign, namely, contribution lists, posters, leaflets, buttons, and will undertake a broad campaign of press publicity and advertising. A national circularization of all labor papers and other mailing lists will be made. Field relief organizers will visit the larger cities to assist in the campaign.

The National Miners' Relief Committee secretary and the International Labor Defense secretary shall confer at once upon receiving communications from their respective organizations in order to arrive at an understanding regarding the prosecution of this joint drive. In all cities where a National Miners' Relief Committee and an International Labor Defense local exists, the literature will go forward to the National Miners' Relief Committee secretary, and the International Labor Defense secretary shall secure the literature needed for his affiliations from the city National Miners' Relief Committee.

And now to work, and immediately You have before you the largest task that has ever been given to workers and organizations that understand the immediate need of a nation-wide attest of solidarity with the miners and their families, who have fought, starved and suffered during fifteen months of struggle against the most ruthless employers in this country the open shop coal operators from Andrew Mellon, Rockefeller, and Schwab down. Let us all prove that we know how to fight this enemy that we know how to conquer.

Fraternally,
DUNCAN McDONALD, Chairman.
ANTHONY MINERICH, Secretary.
ALFRED WAGENKNECHT, Relief Director.

OVER 15,000 TEXTILE STRIKERS TO PICKET; DEFY ARMY DISPLAY

LECTION DRIVE OF WORKERS PARTY IN FULL SWING NOW

Mobilize Forces Thruout Country; Will Carry Campaign to Every Factory and Farm

Collections in Factories and Street Corners, Tag Days, Sale of Stamps, Buttons Planned

The launching of a drive to raise a fund of $100,000 to place the Communist ticket on the ballot in at least thirty states of the union and carry the message of Communism into every corner of the United States was the outstanding feature of the election campaign of the Workers (Communist) Party last week, according to a statement issued by the National office of the Party yesterday.

Never before did the members of the Workers (Communist) Party display as much enthusiasm as they are showing in this election campaign. From one end of the country to the other district organizers and campaign managers are reporting to national headquarters that the comrades are bending to the task with the energy that spells success.

Collections in factories and street corners, tag days, and the sale of stamps and buttons are some of the methods that will be used to raise the $100,000.

Prospects Bright.

It is generally admitted that the prospects for waging a successful campaign were never brighter than this year. The Workers (Communist) Party has already established itself as the only party of the proletariat in this election. In spite of the sentimental squawks that come from the clerical candidate of the Socialist party, there is no opposition to big business expressed politically outside of the Workers (Communist) Party.

Since the republican and democratic conventions were held the former insurgents in the G. O. P. and the alleged progressives who bore the democrat label have climbed on the bandwagons of the old parties.

Those "Insurgents."

Herbert Hoover—the imperialist efficiency engineer, the wrecker of the Hungarian Soviet government the stool-pigeon who used the funds of the American Relief Administration in an attempt to overthrow the Soviet government of the U. S. S. R.—has been busy purchasing the disgruntled insurgents who sniped at Coolidge and Mellon during their term of office.

The latest "insurgent" to fall into Hoover's lap is Senator Smith W. Brookhart of Iowa. Brookhart was always a thorn in the side of the administration, but Hoover pulled his teeth, and the Iowa senator now pretends that Hoover has the interests of the farmers at heart.

Senator LaFollette of Wisconsin still poses as a progressive, but was quite cordially received at the Kansas City convention. The opposition to big business inside the G. O. P. always anemic, has been liquidated.

Al Smith, who is as popular in Wall Street as Hoover, is experiencing a little trouble in the South, but the opposition to him there is based on his religious affiliation and his partiality to the cup that cheers. This opposition is not serious. The Southern democrats, hungry for a chance to plunder the national treasury, are willing to muffle the southern conscience for material considerations. They can soothe their wounded spirits by lynching Negroes. It should not be forgotten that a Negro was lynched right in the city of Houston on the very eve of the democratic convention and that neither Al Smith nor any other leader of the party uttered a word of protest against the outrage.

The two capitalist parties are now lining up their forces and mapping out the campaigns that will bring one or the other into the executive mansion in Washington for four

UTILITIES MAKE RECORD PROFITS

Public utility corporations which are conducting a nationwide campaign for increased rates and fares and for reductions in taxation show record earnings according to figures made public by ninety-five such public utility companys which report their earnings to the United States Department of Commerce.

Representing gas, electric light, heat, power, traction and water services, power, traction and water services including telephone and telegraph companies, they comprise practically all of the important organizations in the United States outside the communications field.

BOSSES FEAR TO END UNION PACT

Fur Trimmers Denying Break with Union

The strongest pressure the Associated Fur Manufacturers were able to muster against the Fur Trimming Manufacturers Association in their long standing campaign to force them to break the contract with the left wing Joint Board Furriers Union, was insufficient to outweigh the decided advantage of being able to keep their shops running, which the union would have prevented had they capitulated to the entreaties of the A. F. of L. agents and their allies, the Associated.

Denies Rumors

This fact was definitely learned when the president of the trimming bosses organization, A. Goldsmith, made public an official statement denying rumors that they were about to break off contractural relations with the Joint Board and become a partner to the so-called contract the Associated has with the right wing Joint Council.

In order that the trade, and particularly the workers, shall have no doubts about the matter, Goldsmith made certain that his statement was decidedly clear and emphatic. It said: "We are not interested in the internal affairs of the union. . . . We are simply interested in whether we get good mechanics or not. Unless some cause developes which we do not now foresee, we will probably renew the contract with the Joint Board when the present pact expires in January, 1929."

Severe Blow

All observers acquainted with the situation in the trade, the outstanding feature of which is that the Joint Board is now carrying on a renewed offensive against the right wing as well as the bosses in order to obtain July raises for the workers, agree that this is the biggest blow received in a long time by the fake Joint Council as well as the Associated Fur Manufacturers Association.

The campaign of the Joint Board for July wage raises was able to chalk up two more victories. The shops of B. Elfenstein, 145 W. 28th St., was compelled by the union to grant wage raises to all their workers amounting to $5 and $10 each. The Prime Fur Company also capitulated before the threat of a strike and granted each worker a raise of from $5 to $7.50 each. The campaign however, is only beginning, the Joint Board declared in a statement.

NOBILE PARTY MEMBER DIES

VIRGO BAY, Spitzbergen, July 8 (UP).—Natal Ceccioni, chief engineer of the ill-fated transpolar dirigible Italia, died today as a result of injuries received when the airship crashed May 25 on its return from the North Pole.

The death of Ceccione, who was marooned with Nobile on a small icefloe, leaves but four known survivors of the Italia still held captive by the northern elements.

Two of these today were reported seriously ill as a consequence of their life on the melting ice. They are believed to have contracted pneumonia.

Apartment Life Gains Among U. S. Families

WASHINGTON, July 9.—Declining ownership of individual homes by the American family and a trend toward the rented apartment is indicated by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

In 1921 58 per cent of the families provided for in all classes of new building were housed in one-family dwellings. In 1927 this proportion fell to 38.3 per cent. Since 1921 the proportion of apartment houses in total new building construction has doubled.

LEAGUE MEMBER FRAME-UP CASE ON TRIAL TODAY

Labor Defense Appeals For Funds

A new frame-up of a militant worker looms with the appearance this morning in the First District Criminal Court, Center and Franklin Sts., of Nathan Kaplan, a fur worker, who faces a charge of felonious assault as a result of his participation in the anti-imperialist demonstration in Wall St. July 3. Kaplan will come up this morning for a hearing with 14 others against whom the charge is disorderly conduct.

The case of Rose Plotkin, 13-year-old member of the Young Pioneers, who was also arrested when police attacked the demonstration, will be heard tomorrow in Children's Court, 137 E. 22nd St. She has been confined to the Heckscher Foundation, the court refusing to release her on a writ of habeas corpus. A threat of deportation to her home town in Indiana hangs over the Young Pioneer.

Labor Defense Issues Appeal

All of the 16 workers arrested are being defended by Jacques Buitenkant, representing the New York Section of the International Labor Defense. An appeal to workers to help smash the frame-up of Kaplan and the threatened deportation of Rose Plotkin, as well as the cases of the 14 others arrested, by contributing funds for their defense has been issued by the New York Section of the I. L. D. through Rose Baron, secretary. The statement follows:

"The capitalist courts have decided that a scapegoat is needed to punish the militant workers who demonstrated against American im-

9 DEAD AS HEAT WAVE HITS CITY

Worker, 60, Dies on Job Here

Nine persons died from heat prostration, two were drowned, and another was reported seriously injured in a traffic accident due to the tremendous exodus from the scorching city yesterday.

Over 2,000,000 persons are estimated to have fled from New York City in an effort to escape the oppressive wave of heat. High humidity added to the discomfort.

William K. Ferguson, 60, of 196 Lefferts Pl., Brooklyn, a watchman at 116 Broad St., collapsed and died at his job before the noon hour. Irving Fergfeler, 25, of 111 E. 107th. St., sought the cooling waters of the Hudson at the foot of 117th St. He disappeared in the stream, and it was being dragged last night for his body.

An unidentified youth of 20 was drowned in the surf at Coney Island at the foot of 12th St. Thousands of wage slaves swarmed over the island all day in an effort to escape the heat.

A Coney Island bus side-swiped a trolley car on Seweall Ave., near Neptune, and the conductor of the trolley was hurled to the street. The condition of the conductor, Richard Elrod, of 433 Sixty-ninth St., Brooklyn, is reported grave.

BACK OLD-AGE PENSIONS

WATERLOO, Iowa, July 9.—Old-age pensions was indorsed by the annual convention of the Iowa Federation of Labor.

Still Behind the Bars

For 12 long years Warren K. Billings, shown above, has been behind the bars of Folsom Jail, joint victim with Tom Mooney of one of the most brazen frame-ups in the history of American labor. Billings and Mooney, betrayed and forgotten by the official labor bureaucracy, now look to the workers as the only force which can free them. A mass movement to secure their release has been started by the International Labor Defense.

DEMAND RELEASE OF JOHN PORTER

3,000 Hear Speakers in New Bedford

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., July 8.—Over three thousand workers rallied to a mass meeting held here Friday to protest against the imprisonment of John Porter, textile strike leader and member of the Young Workers (Communist) League, and to demand his release from Fort Adams, Newport, R. I., guardhouse, where the army authorities are keeping him pending a court martial for desertion and strike participation.

Vote Solidarity

A resolution addressed to the secretary of war and to the commander of Fort Adams was enthusiastically passed by the assembled strikers and strike sympathizers after they had listened to several speakers. The meeting also voted that a telegram be sent to Porter, expressing their solidarity and pledging aid in his fight for freedom.

The speakers declared that Porter is now locked in solitary confinement because he had admitted deserting the army when he saw that it was an instrument of the bosses against the workers, but that he now regretted not having stayed so as to convince the other soldiers of this fact.

His apprehension by the army was effected only after he refused to obey a police order to cease strike activities, the spokesmen of the New Bedford Textile Workers Union declared. Porter is vice-president of the union.

Organizer Figurede of the local Young Workers (Communist) League; Nat Kay of Boston; Ed Winn of the Boston Paper Hangers Union; Jack Rubenstein and Theresa Valente of the Textile Mills Committee were among the speakers. The International Labor Defense, the Young Pioneers and the Portuguese Workers Club also were represented by speakers. Paul Crouch, ex-soldier and Communist was chairman.

A national conference will soon be held in New York for the purpose of organizing a national committee for Porter's defense. The headquarters of the drive, however, will remain in New Bedford, it was announced.

TAXICAB DRIVER BARES NEW TRICK OF MISLEADERS

'Hackmen's Political Party' Exposed

(By a Taxi Corespondent)

I have been a taxi driver for nearly twelve years. It is no exaggeration to say that conditions are worse in this trade today than at any time that I can remember Many times I have asked myself the question, what is the reason for this? No doubt other drivers ask the same question.

The most interesting thing about the very bad conditions in our trade is that more than any where else there are dozens of schemes on foot individuals and organizations offering to help and to fight to correct these evils. The one I want to talk about here is the "Taxi Weekly," a trade paper run by a man called H. A. Innes Brown.

Would-Be Politician.

In addition to editing the paper Brown is also now trying to build up a Hackman's Political Party. He claims to have enrolled nearly 8,000 cab drivers in his scheme. Even if he has one-third that number, this shows you what the taxi men have yet to learn.

Brown doesn't give any aims or program for the party he is running He has held no open meetings. No officers have been elected. No one knows just exactly what his game is, any more than his statement that it is "for better legislative and administrative treatment of the taxicab man." He gets the men to send in their names "in secret." They pledge themselves to vote in some sort of vague "primary to be held by this party."

Brown came to New York from Boston where it is said he was officially connected with the Mogul Checker Cab Company, one of the open-shop, union-hating fleeters of that city. In 1923 we find him in the employ of the Mogul Checker Cab Manufacturing Corporation of New York with offices at 59th St and Broadway. Among other things he was at that time editing the "Checkerboard," the official scab paper put out by this concern for distribution among the drivers of the city. When the taxi drivers employed by the Mogul Checker fleet owners went out on strike in the summer of 1924, Brown was a man to be reckoned with. He had previously received a good training in the spirit of strike-breaking in the U

MARINE WORKERS MOVE FOR UNION

Plans for the organization of the marine workers, the mobilization of the seamen and longshoremen against attacks being made by the shipping bosses on the living standards of these workers will be discussed at a meeting called for this evening under the auspices of the International Seamen's Club of 28 South St.

"The vast majority of the marine workers are either totally unorganized or belong to organizations which refuse to fight for their welfare," the call for the organization meeting declares.

Hundreds of marine workers are expected to attend the mass meeting tonight Conditions in the trade have come to a point where action is imperative. Organization tasks, the grievances of the workers, the methods of solving the problems of the trade, will be discussed in detail. Prominent speakers will address the meeting, which is called for 8 p. m. tonight at the headquarters of the eSamen's Club, 28 South St. There will be rank and file discussion from the floor.

Spirit of New Bedford Strikers Unbroken

The beginning of the 13th week of the New Bedford textile strike will witness today the greatest mass picketing demonstration since the strike started in answer to the attempts of the bosses to open the mills. Photo shows typical picketing demonstration which will be increased manifold today.

Poverty Halts Graduation in Socialist City

MILWAUKEE, July 8. — The family of Grace Soldt, 14-year-old Milwaukee girl, did not see her among the graduates at a public school here recently. The girl herself had been looking forward to the exercises for an entire year, but at the last moment was prevented from being among her classmates.

The School Board, of which Mrs. Victor Berger is a member, yesterday received a stinging communication from the family citing the circumstances surrounding the incident. Grace's mother had purchased a colored dress for her just a month before the date of graduation. A few days later the school principal, Miss Sarah J. Carroll, announced the girls should wear white dresses.

Poverty, however, prevented the parents from getting their daughter the white dress, the letter says, and the girl wore her colored one. She was asked to leave the auditorium just a few minutes before the formal exercises, and was handed the diploma several days later.

VOTE TO OUST LEWIS MACHINE

Mine Local Condemns Cappelini

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

WILKES BARRE, July 8.—Demands for the ousting of the Lewis-Cappelini machine in district 1 were made in the form of a resolution drawn up by local union 1635 of Plymouth. The resolution denounced the district officials for their treachery and betrayal of the miners and attacked the international board members of the United Mine Workers union for its refusal to oust Cappelini after a special district convention had voted to remove him.

The resolution further declares that Cappelini is incompetent and unable to carry on the unions' business.

NO VOLUNTEERS; MILITIA DRAFTED

New Bedford Captain Threatens Workers

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., July 8.—The entire local force of National Guard regiments, which contains many strike sympathizers and the relatives of strikers and strikers themselves, refused to volunteer for strike duty Monday morning when the textile mills will make an attempt to reopen.

At the regular Saturday night drill in the state armory Captain Charles Perry, Jr., and Lieutenant Charles A. Stanley stood before the assembled guardsmen of the 2nd Battalion of the 101st Field Artillery and saw their repeated calls for volunteers for strike duty go completely unanswered. Not a single man stepped forward at the command.

Threatens Men

A frantic call for Major Harold Winslow, battalion commander, was then dispatched. The major arrived. After a long harangue alternating between cajolery and threats of drastic draft orders, only nine of the whole battalion stepped forward This in spite of the fact that he had informed the men that an insufficient response would be followed by a draft of the entire battalion. Before the threat was delivered the officers stated that the volunteers would be paid at the rate of $4.25 a day, while draftees would only get $1 a day.

Major Ashly this morning issued a precept requiring all commanding officers to assemble battalions and report men failing to appear. All National Guardsmen failing to put in an appearance will face courts martial, the statement declares.

The Textile Mills Committee issued a statement pointing out to the strikers the deadly use to which their own brothers and relatives will be put. It then appealed to all militiamen to avoid under all circumstances any action that will hurt the cause for which their fellow workers are struggling.

NON-UNION COAL DIGGERS STRIKE

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

ELM GROVE, W. Va., July 8.—The night shift of the Elm Grove mine laid down their tools last night and joined the strike of unorganized coal diggers in northern West Virginia. "We couldn't stand the rotten conditions any more, so we're joining the fight," they told strike leaders at Laura Calegari's shack. "We're willing to die starving rather than go back without a union," they said.

"Airtight" Injunction

Since the famous "airtight" injunction was granted to the Elm Grove Mining Co., Mrs. Calegari's house has become the center of strike activity. No mass meetings are allowed; no two people are permitted to walk together, or talk together on the road; strikers especially are not permitted to speak to scabs.

"They told us a new mine was starting up and they needed people

T. M. C. Urges Militia Not to Aid Bosses

Batty O.K.'s Use of Mounted Police

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., July 8.—In defiance of heavily armed units of National Guardsmen and mounted forces, in addition to the entire police power, striking textile workers here will stage one of the greatest picketing demonstrations ever seen when the mill owners make their gesture of opening the 56 mills tomorrow morning. Twenty-eight thousand workers have just entered the 13th week of the strike. Chief of Police McLeod posted an announcement this afternoon ordering "all not concerned in the issue to remain outside areas in which police will be working."

Attack Expected.

Sheriff Willetts today named and immediately swore in four deputy sheriffs to go out tomorrow morning and assist him in commanding the dispersal of the tens of thousands of pickets expected, after which he will officially invoke the "Riot Act" as the militia marches in.

In answer to the police announcement that the mills will swing their gates open at 6:45 in the morning, the call went around among the strikers to turn out en masse long before that hour.

Bill Keller, in the name of the New Bedford Textile Workers Union of the Textile Mills Committee, issued an appeal to the troops "to refrain from any action against their brothers who are fighting the battle of the working class, of which they themselves are part."

Warns Against Spies

The T. M. C. statement further declares: "Our picket captains are especially instructed to offset the attempts of provacateurs whom, we are certain, the manufacturers will plant among the picket lines to arouse disturbances among the pickets, thereby providing the labor-hating army officials with an excuse to order the militia to an attack.

"Through military discipline and the fear of court martial the bosses and their agents, the city and army authorities will attempt to force these troops, strikers and the relatives of strikers to attack our lines."

The picket captains of the Textile Mills Committee will be provided with orange arm bands, with the name of the union printed thereon in full.

Another occurence here, which has aroused much bitter resentment among the masses of strikers, as do the bosses' threats of a coming military and police terror, is the statement made by the officials of the Textile Council of the United Textile Workers.

Batty Endorses Terror

In view of the massing of an elaborate apparatus to break the strike by onslaughts of armed forces, William Batty, secretary of the council, announces to the press that "technically, we are satisfied with the preparations being made for police protection Monday. The Textile Council will be chagrined if the impression went out that the New Bedford authorities were forced to resort to mounted police to keep order in the ranks of labor." Batty then openly displayed his role as provacateur when he endorsed the use of mounted police after his question as to whether the horses were trained or not was answered in the affirmative.

The New Bedford Cotton Manufacturers' Association is scheduled to meet at 10:30 tomorrow morning to plan joint action on whatever the developments may occur during the morning's demonstrations.

Tonight's mass meetings of the Textile Mills Committee are expected to be attended by the largest crowds since the beginning of the strike. The meetings will be held at both ends of the city.

EDUCATOR AND SON SHOT

ESTES PARK, Colo., July 8.—Dr. George H. Sleight, 59, head of the department of education at the University of Illinois, and his son, Virgil, 25, professor at Hamilton University, Clinton, N. Y., were shot by a mysterious stranger early today as they slept in a tent in [illegible] Park, near here. Both were brought to a hospital here.

THEREMIN TO DRAW MUSIC OUT OF AIR SATURDAY

Famous Soviet Scientist to Perform at Great Coney Island Stadium Concert

The finishing touches are being put on the plans for the great concert and entertainment to be held Saturday evening at Coney Island Stadium. Though the committee in charge has not yet completed the entire program the announcements made thus far leave no doubt that the will be the greatest pr[illegible] musical event ever held in this country.

The mere fact that one of the performers will be the world famous Prof. Leon Theremin, the Soviet scientist, is sufficient to make this concert an outstanding event on the musical calendar. This great scientist has discovered the principle by which music can be drawn out of the air without the aid of a musical instrument. This principle is the transformation of electro-magnetic energy into acoustic energy. Merely by moving his hands through an electro-magnetic area Prof. Theremin achieves changes in pitch, timber and volume which enable him to produce music of the greatest beauty.

Volpe to Perform

Less sensational than Prof. Theremin, but equally distinguished, is another artist who will perform at the concert Saturday evening. This distinguished artist is Arnold Volpe, founder of the Lewisohn Stadium concerts and one of the foremost living American conductors. Volpe will conduct an orchestra of 50 musicians in a program of well-known symphonic selections.

Then there will be the Roxy Ballet. Those who have seen this noted ballet will require no recommendation. It is considered one of the best groups of terpsichorean artists now performing before the American public.

Tickets on Sale

Other details of the great program on Saturday evening will be announced later. Meanwhile the important question of tickets must be settled by workers individually. All those who want to be sure of being present at this epoch-making concert must get their tickets at once as they are selling fast. They are on sale at the office of The DAILY WORKER, 26-28 Union Square.

Class Loyalty, Stronger Than Hunger, Moves Starving Mine Strikers in All Fields

ESTITUTE, THEY GE RELIEF FOR THE MORE NEEDY

"Go First To Portage" Is New Slogan

(Special To DAILY WORKER.)

PITTSBURGH, July 8.—Striking miners of Pennsylvania and Ohio are proving what the best leaders of the working class have always maintained, that the bonds of class loyalty and sacrifice are greater than any other impulse; that this loyalty and sacrifice remains firm in the face of suffering, need, even starvation. Such confirmation is to be found in reports sent out by the National Miners' Relief Committee.

"According To Need.

"Go First To Portage" is the request of Cresson, Pa., miners to relief workers of this committee. There nearly 9,000 miners, an entire community, has been living for over a year on 93 cents a family a week. Cresson miners, themselves destitute and starving, nevertheless, feel that the conditions in Portage are even worse. "Yes, we are in a bad way here," they say, but our brothers up the line aren't even able to go to the relief stations, they are so weak."

Local stores are failing. Company stores, which never extended a cent of credit to strikers, are closing now. Miners' debts pile up from $10 to $600 or more being owed by individual families to friendly storekeepers and local tradesmen for rent and groceries. Private property is all heavily mortgaged.

Relief Campaign.

What is to become the greatest single effort for organized strike relief is now being planned by the National Miners' Relief Committee in conjunction with the International Labor Defense for the week of July 22-29.

A caravan to the strike fields of Western Pennsylvania by automobiles from all cities east of Chicago will be one of the principal preliminary features of the drive. Relief workers and sympathizers will be able to see the flimsy barracks and actual living conditions of the miners, and learn about their struggle directly. All expenses will be borne by those participating. The caravan will reach Pittsburgh Saturday, July 14, and a Relief-Defense Conference will be held the following day.

Will Mobilize Masses.

First a joint mobilization conference will be held in every key city on Sunday, July 8, when plans for the caravan will be perfected. International Labor Defense branches and local relief committees as well as organizations represented in these two bodies, will be represented. During the week of July 16 following the return of the caravan to their home cities, and preceding the drive, a thorough mobilization of all forces for the series of mass meetings, tag days and house to house collections will be effected.

Relief and defense collections will be held in factories and at local union meetings. Open air meetings will take place in all parts of large cities. A special Relief-Defense bulletin will be printed and widely distributed. These are the preliminary plans arrived at today in a joint conference held by Alfred Wagenknecht, relief director of the National Miners' Relief Committee whose headquarters are at 611 Penn Avenue, Pittsburgh, and Martin Abern, representative from the National office of the International Labor Defense.

OTTEN VESSEL SINKS; 291 LOST

SANTIAGO, Chile, July 8 (UP).—The wreck of the Chilean war transport Angoms, with men, women and children aboard, was described today by the four known survivors of the 295 persons aboard when the ship battered itself to pieces and sank in darkness and storm at 1 a.m. Saturday off Punta Chimpel, seven miles south of Lebu and only a short distance from land.

The Angomus ran on the rocks at 11 p.m. Friday during a terrific storm. The radio was wrecked and all lights aboard the ship went out. Scores were washed overboard and pounded to death against the rocks. About twenty children were among the lost.

Eighty bodies were reported to have been recovered, several of them having been washed ashore at Morguillas Beach. Slight hope was held that any of those aboard would be found alive on the sparsely settled shores near the scene of the disaster.

Search for victims today was virtually impossible because of the gale which also had interrupted telegraph and telephone services.

FRENCH BUILD FORTS

PARIS, July 8.—France and Belgium are flinging across their eastern borders a wall of fortifications as nearly impregnable as modern science will permit, while France is playing a leading role at Geneva as one of the sponsors of the Locarno peace agreements and an advocate of the Kellogg anti-war plan.

TAMMANY PAYS ITS LAST TRIBUTE TO GANGSTER

The same police department which only two days before brutally attacked an anti-imperialist demonstration in Wall St. joined in paying tribute to Frankie Yale, notorious gangster murdered in a gang war. Five hundred police escorted the princely funeral procession in a demonstration of the solidarity of Tammany Hall with the criminals of the underworld, the alliance which is receiving the backing of Wall St. Photo shows a view of the funeral procession.

15 WORKERS GET HEARING TODAY

Frame-Up of Militant Furrier Looms

perialism in Wall St. July 3. The charges of disorderly conduct against 14 of those arrested are not sufficient. Nathan Kaplan, young fur worker, has been selected to pay a greater penalty. The charge against him is felonious assault for 'biting' the finger of Policeman Keegan. The manner of this 'biting' is highly interesting. Policeman Keegan smashed Kaplan in the face. His fist caught on Kaplan's teeth and a finger was cut. Therefore, according to capitalist law, Kaplan 'bit' Policeman Keegan and feloniously assaulted him.

"Kaplan is now out on $1,500 bail furnished by the International Labor Defense. The frame-up machinery of the capitalist courts will be set in motion this morning when he appears for a hearing. Every effort will be made by those who are paid to persecute the workers to send him to jail. It will be a great truimph for them and a blow to the workers. This frame-up must be smashed. We have had enough of frame-ups. It can be smashed only by the workers rallying to the defense of their comrade by aiding the International Labor Defense in its efforts to free Kaplan from the clutches of the capitalist inquisitors.

"The case against Rose Plotkin must also be smashed. This 13-year-old militant has been kept prisoner in the Heckscher Foundation for participating in the demonstration and efforts are being made to take her away from the field where she can be of most service to the workers by sending her back to her home town in Indiana.

"And the legal hirelings of the capitalist class must also be compelled to dismiss the cases against the 14 other workers arrested. For all this defense work immediate funds are absolutely essential. Not a single day in jail, not a penny fine for any of them must be our slogan. The International Labor Defense calls upon all class-conscious workers to send their contributions at once to its office, 799 Broadway, Room 422, in order that their comrades may be saved."

Workers Party Picnic in Cleveland July 15

The workers of Cleveland are to have a picnic on July 15 under the auspices of the Workers (Communist) Party at which there will be prominent speakers. Besides the speakers a very interesting program of entertainment and proletarian sports is being arranged.

Further details can be obtained at the Party office in Cleveland.

LATIN LEADER BACKS SANDINO

Ugarte Scores Liberals As Wall St. Tools

In the name of four European student organizations Manuel Ugarte has issued a statement from Nice, condemning both the Liberal and Conservative Parties of Nicaragua as agents of U. S. imperialism, and commending General Sandino for his heroic struggle.

The student organizations, the Hispano American University Federation of Madrid, the General Association of Latin American Students of Paris, The University Students of Berlin, numbering about Association of Latin American Students of Berlin ,numbering about 10,000, are in full agreement with the statement.

Assigning the crisis in Nicaragua to the "plutocracy of the United States, desirous of accentuating its imperialistic irradiations," and the selfish and narrow vision of the Nicaraguan politicians who are only concerned with attaining power for themselves he says, ". . .we do not admit any difference between Liberals and Conservatives. We form a bloc against the defeatists, against the presidents greased by the White House."

"The only one who merits our enthusiastic support is General Sandino, because General Sandino represents, with his heroic followers, the popular reaction of our America against faithless oligarchies and the resistance of our aggregation to Anglo-Saxon Imperialism."

NOT ENOUGH JOBS IN PHILADELPHIA

Only 300 Out of 1000 Can Get Appointments

(By a Worker Correspondent)

PHILADELPHIA (By Mail).—William Rowen, president of the board of education, has seen fit to issue a prepared statement in regards to the large number of school teachers in this city who are without jobs and for whom the great city of Philadelphia can do nothing—except prepare public warnings.

No Jobs

Dr. Broome, in backing up the statements of Rowen (Broome, by the way, is superintendent of schools) said that Mr. Rowen should broadcast the dearth of teaching positions over the radio in order that every parent and student be made fully acquainted with the situation over which these school officials claim to have no control.

According to Rowen's statement, there are at present 1,000 fully qualified teachers seeking places in Philadelphia classrooms. Only 300, however, can be cared for in the fall by the opening of new schools. When the class of February, 1929, graduates from the Philadelphia Normal School, there will be at least 250 more teachers looking for jobs. Mr. Rowen announced that there will be no jobs to be had, however, and no prospect of positions for teachers so far as the schools in this city are concerned for at least three and possibly four years more.

Rowen further states that the "overflow" teacher problem has become a serious matter of such grave concern to the Quaker City educational officials that he asks parents to urge their children to prepare for other professions than that of teaching.

It is in this part of the statement that Rowen unintentionally becomes humorous. He requests teachers to look for jobs in other parts of Pennsylvania, and then admits that the teacher supply of the state is by far outdistancing that of the demand. In fact so much so that some cities in Pennsylvania have abolished their normal schools altogether, hoping, thereby, to solve the problem.

In urging parents to prepare their children for other professions than that of teaching, Rowen is merely "passing the buck" in the political parlance of this city.

What other professions? Rowen does not say. Very likely he does not care. Perhaps he does even not know that all sorts of young workers in or out of the profession can get nothing to do.

The young workers of this city, of whom the 1,000 unemployed teachers are but a small part, find themselves in a sad predicament. There are no jobs available, not even much despised work in the poorly-paying department stores and chain stores of the city.

And the teachers who are working find themselves overburdened with classes numbering as many as fifty and sixty pupils.

The city of Philadelphia has a special "school tax" which is high enough to furnish adequate teaching facilities for every child. Classes could be cut one-half their present size, furnishing several thousand more teachers with work.

But the board of education is a part of the stupendous graft machine which "governs" the municipality of Philadelphia. The financial requirements of Vare and his henchmen, the band of brothers, as they are known, come first. The needs of teachers and pupils are only incidental.

Enormous commissaries are made periodically for all kinds of supplies and text books. And vast sums of money are spent to build, repair and keep up school buildings.

Numerous jobs are at stake all the way "down" from janitor to superintendent of schools. These jobs are a part of the "patronage" that furnish the basis of the Vare machine, to which Hoover owes his nomination for president.

And as for Vare's (nearly senator) contractor friends, none of them have been known to die of malnutrition. All of them are known to live off the fat of the land — and off the backs of the workers.

Foreign Trade Makes A Large Increase

WASHINGTON, July 8.—European purchases of American gold in May were $17,000,000 more than purchases in the same month last year, according to figures of the department of commerce. Purchases by the United States of European goods in May were $5,000,000 more than in May, 1927.

The Trial of the Donetz Conspirators

By MOISSAYE J. OLGIN.

The Don trial marks a new stage in the capitalists' struggle against the proletarian dictatorship and a new victory of the Workers' Republic. The danger for the workers may not have been as spectacular as white regiments' attacks or foreign invasion, yet it was real enough, and it touched the very vitals of the new order. In a sense it was even greater than the danger of open challenge. For while the latter inflames the imagination and enhances the fighting spirit of the workers, the Don conspiracy was meant to discourage the workers, to convince them of being inferior to private business men as organizers of industrial production, at the same time to do material damage to one of the fundamental industries of the Soviet Union.

Workers Blocked Scheme.

"Most of the sabotage was planned rather than executed," says the New York Evening Post in its Saturday's editorial. It was not a question of sabotage, but of directly damaging mines and mining—the official designation freely applied by state, counsel and defendants being damager, a word hitherto used only in connection with insects destroying the crops—and if the coal industry of the Don region has survived in spite of all and has even shown marked progress, it was not because the "damagers'" plans were not "executed." but because the rank and file workers devoted themselves to the reconstruction work with so much enthusiasm and love that all obstacles were overcome.

Far-Flung Conspiracy.

The plan was cunning indeed. Its execution was conducted decisively if subtly. The organization was a perfect unit. Way up, in Warsaw London and Paris, groups of former owners plus remnants of the old Manufacturers' Association of the South. Back of them, the governments of the former entente who in providing funds the "disinherited" may lack, are interested not only in sticking a knife into the Soviet industrial backbone, but also in obtaining specific information as to the location of industrial plants railroads, terminals, ammunition stores, etc.—information that may be of value in case of war.

Connections between the "bosses" abroad and their agents in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics are maintained by mining engineers dispatched abroad for business or education, and by certain "dark personages" visiting the Soviet Union in the double capacity of political spies and industrial agents of the owners. Those intermediaries bring specific orders from the superiors and, to substantiate them, large sums of money. The money goes to the Moscow center whose members are known to only a few. The Moscow center communicates with the Kharkov center—the institution managing all the mines of the Don and belonging to the conspiracy as a body. From Kharkov money and orders go out to the individual mines and groups of mines. The local "damagers" carry out instructions. Secrecy is maintained all along the line.

Method of Sabotage.

"Most of the sabotage was planned rather than executed." However, this is what the defendants admitted and corroborated at the trial. The richest coal deposits were to be reserved for the former operators (of whose return either as full-fledged owners or at least as concessionaires the gentlemen were perfectly sure). The poor deposits were worked at excessive costs. Dozens of small worthless mines were dug where two or three large ones could have yielded much more coal at a considerably lower cost. Machinery suited for soft coal was used in hard coal mines, with the result that they soon wore out and had to be scrapped.

Avowedly worthless machinery was purchased abroad from German firms, the delivering Germans being made part of the plot. Mines flooded during the civil war (1918-1921) remained flooded for years so as not to be utilized by the Soviets. Well working mines were flooded by the engineers under one pretext or another. Underground corridors were dug in places where they were not needed at all. Ventilation pumps were ordered stopped and the mines filled with gas—the damage resulting in the loss of lives and suspension of work for a long while Costly cables imported from abroad were deliberately broken, and bars of iron found their mysterious way into the heart of complicated machinery playing havoc with the work.

Pretended "Accidents."

It would take a volume to enumerate all the varieties of "damaging" confessed to in the court There is the story about the forgetfulness of the German engineer Wegener. That high technician was supposed to help in putting into operation a newly constructed turbine He was to arrive from Kharkov with a load of small parts, cables screws, etc. The thing was urgent because the workers wished to time the commencement of work with the tenth anniversary of the November revolution.

Wegener arrived, but he conveniently left one box in Kharkov with the most essential parts. There is another story about eight wagonloads of coal, one of the mines dispatched to Leningrad as a gift on the occasion of the Tenth Anniversary and which upon arrival turned out to be eight wagonloads of rubbish.

There is the story about the two plants that were connected with one of the mines: a briquette plant and a phenole plant, and that were reduced to naught after the engineers ordered the machinery dismantled and placed in storage there to rust away and lose all value. There is the story about phantastic plans for years deliberated by the engineers in all earnestness, while the necessary and urgent work was not done.

Was Peculiar "War."

It was a plan well conceived and cleverly executed. It was a continuation of the war waged by Kolchak Denikin, Yudenich, Wrangel and other white generals, but with other means. It was a continuation of the starving-out policy pursued by world imperialism in relation to the Soviet Union. But whereas formerly world imperialism gave money and encouragement to military specialists left over from the old regime, they now did the same thing with the technical specialists. (It is noteworthy that this conspiracy started in 1922-1923 after the military attacks had all collapsed.) And whereas formerly it was planned to break the physical resistance of the workers, it was now planned to break their morale (outside of doing them economic harm).

Defeated by Workers.

The vigilance of the rank and file workers, their interest in their economic life, and their devotion to the revolution have triumphed over this enemy as they triumphed in the civil war.

A great victory has been won by the workers of the U. S. S. R. It must be hailed by every worker the world over.

FAKE MEDIATION MOVE BY MILL BOSSES EXPOSED

Charge State Board Is Owners' Agent

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., July 8.—The prediction of the Textile Mills Committee that the recently held conference between the Textile Council officials, the mill owners and the State Board of Conciliation was a preliminary scheme of the bosses to demoralize the morale of the strikers when them come on the picket lines Monday, was borne out when the conference ended with the bosses still insisting on the 10 per cent wage cut.

When the conference was called, however, the New Bedford Textile Workers Union of the Textile Mills Committee demanded participation in the name of the great majority of strikers, whose spokesman it is This demand was made in a public statement which frankly characterized the conference as a maneuver of the mill owners, but nevertheless demanded representation to safeguard the workers' interests. Due to the subsequent refusal to admit the T. M. C. delegation, the statement of the T. M. C. takes an added significance. It follows:

"The strike commitee of the New Bedford Textile Workers' Union, at its last meeting, considered the conference called by the State Board of Arbitration to which were invited the employers and the officials of the A. F. T. O.

"After a full discussion it was decided to send a committee from the New Bedford Textile Workers' Union to this conference. The New Bedford Textile Workers' Union feels that it and it alone represents the interests of the vast majority of the workers, and this is true in spite of all efforts, particularly by the local press, to call the workers supporting the new union a small group of "reds," "radicals" and such like.

"Sooner or later the employers must learn that not Batty, Binns and Rexiere control the strikers but the New Bedford Textile Workers' Union, and no negotiations or dealings of whatever kind will be considered valid by the workers till their own real union is consulted.

"We have no illusions as to this conference. The employers are not sincere. They wish a test of strength. If the employers really wished to settle the strike they could do it in short order. But what the employers really wish to do through this conference is to soften the fighting spirit of the workers, to give the workers illusions that the strike will be soon over, etc., while at the same time the employers themselves will be preparing for a long and hard battle. Besides this purpose the state board has other things in mind. First of all it wants to lend the impression that the state is "impartial" and "fair." The state board feels that the actions of Mayor Ashley have already compromised him too much, so it runs to the rescue. Second, the state board wants to bolster up the waning authority of Batty, Binns and Riviere. This the board does by calling them alone to the conference, as though they really controlled the situation. In the third place, the board is afraid of the success of the New Bedford Textile Workers Union This is the main reason why it has changed its "hands off New Bedford" policy and has suddenly decided to enter the situation.

"However, while we have no illusions as to this conference, we shall send our committee so as to guarantee to the workers that their true interests will be adequately protected.

"We anticipate that perhaps our committee will not be given official place at this conference. This will not worry us. It will be only another indication that the state board is not a friend of the workers, recognizing not those chosen by the workers themselves, but only those misleaders who are not trusted by the workers. Such an action by the state board will only betray still further the fact that the state board has the real purpose not of settling the strike but of breaking it. This the New Bedford Textile Workers' Union will never permit to happen."

'Labor Defender' Sets Are Now For Sale

Sets of the last three issues of the Labor Defender, pictorial monthly of the International Labor Defense, containing a historical review of the Mooney Billings Frame-Up, a visit to both Mooney and Billings at San Quentin and Folsom prisons by James P. Cannon, photographs of all the figures in the case, together with a letter from Tom Mooney to American workers, are being sold through the Labor Defender, at 80 East 11th St., New York, for 25 cents a set as material of general interest for workers and to serve as data for speakers, workers' clubs and libraries.

The unusual photographs in these issues, now being displayed in workers' halls and the press generally throughout the country in the reviving campaign to "Free Mooney and Billings," include pictures of Tom Mooney in 1916 and as he looks today after 12 years of imprisonment, and a remarkable photo from the files of the San Francisco police, showing Israel Weinberg being given the third degree.

These and other photos have attracted widespread attention and have already been syndicated thru the International News Reel and other press photo services.

to build the houses and shafts," the strike recruits said. "The pay was supposed to be much higher, too. Our kids are just as hungry as yours, and you've been striking for months, and we've been working like dogs!"

These strikers will need help almost immediately. The coal diggers of Elm Grove are ready to share what relief they get with the new strikers. The National Miners Relief Committee has promised to strain its resources and send a little more relief in the next shipment, if enough money is sent by sympathizers to their headquarters at 611 Penn Ave., Pittsburgh.

WALL ST. BACKS RUMANIAN LOAN

Fascists Make Bid For $80,000,000

New York bankers, backing the proposed "Stabilization Loan" of $80,000,000 to the fascist Rumanian government, have just announced that the loan "may now be considered as an accomplished fact."

A large group of the basic industries of Rumania will be turned over to American financiers as collateral. Denial of reports that the loan would not materialize was made Saturday by Dr. Max Winkler of Betron, Griscom & Co. Of the total amount, he said, $80,000,000 is scheduled to be placed in this market, and an offering will be made as soon as market conditions assume a more favorable aspect.

Among the securities being taken over by the American capitalists are the shares of the Resita Iron and Steel Company, Rumania's largest industrial corporation, and those of the Buhush, the country's largest textile company.

Stress Sharpening of Class Struggle in Draft Program of Communist International

EMPHASIZE GROWTH OF THE SOVIET UNION, DEVELOPMENT OF THE CHINESE REVOLUTION

Program Points Out Sharpened Imperialist Offensive Against U. S. S. R.

Capitalism, With Aid of Social Democrats, Adopts Weapon of Fascist Terrorism

To All Sections of the Communist International:

The Programme Commission of the Executive Committee of the Communist International is publishing a DRAFT PROGRAM.

The Commission thinks it its duty to declare that while the text of this draft is of course based on the same fundamental principles as those upon which the draft programme provisionally passed by the Fifth Congress of the Communist International was based, nevertheless, it differs very considerably from that draft. The Program Commission felt that in view of the great changes that have taken place in many important spheres of international life and particularly in the revolutionary movement since the Fifth Congress, it could not confine itself to making merely editorial changes in the original draft. A change has taken place in the form of the general crisis of capitalism; a change has taken place in the relationships between various groups of powers. Great events have taken place, like the great revolution in China, which once again emphasized the significance of the agrarian-peasant question. Great progress has been made in building up socialism in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. The struggle between the aggressive capitalist world and the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics is becoming acute. Fascism is growing and becoming transformed into the terrorist dictatorship of big capital. Social democracy has degenerated into Chauvinist imperialism. The lessons that have been learned by the Communist International in the fight against opposition tendencies and finally the growth of Communism, the fact that the movement has really become internationalized, the new tasks that confront the Communist International as a single organization—all this has inevitably made it necessary considerably to alter and enlarge the former draft.

The general tendency of the changes that have been made is towards more concreteness and greater emphasis upon THE INTERNATIONAL aspects both in the theoretical section as well as in the sections dealing immediately with the struggles of the Communist Parties.

Acting on the decision of the Executive Committee of the Communist International, the Programme Commission, in publishing this draft program, calls upon all comrades to express their opinion and criticism of it in articles, remarks and concrete suggestions. The work done on the program has revealed how difficult it is to embrace in a single document all the problems of the present-day world Communist movement. The question of the program will be one of the central questions at the Sixth Congress. It is essential that sufficient material be collected by the time the discussion of the question takes place at the Congress. The Commission therefore invites all comrades to join in the fruitful discussion of the program.

THE PROGRAMME COMMISSION OF THE
EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE
COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL

INTRODUCTION

The epoch of Imperialism is the epoch of moribund Capitalism. The crisis of Capitalism, which arose on the basis of Imperialism, signifies that the material pre-requisites for Socialism have already matured.

But the development of Imperialism not only creates the material pre-requisites for Socialism; it simultaneously creates the conditions for the overthrow of Capitalism.

Imperialism subjects large masses of the proletariat of all countries — from the centres of capitalist might to the most remote corners of the colonial world — to the dictatorship of finance capitalism. With elemental force Imperialism exposes and accentuates all the contradictions of Capitalist society. It intensifies class oppression to the utmost limits. It intensifies the contradiction between the growth of the productive forces of world economy and national state barriers to an exceptional degree. It inevitably gives rise to imperialist wars of world-wide dimensions, which shake the whole system of prevailing relationships and inexorably lead to the world proletarian revolution.

Imperialism binds the whole world in the chains of finance capital. With bonds of blood and iron it ties the proletarians of all countries, nationalities and races, to the yoke of financial and capitalist plutocracy. It intensifies the exploitation, oppression and enslavement of the proletariat to an immeasurable degree and thus directly confronts it with the task of capturing power. In this way Imperialism creates the necessity for uniting the proletariat of all countries, irrespective of nationality, race, sex or profession, into a single international proletarian army that cuts across all state barriers. Thus, while Imperialism creates material conditions for Socialism, it at the same time confronts the proletariat with the necessity for organizing in a militant international association of workers, which is essential for the overthrow of Imperialism.

On the other hand, Imperialism splits off the better placed section of the working class from the main and more oppressed section of the masses. This is the upper stratum of the working class, bribed and corrupted by Imperialism. They comprise the leading elements of the Social Democratic Parties. They have an interest in the Imperialist plunder of the colonies. They are loyal to their "own" bourgeoisie and their "own" Imperialist State and in the midst of decisive class battles were found on the side of the class enemy of the proletariat. The split which took place in the Socialist movement on these grounds in 1914 and the subsequent treachery of the Social Democratic Parties, which became bourgeois labor parties, demonstrated and proved that the International proletariat can fulfil its historic mission—to throw off the yoke of Imperialism and establish the proletarian dictatorship—only by ruthless struggle against Social Democracy.

Thus, the organization of the forces of the international revolution becomes possible only on the platform of Communism. The opportunist Second International of Social Democracy, which has become the agency of Imperialism in the ranks of the working class, is inevitably confronted by the Communist International.

The war of 1914-1918 gave rise to the first attempts to establish a new, revolutionary international, to counterbalance the Second, Social-Chauvinist International and to be used as a weapon of resistance to bellicose Imperialism (Zimmerwald and Kienthal). The victorious proletarian revolution in Russia gave a powerful impetus to the formation of Communist Parties in the centres of capitalism and in the colonies. In 1919, the Communist International was formed, and for the first time in history the most progressive strata of the European and American proletariat were really united with the proletariat of China and India and with the colored toilers of Africa and America on the basis of practical revolutionary struggle.

As a united and centralized international proletarian Party, the Communist International is the only Party to continue the organizational principles of the First International and to apply them to the revolutionary proletarian movement on a new mass basis. The experience gathered from the first imperialist war, from the subsequent period of revolutionary crisis of capitalism, from the series of revolutions in Europe and the colonial countries; the experience gathered from the dictatorship of the proletariat and the building up of Socialism in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics and from the work of all the Sections of the Communist International, which has been recorded in the decisions of its Congresses, and finally, the fact that the struggle between the imperialist bourgeoisie and the proletariat is more and more assuming an international character, makes it possible, necessary and opportune to draw up the program of the Communist International, which shall be the common program of all its Sections.

The program of the Communist International is the supreme generalization of the experience of the international revolutionary proletarian movement and is, therefore, the program of the struggle for world proletarian dictatorship, the program of the struggle for world Communism.

As an organization uniting the revolutionary workers, who lead millions of the oppressed and exploited against the bourgeoisie and their "socialist" agents, the Communist International regards itself as the historical succesor to the "Communist League" and the First International founded by Marx and as the inheritor of the best traditions of the Second International. The First International laid the ideological foundations for the international proletarian struggle for Socialism. The Second International, in the best period of its existence, prepared the ground for expanding the labour movement and spreading it widely among the masses. The Third, Communist International, continuing the work of the First International and accepting the fruits of the work of the Second International, resolutely lopped off the latter's opportunism, its social chauvinism and its bourgeois distortion of Socialism and set out to establish the dictatorship of the proletariat. In this way the Communist International preserves the continuity of all the glorious and heroic traditions of the international labor movement: the British Chartists and the French insurrectionists of 1831; the French and German working class revolutionaries of 1848; the immortal warriors and martyrs of the Paris Commune; the brave soldiers of the German, Hungarian and Finnish revolutions; the workers of former Czarist Russia—the victorious bearers of the proletarian dictatorship; the Chinese proletarians—the heroes of Canton and Shanghai.

In its theoretical and practical work, the Communist International bases itself on the historical experience of the revolutionary labor movement in all continents and among all peoples, and entirely and unreservedly adopts the point of view of revolutionary Marxism, which found its completion in Leninism. Leninism is nothing more nor less than Marxism of the epoch of Imperialism and proletarian revolutions.

The Communist International advocates, propagates and applies the revolutionary method of dialectical materialism of Marx and Engels and actively combats all forms of bourgeois philosophy and all forms of theoretical and practical opportunism. It takes its stand on the basis of consistent proletarian class struggle and subordinating the temporary, partial, group and national interests of the proletariat to the latter's lasting, common and international interests; it ruthlessly exposes every form of the doctrine of "class peace" — which the reformists have accepted from the bourgeoisie — ("civil peace," defense of imperialist "fatherland" in time of war, the gospel of bourgeois pacifism, "peace in industry," etc. etc.).

The Communist International expresses the historical need for a revolutionary organization of revolutionary proletarians—the grave diggers of the capitalist system—and is therefore the only international organization which has the dictatorship of the proletariat and Communism for its program and which openly comes out as the organizer of the international proletarian revolution.

BUTLER, TEXTILE BOSS, HIRE DICKS

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., July 8.—The Reid Detective Agency of Boston has been retained by former Senator Butler, a heavy mill owner, to spy on union leaders, to disrupt unions and to influence preachers to advocate surrender by the workers. Textile council leaders are aware of the private detectives' work in the unions. Efforts to bribe preachers failed signally when many appealed publicly to the workers not to return to the mills until the wage cut had been taken back.

Cotton mill workers on strike since April 16 spent Independence Day preparing to demonstrate once more their revolt against the 10 per cent wage cut ordered by William M. Butler's Manufacturers' Assn.

CALL COLOMBIA NEW ARENA OF PETROLEUM WAR

British Creep Closer to Panama Canal

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Will the government of the United States go to war against the government of Great Britain—thereby starting a world-wide holocaust—to determine whether Standard or Royal Dutch-Shell shall dominate the oil supply of the globe?

Ludwell Denny, former newspaper man, has written a book to point out to the two nations the peril of this competition for petroleum. His book is entitled "We Fight For Oil," and is published by Alfred A. Knopf. It is a well-proportioned history of the way in which the United States State Department has fought the British government, in every oil-bearing corner of the earth, to bring final control over the oil markets of the world to American rather than to British capital. It is closely packed with documentary quotations that will surprise the ordinary citizen. It tears the mask off diplomatic moralizing, and shows the United States and the British government facing each other in relentless mutual determination to win the race for oil, even if it comes to the wholesale massacre that is called war for national self-defense.

The British government owns a majority of the stock in the Anglo-Persian Oil Company, which is one of the most aggressive of the big competitors who are getting control of vast tracts of oil lands in the Near and Middle East, in Central and South America and elsewhere.

Under complete governmental direction also, Denny shows, is British-controlled oilfields, which has concessions that surround two-thirds of the Caribbean Sea. Both of these agencies of the British government have maneuvered in the direction of the Panama Canal thereby stirring the state department to some of its strongest anti-British protests. The story of Latin-American relations with Washington, as Denny recites it by means of quotations from the utterances of the department, is soaked in oil. And so, too, is the story of American policy toward the Soviet Union, Turkey, Armenia, Persia and Rumania.

Sir Henri Deterding, the "Napoleon" of the petroleum industry since he became the dominating figure in Royal Dutch-Shell and began his march toward control of the world supply of oil, is traced through this maze of intrigues, international conferences, double-crossings, bluffings, reconciliations—always the strong man against whom the intelligence of Standard and the power of the state department are pitted. By turns Deterding woos the Soviet government and denounces it in tones of horror—according to the moment's success or failure in his long game of getting the Russian oil supplies. When Standard defeats him there his rage is loosed and Charles Evans Hughes is brought forward as moral endorser of the arrangement Standard has made with Moscow.

Denny amuses himself and his readers by quoting the editorials from reactionary American papers last fall sympathizing with Standard's action in buying Soviet oil although Deterding shouted that this was "stolen" by the Soviet government from its former owners. And the author mischievously brings in the fact that the United States Shipping Board last winter purchased from Standard 24,000 tons of this same "stolen" oil, delivered to it in Near East ports.

But an American oil shortage is near, and oil prices are likely to go up unless rapid improvement in conserving the supply, both in the amount used and the way it is used shall be secured. Private competition in developing wells in America is wasting a great deal of the narrowing supply. A crisis is ahead when greed will rule every move of the two giants. Britain's companies will have cornered most of the remaining oil. Denny predicts that the anti-British propaganda which can be evoked by a Mayor Thompson will be called forth by oil interests, and war will come—unless the British make a compromise.

And the Kellogg war-abolition treaty? Familiar with every detail of its discussion, Denny ignores it as a peace factor.

Hoosac Mill Workers Win Pittsfield Strike

PITTSFIELD, Mass., July 8 (FP).—Three weeks of strike won a readjustment in piece rates for 46 unorganized weavers of the Hoosac mills. The workers were transferred from caring for one fine and one coarse loom each to two looms on coarse goods, suffering a loss of $3 to $5 a week.

In the meantime Hoosac mills branch of the Arlington mills at Lawrence, shifted unfinished work by truck to Lawrence. Piece rates on the coarse goods looms have been boosted as the result of the strike.

CITY CHARITY IS AID OF BOSSES

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., July 8.—The New Bedford Board of Public Welfare, whose granting of charity to strikers was exposed as a ruse to cover its role as a scab agency for the mill owners, but which nevertheless received the enthusiastic endorsement of the Textile Council of the United Textile Workers, has finally come out in its true colors and announced publicly that no aid will be given after Monday to these strikers who refused to go back to work when the mill owners open the mills.

The decision of the City Council to open the Welfare funds for the relief of the strikers was hailed by Binns and Batty as a wonderful gesture of the friendliness of the mill-boss controlled city politicians. This despite statements by the Textile Mills Committee that workers had been offered a "chance" to go scabbing when they applied for relief.

To the strikers here this is not any more surprising than the action of Mayor Ashley in calling troops to aid the mill bosses in trying to crush the strike, but, they declare, it merely adds more proof to the contention that the Textile Council officials are themselves important enemies of the strikers.

In an attempt to stem the immense tide of popularity among the strikers enjoyed by the Textile Mills Committee, the Textile Council leaders are trying to obtain followers among the workers by importing "special Polish" and "special women" organizers.

The great majority of the Polish workers here are adherents of the Mills Committee. Nearly all the women strikers are also enthusiastic allies lined up with them. More than that, the Mills Committee strike committee as well as posts as organizers, are occupied by many women strikers. The Council has hired a research worker of the British Independent Labor Party as a women's organizer, in addition to one from the Women's Trade Union League. So far their progress can be recorded as nil.

FASCIST TERROR INTENSIFIED ON BY MUSSOLINI

Framed Bombing Excuse for Torture

The fascist reign of terror in Italy has assumed even greater proportions since the attempted assassinations of the King in Milan, according to news received through underground channels at Zurich. The fascist police employ all forms of torture to extract "confessions" from political prisoners, and raid the homes of anyone who is considered in anyway dissatisfied with the fascist regime.

The report cites raids and arrests of prominent professors who have contributed to harmless liberal journals, of workers who are demanding a living wage. The system of fascist espionage and terror has rounded out its machinery by placing at the head of the Italian prisons Judge Albertini, who presided over the court of appeals that hushed up the Matteotti case.

The bombing of a train that carried Mussolini, although the bombs carried the seal of the state arsenal, has served for further persecution of workers, and those who practiced propaganda activity for the Italian Communist Party, even before it was declared illegal. Mere membership in the Communist Party serves as a pretext for the most horrible "information-extracting" tortures, and long terms of imprisonment in unenbearable jails.

MOSCOW SUES FOR DEBT

MOSCOW, July 8.—The Moscow Yiddish art theatre, now playing in Berlin, which owes the Moscow Social Insurance Fund 45,000 roubles, will shortly be sued for the said amount by Ambassador to Germany Krestinsky upon instruction from the Soviet Government.

Fascists Give Ford a Medal for Services

DETROIT, July 8.—Large-scale exploitation of workers and anti-semitic propaganda received official recognition here yesterday with the conferring of the Grand Cross of the Order of the Crown of Rumania upon Henry Ford. The honor was conferred by Andrew Popovich, secretary of the Rumanian legation at Washington as a tribute from the fascist, Jew-hating Bratianu dictatorship to the flivver king.

In his speech of presentation Popovich referred to the great exploiter as "a benefactor of mankind" and "a friend of labor." In reply Ford promised to continue in the future the policies which had won him such wealth and the approval of the capitalist class of the world.

AUSTRIA LEADERS GREET PILSUDSKI

VIENNA, July 8.—Officials of the Austrian government gave a warm reception to Marshal Pilsudski, Polish fascist, when he arrived here on his way to Rumania.

Pilsudski made no further comment on his resignation but intimated that he will spend the summer in Rumania.

After paying his respects to the Austrian government, Pilsudski will go south tomorrow.

FAKE MINIMUM WAGE.

MONTEVIDEO, July 8.—Whether the minimum wage law passed here recently by the Uruguayan parliament includes the workers in private capitalist industries is doubtful. The wage law provides that government employees receive a minimum monthly wage of 50 pesos (about $51) and a daily wage of 2½ pesos.

GERMAN SAILOR ISTROUBLESOME TO SHIP'S BOSS

His Crime is Teaching Seamen Economics

(By a Worker Correspondent)

The captain of the S. S. "Tirpitz" of the Hamburg-American line does not seem to be very satisfied wi his crew.

"All my men are good," said one time to another captain of a different ship, "except Herr Mueller. He is the only troubl maker on the boat."

What does this "trouble-maker" do anyhow?

His "crime" consists in being an instructor in economics to a class which the seamen of the above vessel have organized. Otherwise Mueller attends to his work well. He is an oiler on the said boat. Inst of gambling or wasting his time for nothing he prepares the seam to be true to the workers' cause.

When the captain tried to get of Mueller all the men fought him unitedly and he remained the vessel.

If the seamen had many mo "trouble-makers" like Mueller would be better off.

Let the crew of the "Tirpitz" an example to all seamen.

His Life Always in the Hands of Others

The above photograph was taken when a private car ran into a taxicab. By a recent ruling of Tammany Compensation Commissioner, Lane, taxicab drivers are not entitled to compensation for injuries. The driver was injured and is now out of work but he has not the right of other workers to collect for his losses. The taxi bosses' organization, the Greater City Taxi Owners' Association, has boasted that it was through its efforts that this vicious decision of Commissioner Lane was put through. The Tammany Hall political machine is connected directly with the bosses and their organizations.

TAXI FLEETERS USE ILLEGAL BLACKLIST

An organized conspiracy on the part of the big fleeters under the domination of the Yellow Taxi Corporation to force out thousands of drivers from the industry among other means by the maintenance of a secret blacklist has been uncovered through the efforts of The DAILY WORKER with the assistance of a number of hackmen.

Documentary evidence, part of which is herewith produced, is now in the possession of the DAILY WORKER showing that the Greater City Taxi Owners' Association, Inc., of 1841 Broadway, a bosses' anti-union, labor-hating organization is now sending out regularly a blacklist of names of taxi drivers whom for one reason or another the bosses are seeking to drive from the trade. Thousands of names of "undesirables" are now on this list, it has been learned. Additions are made each month. In most cases these are drivers who either refuse to be speeded up or "assert themselves" against the bosses.

The letter below sent to one of the members of the association enclosed the June list on which are printed over one hundred new names whom the fleeter is instructed, indirectly of course, not to employ.

Same Gang

The Greater City Taxi Owners' Association is dominated by the Yellow Taxi Corporation, a Morgan-controlled, open-shop concern which is directly connected with the Tammany Hall machine and its police force in New York City.

Fourth Deputy police commissioner Nelson Ruttenberg, "Taxi Czar," and Tammany henchman has used the power of his office to suspend drivers for little cause or none at all, in conjunction with the same scheme, it is believed. The Tammany controlled police force keeps cab-drivers other than those of the Yellow Cab Corporation off Fifth Avenue and other desirable cruising streets and localities. Scores of drivers have had their licenses revoked for no greater "crime" than that of asserting their rights in the face of some Tammany Hall cop.

Dear Sir:

You will find enclosed Drivers List for the month of June, which you should add to the names heretofore furnished you.

Please be advised that the Directors have decided that on and after July 1st, 1928, it will not be necessary to collect dues at the rate of 50c. per car per month, but all members are requested to pay up their past dues to June 30th, immediately as the treasury of the Association is in need of funds to meet current obligations.

You may hear certain false rumors that the Association is about to disband, but this is absolutely not the case, and the work will be carried on as heretofore. Please continue to send in your chauffeurs' reports, and you may expect to hear some definite news with regard to the Compensation Law affecting taxicab operators using Association Day Cards very shortly.

Workers Party Drive Is On

more years. This promises to be a bitter campaign. The spoils of office are well worth fighting for. The political lackeys of capitalism are vying with each other in their willingness to serve the imperialists and incidentally profit individually from the service.

Hordes of highly paid speakers will sing the praises of the leading candidates on both tickets. Those "workers" in addition to getting paid for their services hope to be further remunerated by official sinecuros in the event hteir candidate is victorious. This is the incentive to labor under capitalism!

Launch Drive.

The Workers (Communist) Party is also limbering up for the greatest campaign ever undertaken by it during the nine years of its existence Poor in financial resources but rich in courage, enthusiasm, devotion and the spirit of self-sacrifice, the prospect for putting the Party on the map is exceedingly bright.

Already the necessary number of signatures have been filed to place the party on the ballot in seven states. This is an excellent showing, considering that in 1924 the Communist candidates were on the ballot in fourteen states only. When the time limit for filing signatures has expired, it is expected that the workers and exploited farmers at least in thirty states will be able to mark the official ballot under the names of Foster and Gitlow.

Need Funds.

The raising of funds to enable the Workers (Communist) Party to wage an aggressive widespread campaign is now the most pressing problem confronting the party and the most important duty for every Communist and Communist sympathizer.

With a campaign fund of $100,000, tons of Communist literature can be printed and distributed, and the revolutionary program of the Communist Party, which calls for the overthrow of the capitalist system and the establishment of a Workers' and Farmers' Government brought to the attention of the exploited producers in the United States, in field and factory.

As a first step in the drive to raise the $100,000 Communist Party Election Campaign Fund, a campaign assessment stamp of 50 cents to be bought by every party member, has been ordered to be issued This assessment is depended upon to bring in enough funds to make a good start in the campaign work.

DRIVER INJURED AS PRIVATE CAR CRASHES TAXICAB

New Ruling Prevents Compensation

(By Taxi Correspondent.)

This will give you an idea what we taxicab drivers are up against Last Thursday about 4:15 p. m. a taxicab was struck by a private Buick touring car at 47th St. and 6th Ave. The two men passengers of the cab and the driver were tossed about and injured. The officer on the beat nearly got his and the cab was a pretty mess.

Then it was found that the driver of the Buick had no current chauffeur's license and was driving his car on a license which expired June 30, 1928. For this serious offense he merely got a summons from the cop for "not having a license," even though he had disobeyed an officer's signal and had overrun a red light

Another Story.

Now if a cab driver had done this he would have been asked to drive to the nearest police station where he would have been put in the coop for "reckless driving" in addition to the charges mentioned above. He would have had his credentials "lifted" and after a trial in the traffic court he would have been chased to the Hack Bureau to meet "Czar" Ruttenberg who runs this industry for Tammany Hall and the Yellow Taxi Corporation.

Why does the taxi driver meet with so much discrimination by the police and the courts. The answer is simple. He is unorganized.

Organize.

There is only one way to beat this game and solve the hundreds of problems which are facing us drivers: trade union organization Three are plenty of freak organizations in our trade now, but the real thing is yet to come. Let's get together in one, big, powerful trade union of all the drivers. Will some of you who read these lines, write to me about this, in care of The DAILY WORKER, the only paper which will give us drivers a real break.

"MACK."

DRIVER EXPOSES EDITOR BROWN

Shows Taxi Editor Is Tool of Tammany

(By Taxi Correspondent.)

There are tricks in all trades but I guess the politicians in this game have learned more than their share

On April 30, 1928, the great "champion" of the taxicab drivers Mr. H. A. Innes Brown, editor of the "Taxi Weekly," announced that he would form a new Hackmen's Political Party. In the May 7 edition of his paper Brown announced editorially that "the Taxi Weekly is backing the Hackmen's Political Party because it believes that it is only by political activity that any progress and prosperity can be brought to the rank and file of the industry under present conditions."

First Attempt.

Well, we can all look back and remember the "Square Deal Auto League" which came out in 1925 with the announced purpose of "a square deal" for the hackmen provided they supported "Our Jimmy," meaning the light-footed, lightheaded, Tammany Hall, cake-eater The "Square Deal" outfit was headed by Philip J. O'Brien, a one-time president of the Amalgamated Taxi Association. O'Brien was ousted from this office by the membership for good reasons.

An active campaign was carried on among the taxi drivers. Offices were maintained in the Times Square district at 43rd St. and Broadway. The votes of the hackmen were swung for "our" Jimmy but after election it was discovered that "our" Jimmy forgot "us." Did the drivers get the square deal as per promise. Well, you know what the chicken got! And how!

Tammany Blessings.

Here are some of the "blessings" which have come down from the Tammany heaven to the hackmen: stricter police control, increasing police oppression and discrimination against drivers, "Czar" Nelson Ruttenberg, and badges that fall apart suspensions, increasing revocations of licenses and greater and greater difficulties in making a living.

So when Mr. Brown talks to us about the benefits of his new political party, we ask him: What progress or prosperity did the rank and file receive when we took a dose of political activity as per the dose of "Doc" Brown the last time? Also what assurance have we when we take another shot of his "dope" that we won't find ourselves after election out in the cold again. What is Brown's program for solving low wages, discrimination, the blacklist? Just whom is Brown planning to support in the election? Let Mr Brown answer these questions.

Short time, instead of tying Georgia mill workers to their jobs, has resulted in 15 to 20 per cent increase in labor turnover, say astonished and nonplussed mill bosses.

POLICE TERROR RULES TAXIMEN WITH IRON HAND

Tammany Shown As Tool of Big Fleeters

(By Taxi Correspondent.)

Some time ago new traffic laws were introduced in the city and since then the lot of the taxi driver has become even worse than it was before.

According to the new regulations issued by the police department parking is prohibited on Fifth Ave below 59th Street from 5 p. m. to 7 p. m. During the 1926 I. R. T strike, emergency regulations prohibited parking from 4 to 7 p. m But due to objections from the Fifth Avenue Merchants' Association a change was made, resulting in the "No Parking" rule beginning one hour later every day.

No Relief.

The new regulations will not and has not relieved traffic on that avenue, as the heavy traffic begins about 3 p. m. At that hour all the brokers start on their way home after a "hard" day's work on the floors of the stock exchange in Wall Street. Pierce Arrows, Rolls Royces, Packards and other high priced cars are parked at the curb on Fifth Ave., while their owners are shopping or having tea at the club, making the task of the taxi driver one which is a strain on his nervous system.

Another difficulty which they must face is the Fifth Ave. buses According to the franchise issued to the Fifth Avenue Coach Corporation no more than two (2) buses are to be permitted on the avenue in one block. Yet 12 and 14 buses are often seen crowded together in one block.

Always Blamed.

Whenever a difficulty arises the taxi driver is the "fall guy" for he is the one who is always wrong all attempts being made to satisfy the Fifth Ave. Coach Company or the Fifth Ave. Merchants' Association. All at the expense of the taxi driver.

While there is no city ordinance which prohibits taxi drivers from cruising on Fifth Ave. the Tammany cops stationed on the avenue have for the past four years been handing out summonses to taxi drivers so unfortunate as to be caught there.

H. A. Innes Brown, the editor of "Taxi Weekly," knows of these abuses, such as the discrimination against the taxi driver on Fifth Ave. and the violation of the franchise issued by the city to the Fifth Ave. Bus Corporation, but not once has he raised his voice in protest against these conditions. Why should Brown, self-styled "champion" of the rights of the taxi drivers, raise his voice against the Fifth Avenue Coach Company? Brown's paper is the advertising medium of General Motors, of which it is said the Fifth Avenue coach is a subsidiary. Nearly every week the "Taxi Weekly" runs full page adds of the General Motors.

The above enumerated regulations are carried over as part of the policy of Former Police Commissioner Enright, who served under Mayor John F. Hylan.

Fake Campaign.

When the present mayor, James J. Walker, was a candidate, his taxi friends in the industry carried on an extensive campaign among the taxi drivers, promising them "justice" and a "square deal" if he was elected. They went so far as to organize the "Sqquare Deal Taxi League." And also to publish a small paper called "The Square Deal," which called on the taxi drivers to rally around "Our Jimmy."

As bad as Red Mike (referring to Hylan) was, our Jimmie is worse! That's what we get for voting for these Tammany fakers. But never again.

Taxi Driver Exposes Trick of the Bosses

S. Army from which he was discharged as a captain.

When the three thousand drivers went out, Brown is said to have been the man that fought against the Brotherhood of Taxi Chauffeur which sought to make a settlement with the bosses of the Mogul cabs.

Next we hear of him as editor of the Taxi Weekly, at 8 Columbus Circle. The new union because of the inefficiency of its officials and for other reasons had gone out of existence. But during the summer of 1925 Jack Cohen, Czar of the Funeral Drivers Union, Local 643, started a campaign to organize the taxi drivers. To help him he took under his wing a certain Jack Truhaft, a Bronx taxi driver and a friend of Brown's.

Birds of a Feather.

Cohen and Truhaft in their union activities collected, it is said, as much as $7,500 from the drivers at $5 per head. The game lasted about three or four months. No meetings were held and no accounting was ever given as to what happened to the money. My own $5.00 is still there too!

The next thing we find Truhaft as circulation manager of the "Taxi Weekly" under Brown. You will still find him at the same job. Draw your own conclusions.

Space does not permit to give more recent history of Brown, his favoritism of and connections with the Yellow Taxi Corporation. Some other time.

Just to end up with his trick political party.

In the Taxi Weekly of April 26, 1926, which I have saved, we read a very interesting letter sent to Mayor Jimmie Walker, by H. A Innes Brown:

Tammany Tool.

"Sir:

"During the democratic primaries in 1925, this paper supported you against Mayor Hylan, from the first moment your name was mentioned until you obtained the nomination In the election a few months later it also championed your cause..." (etc., etc.)

In this week's issue of the Taxi Weekly we see a big headline: "Hackman's party may sway Smith's election." The plot thickens as they say in the movies. But you don't have to be any smarter than a fool to see the ears of the democratic donkey sticking out of this Brown-Tammany Hall scheme to turn over the votes of the taxi drivers to Al Smith, friend of the traction gang. Here's hoping The DAILY WORKER puts up a real fight for the cabmen.

DRAMA

'No Limitation to Future of Theremin Invention', Szigeti

Joseph Szigeti, the noted Hungarian violinist, in a recent talk on the invention of Leon Theremin expressed himself as follows:

"A singer," Szigeti says, "is limited by his lung capacity and a violinist by the length of his bow but there is no limitation on this instrument. Another striking thing is its even sweep of the chromatic scale. There is no absolutely perfect fusion of note into note on any other instrument. As it stands now, the instrument is the raw material of music. What can be done with it remains to be seen Its future depends on what men of genius do with it.

"I have practiced on it and played on it. It is not easy to learn. There are no rules or forms. You put your hand in one position. If the sound is wrong, you change its position It is all empirical. As it stands today, the musician must work out his technique for himself."

Rudolph Ganz, another authority on music, and a talented musician himself, expressed his opinion of Theremin's demonstration in the following terms:

"The striking feature for me is that it is the first time that music has been extracted from something instead of being put into something and that there is nothing between the human being and the music itself—no wood, no steel, no string no horsehair—and that the personality of the performer is more sensitively presented than on any existing instrument.

"It is very, very interesting Scientifically it is marvelous and I believe that it has a great future in music. It was surprising to me to find that it had no mechanical tone. It seemed to have soul."

Prof. Leon Theremin will demonstrate his principal of getting "Music from the Ether" at the Coney Island Stadium. The noted inventor of Soviet Russia will be the chief feature of the concert to be given this Saturday night. Tickets are now on sale at the Workers' Center, 26-28 Union Square.

SINGLE COMBINE CONTROLS WORLD MATCH OUTPUT

Lends Nations Millions to Increase Sales

WASHINGTON, July 8 (UP).—The penny match business is able to loan and donate millions of dollars to foreign governments to promote sales, according to reports obtained today from the department of commerce.

Every third person in the world who lights a match, lights one manufactured by the greatest monopoly in history—the International Match Company of New York, and the Swedish Match Company of Stockholm.

The story of the little safety match is one of the most amazing in modern commerce. Its output is practically controlled by the two companies, which are interlocked by joint stock holdings.

50,000 Workers.

This mammoth organization with 50,000 employes and 90 plants in 32 countries of the world, capitalized for only $48,200,000, has been able to loan and pay outright millions of dollars to foreign governments in the last few years—in exchange for monopoly rights on the sale of matches.

There is not a nation in the world, according to commerce department reports, that is not connected in some way or another with the Swedish company in the use of matches.

Even the United States, at one time regarded as the greatest manufacturer of matches, has fallen under the influence of the Swedish company. Safety box matches, which previously bore the marking "made in the U. S. A.," now are stamped "made in Sweden."

Commerce department reports give a few of the foreign loans made by the Swedish company in exchange for monopoly rights as follows:

Enormous Loans.

$75,000,000, in 1927, to France for a 20-year monopoly on sale of raw materials and match machinery. The loan, the reports show, was used by France to apply on its debt to the United States.

$5,000,000 to Greece for a 38-year monopoly.

$7,500,000 to Esthonia, 1927.

The Swedish company offered a few weeks ago to loan Hungary $36,000,000 for a 30-year monopoly, the reports show, and has asked for an agreement to be signed by July 15.

Monopolize South America.

The Swedish company now holds a monopoly on the sale of matches in Bolivia, which expires in 1929. It is reported to the commerce department that a loan, running into the millions of dollars, has been offered for a renewal of the monopoly.

Twenty companies in Argentina now are controlled by the Swedish Match Company, the reports show, and the Compania Chilena De Fosforos, the largest match factory in Chile, recently disposed of 36 per cent of its stock to the Swedish company and gave it an option on 50 per cent of the stock.

An agreement has been reached with Germany to limit German match production to 35 per cent and permit the Swedish company to monopolize 65 per cent of all match sales.

In 1927, the Swedish company gained control of the Eddy Match Company of Canada, which dominates the Canadian market. It already has control of British markets.

The Manila Match Company, the only one of its kind in the Philippine Islands, is owned by the Swedish company.

In a recent annual report, the Swedish company said:

"The Swedish Match Company now produces one match a day for every person in the world. If the eight-months production of match boxes were laid end to end they would reach from the earth to the moon.

Forces Out Japan.

"Slowly but surely the Japanese match industry has been driven from one market after another. The Japanese are losing all of the markets they gained during the war."

Since this report was issued, U. S. commercial attaches advised the department that the Swedish company has acquired a majority of stock in the Japanese companies.

T. O. Klath, U. S. commercial attache at Stockholm, recently advised the commerce department that "absolute control of this world-wide organization is centered in Stockholm and almost entirely in one man—Ivar Kreuger."

The reports show that in the past [illegible] years the Swedish company has paid an average dividend of 25 per cent on its common stock. This profit is in addition to the millions loaned or given to foreign governments.

WOMEN IN "SOCIALIST" CITY HAVE 50-HR. WEEK

READING, Pa. (By Mail).—Reading women work on an average of 50 hours a week, statistics show. The result is that the women are overworked, get ill and lose much time, in this way reducing their working hours to 48.

Illness From Speed-Up.

In almost any survey of time lost by workers, statistics show that illness accounts for a large part of the loss. In a survey made by the U. S department of labor, women's bureau, on lost time and labor turnover in cotton mills, it was found that sickness of the workers comprises 23.2 per cent of the time lost, an average loss of 10.2 days per woman worker for illness alone and these figures do not include illness due to pregnancy and confinement nor accident.

In a study on waste in industry the federated American engineering societies have brought together from several sources figures that are of interest in this connection. It is pointed out that investigations of the U. S. commission of industrial relations in 1913-15 covers a survey of sickness prevalent among approximately a million workers of representative occupations, revealing an average loss to more than 30,000 wage earners of about nine days per year.

Workers, in compiling these reports, found that a half-sick woman usually will work if the need of her earnings are imperative. The following chart will show that the time lost by overworked women through illness is greater than through any other cause:

Cause	Time Lost
Illness of self	23.2
Illness of others	9.6
Home duties	19.8
Rest, recreation, vacation	12.5
Another job	7.6
No work, shut down, laid of.f	2.0

The "Remedy"!

The above is quoted from the "socialist" Reading Unionist. And what do you think is the remedy according to the Reading "socialist"? An appeal to the employers for better and humanitarian conditions for the working women. Here is what they say:

"It is the belief of union workers that by the "state-wide establishment of the eight-hour day the work done by the women will be more efficient because their health would be better and they would not lose so much time through illness.

"Because of this increase in efficiency, the employer would be gaining rather than losing and the women workers would not only be saving doctor bills but would also be healthier and happier."

This is the propaganda stuff by which the Reading "socialist" are trying to organize the workers. Appeal to the bosses, instead of the class struggle. It is no wonder that the Reading workers are becoming disillusioned and disgusted with the "socialists" and often one can hear them say that the "socialists are too damn slow and they don't promise anything and don't give anything."

The average worker doesn't know the difference between the present "socialist" administration and a republican one. They can't be blamed since there is really very little difference.

The workers of Reading as well as of other cities are beginning to understand that the "socialist" party is nothing but a capitalist party and the only way the workers can gain anything at all is by kicking out of office the lackeys of the bourgeoisie and through a final class struggle organize a government of their own.

TAMMANY HIGHER UP ELUDES HUNT

Grafters Still Roam Unmolested

The "man higher up" in the $200,000,000 Tammany street cleaning graft scandal is now being closely pursued, according to information given out by Commissioner of Accounts, James A. Higgins, yesterday. Commissioner Higgins during his past two months of investigation is said to have made a record of chasing grafters under cover. There have been a number of "suspensions" and a few resignations, but no real change has resulted in the system.

Two minor officials were sentenced to Sing Sing, but the real grafters whose connections are said to extend directly to the city hall, have been left to continue unmolested.

Unofficial information emanating, it is believed, from the offices of Higgins declare that the "man higher up" is a substantial contributor to past Tammany political campaigns" and to have had "close personal relations with Alfred A. Taylor, Commissioner of the Street Cleaning Department.

The DAILY WORKER has repeatedly charged that the "man higher up" is Taylor himself. It has further been charged that Mayor Jimmie Walker who has risen to defend Taylor at a definite moment about two months ago when Taylor was threatened with exposure by Controller Craig, is himself involved in the situation.

PARTY ELECTION BUTTONS READY

Stamps Designed by Ellis For Sale

Half a million "Vote Communist" stamps and a quarter million "Vote Communist" buttons with the Foster-Gitlow pictures are being prepared for distribution by the National Campaign Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party with headquarters at 43 East 125th St., it was learned yesterday.

The stamps were designed by the noted proletarian artist, Fred Ellis of The DAILY WORKER editorial staff. Printed over the red Hammer and Sickle is the slogan "Vote Communist" in black. The photographs of Foster and Gitlow are tastefully worked into odd corners of the stamp, which also carries the slogan "Vote for the Party of the Class Struggle," while underneath in a heavy black border the name Workers (Communist) Party, stands forth like the shining headlight of a locomotive.

Sell Stamps.

"The whole stamp is just about the size of a special delivery stamp. They will form a wonderful medium of propaganda, for they were gotten out with the idea that they are to be posted on envelopes, letters programs, shop papers, bulletins and all other printed matter and stationery gotten out by the movement," a statement issued by the National Campaign Committee says

"From now to the end of the campaign no letter should be sent thru the mails without one of these stamps. Everything must carry our election campaign label. Order a book of eighty stamps at once from the Campaign Committee, Department C, 43 East 125th Street, New York. Each book contains ten pages with eight stamps to the page. Each page can be resold to your shop-mates and fellow-workers for ten cents. Send in your first dollar now before the first edition is sold out. Enclose as many dollars as you want books. Answer before you lay this aside.

"In quantity lots these books will sell: 55 books for $50; 90 books for $75; and 125 books for $100.

The Buttons.

"The 'Vote Communist' button is also in three colors. The design for the button has been specially worked out by Comrade Ellis. The price of these buttons in quantities is 10 cents a piece, 5 cents in lots of 100 or less; 4 cents in lots of 100 to 1,000; 3 cents in lots of 1,000 to 5,000; and 2 cents in lots of 5,000 or over.

"Both the stamps and the buttons are excellent devices for bringing the party to the attention of the masses as the political party of the working class.

"As a first step in the drive to raise a $100,000 Communist Party Election Campaign Fund, the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party has levied a 50-cent Assessment Stamp on the party membership."

HACKMAN HELD UP BY GUNMAN

One of Score Each Week-End

Leslie Dale, a Bronx taxi driver of 248 Powers Ave., near E. 142nd St., who was held up in one of the regular week-end taxi hold-ups, which average between fifteen and twenty each week, escaped possibly with his life when the gangster was stopped by a policeman.

The gunman, John Bailey, boarded the driver's cab at Lenox Ave. and 136th St. At 104th St. the gangster drew his gun and ordered the driver to obey instructions. After forcing the driver east to First Ave., Bailey ordered Dale to pass over all his money. A passing policeman, who noted the queer behavior of the cab, made the arrest

Taxi drivers must run their own risks against hold-ups, accidents and other trials of their trade. They are held up most frequently, it is charged, not only by the professional gunmen, but by Tammany police, who take their "rake-off" for permitting the drivers to operate. Under a recent ruling of Tammany Compensation Commissioner Lane, drivers are not entitled to compensation for accidents and injuries like other workers.

CAROLINA MILLS DOMINATED BY DUKE MONEY

Bosses Organize To Fight Workers

By ESTHER LOWELL
(Federated Press)

GREENSBORO, N. C., July 8.—Big financial interests dominate the North Carolina Cotton Manufacturers Association, their choice of officers for the coming year plainly shows. The annual convention met at King Cotton Hotel, Greensboro, with about 200 executives attending from the state's main mills. All of North Carolina's 500 mills are anti-union. Most are no longer independent units but are linked into chains by common ownership.

Duke money, in Duke power which supplies many Carolina textile mills with electric current, registers heavily in the cotton manufacturers association. Duke money is still in the tobacco trust companies once led by J. B. Duke. It is allied with the Mellons in power and American Aluminum and is in banking and other enterprises, north and south.

Duke money controls Piedmont & Northern Railway, in which many of the textile association executives are directors. First Vice-President J. H. Separk, of a string of Gastonia yarn mills, is one. C. A. Cannon, of the huge Cannon Mills group, is another. Cannon interests are putting a mill in Badin, N. C., the American Aluminum town, in response to an ad for an industry to use surplus wives and daughters of aluminum workers. B. B. Gossett, of Chadwick-Hoskins' many mills, is a cotton association executive and rail director.

However disorganized their workers are, North Carolina mill men are well organized. Their association has its active tax committee for getting more lenient laws for mills. Bernard Cone, of Greensboro's biggest mills, is chairman. He and his brothers started as southern mill owners from Baltimore commission merchants and are now in control of many Carolina plants. The mill men have permanent committeemen for joint buying of cheap southern coal and for handling more effectively their traffic needs with the railroads.

North Carolina, with more than 6,000,000 spindles, had nearly all working in May and actually more operating than Massachusetts, which has more than 9,000,000 spindles in place. The southern state had an average of nearly three times the spindle hours of the Bay state, which limits women's work to 48 hours, vs. North Carolina's 60, and bans their night work. Carolina's wages are at least a third lower, also.

New uses for cotton was the convention theme. Ernest Morse, of the Cotton Textile Institute, and William Carmen, Jr., of the federal department of commerce, gave the main addresses. C. G. Hill, retiring president, reiterated the old theme that the mill men are imbued with the brotherhood of man spirit in relations with their workers. This was the only reference to the folks who make goods and profits for their employers with 11 and 12-hour day and night shifts and wages averaging little more than $2 a day.

ANOTHER PLAN TO CHAIN INDIA

Sir Ganesh Singh, England's minister to the Bihar and Orissa government of India, has recently sent a plan to Sir John Simon, the head of the (British labor-sponsored) Simon legation, which was boycotted by the Indians in spite of the attempted explanation by the laborites, suggesting another plan of "self-government." The Singh plan is looked upon by Indian publications as an attempt to save the face of the Simon commission and to foist a "self-government" on India that would help to hide the reality of British domination.

ARREST WAITERS FOR PICKETING

The arrest of two picket strikers Saturday marked the opening of the second week of the strike in the Trufood Vegetarian Restaurants Inc., located at 153 W. 44th St., 110 W. 40th St. and 524 Seventh Ave. Abe Auerbach and Alex Sagy, the framed pickets, were arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct made by the bosses. Both Auerbach and Sagy were given suspended sentences.

Besides arresting the two pickets the bosses have placed a sign in the window stating that workers in their restaurants are not on strike that the conditions of the workers are good and that the strike has merely been declared because the union officials have brow-beaten the workers into the strike for the benefit of the former alone.

These statements are denied by strikers. Women workers work from 55-60 hours per week receiving not more than $25-$30 per week wages. The waiters work thirteen hours a day and receive slightly higher wages.

OHIO MINE WOMEN TO STAND TRIAL

ST CLAIRSVILLE, O., July 8.—Mrs. Janet Guynn and Mrs. Mary Barto, two leaders of the 51 women pickets who were herded into the Belmont County jail at St. Clairsville, Ohio., on April 21 must stand trial in September on charges of "riotous assemblage." The Civil Liberties Union has asked an investigation of their cases by its Pittsburgh representatives, with a view to aiding in their defense.

Tricked into entering the prison when they marched there in protest against the imprisonment of their striking menfolk, the 51 women were held for 72 hours in packed vermin-infested quarters, where four cots furnished the only sleeping accommodations. Nursing mothers in the group were not allowed to have their babies brought to them until the second day, even though fathers carried them to the prison gates and begged admission.

The other 49 women, who were allowed to sign bonds for their own release, were told by County Prosecutor Paul Waddell that a special session of the grand jury would be called to press indictments against them if they continued active in the strike, but that they would not be molested "if they behaved."

JUDGE DOURAS IS PART OF BOSSES' TERROR MACHINE

Union Will Continue Bathgate Strike

Despite the co-operation of the police, gangsters, Judge Douras, of the local magistrates court, and numerous injunctions, the owners of a group of retail fruit-stores on Bathgate Ave., between Claremont Parkway and 174th St., have not succeeded in breaking the strike of the fruit store clerks which began April 9.

Hired thugs have repeatedly made murderous assaults on the picketing strikers. Magistrate Douras is pursuing a deliberate policy of mulcting heavy fines from the pickets after they are brought into court, still bearing the marks of the gangsters' blackjacks and lead pipes.

Despite the protests of the union attorneys, the city authorities refuse to permit the usual procedure of different judges rotating in the magistrates court. Douras has been kept here so as to serve the same purpose as the underworld character—to terrorize the pickets.

Defying the wholesale terror, the fruit clerks union declares its readiness to expend all its energies in continuing the strike here.

Since the calling of the general strike the union has succeeded in forcing over 100 employers to agree to union conditions on a signed contract. Only the present market and one other firm still remains out on strike.

This firm is also controlled by the group of bosses in the Bathgate Ave. market. The store of A. Taub, 933 Tremont Ave., was forced into bankruptcy by the strike of the fruit clerks in spite of a drastic anti-picketing injunction obtained by the owner. Now the store is owned by the Bathgate Ave. bosses and the former owner, Taub, works as foreman of a few scabs, receiving a weekly salary. A co-operative fruit and vegetable store across the street and operated by the strikers was an extremely potent weapon in the workers' hands. The strike, however, still continues.

On Bathgate Ave. only two stores have signed with the union. They are at 1610 and 1688 Bathgate Ave.

☭ ☒ WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY

For the Workers! For the Party of the Class Struggle! Against the Capitalists!

On With the Miners' Struggle!

The coal operators and their agents, the officials of the Lewis machine of the United Mine Workers, have pursued a well-calculated policy of "rationalization" in the industry—ruthless, determined and yet—unsuccessful.

Two main objectives appear to have motivated the operators—the elimination of three hundred thousand miners which under the new conditions of internal and foreign competition have become a "surplus," and secondly the elimination of the less profitable mines which cannot be brought under the regime of the new mechanization in the industry, a process which, of course, is directly connected with the first aim.

In order to accomplish the elimination of a quarter of a million workers it was necessary to exterminate unionism in the industry. To accomplish the rationalization it became necessary to consolidate and reorganize scores of mine holdings by mergers, etc.

Thus far these processes have been largely limited to the bituminous fields. That the same developments are due to be attempted in the anthracite districts is clearly indicated by the sympathetic walkout of about 10,000 hard coal miners employed by the Lehigh Valley Coal and Navigation Company near Hazelton, Pa., after this company had deliberately violated its agreement with the union by wholesale discharges in its so-called "unprofitable" mines.

In the two main purposes of the operators, the fullest support of the Lewis machine officials has always been at their disposal. Because of this help, the operators have made much progress toward their objectives—and yet in the long run both objectives are due to prove unsuccessful.

In the first place, the confident hope of the operators that, with the destruction of the once powerful United Mine Workers organization, all unionism would disappear in the industry, has been proved futile.

The increasing number of spontaneous strikes prevalent even in the non-union fields point to an entirely opposite development.

The call by the progressive miners for a new union convention next September is an event of the greatest significance.

Also indicative of the inability of coal capitalism to solve its inner contradictions are the new factors arising in connection with the mechanization of the industry. The further this mechanization is pushed, the greater will be the struggles of the workers in the future. The level to which "rationalization" has brought the miners' standards is in fact a starvation level.

The coal industry is, par excellence, the one in which capitalism is training its own grave diggers.

The further attempts by the coal operators to "rationalize" the industry at the expense of the working class will meet with such resistance as will make even the present record struggles in the mine districts appear tame by comparison. The response of the coal diggers must be the concentration of all their forces and energies towards mobilizing for the September convention which like the April 1 Pittsburgh conference will mark a milestone in their struggles toward freedom.

Not "The Same As"

"The Arbitrator," an obscure, weak and watery monthly "digest," in supporting the Reverend Norman Thomas for president, goes out of its way to slander us. It says:

> "The Communist platform is the same as the socialist, with the added clause demanding the overthrow of the existing social order."

It is true that the Workers (Communist) Party demands the overthrow of the existing social order, as did Marx, Engels and all others having any claims on the loyalty of the working class. It is also true that the Reverend Thomas' "socialist" party renounces Marx, does not want to overthrow the capitalist social order but defends it. But the blithering idiot who wrote that the Communist platform is the same as the socialist party's platform, if he is honest, needs quick service from Bellevue.

The Communist platform not only calls for the overthrow of the existing capitalist social order, but also calls for militant struggle for the every-day demands of the workers and exploited farmers. The socialist party deleted from its platform all reference to the class struggle; the socialist party is opposed to the workers' engaging in the class struggle because that party has lost all working class character and wishes to preserve the existing capitalist social order, which it defends as "democratic."

The socialist party is in reality a party of capitalism; the Communist Party is the party of the working class and consequently of the working class revolution.

The two don't mix. The Communist platform is not "the same as"—in any respect.

"Only" $3,000,000

It is reported along the Rialto that thru some sort of telepathic arrangement the democrat and republican parties have set $3,000,000 as the limit of their expenditures in the election campaign.

$3,000,000 each!

"What kind of a beggarly campaign is this going to be?" ask the horde of willing "workers" in one voice and with bated breadth. This sum could not purchase enough votes to elect dog-catchers for the state of Rhode Island, not to speak of bringing the unpurchasable gangsters of New York, Pennsylvania, and Illinois to the polls to cast their bullets for their most generous favorites.

We saw this in the papers, as Hennessy might say to Dooley. We also read that individual contributions would be limited to $20,000.

This information brought tears from the eyes of Mr. William F. Kenny, New York contractor and Al's favorite pal. Kenny is said to be willing to back Al to the tune of millions, and "Bill" Todd, the millionaire ship-builder, is also reported ready to throw millions of his boodle into Al's campaign chest.

But all this is to laugh with a scornful and skeptical chuckle. Back of the headlines and the text of the story we can see Al putting on a super grin and tossing his brown derby in the air and 'Erbert 'Oover developing laugh wrinkles around his chin.

In other words, this is the bunk. Anybody who would believe this is a fit candidate for the Elks.

The capitalist parties will spend more money in this campaign than ever before. Many millionaires and plutocrats believe there is a chance of electing Smith, and they will plunge their millions on him.

The coterie of capitalist brigands that use the G. O. P. as a base of operations will defend their positions and their graft with their gold cohorts. It will be a prosperous campaign for the hangers-on and the touts of the two parties.

The Workers (Communist) Party is not afflicted with the scruples that seem to weigh so heavily on the scarred consciences of Wall Street's two parties. The Workers (Communist) Party wants a $100,000 campaign fund and does not care who knows it. In fact, it wants the whole world and the working-class housewives to know it.

The Workers (Communist) Party would ask for a $3,000,000 campaign fund, if it only knew how to get it from the working class. But the workers are at the short end of the golden flood, and are lucky if they can spare a few dollars after supplying the necessities of life for their families. So $100,000 is all the Communist Party asks for its election campaign.

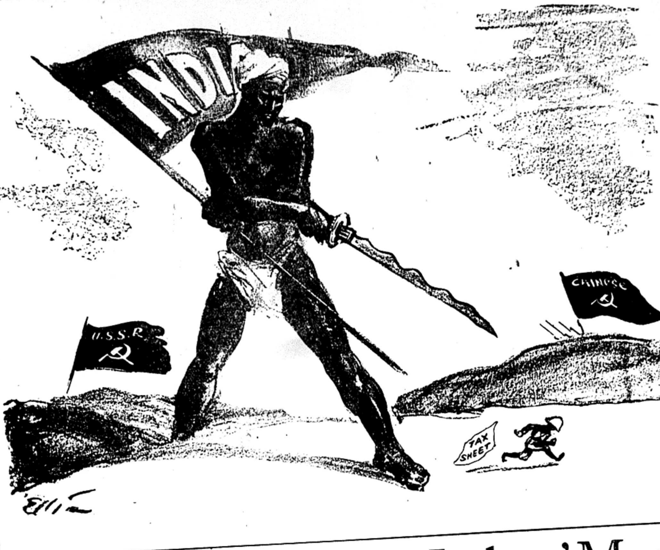
The Workers (Communist) Party will not purchase votes; neither will it promise federal and state jobs to its active election workers. With the $100,000 it expects to raise in this campaign it will flood the country with Communist literature, send out hundreds of speakers, and through its propaganda bring thousands of new members into the Party.

In this election campaign of 1928, the greatest campaign to mobilize the working class ever undertaken by the Workers (Communist) Party, finances are of extreme importance. The elections offer a rare opportunity to get the Communist message to the workers and exploited farmers and to build the Party. A strong Communist Party is the best guarantee for a strong, fighting, virile labor movement. When contributing to the $100,000 Communist Party Election Campaign Fund, you are striking a blow in behalf of the striking miners of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, and West Virginia, and for the textile strikers of New Bedford; you are protesting effectively against the unholy war of Wall Street against the people of Nicaragua; you are striking a blow at wage cuts, injunctions, and the many other evils that the capitalist government visits on the workers, and you are driving a nail into the coffin of American imperialism.

Every Communist and Communist sympathizer is expected to do his duty in raising the $100,000 campaign fund.

"IT'S ABOUT MY TURN"

By Fred Ellis



Told You So

There is a revolt in the ranks of the "democracy," as democratic leaders are in the habit of referring to the conglomeration of conflicting aberrations that struggle inside the party of Jefferson, Al Smith and Tom Heflin. The revolt may not amount to much. It is led by the unterrified women of the South, who may be expected in the long run to accept a trip around the world at the expense of Tammany Hall in return for the internment of their religious and spiritual scruples.

Mrs. Clem Shaver, wife of the fellow who contributed to the defeat of John W. Davis in 1924, did not see any good reason why she should not have a place in the sun, so she turned loose a blast against Al Smith and the perfidious males of Southern democracy who were lulled into a sense of spiritual security by the soft purring of the tiger at Houston. Mrs. Clem cannot be fooled so easily.

Mrs. Clem did not take note of the ominous silence of Al Smith and his Tammany braves when news of the lynching of a Negro at the gates of Houston shocked that part of the populace which is still capable of being shocked. Her main objection to Al is that he pays homage and tribute to the self-styled prisoner on the Tiber and that he backs the saloon industry rather than the prohibition industry. Between the Northern tiger and the Southern dromedary the working-class have no choice. Capitalist politicians, wet or dry, have the same attitude towards the workers. They believe that they were intended by nature for exploitation.

An international speculator, reputed to be the richest man in the world, committed suicide by walking out of an airplane that was crossing the English channel at a height of 4,000 feet. The result—a flurry on the stock exchanges of the world and much publicity in the press. The wheels of industry revolved as usual: the work of the world went on just the same. This "genius," who made most of his fortune by speculating and selling material to the warring nations during the great carnage, is less of a loss to the industrial world than a street car conductor. If all the multimillionaires in the world simultaneously conceived and executed the idea of bumping themselves off they would not cause as much social inconvenience as a housekeeper who would elope without warning with her favorite roomer.

Now that Calvin Collidge chooses to fish instead of to run for President it does not matter so much what kind of bait he uses as it did last year when he sojourned in the Black Hills of North Dakota. That Cal is running for something is certain. Perhaps for a vice-presidency of one of Harry Sinclair's oil companies. Or the chairmanship of the U. S. Steel Trust. Or the editorship of the Ladies' Home Journal. Cal is fishing, and he took along a battery of photographers. He is pictured with six trout and in another scene he is shown cutting a cake. Verily, indeed, a good provider and a handy fellow around the house.

A United Press dispatch from Moscow advises us that the freedom of criticism enjoyed by the press in the Soviet Union has fooled many foreign capitalist correspondents in that country into believing that the government was confronted with so many serious problems that its fall was imminent. The Soviet press hammers away at bureaucracy, inefficiency and dishonesty wherever found with a vigor that would be regarded as lese majeste in most European countries and in some would certainly mean indictments and jail sentences.

There is no country in the world where the masses enjoy more freedom of expression. When the enemies of Communism rage against censorship in the Soviet Union they have in mind the restrictions that are imposed on the Nepmen, who are permitted to operate until socialist economy is sufficiently developed to enable the workers and peasants to dump them. The Soviet press criticizes administrative weaknesses and is encouraged to do so by the Soviet government and the Communist Party. Fancy the Republican Party encouraging the capitalist press to lay down a propaganda barrage against Teapot Dome or Al Smith insisting that the New York Times flay Tammany Hall for its connection with the underworld, garbage and sewers.

Politicians' 'Farmer-Labor' Meet

By JACK STACHEL.

A number of politicians of the West and Mid-West have issued a call for a "Farmer-Labor" Convention to nominate candidates for president and vice president, to be held in the city of Chicago on July 10th.

Among the names mentioned as possibilities for presidential candidate, the most outstanding ones are Senator Norris of Nebraska and ex-Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania.

Both of these politicians have already informed the two capitalist parties that they will not form a third party and that they will not be candidates on any such party. Senator Norris stated that he is of the opinion that although the platforms of both the republican and democratic parties are not satisfactory for him, nothing can be done at the present time.

It is quite impossible that in this situation, this convention will not even be held, for in the very beginning it represents nothing more than a few politicians who are trying to utilize the farmer-labor sentiment for the purpose of bargaining with the capitalist parties for their own benefit and for the benefit of the interests of well-to-do farmers and independent capitalists that they represent.

At the same time it is important for us to bear in mind what these politicians represent and what their main objective is.

Parties and Classes.

The parties of any significance that will enter into the present election campaign are the two capitalist parties, the republican and democratic parties, the socialist party and the Workers (Communist) Party. As for the other parties, such as the socialist labor, prohibition, etc., they are of no importance in this campaign.

The republican and democratic parties—both are the parties of big business, both are the parties of the bankers and the large industrial interests, both are the enemies of the workers and poor farmers. Our party in its platform states:

> "There are no real political differences between the two big political parties. Both are parties of capitalism; both are the enemies of the working class. The very existence of the two-party system is the most reactionary factory in American politics. It is one of the factors which are responsible for the lack of an independent mass political party of the working class. Both capitalist parties try to put up the semblance of being defenders of the farmers, vying with each other in putting forward fake 'farm relief' measures. The 'struggle' between the republican and democratic parties is a staged fight, a mock struggle. There are no political issues between these two parties. On the question of tariff, prohibition, taxation, imperialist war, farm relief, League of Nations, and all other discussed political issues, there is much more division within each party than between the two parties."

The socialist party is a petty bourgeois party. It is a party of small business men, professionals, and retired radicals. The socialist party which was once a party of the workers, is today nothing more than the party of the petty bourgeoisie. It has demonstrated both in its platform and its activity that it is an enemy of the working class and of the poor farmers. The platform of our Party adopted at the last nominating convention had the following to say on the socialist party:

"The socialist party of today is for the protection of capitalist law and order, is against revolution, is against the working class government of Soviet Russia, and supports every measure of the A. F. of L. bureaucracy for class collaboration. The socialist party has transformed its party organization from a membership organization into a ward organization of voters. It has shifted its class basis from a working class entirely and definitely to the lower middle class. The last national convention of the socialist party in April, 1928, went so far as to drop the class struggle pledge that applicants for membership had to sign in the past."

The socialist party is today in active opposition to a labor party. It stands for a third party, that is a petty-bourgeois party, a capitalist party, and it claims that it is the third party of the United States. It openly boasts that its ambition is to inherit the traditions of the La Follette movement of 1924.

The Workers (Communist) Party is the only party of class struggle in the United States. It is the deadly enemy of class-collaboration, because it is a deadly enemy of capitalism. The Workers (Communist) Party is the champion of the interests of all the working class and the working farmers. It is the advocate of the most exploited sections of the working class, the unskilled workers. It is the champion of the interests of the oppressed Negro race, both as a race and as a section of the working class. It is the organizer of the struggle against war and imperialism. It is because it fights for the interests of the workers, because it fights for the organization of the unorganized, because it fights against the bureaucracy, because it champions the interests of all the oppressed.

It is for this very reason that all the forces of capitalism, of the bureaucracy of the A. F. of L., of the leaders of the socialist party, have mobilized against the Communists. The republicans, the democrats, the socialists, the labor bureaucrats have one common platform as far as its fight against Communism is concerned.

The group of so-called insurgents, the Borahs, the Norrises, the La Follette movement which betrayed the interests of the working class and the working farmers and helped to lead into peaceful channels the discontent of the masses existing at that time. At the present time most of these politicians are already actively in the camps of the republican and democratic parties, championing the nominations of Hoover and Smith and the platforms of oppression against the masses adopted at both Kansas City and Houston.

These politicians are not even ready to support a third party, a bourgeois party, not to speak of a party that champions the interests of the exploited masses. This they cannot do because their class interests are different than the interests of the workers and poor farmers. Their only role is to fight against the interests of these masses, and the special role of the so-called insurgents which makes them even more dangerous in a sense than the old guard politicians of the capitalist parties, is that they pose as friends of the people, and in this way try to lead the discontent of the workers away from revolutionary struggle and lead them back into the capitalist parties.

The Chicago Convention.

The Chicago convention can have only one object, that is to liquidate whatever genuine labor party sentiment there still exists in the various localities and lead it into the camp of the old parties. Many of those who sponsor the convention in Chicago have already expressed themselves toward the indorsement of Tammany Smith. There is no doubt that what they desire is to endorse Smith at the Chicago convention and create the impression that the farmer-labor movement has been liquidated and is to be found in the Tammany camp.

Not only will they not form a farmer-labor party with a national ticket, at Chicago, but even a third party will not be formed. The labor bureaucrats of the A. F. of L. and the railroad brotherhoods who in 1924 supported La Follette, are today to be found in the camps of Hoover and Smith. They are not willing even to support a third party.

The Workers (Communist) Party alone carries on a fight to unite the workers of this country through their organization into a labor party. The Workers (Communist) Party has issued the slogan to the workers, "Let your union affiliate with the Labor Party and you join the Workers (Communist) Party." This slogan sums up the position of the Workers (Communist) Party. The Workers (Communist) Party stands for a labor party not because a labor party will solve the tremendous problems facing the American working class and will abolish exploitation and oppression, but because such a party will be taking the first step on the part of the American working class to break with the old capitalist parties.

The Workers (Communist) Party supports the formation of those labor parties that are based on trade unions and other organizations of the working class. It is willing to participate in the formation of such labor parties because it considers this the first decisive step towards independent political action by the working class, the first step of the workers to break away from the parties of the bosses.

At the same time, the Communist Party considers it its duty to tell the workers frankly that a labor party has its limitations and that it will not be able to lead the workers in their final struggle for their emancipation. Only a Communist Party can do this. Only under the leadership of the Communist Party can the American working class emancipate itself from the yoke of capitalist exploitation and oppression.

Support Workers (Communist) Party.

In the present election campaign, all those who stand for a genuine labor party based on the class struggle, have only one choice, and that is to support the candidates of the Workers (Communist) Party and to support the demands put forward by our Party for the struggle against capitalism. The platform put forward by the Workers (Communist) Party in connection with the building of a labor party states:

> "The Workers (Communist) Party stands for the independent political action of the working class; the formation of a labor party on a national, state, and local scale. A genuine labor party must be based on the trade unions and other labor organizations, on factory, mill, and mine committees of the unorganized workers. A genuine labor party must exclude all politicians of big and small business. It must include as a true federated body all sections of the working class, without any discrimination, which will accept the general principles of the class struggle and will be willing to fight for the interests of the workers and exploited farmers."

The Chicago convention is in the interests of the capitalists, for the liquidation of any genuine labor party sentiment existing.

The workers, therefore, must see clearly that the Chicago convention called by these politicians who have not yet openly announced that they are part and parcel of the two capitalist parties in the present election campaign, is nothing more than an order to lead those elements of the workers and exploited farmers who are breaking away from the capitalist back into the republican and democratic parties. In this case, most likely, these politicians gathered in Chicago will try to lead this sentiment into the Smith camp.

In this connection our Party and its representatives everywhere will carry on a struggle to expose these elements as the enemies of the working class, as the enemies of the interests of the exploited farmers. Our Party will expose them as the agents of capitalism, as the agents of the capitalist parties.

The Workers (Communist) Party calls upon all those who really stand for a labor party, based on the class struggle, to support the only workers' party in the present elections, the Workers (Communist) Party, the Party of undying opposition to capitalism and capitalist rule.

HANDOUTS

Policeman John Keegan hit Nathan Kaplan, a worker, in the mouth at the Wall Street demonstration. Keegan's fist collided with the worker's teeth. Keegan declared later in court that Kaplan had bitten him. Be reasonable! Even a poor worker can find something better to eat than New York policemen.

Miss Earhart is terribly embarrassed over the reception she is getting. She persists she merely made the airplane flight over the Atlantic Ocean to get to London quickly to do some shopping.

A good picture of the state of education in American capitalist colleges is painted in the following words of Hayward Kendall in a letter to President Livingston Farrand of Cornell:

"My friends speak of a heritage I have gotten from Cornell University. The only legacy I am certain I received from that institution of learning was the licker habit. It took me years to get over it. And, quite frankly, I could have acquired the same habit in two years at Harvard, while it took me four at Cornell."

GEMS OF LEARNING.

Al Smith: "I have listened to a great deal of public and very caustic criticism of Tammany and I asked myself the question, 'How can anything live in this country 139 years that is not all right?'" How about ring worm?

Rev. Dr. Shailer Mathews, Dean of the Divinity School of the University of Chicago: "You can't make religion absolutely intellectual and make it effective. We can't know what it all means." Nor what it's all about.

Jacob Nosovitsky, labor spy: "For thirty-eight years I have been insane. I have been living in a fog but not now. At last I understand what you were to me. A fool there was." No worker can object to this frank appraisal.

Omaha World Herald, concerning Al Smith: "He will lead with all the fervor of Bryan, all the grim determination of a Jackson, into the thick of such desperate and bloody battle as they have not dreamed of since Heck was a pup." He'll lead a fight all right. For the last ounce of energy in the American working class.

20,000 MILL STRIKERS DEMONSTRATE BEFORE NEW BEDFORD PLANTS

Not a Single Operative Responds to Plea to Return to Silent Looms

Bosses, Desperate, Order Militia to Mill Gates In Hope to Crush Strike

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., July 9.—Twenty thousand striking textile workers hurled defiance at the mill barons' threat of violence by heavily armed troops and police, and turned out yesterday to stage one of the most enormous demonstrations of picketing yet recorded. At the same time they went on record to a man as spurning contemptuously the plea of the owners of the 56 mills that they leave the ranks of the strikers and return to operate the silent looms.

Long Threatened.

Since the first day of the strike, over twelve weeks ago, when 70,000 looms were silenced by the unanimous walkout, the manufacturers have always tried to explain away their inability to begin operations in even one plant by declaring that they did not want to open.

It was only until about two weeks ago, after the textile employers had secretly arranged for the assistance of the city and state military and police apparatus, that they published the announcement that they had finally "decided to reopen the mills" with the ten per cent cut still effective.

The New Bedford Textile Workers Union of the Textile Mills Committee readily accepted this challenge and welcomed the test of strength, responding immediately, however, with calls for preliminary mass demonstrations. These included parades and larger picket lines. The work of arousing the strikers spirit to meet the bosses' challenge was systematically sabotaged by the Textile Council of the United Textile Workers Union to the point of an open endorsement of the use of mounted police yesterday by its chief official, William E. G. Batty.

Police Terror

In an attempt to dampen the strike morale, the bosses launched an immediate police terror of clubbings, the break up of a parade by violence and the jailing of the strike leaders, Beal and Murdoch. The terror culminated in the mobilization of several companies of militia to inform the striking textile workers that they would be supplied with sufficient protection if they chose to enter the mills.

Today, however, not a single worker walked into any of the mills. This is frankly admitted not only in the local press, but even in the textile bosses' trade journals.

The manufacturers' association this morning held a special meeting and issued an announcement that the mills would be kept open "to give the strikers a chance to return."

This the Textile Mills Committee leaders characterized as a "consolation statement."

Picketing Only Effective Weapon

The masses assembled today in the mill districts were too overwhelming in numbers for an attack to be launched on the picket lines. The continued presence of the militia means but one thing, strike leaders say. It is an open threat of breaking the strike with violence. The Textile Mills Committee heads declare that they intend to begin the immediate mobilization of many more thousands for regular picket duty than have responded even heretofore.

WALL ST. SEWS UP NICARAGUA FOR MONCADA

Rules 2 Conservatives On Old Parties

WASHINGTON, July 9.—Presidential candidates of the two conservative factions in Nicaragua have been ruled off the November ticket by the National Board of Elections, Minister Eberhardt informed the U. S. state department today.

Dr. Carlos Cuadro Pasos, former foreign minister, is the candidate of the "moderate" conservatives led by President Diaz, Wall Street puppet, and Vincent Raphacioli, wealthy coffee planter is the candidate of the "extreme" conservatives. Raphacioli has the support of former president Emiliano Chamorro.

While the official explanation for the exclusion states that "the board previously decided that neither faction had established the right to be recognized as representing the party to the exclusion of the other, it has been pointed out that the actual basis for the order is found in the fact that neither candidate is at present needed in order to maintain Wall Street rule in Nicaragua. With the complete subservience of Gen. Moncada, renegade liberal, to the aims of American imperialism, the other candidates have found that their services are no longer required.

FINANCIER DEAD, FAMILY INSISTS

All Anxious to Get Share of Fortune

BRUSSELS, July 9.—In consequence of the various rumors concerning Alfred Lowenstein's death, his family today issued a statement declaring that there was no doubt that he was dead and that all evidence proved that he had entered his plane at Croyden and was not in it when it landed, and that all evidence showed that his death was due to an accident.

Acting on legal advice, the family summoned all who were in the plane from which the financier is believed to have fallen to come to Brussels and give depositions in an effort to establish legal evidence of his death.

Settlement of the estate gives promise of becoming a matter of almost unprecedented entanglement because of the vast interests involved and the mysterious manner of Lowenstein's disappearance. Even if legal evidence of the death is established, serious difficulties are liable to arise if the body remains undiscovered, it is said, and it may be ten or even thirty years before the whole question of inheritance can be settled.

MINER IS KILLED IN FALL OF COAL

POTTSVILLE, Pa., July 9. — William Ochs, 42, was killed today when he was caught under a fall of coal at Bear Gap colliery, at Tremont. Ochs is survived by a widow and seven small children. The Bear Gap is one of the large group of contractor-infested mines in this region.

SEARCH SEA FOR CHILIAN VICTIMS

SANTIAGO, Chile, July 9 (UP) —The search at sea for possible survivors of the Chilean army transport Angamos, destroyed on the rocks Saturday morning with the loss of nearly 300 lives, was held up today by terrific gales which forced ships to put out to sea to ride out the storm.

Two additional survivors were found on the beach at Punta Chimpei today—two young men who had been badly bruised, were suffering from exhaustion and the rigors of the severe winter weather.

Numerous corpses were found strewn along the rocky shore, and it was apparent some of them had died after reaching land, where they lay exhausted and exposed to the intense cold. Only six persons are known to have survived of the 295 or more aboard the vessel.

BOMB EXPLOSION IN MOSCOW, IS BERLIN REPORT

Plot Laid to Czarist Conspirators

BERLIN, July 9. — Reports reached here today of a bomb explosion which injured several persons and partially destroyed the building of the Gaypayoo, the Soviet political police, in the Lublianski Square, Moscow. The explosion was the work of monarchist plotters.

Fire engines and ambulances were rushed to the building, and a cordon of police and soldiers was placed around the square, it was reported.

The most recent bomb explosion in Moscow follows several traced to conspiracies organized by czarist emigres getting financial aid from Great Britain. Last fall bombs were set off at the office of the Gaypayoo and at the Communist Club in Leningrad. Several workers were killed and a large number injured at that time.

MANY FEATURES IN LABOR UNITY

July Number the Best on Record

Thomas Myerscough, provisional secretary of the National Conference of newly elected officials in the districts of the United Mine Workers and representatives of the unorganized, tells in July Labor Unity, now ready for sale, just why the historic call for the formation of a new miners' union was issued by that conference.

Plain Story

In a plain spoken article he relates the history of the fight to instill democracy into the United Mine Workers of America and break the strangling death grip of the corrupt Lewis machine. The miners wanted to control and save their union, and Lewis forbade them. He wanted to destroy it. By use of gang tactics, rotten bourough system and general vote stealing, open betrayal to the employers, he has about succeeded. Myerscough tells the workers how the miners can still have a fighting union.

Other articles deal with the recent amalgamation conference of railroad workers, the plans to organize the marine transport workers, the New Bedford situation at present, the British and Chinese unions, the Fourth Conference of the Red International of Labor Unions (by Jack Johnstone, chairman of the American delegation there), working women, miners' relief and other topics. Henry George Weiss has another of his pointed short stories. There are many illustrations.

Labor Unity is the organ of the Trade Union Educational League, 2 West 15th St., New York City. It sells for $2 a year, or 20 cents a copy.

Coal Worker Loses All Fingers of Right Hand

Frank Holman, 25 years old, a coal loader, of 398 Tenth Ave., lost all five fingers of his right hand yesterday when it was caught in the loader as he was working at Pier 63, at the foot of 25th St., North River.

20,000 Textile Pickets Massed in New Bedford

Not a single worker was trapped by the manouever of the New Bedford textile barons in their attempt to re-open the mills yesterday. Over 20,000 pickets jammed the entrances to the 56 mills which have been shut since the strike first began over 12 weeks ago. Photo was taken after the strike had been in progress several weeks. Since that time picketing has increased tremendously.

APPEAL FOR AID FOR CHINESE WORKERS

An appeal on behalf of the Chinese Trade Unions, initiated by the Red International of Labor Unions and supported by the National Executive Committee of the American Trade Union Educational League has been sent out with a call to all workers of the United States to rally to the support of the Chinese masses.

The Trade Union Educational League which represents the class conscious workers of the United States has announced that it will set aside the last two weeks of this month for plans in support of the Chinese workers.

Meetings, conferences, house-to-house collections, shop collections, tag days, etc. will be among the methods to raise financial support.

The appeals follows:

To All Workers and Workers' Organizations:

The Chinese trade unions need our help. The Chinese trade unions are appealing to us at this grave hour.

The Chinese workers are the most exploited in the world. The weekly wage of the best paid worker in the building trades does not exceed $3.00. The weekly wage of a painter is hardly above $3.00. Common labor gets from $1.00 to $1.50 a week. The labor day is seldom shorter than 12 hours—often longer. Child labor is the rule. No age limit is set. No laws to protect the workers are in existence. The workers must protect themselves and you must assist them or your own standards will be lowered.

Many Enemies.

The Chinese trade unions must carry on in the face of the Chinese and foreign manufacturers and the Chinese militarists and foreign imperialist powers who protect with an iron hand the foreign and Chinese exploiters in China. There were times in the last few years when the workers, rising against their intolerable situation were helping the native businessmen to wrest from the foreign invaders the extraordinary privileges they had secured for themselves at the bayonet's point. At the same time the workers were also improving their own conditions. But the native capitalists, afraid of the growing strength of the working class, decided rather to make peace with the foreign imperialists than to make concessions to the workers. Thus the Nationalist movement, at first progressive and aggressive, surrendered to the United States. Japanese, British, French and Italian diplomats and navies, and together they try to crush the working class.

Courageous Struggle.

The workers have not lost courage. They continue the revolutionary struggle in alliance with the exploited peasants. They are consolidating their forces. They continue vigorously the work of organization. They continue the struggle for economic demands. They do so under most trying conditions. Labor unions are persecuted, labor representatives are seized both by the foreign imperialist forces and by the native exploiters—and "seizing" in China means executing without much ado. Heads of workers are being chopped off without even a semblance of trial. Twenty-five thousand workers have been killed this year.

Unions Persist.

Still, the labor unions have become an established fact. The Chinese workers are carrying on a courageous and determined fight for their own lives and the lives of their families. They need money and the

GREEK CHAMBER IS DISSOLVED

Act in Accordance with Venizelos Demand

ATHENS, Greece, July 9. — The chamber of deputies was dissolved today in accordance with the demand of the newly appointed premier Venizelos, who was called into power by the president after the great strike of the tobacco workers and soldiers in Greece. Venizelos, called the "strong man of Greece" was premier until several years ago, and his iron rule was again summoned when Greece was threatened with revolution at the time of the strike.

The American Tobacco Company, which controls the factories where the rotten conditions forced the workers to strike, is said to have played a big hand in the re-instalation of the imperialist and labor-hating Venizelos.

At present, reports from Greece state that the president, who officially called Venizelos back to the premiership, and the premier, are clashing on the question which Venizelos proposed, embodying a change in the voting system.

CHICAGO PICNIC TO BE FEATURE

Great Event Planned For Miners' Relief

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

CHICAGO, Ill., July 9.—In aid of the striking miners of Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia, now out for fifteen months and still battling the mine owners for the right to live, a huge picnic at one of Chicago's largest amusement parks will be staged on Saturday, July 14.

10,000 Attendance

Riverview Park, at Belmont and Western Ave., will be the scene of the gathering of at least ten thousand Chicago workers expected to turn out in support of the miners. The picnic will go on at 12 noon Saturday and end up at one o'clock after midnight.

Mother Bloor, veteran of many labor struggles and an honary member of the United Mine Workers of America, will address the afternoon meeting. Races, games and refreshments will enliven the afternoon during which attendants at the picnic will be entitled to all the numerous concessions of Riverview Park.

12-Piece Band

In the evening, a twelve-piece band, one of the best in the city, will provide music for a monster dance. The frolic will end an hour after midnight. Steve Rubicki and Hans Peterson, old-timers at staging huge and lively outings, are in charge of the arrangements for the picnic.

PLAN TAG DAYS FOR COMMUNIST ELECTION DRIVE

Funds Urged For Fight Off Ballot

"Success in presidential election campaigns has always been on the side of the heaviest campaign chests, and the Workers (Communist) Party does not expect that the workers will ever buy their way into the White House or knock the shackles of capitalism from their limbs at the ballot box. But it takes money to educate the masses, to agitate them against the system that holds them in slavery, and to organize them for the immediate struggles for better living conditions and for the ultimate overthrow of capitalism. An election campaign finds the workers in a listening mood, and presents a splendid opportunity to teach them the meaning of Communism and what they must do to free themselves from wage slavery." This was the statement made last night at the National Campaign headquarters of the Workers (Communist) Party in commenting on the appeal of the Central Executive Committee of the Party for a $100,000 Communist Party Election Campaign Fund.

The first stage in the financial drive is now over, and the work of raising the money has begun.

An election assessment stamp is being issued, and every Party member must purchase a 50 cent stamp This alone will bring in thousands of dollars.

Unions To Contribute.

Donations will be solicited from trade unions and other working class organizations, such as fraternal societies, cooperatives, women's councils, and thru donations from shop committees and individuals.

Communist Campaign Stamps are being issued to be sold to all organizations and individuals. The stamps carry the pictures of William Z. Foster and Benjamin Gitlow

JUGO-SLAV JAILS ARE HELL-HOLES

Rats in Food, Disease; Indescribable Tortures

JUGO SLAVIA, July 9.—The prison near the small town of Pojarevac is to receive the young Communists who were recently convicted in Belgrade. The prison of Pojarevac differs in no way from the other awful prison of Jugoslovakia and is called the Hell of Pojarevac. Political prisoners are treated as the worse kind of criminals and have no political rights The prison administration expropriates the sums that are supposed to be used for the prisoners and allows them to starve. No one is concerned about it, since this art of thievery of the state officials is a system in Jugoslavia.

The dirtiness of these prisons surpasses all description. Often the prisoners find cooked rats and mice in their food. One prisoner who once showed the director such a cooked mouse, was so mishandled that he lost consciousness.

There are no facilities for bathing in this prison. The cells are covered with human refuse and are never disinfected. Among the prisoners there are about forty syphilitics who were not accepted by other prisons. Tuberculosis runs rife

8 WORKERS JAILED IN FRAME-UP; MINOR IS BEATEN UP IN COURT

Eight Who Participated in Demonstration in Wall Street Are Jailed

Labor Defense Issues Statement Denouncing Trial as Example of Capitalist Justice

"You are doing the work of Morgan, your master, for contributions to Al Smith's campaign fund."

This was the accusation hurled at Magistrate Maurice H. Gottlieb by Robert Minor, editor of The DAILY WORKER and Workers (Communist) Party candidate for U. S. Senator, as he was dragged away by three policemen, roughly manhandled and slugged in the First District Criminal Court yesterday.

Minor together with nine others appeared for a hearing yesterday on a charge of disorderly conduct in connection with the anti-imperialist demonstration on July 3 which was attacked by police. The proceedings quickly took the form of an inquisition, with Magistrate Gottlieb usurping the powers of the prosecuting attorney in an obvious effort to railroad the workers to jail.

Demands Right to Speak

The climax was reached when Minor, just before sentence was passed on him, requested, through Jacques Buitenkant, defending attorney, representing the New York Section of the International Labor Defense, that he be allowed to address the court. This is one of the constitutional rights of all accused in a court of law. Magistrate Gottlieb summarily refused. When Minor protested, he was seized by three policemen and dragged to the side. Struggling with the preservers of "law and order," he shouted out his accusation showing the real forces behind the trial. One of the policemen swung his fist at Minor's face and gagged his mouth with his hand to prevent him from saying any more. Everybody in the audience arose and it seemed as if many of those in the audience were on the point of rushing to Minor's defense. The bluecoats dragged Minor from the courtroom when he flung back at the magistrate: "You're no judge; you're a prosecutor!" It summed up the entire proceedings of what was supposed to be a trial in a court of "justice." Magistrate Gottlieb looked grave and pounded his gavel. He offered not a word of censure of the brutal behavior of the police. He then proceeded to impose the sentences.

All Choose Jail

Minor, Rebecca Grecht, Workers Party candidate for assembly and election campaign manager of District 2, Harriet Silverman, secretary of the New York branch of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League, which arranged the demonstration; Emanuel George, a striking coal miner; and Robert Wolf, poet and novelist, were condemned to five days in the Tombs or $25 fine. Fanny Plotkin, Anna Bloch and Phil Frankfeld were given two days or $10 fine. The cases against Kate Gitlow and Sophie Melman were dismissed. All of the accused chose to serve their terms in jail.

Prior to this incident Magistrate Gottlieb, a former shyster lawyer who has a high standing with inside Tammany circles, had given an astonishing exhibition of "impartial" conducting of a trial by a presiding magistrate. When the trial started in the morning, he was comparatively mild and the machine did not seem to be functioning as smoothly as it should. Jacques Buitenkant, the attorney for the accused, was permitted to tie officer John Rochford, the first witness, into a knot of contradictions and inconsistencies.

Officer John Word, the second witness, unwittingly revealed the imperialistic psychology of the hundred percenter by saying that the accused had "demanded the withdrawal of American marines from Nicaragua and other possessions of the United States government."

Rev. J. Hall, the third witness, who was conducting a revival meeting in Wall Street at the time the demonstration took place, bowed and scraped before the magistrate. He declared he had not seen police slug any of the demonstrators and in general seemed to have seen only that which it is proper for a pious minister of the gospel to see.

After a recess of several hours the trial was resumed at 2:15 in the afternoon. It was at once evident that the machine had smoothed out all difficulties in the interim. The witnesses for the prosecution, all of whom were members of the police force, rattled off their testimony in glib fashion. Magistrate Gottlieb, who has acted as "arbitrator" in many labor disputes, took the case completely out of the hands of the prosecuting attorney, and used his authority as presiding magistrate to tie up the defending attorney hand and foot. Objection after objection was overruled and the magistrate kept up a constant heckling fire during Buitenkant's cross-examination of witnesses.

Sneers at "Foreigners"

During the cross-examination of Phil Frankfeld, district organizer of the Young Workers League, he injected an anti-foreign prejudice. "Where did you come from, other side?" he croaked. "I was born right here in the U. S. A." Frankfeld replied. The magistrate leaned back in his chair with a disappointed look. Later he remarked about the fact that "most of the accused seem to be of foreign extraction" and also stressed the fact that they were members of radical organizations.

The cases of five other workers arrested at the July 3 demonstration will be heard Thursday in the same court. One of these is Nathan Kaplan, who faces a charge of felonious assault. The case of Rose Plotkin, 13-year-old Young Pioneer, which was scheduled to come up this morning will probably be postponed.

I. L. D. Raps Frame-Up

Branding as a frame-up the sentencing to jail of eight workers who participated in an anti-imperialist demonstration in Wall St., July 3, the New York Section of the International Labor Defense, in a statement issued last night, denounces the entire proceedings as a vicious example of class justice and calls upon all class-conscious workers to support it in its fight to free the other arrested workers. The statement, signed by Rose Baron, secretary of the section, follows:

Judge Brazen

"In a trial in which the magistrate made no secret of his hatred for the accused and did everything in his power to railroad them to jail, eight workers have been sentenced to prison for the crime of taking part in a demonstration which demanded that Wall St. government loosen their bloody grip in Nicaragua and other colonial countries. Throughout the hearings Magistrate Maurice H. Gottlieb usurped the powers of the prosecuting attorney, heckled the accused and Jacques Buitenkant, the defending attorney, and aided the Tammany policemen in distorting evidence. He laid particular stress on the foreign extraction of some of the defendants and on their radical political opinions in a trial which revealed once more the hollowness and hypocrisy of the justice of the American capitalist class.

"The climax of the entire proceedings was reached when Robert Minor, editor of The DAILY WORKER and Workers (Commu-

EXPLOSION OF BOILER KILLS 6

Machines Not Properly Examined

CASSEL, Prussia, July 9. — Six workers were killed, three were injured beyond hope of recovery, and five were less severely injured today by a boiler explosion in the Hessian Gypsum Works at Altmorschen.

The boiler, which had only been put in commission this morning, blew up on account of excessive pressure. Workers claim that it had not been properly examined prior to its installation.

One of the victims was completely torn to pieces. The other five died on the way to the hospital, or shortly after they had arrived there, from the poisonous gas which they had inhaled when the explosion occurred.

ROXY BALLET TO FEATURE SATURDAY'S CONCERT

Theremin, Symphony Orchestra to Perform; Proceeds Go to The Daily Worker

The famous Roxy Ballet will be one of the chief features of the great concert and entertainment to be held next Saturday evening at Coney Island Stadium. This noted ballet will serve as a pleasant interlude in the musical program and will perform classical and modern dances in its own original style.

The Roxy Ballet is now arranging a special program for the concert that will be sure to be a revelation for the 25,000 workers that are expected to pack Coney Island Stadium. The other artists who will participate in this great proletarian musical event are also busy putting the finishing touches to their programs. Prof. Leo Theremin, the world-famous Soviet scientist, is certain to create a sensation when he draws the music of the "International" out of the air without the aid of a musical instrument by means of his latest discovery.

And Arnold Volpe is busy rehearsing orchestra of 50 picked musicians in a program that will include some of the best known selections in the symphonic repertoire.

The proceeds of this great concert will go to The DAILY WORKER Tickets should be purchased at once at the office of the "Daily," 26-28 Union Square, as they are in great demand.

The proceeds will help secure the position of The DAILY WORKER during the summer months and enable it to continue its struggle for the American working class.

"Big Guns" of Lewis Machine Meet with "Flop" as Miners Refuse to Respond

T STARTS AS NG HURLS LIE BOUT LEADERS

Fagan Shouted Down in Neffs, O.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 9.—Reports reaching the National Miners Convention Arrangements Committee from the mining fields show that the mass meetings called by the Lewis machine, despite the widest publicity and the bringing in of "big guns" as a special attraction, are a decided flop everywhere.

The mass meetings were arranged as part of the frenzied campaign and included terrorism, cutting off relief, breaking up of progressive meetings and conferences, which the reactionaries started following the issuance of the call for a new union by the rank and file.

A Fake "Liberal."

A mass meeting at Neffs, Ohio, on July 3rd, was the opening of their campaign in eastern Ohio. The convention of this sub-district held about the end of May, with 43 locals out of the 45 in existence officially represented, showed the miners in this section practically unanimous against the Lewis gang. The Neffs miners were curious to hear what the reactionaries had to say, with the result that the hall was packed to capacity, with no standing room left. Thomas Robison, vice-president of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor, was the first speaker. Knowing what he was up against, he steered clear of any "dangerous" subjects. No reference at all to the internal situation in the United Mine Workers of America and the revolt of the rank and file. He confined himself to an attack on the coal operators and the government, injunctions, use of police and state troopers against the miners, etc.

The fireworks started when Pat Fagan, of District 5, began to orate. The meeting had been going on quite peacefully, and Fagan made the mistake of assuming that he could get away with his "regular stuff." He opened an attack on the progressive forces, trying to peddle off his customary lies about Pat Toohey, Secretary of the Convention Arrangements Committee. The meeting was immediately in an uproar. "Shut up," "You're a rotten liar," "Down with the Lewis Gang," came from all over the hall. This continued for a few minutes then the bulk of the audience walked out of the meeting en masse.

Only about 70 individuals remained in the hall, including a few progressives, who stayed to see what would happen, and a truckful of "huskies," obviously drunk, who were brought in from the outside before the meeting opened. After a while, the few local reactionaries got into a wrangle about the "relief" distribution. It seems that some of them were getting only $3 or $4 a week while the more favored were getting $20 and more.

The mass meeting at McGovern Field, Washington County, Pa., held on Sunday, proved a similar failure for the machine. The advance publicity spoke of 10,000 miners that were going to attend it. But only about 200 miners showed up, at least 150 of them, progressives. The speakers, Robison, Phil Murray and Fagan, had nothing to say about the strike—and how the miners are going to win it. Most of their time they gave to boosting Al Smith and the democratic party. Again it was Fagan who started to attack the progressives, with the result that the bulk of the audience demonstratively left the meeting.

Same Story.

Similar reports come from other sections, showing that the mass of the miners are anxiously awaiting the national convention in September and the organization of a new progressive miners' union.

The Convention Arrangements Committee appeals to all workers to help in making the national convention a success and the building of a strong fighting miners' union. The miners have been on strike for over 15 months and are not in a position at this time to contribute the necessary funds for organization work, mass meetings, agitation, and to bring the delegates to the convention. The Arrangements Committee calls upon the workers in all industries to send donations to the Convention Arrangements Committee, Room 411, 119 Federal St., N. S., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Appeal For Aid For Chinese Workers Issued By Militants

feeling that workers all over the world are coming to their help.

To help the Chinese labor unions, the Trade Union Educational League, representing the class-conscious workers of the United States, has decided to set aside the last two weeks in July for action in favor of our Chinese brothers.

It will be an international action simultaneously undertaken in all countries at the advice of the Red International of Labor Unions (Profintern). The world proletariat and all friends of the labor movement must extend a brotherly hand to the Chinese proletariat.

Methods Used.

We appeal to all workers of the United States! Comrades and friends, rally to the support of the Chinese workers. Call meetings, organize conferences, make house-to-house collections, make shop collections, organize tag days, arrange affairs, create substantial sums for the Chinese trade unions. Make every worker understand the significance of the Chinese workers' struggle which is a struggle against world imperialism, the greatest enemy of the working class.

Begin preparations at once!

Down with capitalist exploitation!

Down with imperialism!

Long live the Chinese militant workers!

WORKERS PARTY PLANS TAG DAY

who head the national party ticket. They can be affixed to mail sent out by the workers during the campaign.

Hundreds of thousands of Campaign Buttons are being prepared for distribution. These, like the stamps, will carry the photographs of Foster and Gitlow. They are printed in three colors, and were designed by the famous proletarian artist, Fred Ellis.

Plan Tag Days.

Two huge National Communist Campaign Tag Days are planned during the summer.

Thru affairs, such as picnics, house parties, dances, and collections from mass meetings, open air meetings, shops, unions, the Workers (Communist) Party expects to raise the $100,000 that is the minimum requirement for putting the Party on the ballot in at least thirty states and waging a campaign that will establish the Party as the political party of large sections of the working masses.

The campaign is on. Tours are being arranged for the heads of the national ticket. From now until the first week in November, when the ballots are cast, there will be no let-up. Every member of the party is expected to get into the campaign. No duty is more important now than the raising of funds. With the raising of funds goes our propaganda. After making their contributions to our campaign the workers will feel more anxious to participate in the struggle. And they must be encouraged in every way.

Money Needed.

Money for the election campaign is needed now. One dollar today is better than three dollars three months from today. For the struggle against the mighty financial power of American imperialism $100,000 is only a paltry sum, but behind this $100,000 are the many millions of American working men and women, the persecuted Negroes—doubly persecuted because of race and because in overwhelming numbers they belong to the exploited army of labor, the poor farmers who work from sunrise to sundown with the mortgage banker's shadow ever hanging over them.

Here is a challenge that should stir into action every class conscious worker in the United States.

Send your contribution at once to the National Campaign Headquarters, 43 East 125th Street, New York City—Alexander Trachtenberg, treasurer.

RED CONVENTION TO OPEN JERSEY ELECTION DRIVE

Nearing and Weisbord Will Be Speakers

NEWARK, N. J., July 9. The Ratification Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party in New Jersey to ratify state candidates chosen for the 1928 elections will be held on August 5 at 10 a. m. at the Workers Progressive Center, 93 Mercer St., here. It will be preceded by a Red Proletarian Banquet on Saturday evening, August 4, at 8 p. m. at the same place.

Since this date is the same as that of the 14th anniversary of the opening of the last World War, the banquet will be made the occasion for a tremendous demonstration against the danger of a new world war, and the menace of American Imperialism. Among the speakers at the banquet and at the convention will be Scott Nearing, noted authority on American imperialism and Workers (Communist) Party candidate for Governor of New Jersey, and Albert Weisbord, leader of the Passaic Strike and candidate for U. S. Senator.

In a letter sent to various labor and fraternal organizations throughout the state and vicinity, the following note was stressed:

"The election campaign this year is of the greatest significance to the workers of this state. Now, Jersey, the home of big corporations and special interests, notorious for its anti-labor record, is ruled by the democratic machine through Mayor Hague and by the republican machine through U. S. Senator Edge, the corporation lawyer. Those two parties are functioning more and more openly, as agents of Big Business. Injunction after injunction has been issued against workers on strike. Free speech has been violated in many cities. Police terror and brutality have been practiced with immunity as in the Passaic textile strike. Unemployment has been steadily rising, but no relief has been given to the unemployed in the industrial centers. The killing of labor bills in the New Jersey legislature is a constant practice. Big Business, especially the railroad and public service interests, dominate the government of New Jersey.

"The New Jersey State Ratification Convention is part of the National Election Campaign of the Workers (Communist) Party and will be the beginning of the campaign among the New Jersey workers. It will mobilize them against the Hague democratic machine, against the Edge republican machine, against the socialist party, which today is following in the footsteps of the capitalist parties."

MACHINERY FORCES OUT NEW MILLIONS

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press)

The extraordinary rate at which machinery has been displacing labor in the blast furnaces of the country is shown by U. S. Commissioner of Labor Statistics Ethelbert Stewart in the monthly review of the department of labor. Stewart shows that the average blast furnace employe in 1925 was producing 50 times as much pig iron as he could have produced with the machinery available in 1850 and nearly 4 times as much as he could have produced at the beginning of the 20th century when J. P. Morgan's great steel trust was in process of formation.

Machine Revolution

In 1925, 29,188 blast furnace workers produced 36,700,566 tons of pig iron, or an average of 1,257 tons per man. In 1914 the number was almost exactly the same as in 1925, but they produced only 23,332,244 tons of pig iron, or 795 tons per worker. In 1919, 43,296 blast furnace workers, or 48 per cent more than the number on the payrolls in 1925, produced 31,015,364 tons, or 16 per cent less than the 1925 production.

The epochmaking fact shown in Stewart's figures is that an increase in pig iron production from 504,245 tons in 1850 to 36,700,566 tons in 1925 added less than 9,000 to the 20,298 jobs which blast furnaces afforded in the earlier year. At the close of the 19th century the blast furnaces were employing 39,241 workers, at least 10,000 more than in 1925, yet were producing only 13,620,703 tons of pig iron.

Permanently Unemployed

To secure the 1925 production with the productivity of 1899 would have afforded employment to more than 105,000 workers instead of the 29,188 actually employed. The difference indicates the number of workers displaced by machinery in this industry in a quarter of a century.

Blast furnace Productivity	Number of Employes	Total Production	Tons per Employe
1850	20,298	504,245	25
1860	15,927	881,794	55
1870	27,554	1,832,976	67
1890	33,415	8,845,185	265
1899	39,241	13,620,703	347
1904	35,078	16,497,033	470
1909	38,429	25,795,471	671
1914	29,356	23,332,244	795
1919	43,296	31,015,364	716
1921	18,698	16,688,126	331
1923	36,712	40,361,146	1,099
1925	29,188	36,700,566	1,257

Boss vs. Worker

Commenting on the trend shown in these figures Stewart says: "In other words the manufacturing industries particularly as represented by the blast furnaces are not going to take care of the increase in the working population. It must be apparent that the attitude which one will take toward these figures will depend upon whether one is interested in the prosperity that comes from enormous production and almost startling output per employe or whether one is looking for a job. The problem today is to reconcile these two points of view."

Whither Capitalism

In the age of iron and steel, with the population of the country increasing from 23,000,000 to 115,000,000, the number of workers required for the production of pig iron has increased only 44 per cent. The vast expansion was secured by employers through the substitution of machinery for men.

Census of manufacture figures show that in the last 25 years the proportion of blast furnace wages to the total value of the pig iron produced has fallen from 9 per cent to 6 per cent.

WASHINGTON, July 9 (UP).—The U. S. Steel Corporation and 92 affiliated companies filed a suit today for $111,000,000 against the United States government for tax refund.

The corporation alleges it was over-assessed in income and profit taxes in 1917.

Lose Hope For the Crew of Fascist Polar Airship Italia

VIRGO BAY, July 9.—Hope virtually was abandoned today for all but four of the 21 men, including rescuers, scattered over the Spitzbergen area as the result of the wreck of the dirigible Italia.

Four men in the icefloe camp of North East Land, who are in airplane and radio communication with the world and who, it is hoped, will be saved—or whose bodies will be recovered, for they are in desperate straits, it finally has been admitted.

MINOR SLUGGED IN COURT ROOM

nist) Party candidate for U. S. Senator, asked permission to exercise his constitutional right of addressing the court before sentence was imposed. The request was refused and Minor was forcibly dragged away by several bluecoated ruffians, manhandled and slugged, while the magistrate looked on, offering not a word of censure. This again indicates the sort of terroristic 'justice' that workers who appear in an American court can expect.

A Frame-Up

"The International Labor Defense brands this so-called trial as a shameless frame-up in which the magistrate and prosecuting attorney, acting upon orders from higher up, conspired to railroad innocent workers to jail. Once more the administrators of the law, the paid hirelings of the capitalist class, have revealed the leering face of the justice which is always a bludgeon used to beat the workers into submission.

"The International Labor Defense calls upon all workers to protest against the jailing of their comrades and to rush funds to its office, 799 Broadway, Room 422, in order that the other workers arrested, who will be tried later in the week, may be saved."

NEW DRAFT PROGRAM OF THE COMMUNIST INTERNATIONA

1. The World System of Capitalism. Its Development and Inevitable Destruction.

CAPITALIST SYSTEM RAPIDLY APPROACHING ITS COLLAPSE DRAFT PROGRAM POINTS OUT

Sees Sharpening of Fundamental Contradictions of Capitalism at Rapid Pace

Stresses Struggles of Colonial Workers, Peasants and Imperialist Powers

To All Sections of the Communist International:

The Programme Commission of the Executive Committee of the Communist International is publishing a DRAFT PROGRAM.

The Commission thinks it its duty to declare that while the text of this draft is of course based on the same fundamental principles as those upon which the draft programme provisionally passed by the Fifth Congress of the Communist International was based, nevertheless, it differs very considerably from that draft. The Program Commission felt that in view of the great changes that have taken place in many important spheres of international life and particularly in the revolutionary movement since the Fifth Congress, it could not confine itself to making merely editorial changes in the original draft. A change has taken place in the form of the general crisis of capitalism; a change has taken place in the relationships between various groups of powers. Great events have taken place, like the great revolution in China, which once again emphasized the significance of the agrarian-peasant question. Great progress has been made in building up socialism in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. The struggle between the aggressive capitalist world and the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics is becoming acute. Fascism is growing and becoming transformed into the terrorist dictatorship of big capital. Social democracy has degenerated into Chauvinist imperialism. The lessons that have been learned by the Communist International in the fight against opposition tendencies and finally the growth of Communism, the fact that the movement has really become internationalized, the new tasks that confront the Communist International as a single organization—all this has inevitably made it necessary considerably to alter and enlarge the former draft.

The general tendency of the changes that have been made is towards more concreteness and greater emphasis upon THE INTERNATIONAL aspects both in the theoretical section as well as in the sections dealing immediately with the struggles of the Communist Parties.

Acting on the decision of the Executive Committee of the Communist International, the Programme Commission, in publishing this draft program, calls upon all comrades to express their opinion and criticism of it in articles, remarks and concrete suggestions. The work done on the program has revealed how difficult it is to embrace in a single document all the problems of the present-day world Communist movement. The question of the program will be one of the central questions at the Sixth Congress. It is essential that sufficient material be collected by the time the discussion of the question takes place at the Congress. The Commission therefore invites all comrades to join in the fruitful discussion of the program.

THE PROGRAMME COMMISSION OF THE
EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE
COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL

The characteristic feature of capitalist society, which arose on the basis of the development of commodity production, are the monopolization of the means of production by the capitalist class, the exploitation of the wage labor of the proletarian class and the production of commodities for the purpose of profit. The relationships of exploitation and the economic domination of the bourgeoisie find their political expression in the state organization of capital as an instrument for the suppression of the proletariat.

The development of capitalism has wholly confirmed Marx' doctrine concerning the laws of development of capitalist society and the contradictions of this development, which must inevitably bring about the doom of the capitalist system.

In their quest for profits the bourgeoisie were compelled to develop the forces of production on an ever-increasing scale and to strengthen and expand the domination of capitalistic relationships of production. As a consequence, the development of capitalism constantly reproduces on a wider basis all the inherent contradictions of the capitalist system and primarily, the decisive contradiction between social production and the private acquisition of the results of production,—between the growth of the forces of production and capitalist property relationships. The predominance of private ownership of the means of production and the anarchy prevailing in production have disturbed the economic equilibrium between the various branches of production; for the developing contradiction between the unlimited expansion of production and the restricted consumption of the masses of the proletariat has led to periodical and devastating crises and mass unemployment among the proletariat. The predominance of private property also found expression in competition—within each separate capitalist country as well as on the constantly expanding world market. The latter form of capitalist rivalry resulted in a series of wars which are the inevitable accompaniment of capitalist development.

At the same time a change took place in the internal structure of capitalist society. The technical and economic advantages of large-scale production have led to the destruction of pre-capitalist economic forms in the course of the competitive struggle and to the continuously increasing concentration and centralization of capital. In the sphere of industry this law has manifested itself primarily in the direct destruction of small enterprises and partly in their degradation to the position of auxiliary units of large enterprises. In the sphere of agriculture, it not only found expression in the process of differentiation among the peasantry and the proletarianization of broad strata of the latter, but principally in the tacit and ovowed subordination of peasant-farming to big capital; the small farmers have been able to maintain an appearance of independence only at the price of exhausting toil and systematic starvation.

The increasing employment of machinery, the constant improvement in technique and the uninterrupted rise in the organic composition of capital, which is accompanied by greater division of labor and an increase in the productivity and intensity of labor, signified also the more extensive employment of woman and child labor and the formation of enormous industrial reserve armies, which are constantly being recruited from among the proletarianized peasantry who are forced to leave their villages and among the ruined petty and middle urban bourgeoisie. The existence of a small group of billionaires at one pole of social relationships and of an enormous mass of proletarians on the other, the constantly increasing rate of exploitation of the working class, the reproduction on a wider basis of the profoundest contradictions of capitalism and their consequences (crises, wars, etc.), the constant growth of social inequality, the rising indignation of the proletariat; united and trained by the mechanism of capitalist production itself,—all this has inevitably undermined the foundations of capitalism and has brought nearer the day of its collapse.

The period of industrial capitalism in the main was a period of "free competition," a period of relatively smooth evolution and expansion of capitalism throughout the whole world amidst conditions of the partition and armed conquest of unoccupied colonies and the steady growth of the contradictions of capitalism, the burdens of which fell mainly upon the shoulders of the crushed and oppressed colonial peoples.

Towards the beginning of the 20th century, however, this period gave place to a new period,—the period of Imperialism. In this period capitalism develops spasmodically and in the midst of conflicts; free competition has given place to monopoly; the "unoccupied" colonial lands are all divided up and the struggle for a redistribution of colonies and spheres of influence is primarily assuming the form of armed conflicts.

The ramifications and truly world-wide scope of the contradictions of capitalism found most striking expression in the epoch of imperialism (finance capitalism) which historically signifies a new form of capitalism, a new system of relationships between the various parts of world capitalist economy and a change in the relationships between the principal classes of capitalist society.

This new historical period came in as a result of the development of the principal dynamic laws of capitalist society. The law of the concentration and centralization of capital led to the formation of powerful monopolist combines (cartels, syndicates, trusts), to new forms of gigantic combinations of enterprises linked up by the banks. The merging of industrial capital with bank capital and the monopolistic character of this form of capitalism transformed the epoch of industrial capital into the epoch of finance capital. "Free competition" of the period of industrial capitalism, which came in to take the place of feudal monopoly and merchant capital monopoly, is in its turn being transformed into finance capital monopoly.

The growing employment of complex machinery, of chemical processes and electrical energy, the rise in the organic composition of capital and the consequent decline in the rate of profit, which is only partly offset by the high, cartel prices policy still further stimulate the quest for colonial super-profits and the struggle for a re-distribution of the globe. Standardized and mass production creates the necessity for seeking new foreign markets. The rise in the price of raw materials and fuel stimulates the quest for the sources of these materials. Finally, the system of high protection creates an added stimulus for the export of capital, and this is becoming the decisive and specific form of economic contact between the various parts of world capitalist economy. The total effect is that the monopoly of colonial markets, of sources of raw materials and of spheres of investment of capital has extremely accentuated the general unevenness of capitalist development and has intensified the conflict between the "great powers" of finance capital over the redistribution of the colonies and spheres of influence.

The growth of the productive forces of world industry thus leads to the further internationalization of economic life and at the same time to the struggle for a redistribution of the globe,—which is already divided up among the biggest finance capitalist states, and to a succession of such struggles in an increasingly acute form. To an increasing extent it leads to the method of fighting, by forcing down prices, being abandoned in favor of methods of forcible pressure (boycott, high protection, tariff wars, wars proper, etc.). Consequently, the monopolist form of capitalism is inevitably accompanied by imperialist wars, which by the area they embrace and the destructiveness of their technique are unexampled in the world's history.

Under such circumstances state power and the armed forces of the state acquire special significance for the bourgeoisie. Hence, finance capital reveals a tendency to develop state capitalist forms, which on the one hand facilitate the struggle for foreign markets and the military mobilization of industry, and on the other hand lead to the exceptionally monstrous growth of militarism (armies, naval and air fleets, the employment of chemistry and bacteriology).

Thus the epoch of imperialism reproduces the fundamental contradictions of capitalism to an ever-increasing degree. Competition among small capitalists ceases, only to make way for competition among big capitalists; where competition among big capitalists subsides, it flares between gigantic combinations of millionaires and their governments. Local and national crises become transformed into crises affecting a number of countries, and subsequently into world crises. Local wars give place to wars between coalitions of states and to world wars. The class struggle is transformed from isolated actions of separate groups of workers into nation-wide struggles and subsequently into an international struggle between the world proletariat and the world bourgeoisie. Two main revolutionary forces are organizing against the powerfully organized forces of finance capital; on the one hand the workers in the capitalist states; on the other hand, the masses of the people in the colonies oppressed by foreign capital are marching under the leadership of the revolutionary proletarian movement in the imperialist home countries.

This fundamental revolutionary tendency, however, is temporarily paralyzed by the corruption of certain sections of the European, North American and Japanese proletariat by the imperialist bourgeoisie and by the treachery of the national bourgeoisie in the semi-colonial and colonial countries who have become scared by the revolutionary mass movement. By plundering the colonies and semi-colonies, the bourgeoisie in the most powerful imperialist states obtain supplementary excess profits, out of which they raised the wages of a section of the workers in the home countries and in this way gave them an interest in this plunder and bought their loyalty to the imperialist "fatherland." This systematic bribery particularly affected the aristocracy of labor and the bureaucratic strata of the working class: the leading elements of social democracy and the trade unions, who proved to be the direct channels of bourgeois influence among the proletariat and stalwart pillars of the capitalist system.

But, by stimulating the growth of the corrupt upper stratum of the working class, imperialism at last destroys the influence of that stratum among the working class, because the increasing contradictions of imperialism, the worsening of the conditions of the broad masses of the workers, the enormous cost and burdens of military conflicts, the fact that certain Powers have lost their monopolistic position in the world market—loss of colonies, etc., undermine the basis of social democracy among the masses.

Similarly, the treachery of the national bourgeoisie in the colonies and semi-colonies and their rapprochement with the imperialist powers leads, in the final analysis, to the intensification of imperialist oppression, to the decline of national bourgeois influence among the masses of the people, to the intensification of the revolutionary crises, to the unleashing of the mass agrarian revolutionary movement and to the creation of favorable conditions for establishing the hegemony of the colonial proletariat in the popular, mass struggle for independence and complete national liberation.

Imperialism has greatly developed the productive forces of world capitalism. It has created all the material prerequisites for the socialist organization of society. By its wars it has demonstrated that the productive forces of world industry—which have outgrown the restricted boundaries of imperialist states—now demand the organization of industry on a world, or international scale. Imperialism strives to eliminate this contradiction by cutting a road by fire and sword towards a single world state-capitalist trust, which is to organize the whole of world industry. But this ultra-imperialist utopia so highly praised by the social democratic ideologists—encounters objective obstacles of such magnitude that capitalism must inevitably fall beneath the weight of its own contradictions. Imperialist wars, which are growing into world wars and by which the law of the centralization of capitalism strives to reach its utmost world limits—a single world trust, are accompanied by so much destruction and impose such burdens upon the shoulders of the working class and of millions of colonial proletarians and peasants that capitalism must inevitably be crushed beneath the hammerblows of the proletarian revolution.

Imperialism is the highest phase of development of capitalism. It developed the productive forces of world industry to enormous dimensions and has re-fashioned the whole world to its own model. Thus it draws within the orbit of finance capitalist exploitation all the colonies, all races and all nations. At the same time, however, the monopolist form of capital increasingly develops the elements of parasitical degeneration, decay and decline of capitalism. Monopoly capital is destroying the driving forces of competition. In conducting a policy of high cartel prices, and having undivided mastery of the market, it reveals a tendency to retard the further development of the forces of production. In squeezing enormous sums of excess profits out of the millions of colonial workers and peasants and accumulating colossal incomes from this exploitation, Imperialism is creating a type of decaying and practically degenerate rentier state and whole classes of parasites who live by clipping coupons. Imperialism has developed socialized labor to an enormous scale and created the organizational prerequisites for socialism; but the intensification of the inherent antagonisms among the "Great Powers" gives rise to wars which cause the breakdown of united world industry. Imperialism, therefore, is moribund and decaying capitalism. It is the last stage in the development of capitalism. It is the threshold of world social revolution.

Hence, international proletar revolution follows logically from conditions of development of capit
ism generally and from its impe
alist phase in particular. Unev

(The second section of the Draft Program of the Communist International will appear in tomorrow's DAILY WORKER. It is entitled: "The General Crisis of Capitalism. The First Phase of World Revolution.")

The Election Drive Is a Party Test

By I. AMTER.

The Workers (Communist) Party has been carrying on many campaigns. The workers of the country know the activity of the Party in Passaic. They know that the Party members have been active in the miners' strike, in the strike in New Bedford. They know that the Communists have done their full share in raising relief for the miners and textile workers, and in providing for the defense of the arrested workers.

The workers know that the Communist Party is the only force in the country for combatting imperialism. They know that there is no pacifism in the propaganda and organization of the Communist Party, and that the anti-imperialism of the Workers (Communist) Party is not the "anti-imperialism" of the socialist party, of the democratic party and of the numerous pacifists. The workers recognize in the fight of the Communists against American and world imperialism, a mobilization of the workers for militant action to prevent, if possible, another world slaughter.

"Informal" War.

In the struggle against the butchery of Nicaraguan workers and peasants by "brave" American marines and aviators, the socialist party made protest only against the fact that Coolidge had failed formally to declare war on Nicaragua. In the murder of the Chinese workers and peasants by "courageous" American marines, in conjunction with British and Japanese marines, the British Labor Party and its "eminent" leaders, Ramsay MacDonald ad J. H. Thomas, proposed not only that British "interests" should be protected, but if protection were to be given at all, then a large army should be sent.

In the fight that has been going on in the United Mine Workers, the socialists have given full support for relief to John L. Lewis. The money they collected for relief went to Lewis to pay the salaries of himself and his hundreds of organizers and other officials—and all their expenses.

Lewis, in a letter to a republican committeeman, declared that he would be satisfied with the nomination of Hoover. Who nominated Hoover? It was none other than Andrew Mellon, the open shop scab coal operator of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, one of the first to repudiate the agreement with the United Mine Workers.

Birds of a Feather.

A fine line-up: Mellon, Hoover Lewis, the socialist party.

In the fight that is going on to organize the miners, the textile workers, who is taking the lead? The socialists? The socialists are doing everything in their power to prevent the organization of these unorganized workers. It is the Communists who have formulated the proper policy and members of the Communist Party are in the front rank battling for organization of these workers.

It is the Sigmans, Hillmans, Zaritskys who now represent and personify the policy and leadership of the socialist party. Today this party is aligned with the capitalists. One has but to look at their platform to discover that in some respects the Wall Street candidate Smith, is more "progressive" than the "socialist" Norman Thomas. Certainly no capitalist candidate elected to office has been more brazen than the vice presidential candidate of the socialist party, James Maurer, who together with the other socialist members of the City Council of Reading, Pa., on taking office declared that "in case of strikes the employers will be given more protection than ever before."

If it is becoming clear to the workers that the Communists are the only fighters for the working class—on all fronts—then these workers must be induced to show their sentiment in the election campaign. These workers should be shown why it is important both for the Communist Party and for the working class that fighting spokesmen be sent to the legislative and executive office to fight for the workers, to expose the sham and hideousness of the system, to mobilize the workers from the chambers of parliament. But just as the Communists make the workers no promises, but plainly tell the workers that the working class alone can emancipate the workers out of the morass, so too, the elected Communist candidates will only be able to sound the call, but the workers in their organizations, in the shops, through resolutions, demonstrations through strikes, will build the movement that will put terror into the hearts of the capitalists.

A Test.

This election campaign therefore will be a test for the Communist Party. Have the members of the Party freed themselves completely from the sectarian policy of "boycotting the elections," which once was advocated by our Party? (Not that under certain conditions the Party may not again call for a boycott of the elections.) Do the members of the Party realize the importance of engaging in this campaign in which millions of workers are interested and will vote, thereby binding themselves once more to the capitalists?

There are several reasons why our Party members must throw themselves with full energy and enthusiasm into the election campaign:

1. Because the workers and farmers still have faith in elections and expect relief from their troubles through the capitalist parties.

2. Because too many workers follow us on the industrial field, who do not regard us as a political party.

3. Because the more states in which we get on the ticket, the more significant will our campaign be—not a mere propaganda campaign—but one in which many workers will be able to vote for our Party, who would otherwise be forced to vote for the other parties.

4. Because, until the Communists establish themselves as a political party nationally, we will not have the political standing in the eyes of the American workers that the Party deserves.

Tasks Ahead.

The election campaign will be a real test for the Party. It will demonstrate whether we ourselves comprehend the importance of parliamentarism (and let no comrade underestimate its value, particularly in a backward country like the United States, where the workers as a whole, have only the faintest notion of the workings of "their" government, and have great faith in capitalist "democracy".)

It will also be a test of the Party in that it will show the extent to which we have been able to direct the attention of the workers to the questions of government. The overthrow of the system and of the capitalist government is the aim of the Communist Party. How many American workers have lost all faith in the American form of government? Many who are merely disgruntled but do not understand the fight that will be necessary—on all fronts—till that government is no more.

We know that tens of thousands of workers support the Party and would follow and vote for the Party, but they are not citizens. But it is the duty of every Party member to bring to the polls every last worker citizen.

Get Out Communist Vote.

And last of all, every Party member who is a citizen must not fail to vote. This is self-evident, and yet many Party members, believing that the elections are not worth while (sectarians, they are, suffering from Left Sickness), and in the further belief that Communists cannot be elected, fail to register and vote. This is not only a neglect of Party duty, but a serious hindrance to our Party.

It is not impossible for state and county candidates of the Communist Party to be elected this year! It is totally within the range of possibility—but only if every Party member, every sympathizer, every militant worker gets into the harness and helps the Party in this campaign. With the proper energy, organization and enthusiasm, the Workers (Communist) Party can become a real factor in the political life of the United States, holding not in our eyes alone, but in the eyes of the American workers and farmers, the uncontested and incontestible position of leader of the American workers and farmers.

Miners in Need of Defense and Relief

Fifteen months of strike, starvation, evictions, police terror — life in barracks, tents, in the open fields, families living on 90 cents a week — and others dying on this amount — this is the lot of the miners. Virtual famine has been avoided only through the literally remarkable efforts put forth by the National Miners' Relief Committee. For July 22-29, this body together with the International Labor Defense are planning a huge defense week which is expected to make a record in the history of relief activities.

The Life and Death of Gastone Sozzi

(Translated from the German by Sol Auerbach)

I.

The Life of Sozzi

GASTONE SOZZI was born of a socialist family, in Cesena on March 7, 1903. The twenty-five years of his life was consecrated to the ideals and hopes of the proletariat. From his childhood on he experienced the bitterness of the class struggle. Mussolini, who at this time still played revolutionary, was the leader of the socialist movement in the territory of Forli and was a frequent visitor in the Sozzi home. As a guest of the Sozzi family in Cesena, this coming leader of the Blackshirts, elated over the precocity of the little Gastone, assured the father that a future as a practical revolutionary fighter awaited the youngster. Mussolini knows from the reports of his sheriffs that Sozzi remained until his death an heroic revolutionary fighter.

In his early youth he enlisted in the ranks of the socialist movement. In 1921 he joined the Communist Party and became secretary of the Young Communist League in the province of Forli. When fascism first lifted its head Sozzi stood in the front ranks of fighters against the armed bands of Blackshirts. The workers who knew him remember his zeal and his passion; but they also remember his nerve and his courage in battle against the enemy. In the fire of the civil war which accompanied the "March on Rome," Gastone Sozzi had learned how to unite the enthusiasm of a fighter with the coolness of a revolutionary leader, who must know all the difficulties of battle.

Hated, hunted, he was forced in 1922 to go into hiding for the first time in order to escape the police, who had cooked up a false charge against him and other workers of Forli for the murder of a fascist. Sent by his party to the Lenin Institute in Leningrad, he excelled as a student fired by a revolutionary proletarian spirit. In the meantime the charge of the police was openly discredited. Towards the end of 1924 Sozzi could return to Italy. After a year of military service he placed himself again at the disposal of his party. Forced to live as an "illegal," he was very active in the Communist Party, and was the editor of the illegal paper, "The Proletarian Child."

II

The Martyrdom of Gastone Sozzi in the Prison of Perugia

THE bloody strike of Gallarate (October, 1927), in the course of which two workers were killed, the broadening of the labor movement in Venice, in the province of Milan and in Piedmont let loose a new wave of terror against the working class. The pressure of the police grew. The arrests and raids were no longer to be counted. On November 4, 1927, Gastone Sozzi fell into the hands of the police in Milan. He spent a few weeks in the prison of San Vittore. At the beginning of December he was transferred to the prison of Perugia by six plain-clothes men. In spite of his strong constitution the countenance of Sozzi gave evidence of great suffering. His face bore signs of blows. In Perugia he was confined in an underground cell, which was ordinarily used as punishment for those who attempted escape. Sozzi was not permitted to write to his family, so they knew nothing about his arrest or his transfer to Perugia.

Immediately after Sozzi's arrival at Perugia there came to this small Umbrian town General Ciardi, military head of the Special Court, and an inspector from the state department. Sozzi was considered responsible for a large part of the illegal deeds of the Communist Party. Sozzi, therefore, "knew" something: he must "speak." The martyrdom of Gastone Sozzi began.

Was Tortured

He was at first submitted to a preliminary examination by his inquisitors, at which every negative answer was followed by blows of a horsewhip. This failing, he was placed in solitary confinement, for many days without food, in the hope that long fasting would weaken his power of resistance. Again forceful methods were used. He was beaten on every part of his body with clubs and horsewhips. This procedure was continued for many weeks, but the officer and the inspector did not succeed in tearing a single word from Sozzi. The executioners tried other means. They knew that for a month's time he had been father of a child which he had not seen. They gave him permission to write home and receive answers. Sozzi's wife and father learned that Gastone was imprisoned in Perugia. In vain did they try to arrange a meeting with him or, at least, for a lawyer to visit him.

The exchange of letters between the prisoner and his family lasted for some time. Then again unendurable silence. Finally a short laconic notice from the police that "Gastone Sozzi has committed suicide by hanging himself from the bars of his cell on the night between the 6th and 7th of February."

What happened to Sozzi?

Fascist Terror

When every means at the disposal of Rome to obtain a confession was employed and failed, more awful tortures were invented. A fascist chemist of Perugia suggested to the Blackshirts a new form of torture—injections of a strong iodine solution. Gastone Sozzi received such injections. The iodine transformed the bowels into sore shreds. The prisoner fell unconscious. When he had regained consciousness for a few moments he was offered complete freedom and a monthly stipend of 5,000 lire if he would take service with the fascist police. Sozzi refused. It now only remained for the vile fascist officials to finish their work. On the night between the 6th and 7th of February Sozzi was murdered in his cell.

The autopsy of the body would have revealed many things. But Mussolini would not grant this to Sozzi's father and wife, who had hurried to Perugia with the child Sergio as soon as they had heard of his death. The relatives saw Gastone Sozzi on his death bed in a prison cell; and they also saw no sign of hanging on his neck. After many days of "negotiations" between Perugia and Rome permission was granted to remove the coffin to Cesena, the resting place of the martyr, but no permission was granted for a burial. Sozzi was guarded by fascist sheriffs until he was buried.

COURT PAROLE IS IMPRISONMENT

Religious Groups Glad to Give Up Violators

(By a Worker Correspondent)

Being a constant reader of your newspaper of truth and facts, I hereby call your attention to the existence of the Parole Commission that handles only cases of persons sentenced to the indefinite term of the city penitentiary. I mean to show you how unnecessary it is to keep this commission in existence, which consists of a chairman, who receives a salary of $8,500 a year, and two of his associates who receive $6,500 a year each. Also others such as secretaries, ex-officios, clerks, etc., all of whom are appointed by the capitalists.

Now I will start at the root and prove my contention beyond the shadow of a doubt. (1) Before sentence, a court parole officer or investigator makes a very careful investigation of the defendants past record of his entire lifetime and presents such findings to the court.

(2) Then the court sentences the defendant to the city penitentiary.

(3) The case goes into the hands of this parole commission and they fix the length of time that the defendant is to serve.

(4) Such time as they fix must be sanctioned by the court.

Can anyone deny that our courts are not able to fix the time that the defendant is to serve. Surely our high-priced judicial minds should be capable of performing such a minor undertaking and bring some relief to the working class and the real tax-payers of this city.

Jobs to Favorites.

I only give you this as an example that exists not only in the Department of Correction but in every department of the present Tammany government of this city that manufactures these jobs as personal favors for votes to uphold the bosses, who are the representatives of the capitalists.

To clean the house thoroly and do away with all unnecessary positions will save many millions of dollars yearly of the poor people's money.

Try as you may to get other papers to copy. Oh, no, not in this Tammany stronghold.

The voters who go to the polls and sign their names on the dotted line should open their eyes and see how their money is used to buy other votes and to benefit the capitalists of this city.

When the former chairman of the parole commission, B. De N. Cruger, resigned, Jimmy Walker, the mayor, expressed regret that this city should lose such an ardent and dutiful servant. Let us ask Night-Club Jim Walker just what duties did this $8,500 a year man perform? The answer is, very, very little, and not at all needed.

Report Violators.

For men out on parole, we have the Catholic Big Brothers, Jewish Board of Charities, Salvation Army and other organizations that would gladly have paroled men to report to them and report violators to the committing judge and do all this work gratis.

I hope I made myself very plain and that you will notify our friends.

Begging to remain a friend,

—JAMES CARROLL.

MINE OWNERS IN PENNSYLVANIA IN NEW WAGE SLASH

Accidents Increase in Scab Mines

(Special To DAILY WORKER.)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 9.—Following the wage-slashing move of the H. C. Frick Coke Company, coal operators in the bituminous area are launching a drive to cut still further the starvation wages they are now paying. The Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Co. is cutting loaders' pay from 65 to 58 cents a ton, and cutters' pay from 12 to 11 cents.

An unusually large number of serious accidents have occurred at the Pittsburgh Terminal mines within the past month, according to reports received by the National Miners' Relief Committee.

John Motko, 48, was killed Friday, July 6, by a slate fall in Mollenauer, at the number three mine Mike Susko had his leg broken in the same mine, and many others were seriously burned by motors and cutting machines. These workers are having their pay slashed.

Any disputes which may arise in these open shop mines, between superintendent and miners is invariably settled by the coal and iron police who are always at hand. These police, who are hired, fired, paid and entirely at the disposal of the coal company, are licensed by the state and enjoy full police power. There are no checkweighmen or miners' pit committees as in union mines, to demand fair weight and full pay.

The non-union miners, mostly Negroes imported from the south, live in company houses penned in by high walls. They buy their food in company-owned stores with script money coined by the operators, at the price their store representatives demand. It is such virtual peonage that thousands of bituminous miners are striking against. The National Miners' Relief Committee is raising funds to save their families from starvation. All funds sent to their headquarters at 611 Penn Ave., Pittsburgh, are used for the purpose of helping the strikers.

DEFEATS STRIKE VOTE ISSUED BY RANK AND FILE

"Lip Service," But No Real Action

(By Miner Correspondent.)

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. (By Mail)—At the meeting of the General Grievance committee of the Pennsylvania Coal Co., at which local unions from the following collieries were represented: No. 6, Ewen Central, No. 9, Butler, Barnum and No. 14, a motion was presented to declare a general strike of all the collieries of the Pennsylvania Coal Co.

Frank McGarry, the so-called new president of District No. 1 of the United Mine Workers of America fought against this motion and the meeting was adjourned with a heated discussion lead by delegates from local unions Ewen and No. 6 who demanded a call for a general strike.

Demand General Strike.

Miners who are employed by the Pennsylvania Coal Co. demand a general strike to force the company to eliminate contractors and reopen the closed collieries, and prevent the company from using mechanical loaders without adjusting wages and shortening working hours.

This shows McGarry is against a general strike altho he says he is in favor of closing every colliery in District No. 1 if it is necessary to eliminate the special mining contract system, and to equalize the work. Also to that effect a resolution was adopted by the special district convention held recently in Scranton.

McGarry's opposition today to the strike proves that he is not willing to fight for the interests of the miners; this new misleader of the miners already shows that the coal diggers must depend on their own forces and not to depend on McGarry, who only gives a lip service against the contractors system and refuses to fight against the contractors.

The Save-the-Union Committee of District No. 1 is leading a fight for a general strike of the mines under the Pennsylvania Coal Co.

NEW ENGLAND HEAT WAVE

BOSTON, July 9 (UP).—New England still suffered today from the most severe heat wave of the season, with no relief in sight before tomorrow night.

Pittsburgh to Organize Speakers for Campaign

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 9.—The Workers (Communist) Party of Pittsburgh District is making arrangements to prepare for an effective election campaign. Reports from the field indicate that the workers are busy getting signatures for the Nomination Petitions and it is expected that the required number of signatures will be secured within several days.

Preparations are under way to hold open air meetings regularly in various parts of the City of Pittsburgh. A number of comrades were selected who will be trained to speak at these meetings on the various issues of the campaign. A meeting of all these comrades will be held at the District Office, 805 James St., N. S. Pittsburgh, July 12, at 8 p. m.

Anthracite Miners Rising in Revolt Against Wage Cuts

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., July 9.—At the meeting of the Local Union No. 310 of Dupont, miners and mine workers complained that their wages have been cut to the point at which laborers are getting about $1.65 a day; miners cannot make more than $3.50 or $4.00 per day. Members of the local are employed in the Florence Colliery of the Lehigh & Wyoming Coal Mining Co. It was also reported that in Slopes No. 2 and No. 4, rates were cut down. Miners decided to go on strike if company will not live up to the existing agreement.

A Curious Picture About Communists at the Cameo

"THE Loves of Jeanne Ney," a Ufa film imported from Germany, presents what would be called a new orientation in the treatment of Communists in motion pictures. The Bolshevik is beardless, and thruout most of the film, human. In fact a Communist is the hero, the defeated aristocrats of Russia are degenerates and the villain is the worst of them. We have come to this, comrades. But don't cheer. With all this, the picture is by and large a lot of unvarnished drivel. It is absurd in story and undistinguished in acting.

It is also one of the most curious things ever shown on the screen. "The Loves of Jeanne Ney" is so titled only to lure the price of admission from what you have left after paying the rent. The story isn't that kind at all. It is a perfectly moral tho absurdly foolish tale of only one love, not many, of a Communist leader and the ward of a counter-revolutionist and peddler of czarist diamonds that find their way out of Russia.

The story is laid in the Crimea after the revolution. The Reds drive out the debauched aristocrats and one of the rewards of our Communist hero for his share in the job is to be sent to Paris where his sweetie has gone. He is sent by the leading committee who do this as a favor, knowing the weakness of our hero for the ward of the counter-revolutionist, who was shot by our hero himself, in person.

In Paris our hero almost gets into a lot of trouble but for the happy assistance of his lady friend and everything comes out just fine in the end. The hero, who is on party work among the French seamen, is to be led out of jail and his Communist activity is not only not disclosed but is not even presented to his discredit. Of course, a few scenes of a Red firing squad in action are not aimed to make the Communists more popular. Yet, in the main, the story is simply as related here: a story with a Communist hero, in which there is an aristocratic villain and in which the nobility is just so much mud.

There you are. As queer a fool thing as ever you saw. And if it isn't a new orientation it isn't either a picture that should have necessarily been imported all the way from Germany. Surely we do as bad here. Uno Henning, acting the handsome Communist, does it well and handsomely. His sweetie Jeanne, who isn't as bad as the title makes her, is nicely acted by a young and attractive lady named Edith Jehanne.

Better Coming.

On the same program at the Cameo Theatre this week, is one of the very early Chaplin pictures "The Vagabond." Every Chaplin picture, no matter how old, has some funny stuff in it. Also, there is an announcement that soon there will be shown a bill composed of "Hunting Big Game In Africa" and "The Arctic Seal Hunt." Now that's better. We have never seen a really bad animal picture.

Fruit Store Boss-Gangster-Judge Alliance Fails to Break Clerks' Strike in the Bronx

JUDGE DOURAS IS PART OF BOSSES' TERROR MACHINE

Union Will Continue Bathgate Strike

Despite the co-operation of the police, gangsters, Judge Douras, of the local magistrates court, and numerous injunctions, the owners of a group of retail fruit stores on Bathgate Ave., between Claremont Parkway and 174th St., have not succeeded in breaking the strike of the fruit store clerks which began April 9.

Hired thugs have repeatedly made murderous assaults on the picketing strikers. Magistrate Douras is pursuing a deliberate policy of mulcting heavy fines from the pickets after they are brought into court, still bearing the marks of the gangsters' blackjacks and lead pipes.

Despite the protests of the union attorneys, the city authorities refuse to permit the usual procedure of different judges rotating in the magistrates court. Douras has been kept here so as to serve the same purpose as the underworld character— to terrorize the pickets.

Defying the wholesale terror, the fruit clerks union declares its readiness to expend all its energies in continuing the strike here.

Since the calling of the general strike the union has succeeded in forcing over 100 employers to agree to union conditions on a signed contract. Only the present market and one other firm still remains out on strike.

This firm is also controlled by the group of bosses in the Bathgate Ave. market. The store of A. Taub, 933 Tremont Ave., was forced into bankruptcy by the strike of the fruit clerks in spite of a drastic anti-picketing injunction obtained by the owner. Now the store is owned by the Bathgate Ave. bosses and the former owner, Taub, works as foreman of a few scabs, receiving a weekly salary. A co-operative fruit and vegetable store across the street and operated by the strikers was an extremely potent weapon in the workers' hands. The strike, however, still continues.

On Bathgate Ave. only two stores have signed with the union. They are at 1610 and 1688 Bathgate Ave.

HACKMAN HELD UP BY GUNMAN

Leslie Dale, a Bronx taxi driver of 248 Powers Ave., near E. 142nd St., who was held up in one of the regular week-end taxi hold-ups, which average between fifteen and twenty each week, escaped possibly with his life when the gangster was stopped by a policeman.

The gunman, John Bailey, boarded the driver's cab at Lenox Ave. and 138th St. At 104th St. the gangster drew his gun and ordered the driver to obey instructions. After forcing the driver east to First Ave., Bailey ordered Dale to pass over all his money. A passing policeman, who noted the queer behavior of the cab, made the arrest.

Taxi drivers must run their own risks against hold-ups, accidents and other trials of their trade. They are held up most frequently, it is charged, not only by the professional gunmen, but by Tammany police, who take their "rake-off" for permitting the drivers to operate. Under a recent ruling of Tammany Compensation Commissioner Lane, drivers are not entitled to compensation for accidents and injuries like other workers.

Joseph Bruno, Paper Plate Militant, Dead

(By a Worker Correspondent)

I am sure that The DAILY WORKER is the only paper that would print these few lines concerning the sudden death of our Brother Joseph Bruno on last Friday, so I send this to you.

Joseph Bruno was a progressive member of the Paper Plate and Bag Makers' Union Local 107. He worked for fourteen years in the same paper plate factory in Brooklyn and became a member of the union since its inception some ten years ago. He has often contributed funds for the support of The DAILY WORKER, for the aid of the striking, starving miners.

Brother Bruno was sixty-one years of age when he left our ranks. As soon as he was pronounced gone, the Shop Committee declared a five minute halt in the work in honor of their lost Brother's memory.

The funeral of our departed Brother Joseph Bruno took place on Monday morning, July 9.

A SHOP BROTHER.

TAMMANY HIGHER UP ELUDES HUNT

Grafters Still Roam Unmolested

The "man higher up" in the $200,000,000 Tammany street cleaning graft scandal is now being closely pursued, according to information given out by Commissioner of Accounts, James A. Higgins, yesterday. Commissioner Higgins during his past two months of investigation is said to have made a record of chasing grafters under cover. There have been a number of "suspensions" and a few resignations, but no real change has resulted in the system.

Two minor officials were sentenced to Sing Sing, but the real grafters whose connections are said to extend directly to the city hall, have been left to continue unmolested.

Unofficial information emanating, it is believed, from the offices of Higgins declare that the "man higher up" is a substantial contributor to past Tammany political campaigns" and to have had "close personal relations with Alfred A. Taylor, Commissioner of the Street Cleaning Department.

The DAILY WORKER has repeatedly charged that the "man higher up" is Taylor himself. It has further been charged that Mayor Jimmie Walker who has risen to defend Taylor at a definite moment about two months ago when Taylor was threatened with exposure by Controller Craig, is himself involved in the situation.

Farmers Arrested, Erroneous Charges

JUGO SLAVIA, July 9. — The farmers Mato Stankovic and Mato Brlic were arrested in the village of Martinska on the 13th of May and brought to the prison of Sisak. There they were so badly maltreated and beaten by the warden that their whole body, especially the face and neck were covered with wounds. It went especially bad with Brlic, who after taking a few steps collapsed and was only brought back to consciousness after choking him and pulling his hair.

Both farmers are now being set free, since it has come out that their conviction was an erroneous one.

Fascists Kill Nine

BUCHAREST, July 9.—Nine out of ten prisoners sentenced for life were killed in an attempt to escape from the Horthy government prison here today.

A hole was dug in the wall of the prison to effect their escape. The tenth victim was wounded and recaptured.

The Wall Street White Collar Slaves

By PHILIP FRANKFELD.

Those of us who have participated in Wall Street demonstrations on one occasion or another have observed an interesting phenomenon which deserves attention. This is the reaction on the part of the white collar slaves to our efforts.

In the British Embassy demonstration held a year ago, our line was not molested by the police at all. Perhaps it was due to the excellent organization work; perhaps due to the fact that the cops were Irish. At any rate at the very beginning our line of march was not interfered with or broken up by the police.

It was the office workers, the clerks and typists, who jeered at us, who laughed, sneered and tried to stop us.

During the meeting our speakers were all showered with clips, pins ink bottles, the ink was of many colors. They tore down our banners and yelled down our speakers Same Objectors.

When the demonstration was held in Wall St. as a protest against the brutality and murderous actions of the National Guard on the Rockefeller mines in Colorado, again it was the white collar slaves who bore down on our handful of comrades tore down their signs; and beat up some of us.

In the last Wall Street demonstration held on July 3rd, the very same thing took place. While the police were determined to cut the demonstration short, and were well prepared for us, nevertheless the Wall St. hoodlums booed, jeered threatened, and at one point raised the cry of "Lynch the Red," "Kill the dirty Bolshevik," and other such cries were heard as Comrade Minor was yanked off the car and marched off to the station house. One little $12 a week shipping boy was so enraged at us that he kicked the car with all his might, and finding that he could not make an impression in that fashion, picked up one of our signs and tore it to small pieces.

What is the reason for these violent reactions on the part of these white collar workers? What can be done about the matter?

Underpaid.

In the first place, we must understand that these office workers receive miserable wages. But their proximity to the world's greatest banking institutions; the illusions which they still cherish about being able to duplicate the careers of any one of their "heroes," the education they have undergone in the public schools plus their prejudices, and ignorance of general social problems make them into excellent inflammable material against the Party and League. The yearly bonus which some of them receive in their various places of employment, are like a bone thrown to a dog; they grab it up eagerly and are very thankful for it.

Even the elementary expressions of the class struggle failed to move these workers; the call of unionism fell on empty ears.

Are we to permit these white collar slaves to retain their hostility towards us? No—absolutely not! The least we can do is to neutralize them towards our movement and towards our ideas. Many of them may never be on our side. Many of them will refuse at all times to listen to us. Others in the course of time will have their illusions destroyed; still others will just be indifferent; and a few may be won for our cause. This will require our issuing leaflets to them; this will mean that a campaign to unionize them may have to be carried on.

600,000 Office Workers.

New York is a commercial center and employs about 600,000 office workers. These office workers will have to be organized, will have to be won for the class struggle. We will have to educate them to the principles of our Party and of our League. This does not mean that we will concentrate only on these white collar workers. Our main emphasis will and must always be on the unskilled and the semi-skilled workers; and our main work will always be amongst the masses of unorganized and exploited youth and adult workers.

9 DEAD AS HEAT WAVE HITS CITY

Worker, 60, Dies on Job Here

Nine persons died from heat prostration, two were drowned, and another was reported seriously injured in a traffic accident due to the tremendous exodus from the scorching city yesterday.

Over 2,000,000 persons are estimated to have fled from New York City in an effort to escape the oppressive wave of heat. High humidity added to the discomfort.

William K. Ferguson, 60, of 196 Lefferts Pl., Brooklyn, a watchman at 116 Broad St., collapsed and died at his job before the noon hour. Irving Fergfeler, 25, of 111 E. 107th St., sought the cooling waters of the Hudson at the foot of 117th St. He disappeared in the stream, and it was being dragged last night for his body.

An unidentified youth of 20 was drowned in the surf at Coney Island at the foot of 12th St. Thousands of wage slaves swarmed over the island all day in an effort to escape the heat.

A Coney Island bus side-swiped a trolley car on Seweall Ave., near Neptune, and the conductor of the trolley was hurled to the street. The condition of the conductor, Richard Elrod, of 433 Sixty-ninth St., Brooklyn, is reported grave.

BOSSES FEAR TO END PACT WITH THE JOINT BOARD

Fur Trimmers Denying Break with Union

The strongest pressure the Associated Fur Manufacturers were able to muster against the Fur Trimming Manufacturers Association in their long standing campaign to force them to break the contract with the left wing Joint Board Furriers Union, was insufficient to outweigh the decided advantage of being able to keep their shops running, which the union would have prevented had they capitulated to the entreaties of the A. F. of L. agents and their allies, the Associated.

Denies Rumors

This fact was definitely learned when the president of the trimming bosses organization, A. Goldsmith, made public an official statement denying rumors that they were about to break off contractural relations with the Joint Board and become a partner to the so-called contract the Associated has with the right wing Joint Council.

In order that the trade, and particularly the workers, shall have no doubts about the matter, Goldsmith made certain that his statement was decidedly clear and emphatic. It said: "We are not interested in the internal affairs of the union. . . . We are simply interested in whether we get good mechanics or not. Unless some cause developes which we do not now foresee, we will probably renew the contract with the Joint Board when the present pact expires in January, 1929."

Severe Blow

All observers acquainted with the situation in the trade, the outstanding feature of which is that the Joint Board is now carrying on a renewed offensive against the right wing as well as the bosses in order to obtain July raises for the workers, agree that this is the biggest blow received in a long time by the fake Joint Council as well as the Associated Fur Manufacturers Association.

The campaign of the Joint Board for July wage raises was able to chalk up two more victories. The shops of B. Elfenstein, 145 W. 28th St., was compelled by the union to grant wage raises to all their workers amounting to $5 and $10 each. The Prime Fur Company also capitulated before the threat of a strike and granted each worker a raise of from $5 to $7.50 each. The campaign, however, is only beginning, the Joint Board declared in a statement.

Letter Reveals Fascist Justice to Communists

The following is from a letter of the Italian correspondent of an American capitalist paper. The letter is dated, Lugano, June 16, 1928.

"The cruelty of the Italian court against the twenty Communists, and this Fascist comedy of justice has awakened a storm of protest all over the world. Now certain incidents are known that will illuminate the brutality of Mussolini "justice." The trial was officially declared open to the public. American journalists, who wished to attend the trial, were, however, not allowed to enter the court-room by the fascist policemen who guarded the entrance. No reasons were given. Thereupon we interviewed the highest chief of the State Police. The General, very friendly, said, 'naturally, the trial is public'—'Then why can we not enter?'—'No, that you cannot do. You need a special permit.' A permit? That could not be procured . . . . because the issuance of such permits had been discontinued two years ago. . . . All foreign journalists received the assurance that the trial was public and — no entrance."

INDIA DELEGATES ASSAIL BRITISH LABOR TRAITORS

Withdraw From Fake Conference

LONDON, July 9.—The position of the British Labor Party against independence for India was affirmed here in a statement issued yesterday. The declaration followed the sensational withdrawal from the Commonwealth Labor Conference last Wednesday of the entire Indian delegation, led by Chamankal, after a resolution demanding the independence of India was thrown out.

The insincerity of the British labor reformists is revealed clearly, the Indian delegates pointed out, by the fact that the resolution was not even read by the conference delegates or circulated. They further charged that the British Labor Party was hostile to India's demand for independence and sympathetic to the Indian Statutory Commission, headed by Sir John Simon.

A particularly scathing attack has been levelled against George Lansbury, Labor M. P., for his assertion that the interests of Indian labor were "safeguarded by British labor representation on the Simon commission."

Baborjak, also a young Communist, was sentenced to 13 months of labor for speaking at two public meetings.

Contemptible Democracy

In the sentencing of our editor, Robert Minor, and several of our comrades to serve terms in jail for their part in the July 4th demonstration against the imperialist war in Nicaragua, the little kept courts of the American ruling class have again justified their reason for existence. The "justice" which has made a mockery of all supposed guarantees in the mine districts and has branded its brutality and class vengeance alike on the breasts of nursing mothers and on the bent backs of decrepit old men, the "justice" which keeps Mooney and Billings rotting in jail and burns Negroes at the stake before the very doors of a "democratic" convention—this justice has again been vindicated.

When Comrade Minor, asked by the little judge mumbling over his instructions from the wigwam, if he had anything to say, declared to the little Tammany henchman: "You are not a judge, you are a prosecutor!"—everyone including the nearby policemen thought he had said "You are a prostitute!"

No mistake of the ear ever revealed more expressively what the instinct of the masses has long grasped to be the fact. No marking of labels upon the poisonous brands of "justice" handed out by the Tammany administration of graft and corruption and the republican rulers of the oil scandal and of the Ohio gang is necessary to warn the masses of workers as to the real nature of these forces.

These are the products of "democracy." More accurately they are the products of a "broad" and "open" democracy. The broader the democracy, the greater the corruption, Lenin pointed out.

These efforts of "democracy" and its kept courts to shield itself against inevitable exposure by the representatives of the working class are proving valuable lessons to the masses. Notwithstanding the coming election campaign during which both old parties must again attempt to appear in the guise of liberality, the Wall Street rulers are forced ruthlessly to suppress the greatest menace to their power.

There will be very little in the future of free speech to fight for, even as an issue by those who are still deluded by the phrase. We will have only "democracy"! The kind that is handed out on Independence Day.

When the New York World said recently that in the nomination of such men as Herbert Hoover and Al Smith, democracy has been justified, the answer is: certainly your democracy has there been vindicated quite as it has been vindicated the sentencing of our comrades to jail. For such democracy the working class has only the strongest contempt.

The working class also seeks "democracy." And it is learning how to get it. Our comrades in the Soviet Union have already learned this most valuable lesson: the nature of capitalist democracy.

Here in the United States the Communists during the coming election campaign will do their part to make the subject clear. And no small share in this most important task will be taken by our comrades now in jail.

For a Better Daily Worker.

The appearance of The DAILY WORKER in its new form, and we hope, with improved content, surely will bring a thrill of proletarian pride to those readers who have watched and struggled with their paper during four years of repeated crisis and acute difficulty. That this change could have been brought about immediately after what was probably the most serious crisis through which the paper has passed is more than anything else a testimony to the virility, the indomitable courage, the fighting spirit of the working class.

No one need be under the illusion that the difficulties of The DAILY WORKER have been solved, temporarily or permanently. But in a spirit of the sanest realism, we can say: The DAILY WORKER will not be downed—because the working class will not be downed.

The shortcomings of the paper, its weaknesses are better known by its editorial staff than by the enemies of our movement. So that when we rejoice in the upward climb of our paper it is not for a moment to forget that our greatest tasks are yet to be accomplished. To this end the paper honestly seeks criticism and suggestions for its improvement. Within the limits set by financial and other walls, efforts will constantly be made in that direction.

The paper is undergoing a rebirth just as our movement is undergoing a rebirth. We are sinking our roots more deeply into the soil of the American working class. No one need feel pessimistic over the prospects ahead.

And this is where the really essential work begins—

For our paper this means, the systematic building up of a body of workers, comrades, sympathizers who in the most literal sense will become the basis of The DAILY WORKER. Our reporters must be the members of the working class. Capitalist papers report the "news" from the outside. We must have the news from those who directly help make the news—from the inside. Our news must carry the ring and the spirit of the struggle which it details. The eyes and the heart of The DAILY WORKER must be made to see and to hear the sounds and the views which appear to the working class. This can be accomplished only through the co-operation of the workers in a far greater degree than has yet been given.

A worker correspondent in every shop!

A DAILY WORKER reporter in every local trade union!

A correspondent for the working class in every strike!

A reporter to The DAILY WORKER from every mine district, from every textile section, from the farm belts, from every state and city.

Buy, read, distribute The DAILY WORKER. Agitate and propagandize its message: For the Workers—Against the Bosses! The DAILY WORKER.

Hackmen Must Organize.

Working conditions and wage standards among the 60,000 taxicab drivers of Greater New York have been forced down to such low levels that united action on the part of the rank and file is but a matter of months if not weeks. The average wage of the drivers is said to be about $30 per week. Hours vary from a minimum of about 50 to 90 per week. A large majority of drivers work the seven-day week.

The whole industry is on a piece-work, or more accurately, on a speed-up "commission" basis. Unemployment in other trades, the current economic depression and the relatively easier opportunity of securing a job as a hackman than elsewhere has brought about a steady increase in the number of workers in the field. The taxicab owners, the big fleeters, have taken advantage of these conditions to institute one of the most vicious speed-up systems to be found anywhere.

This industry will not remain indefinitely in its present state of frenzied competition. Already the bosses under the leadership of the Yellow Taxi Corporation, union hating, Morgan-controlled, "yellow-dogged," have moved to rule out competition, and as a necessary accompaniment to that proecss, to force out thousands of workers from the trade.

Again we find the common practice of "rationalization" at the expense of the workers. The industry lends itself very easily to combinations and mergers. The only reason that this development has not long since taken place on a large scale is because of the competition of the small owner-driver who by working long hours at a low income has been able to hold back the merging of the larger fleeters.

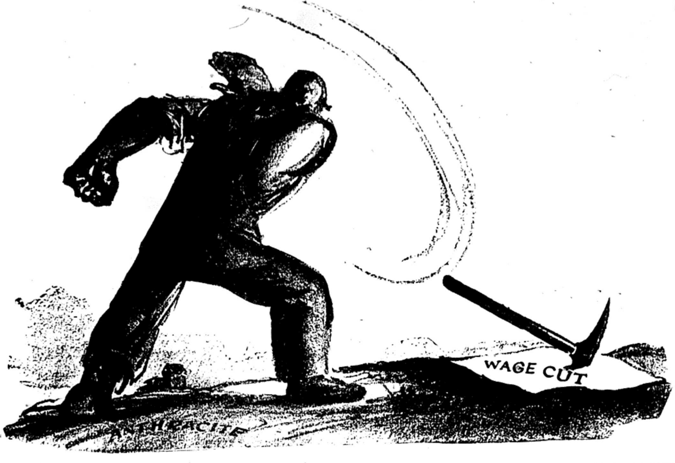
The Greater City Taxi Owners Association is now attempting to meet the problem in another way, through legislation intended to curb the little fry in the industry. The Tammany connections of these bosses will help them in their efforts, which it is understood are to be brought to a climax, "after election"—the time when many good things are scheduled to come true for the franchise seekers, the increased fare grabbers and the grafters who live on the fat of capitalism under the blessings of Tammany Hall.

The efforts to capitalize the evils in the industry have again taken the typical form of "political" agitation in a move by the editor of the "Taxi Weekly," a trade paper, toward the formation of a Hackmens' Political League. This is a palpable, Tammany Hall-Al Smith, fraud and will be exposed as such.

The taxi drivers can begin to solve their problems only through the formation of a militant, fighting union. The others are all bosses' schemes. The political power of the drivers must likewise be used to register on the workers' side, their own side, by voting the ticket of the only workers' party, the Communist Party.

MEETING THE CHALLENGE

By Fred Ellis



Told You So

A verdict of guilty was delivered by a jury against Fred Marvin, Peephole Man of America and special adviser to the Granddaughters of the American Revolution. Likewise comes the conviction of Mr. Nosovitsky, international spy, agent provocateur and general stool pigeon, on a charge of bigamy. Marvin made a living drawing up blacklists of alleged reds and Nosovitsky brought home the bacon by forging documents and marrying solvent females. Marvin is now scratching his head over the problem of how to raise $17,000 libel damages and Nosovitsky is scratching himself in jail for reasons just as disagreeable.

The way of the plebian stool-pigeon is strown with thumb tacks. Once his services are no longer required he is thrown aside with as little compunction as a scavenger would feel over pitching a dead cat into a garbage can. It is doubtful if Marvin could raise the price of a meal from his former customers, now that he has been discredited; and as for Nosovitsky if he needed the price of a delousing operation he would probably be handed a bed bug.

While on the subject of patriots, it may be of interest to our readers to know that Attorney General Reading of Massachusetts, one of the most bitter enemies of Sacco and Vanzetti, was driven from his position because of his acceptance of a $25,000 fee from the Decimo Club while the organization was under investigation by the government. This is the "patriot" who helped send the two labor leaders to the electric chair. Whenever you hear a man insisting on his burning love for his country see if his right hand is not behind his back, palm upwards.

NEITHER the republican nor democratic platforms, or at least the planks that vaguely take cognizance of the existence of the trade union movement, are satisfactory to the officials of the American Federation of Labor, according to a Washington dispatch dated July 3. A group of disgruntled labor leaders were pictured wending their way from Houston to Washington, wounded in spirit and with humbled pride. What they were doing in Houston until now was not stated. Perhaps they were sleeping off their disappointment.

BEING somewhat skeptical about the statements and motives of reactionary labor leaders, this writer is of the opinion that the boys are holding out for a better price. It would never do to give in too soon. Or probably they do not want to give the trade union membership the impression that they sold out on the first bid. It is dollars to peanuts that the labor fakers will be found ballyhooing on the democrat and republican bandwagons when the election campaign gets into its stride, regardless of how little consideration Wall Street's two parties showed the labor movement.

THE garbage inquiry now conducted by commissioner of accounts Higgins is raising a lot of dust if nothing else. It appears that there is more graft in garbage than anybody, except those most closely acquainted with it, expected. One firm friendly with both the Hylan and Walker administrations, made a cool million out of a choice chunk. Higgins' solution of the problem is to transfer department officials from one graft area to another. Thus the seed shall be spread.

Placing the Party on the Ballot

By JACK STACHEL

It is no easy job to place the Communist ticket on the ballot for the presidential elections. The masters of this country have seen to it (and are improving on the situation every day as far as placing obstacles in our path is concerned), that democracy shall have her way by making it most difficult in most states and almost impossible in some states for a Workers Party to get on the ballot. Democracy is reduced to the right of the workers to vote for either of the picked candidates of the capitalists and the bankers. In the present presidential elections the capitalists are offering to the workers their two faithful servants, Big Hearted Hoover and Honest Al Smith, and the workers have full freedom to choose which of the two shall break their strikes, send the National Guards against them. And even here it must be stated that the bosses sometimes have preferences as to who shall be their office boy and these preferences are translated into campaign contributions, and it has been without exception since 1892 that the candidate with the biggest campaign fund became his masters' servant.

Why We Nominate Candidates

The Workers (Communist) Party has nominated its candidates for President and Vice-President, William Z. Foster and Benjamin Gitlow, respectively. Both are workers who have proved their ability to lead the masses and their willingness to do everything that will advance the interests of their class.

The Workers (Communist) Party in nominating these candidates does not come to the workers with the hope that if its candidates were elected that this would mean the end of the rule of capitalism. We have no illusions as to the willingness of the masters to surrender without a bitter struggle in which the workers and poor farmers will defeat them. The Communist Party of America is a revolutionary party. It considers as its main task in the present election campaign the mobilization of the masses for a struggle against capitalism. While it participates in the election campaign in order to mobilize the masses for struggle, it exposes capitalist democracy, and teaches the workers that only through a revolutionary struggle can capitalism be abolished. It teaches the workers that they can not take over the capitalist state and use it against the capitalists, but that they must destroy it and set up a workers' and farmers' government (dictatorship of the proletariat) and use it for the organization of a socialist society and for the suppression of the present day ruling class.

At the same time our party, when it nominates its candidates for the various legislative bodies, is out to elect them; to elect them in order that they may use these legislative bodies as a forum from which to speak to broader masses against capitalism and capitalist parliament and organize them for the overthrow of capitalism.

Must Place Party on Ballot

The Workers (Communist) Party is the party of the workers and exploited farmers. The workers must help to place their ticket on the ballot. Not only must they sign the petitions, but our sympathizers everywhere must come to the office of the Party in their locality and give their services as canvassers for petitions to place our Party on the ballot in their state. Only if a large number of non-Party workers are drawn in to help in this work will we be assured that we will collect such a large number of petitions for the Communist candidates that the state officials will not dare to keep the workers' candidates off the ballot.

A great deal of benefit can be derived for our Party in the process of the collection of signatures by spreading the program and platform of our Party and by making important contacts for our Party. It goes without saying that our press can be greatly advanced in this work. We must not allow any of our workers to degenerate into merely going out for signatures. They must recognize that our getting on the ballot, our staying on the ballot (for many times we are taken off by the officials even after we have fulfilled all requirements) depends on the mass support of the workers. We must, therefore, do everything possible to promote the Party and its work among the masses in the collection of signatures as the best guarantee of placing the Party on the ballot, and in the first place to mobilize the masses for struggle against capitalism, to acquaint them with our literature and in every way draw them closer to our Party.

In proceeding to place our ticket on the ballot, we are confronted with different laws and regulations in every state. It is understood, of course, that the obstacles placed against the Communists are greater than against any other minority party. Every effort is being made to keep the Communist ticket off the ballot. In some states the officials openly boast that they will not allow the Communists to go on the ballot no matter what the laws provide for. It is under such conditions that our Party is working to place its presidential candidates on the ballot in order not to disfranchise those workers who want to cast their protest vote against capitalism and who no see that the Workers (Communist) Party is the only party that holds high the banner of the class struggle in the United States.

Must Collect Petitions.

In only a few states can we place our candidates on the ballot thru a state convention of our Party. Where this is allowed, it is a simple matter, aside from the fact that the state officials can place all sorts of obstacles in our way if they are determined to keep us off the ballot.

In most states, we can get on only through the collections of petitions of citizens of the state. To make it more difficult some of the states require that a certain number of signatures be secured in every county of the state. Some of these counties may have very few workers, and although we may have, let us say, instead of the required signatures in New York State over 200,000, unless we get at least 50 signatures in every county in the state we will not get on the ballot.

We have not much time in which to do this work. In some states we have to file very shortly. In all states the work is going on at this time.

We have already placed our ticket on the ballot in seven states, New Jersey, Delaware, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, Michigan and Kansas.

In the 1924 presidential elections, we were on in only 14 states. This year we hope to be on in a minimum of 30 states, and perhaps we will succeed in getting on in about 35 states. We are, of course, concentrating on the most important industrial states and on the most important agricultural states. If we get on in only 30 states, these states will represent about 80 per cent of the population and about 90 per cent of the industrial workers in this country.

The job is a difficult one but it can be done. It will be done with the full mobilization of our Party membership for the collection of signatures and with the help of all our sympathizers.

Great Opportunity For Party.

We have the opportunity in the coming elections of placing the Party before the workers as a serious political party fighting in their interests. We have shown the masses that we can lead them in the miners' struggle, needle trades struggle, the struggle of the textile workers and a score of other important struggles. We have never fully mobilized our strength to show them that we are also their leader in the political struggles and even in the election campaign which to us is part of the same class struggle that rages in the mines, mills and factories.

The socialist party, which is today nothing more than a petty bourgeois party—a party of small shop keepers, professionals and retired radicals—in this campaign does not even make the pretense as it once did, that it is a party of class struggle. At the last convention, the socialist party deleted the class struggle pledge from its membership application card and substituted a pledge to follow the policy of independent political action. Mind you, not working class independent political action, but just merely independent political action. Independent only of the democratic and republican parties, but not independent of capitalism.

The socialist party is ready for another third party like the La Follette movement of 1924 and in fact claims that it has become the inheritor of the La Follette traditions and is the third party. It is true that the ideology of the La Follette movement has been substituted for Marxism in the socialist party but the votes of La Follette will go to Hoover and Smith and many of the socialist leaders will be found on the Smith bandwagon. Already a number of them, including the socialist Negro leader, A. Philip Randolph and the socialist councilmen of Milwaukee, have gone in favor of Smith. Even the Forward, the organ of the socialist party, is not very strong in its criticism of Al Smith. One thing is certain, the socialist party has ceased being a workers' party. It will not gain much favor among the petty bourgeois elements on whom it is basing itself. These elements will vote for Smith. They believe in success.

In this situation, our Party has great opportunities as the only party of the class struggle in the United States. Give the militant workers an opportunity to demonstrate their growing class consciousness on election day by voting the Communist Party ticket. Place the Party on the ballot so that they will have an opportunity to do this.

The Tasks of the Red Labor International

Workers in the leather trades throughout the world are experiencing more adverse conditions today. The burden of rationalizing the enterprises is being shifted entirely onto the shoulders of the workers. The profits of the employers are being enhanced at the expense of the wages of the men. The policy of the reformist leaders is to aid the employers.

In view of the general situation and especially the outstanding features observed here, the Leather Workers' Conference urged in its resolutions that a struggle be taken up first of all to combat the lowering of the living standards of the workers. The basic slogans of this struggle are to be the following demands: Seven-hour day, wage rates to be preserved in conformity with the living minimum, protection of labor, especially for women workers and juniors, to struggle against the consequences of rationalization and to combat obligatory state arbitration. Furthermore, the resolution stresses the necessity of maintaining connections with, and having the support of, the whole proletariat of the U. S. S. R. and especially of the U. S. S. R. leather workers.

MINERS' CONFERENCE

Between 1926 and 1927 the exploitation of the workers in the mining industry has increased, while yet more speed-up systems have been introduced. Meanwhile in all countries a new movement is gaining ground to struggle against the capitalist onslaught. The new strike wave was enhanced after the defeat of the British miners in 1926. New disputes and collisions are therefore inevitable. A further intensification of the struggle will take place. Realizing these facts and the relative weakness of the revolutionary miners' organizations, this conference considered it necessary to strengthen organizational and agitational activities, to reinforce trade union influence in the large industrial centers and to enhance the struggle against the reformists for the leadership of the miners' movement.

The following basic questions were taken up: The question of organizing mutual aid during strikes and lockouts on a wider scale, questions of strike tactics, to increase the struggle to legalize the activities of the oppositions, to struggle against unemployment, to combat the fascist, reformist and company unions and especially the "Miners International," which is, in fact, a scab organization. To carry out the tactics of unity, organize the unemployed and unorganized workers, to reinforce publicity activities and organize "fraternities"—these being the basic tasks put forward by the conference for execution during the coming period.

METAL WORKERS' CONFERENCE

The conference noted that as a result of the intensive introduction of capitalist rationalization exploitation of the workers in the metal trades has increased during the last few years. The economic position of this branch of industry is such that a direct and unconcealed attack on the gains of the workers is inevitable. Unemployment is on the increase, labor conditions are becoming worse and hours are being lengthened, which will cause and is already causing more disputes and strikes in all countries. In this process the role of the reformists is seen in their active support of the capitalists by preventing the mobilization of the metal workers' forces. This conference noted at the same time that the metal workers are discarding their former passivity and entering a new period of active class struggles. A new rise of the economic and strike movement is now becoming apparent. In view of these facts of the present situation the Metal Workers' Conference considers it necessary to conduct a campaign to win over the broad masses of social-democratic and non-party workers in the unions for the revolutionary oppositions, making clear to the workers at large the political significance of the strike struggle and the necessity of mercilessly combating the idea of industrial peace. The conference considers the central task of the present movement to be the strengthening of the struggle against the reformists, exposing their tactics and their true character. Turning to organizational questions the conference urged the following basic tasks—to get organized control of the growing movement among the workers, to reinforce connections with the Metal Workers' I. P. C. and take direct participation in the activities, to strengthen its financial base, and revise its rules in connection with several changes in its activities.

The creation of a real militant class international of workers in the iron and steel trades is the basic task confronting the revolutionary metal workers' trade union movement; all the efforts of the M. W. I. P. C. must be concentrated to bring this about.

LEWIS MACHINE MOVES TO BREAK MINERS' STRIKE

Orders 7,500 Coal Diggers Back

MAUCH CHUNK, July 10.—Further strike-breaking activities on the part of the John L. Lewis machine were disclosed here when Andrew Matty, district president of the United Mine Workers, ordered 7,500 striking coal miners back to work.

The miners went out last week on a sympathy strike when the Lehigh Valley Coal and Navigation Company, by whom they are employed, locked out a number of its workers in other pits in direct violation of the existing agreement. Considerable resentment has been aroused among the miners of the anthracite over the establishment of the contractor system and the failure of the Lewis machine officials in all districts to fight against this and other evils.

The attempt by Matty to break the strike of the Lehigh Valley coal workers will, it is expected, meet with the firm resistance of the rank and file. The progressives, under the leadership of the Save-the-Union movement, have endorsed the strike and are fighting for the elimination of the existing evils in the anthracite and against the Lewis machine.

AUTO CARAVANS TO MINE FIELDS

Prepare For Defence Week July 22-29

(Special To DAILY WORKER.)

PITTSBURGH, July 10. — In preparation for the Miners' Defense Week July 22-29, a caravan of automobiles carrying relief workers and sympathizers direct to the industrial battle front in western Pennsylvania will leave every city and town east of Chicago where there are relief committees or International Labor Defense branches, this Friday. The New York City National Miners' Relief Committees are arranging the caravan; participants will take care of their own expenses.

Those who go will see the mounted state troopers and coal and iron police patrol the roads. They will see the scab patch, where imported strikebreakers live, hemmed in by high walls.

See Scenes of Attack.

Renton, scene of the infamous attack of the state troopers upon men, women and children pickets who gathered along the road to keep the first shipment of scabs from entering the coal pits, will be one of the first camps visited. Thirty mounted

ASSAILS BROTHER IN CAFE STRIKE

Sazar, Left Winger, Will Picket

The workers on strike for the recognition of their union against the owners of the True Food Vegetarian Restaurant, 44th St. and Broadway, received new encouragement yesterday when the brother of the restaurant owner issued a statement denouncing him for his anti-labor stand and agreeing to go on the picket line for the workers on strike.

Henry Sazer, himself the leader of the left wing in the Cloth, Hat, Cap and Millinery Workers Union, yesterday condemned his brother, Benjamin Sazer, who, he said, had made all his money out of the patronage of union men, and declared, "I always stand ready to help my union brothers, even if it means to assist in a fight against my own brother."

Sazer further explained that his brother and his partner, Tofilofsky, had always posed as a semi-radical in order to retain the good will of his customers. His brother, he said, is still a member of the Jewish National Workingmen's Alliance, a socialist-controlled organization. He also stated his intention to picket the restaurant in order to assist the strikers.

Particularly emphatic was Sazer's condemnation of his brother, who on the one hand can pose as "sympathetic" to labor and on the other hand can order the arrest of pick-

MOSCOW PLANS BIG CELEBRATION

Anniversary of USSR Constitution

(Special Cable to the Daily Worker.)

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., July 10.—A delegation comprising six hundred Kharkov workers arrived here yesterday to participate in the celebrations on the occasion of the fifth anniversary of the proclamation of the U. S. S. R. constitution.

They were cordially met by workers of Moscow, when they arrived at the railway station. The celebration, according to reports received here so far, and according to the spirit and overwhelming enthusiasm that the Moscow workers are showing at present, seem to be a certain indication that the jubilee will be one of the most impressive and joyous demonstrations held here.

BISCUIT SLAVE URGES UNION

Hot Weather Adds to Misery in Plants

(By a Worker Correspondent)

The other day I read in The DAILY WORKER about the miserable conditions in the National Biscuit Company.

Being an employe of that plant myself, I not only approve of the statement, but also want to add that it is even worse. The speed-up system of the place is almost intolerable. New machinery is being brought in practically every day which means that less workers are employed and the employed are therefore driven to do more work. And if anyone complains, the bosses have a quick and ready reply: "If you don't like it you can look for another job."

During the summer the heat in the National Biscuit plants are unbearable. There are no electric fans, and sometimes the workers are compelled to close the windows which are slightly opened because of interference with the work. The foremen in their palm beach suits have made an art of slave-driving.

I want to say to the fellow-workers in the National Biscuit plants: It is about time that we realized what is happening about us. It is about time we organized a union to fight for us and protect us. We cannot expect anything from the company. The company is organized against us.

MINOR, 4 OTHER WORKERS, HELD INCOMMUNICADO

Young Pioneer Ordered Sent to Indiana

While Robert Minor, editor of The DAILY WORKER and Workers (Communist) Party candidate for U. S. Senator, and four other workers were held in jail practically incommunicado for taking part in an anti-imperialist demonstration July 3, another participant in the demonstration was yesterday caught in the machinery of capitalist "justice" when Magistrate Samuel D. Levy of the Children's Court condemned Rose Plotkin, 13-year-old Young Pioneer, to be sent back to her home town in Indiana.

The young militant had been kept prisoner in the Heckscher Foundation since her arrest. When she appeared for trial yesterday morning, Jacques Buitenkant, defending attorney, representing the New York Section of the International Labor Defense, asked that the case be postponed in order that Fanny Plotkin, the sister and guardian of the young accused, might have an opportunity to testify. Fanny Plotkin was serving a two-day sentence for her part in the demonstration. The magistrate, evidently acting on instructions fro mhigher up, refused, declaring that Fanny Plotkin was "unfit" to be the guardian of the Young Pioneer. Rose Plotkin will be released from the Heckscher Foundation today and sent back to Indiana.

Three Workers Freed.

Three of the workers who were yesterday given jail-terms by the viciously anti-labor Magistrate Maurice Gottlieb, of the First Criminal District Court, were released yesterday at 4 p. m. upon the completion of their two-day terms. They are Phil Frankfeld, Fanny Plotkin and Anna Bloch.

The other five, Robert Minor, Rebecca Grecht, Harriet Silverman, Emanuel George and Robert Wolf, who are being held virtually incommunicado, will be released Friday afternoon. The men are in the Tombs and the women in Jefferson Market Jail.

When Lydia Gibson, Minor's wife, attempted to see her husband yesterday, prison authorities refused her entrance. They also refused to allow books or copies of The DAILY WORKER to be sent to Minor, stating that prisoners are perrmitted to receive only underwear. When she asked to have underwear delivered to him, she was told that prisoners can purchase underwear at the prison store. This is an obvious attempt to compel inmates of the Tombs to boost the profits of the prison store.

The cases of Max Shachtman, D. Benjamin, George Powers, Nathan Kaplan and I. Zimmerman, five other workers arrested when police attacked the anti-imperialist demonstration, will be heard at the First District Criminal Court tomorrow morning. Kaplan is charged with felonious assault, while the others are accused of disorderly conduct.

The District Executive Committee of the Young Pioneers last night issued a statement condemning the action of the magistrate in ordering Rose Plotkin, 13-year-old member of the Young Pioneers, to be sent back to Indiana for participation in an anti-imperialist demonstration July 3.

Want 500 Volunteers At Center Tomorrow

Five hundred volunteers are wanted at the Workers Center, 26-28 Union Square, tomorrow evening at 7:30 for important organization work in connection with the concert at Coney Island Stadium Saturday. All volunteers are asked to report on the fourth floor. Proceeds of the affair will go to The DAILY WORKER.

NOTED ARTIST TO APPEAR

Volpe and Theremin Prepare Program

"One of the foremost of American conductors" has been the practically universal comment of critics concerning Arnold Volpe, who will conduct an orchestra of 50 picked musicians at the great concert to be given at Coney Island Stadium Saturday for the benefit of The DAILY WORKER.

Volpe was the founder and first conductor of the Lewisohn Stadium symphony concerts and last summer acted as guest conductor at these concerts. He has also been the founder and conductor of a number of other well-known orchestras in this country. Volpe is a former pupil of the famous Leopold Auer, teacher of Mischa Elman, Jascha Heifetz and other leading violinists of the world.

To Play Famous Overture

A program of some of the best known symphonic selections is now being rehearsed by Volpe and his orchestra. One of the numbers will be Tschaikovsky's famous "1812 Overture," written on the defeat of Napoleon's invasion of Russia.

The Roxy Ballet is also rehearsing its program under the personal

SOVIET VESSEL NEARS "ITALIA"

"Krassin" Only 2 Miles Away

VIRGO BAY, Spitzbergen, July 10.—A radio message from the Russian Icebreaker Krassin said today that the ship was only two miles from the dirigible Italia ice camp off North East Land.

The same message said that one of the Italia survivors, apparently mentally deranged, had wandered away from the camp.

Within sight of land on a melting icefloe four members of the crew of the dirigible Italia, headed by Lieutenant Alfredo Viglieri, today were reported in dispatches from the north as losing hope of rescue.

Latest dispatches from the Arctic area told how the men were undernourished, unkempt and suffering acutely from cold and exhaustion. Their plight is pitiful, dispatches said, because the ice is melting so swiftly that it is next to impossible for a plane to land. Captain Thornberg of the Swedish expedition messaged that relief must be carried to the men within a few days, otherwise they must be abandoned to their deaths.

All hope has been exhausted for saving six other men—three members of the Italia group and the Captain Sora relief expedition of three. They can not be found and probably died on North East Land.

STRIKERS FINED IN SCAB FRACAS

Say Milliners Broke Umbrella Over Head

Despite testimony favorable to the defendants, brought out by their attorney's examination of a policeman, Magistrate Jean Norris, in Jefferson Market Court yesterday fined Betty Newmann and Francis Schwartz, striking miliners, five dollars each for allegedly breaking an umbrella over the head of a strikebreaker.

The two workers have been striking for many weeks against the attempt of several employers who have united with International President Max Zaritsky in a campaign to destroy their union, the Millinery Band Workers Union Local 43 of the Cloth Hat Cap and Millinery Workers International.

The policeman testified that the disputed umbrella had been not in the hands of either of the defendants, when the arrest was made, but in the hands of the husband of the strike-breaker. The workers were arrested last week at 30th St. and Broadway.

The right wing clique in the Cloth Hat Cap and Millinery Workers Union have again demonstrated that they will stoop to any terrorist methods in order to quiet the protest of the membership who see their union being wrecked by the Zaritsky gang. In the offices of Local 24 a worker was brutally assaulted yesterday by a hired thug acting as a "guardian" of the officials.

J. Rosen, one of the many unemployed workers who congregate at the union headquarters was assaulted with a blunt weapon wielded by Sam Blechman, a paid escort of scabs sent to work in shops in the officials' fight against Local 43.

OUST STRIKEBREAKING MAYOR OF NEW BEDFORD, IS DEMAND

Drive for Red Election Fund Under Way

CONTRIBUTIONS POURING INTO PARTY OFFICE

Over $2,000 Already Received

Contributions to the Communist Campaign Fund are already pouring into the national office of the Workers (Communist) Party at 43 E. 125th St.

Over $2,000, in amounts ranging from $5 to $500, has already been received.

Bishop William Montgomery Brown, the heretic of Galion, O., and an international figure thru his war on the superstitions of the church and his espousal of Communism, leads off with a contribution of $500.

Other Contributions.

Other contributions are: Albert Gerling, Madrid, Iowa $5; T. Gerlach, $25; Benny Smith, Charlotte, N. C., $5; I. Haberman, Minneapolis, $3; Hyman Slomberg, McKeesport, Pa., $5; Alice MacFadlin, Luscon City, Ariz., $10; collected at Mecca Temple mass meeting, $1,662.37; collected at convention banquet, $74.68; S. Rubin, Minneapolis, $25; Julius D. Lore, Philadelphia, $50; Stavros Heas, High Coal, W. Va., $10; M. Eisenstat, Endicott, N. Y., $15; Branch No. 80, Philadelphia, $5.

Candidates Jailed.

Several candidates of the party are in New York jails for having participated in an anti-imperialist demonstration in front of J. P. Morgan's offices in Wall Street.

The capitalist press is filling its pages with drivel about the virtues of the two sets of capitalist candidates. While some papers support one set against the other, there is no hard feeling. This furnishes additional proof of the Communist contention that there is no difference between the two parties, except the rival ambitions of the respective political leaders.

The boodle of the employing classes will be poured into the treasuries of both parties. This money will be used to drive the workers into a frenzy over Al Smith "who started life as a newsboy" or Herbert Hoover who was born in a shack in the west.

Same Old Hokum.

The worker who does not realize that a class struggle exists and who sees nothing in this campaign except a struggle between personalities will be confused by this propaganda. It is therefore extremely urgent that the Workers (Communist) Party should be in a position to publish literature to counteract this political poison of the capitalist parties.

The raising of funds for the Communist election campaign is now in full swing. Money is needed at once. One dollar now is better than three later on in the campaign. Every worker who can spare a dollar should mail it at once to the National Campaign Headquarters, 43 E. 125th St., New York City, Alexander Trachtenberg, treasurer.

OFFICIALS BLOCK NECKWEAR UNION

The United Neckwear Makers' Union, 11,016, will limit itself to "legal" means, it was learned yesterday, to fight the strangling injunction issued against it by Supreme Court Justice Arthur Tompkins of Nyack, who held that picketing activities of the union had "unlawfully obstructed the sidewalks" before the shops of the bosses.

The decision to carry on a purely "legal" fight against the injunction which is one of the most drastic on record, is understood to have followed the policy adopted by the leaders of the union on the advice of their attorney, Louis Waldman, former socialist assemblyman of New York. On his advice the neckwear workers' officials adopted a policy of "making a test case" of the issue, it is reported. No mass picketing or violation of the injunction first issued last November was permitted.

CLOAK COUNCIL MEET TOMORROW

N. O. C. Committee Issues Parley Call

The official call of the New York Local Committee of the National Organization Committee of the Cloakmakers International Union for the first monthly conference of shop delegates was issued to the workers in the industry yesterday. It stresses the need for the cloak and dressmakers to be represented 100 per cent at the conference. It declares:

"Tomorrow at 6 o'clock, representatives of the cloak and dress shops of New York will assemble in Webster Hall for the first monthly conference of the Council of Shop Delegates to discuss the activities of the past month and lay down plans for future work.

"The cloak and dress season is approaching! The bosses of our industry are eager to continue the chaos, the sweat shop system, the long hours and the starvation wages so that they may make millions of dollars' profit from our labor! The leaders of the "Company Union" (the agents of the bosses) will once more raise a turmoil about organizing the trade and establishing union conditions. But just as during the past four seasons, this is only a fake slogan through which the clique will seek to maintain its domination over the workers, thus increasing the chaos and demoralization in the interests of their allies, the bosses, at whose mercy their "Company Union" exists!

"The last Shop Chairmen's Conference, held on June the 2nd, has laid the basis for making an end to the present situation by uniting all the constructive elements for the purpose of building the Union. A mass organization committee was formed and plans for an organization campaign worked out. The united front of all constructive elements is a living fact today. Hundreds of passive cloak and dressmakers joined the ranks of the National Organization Committee during the past few weeks. Now is the time to take up the great task of building the Union with all our strength.

"No shop chairman or shop committee can afford to stay away from great moment. No one must be main passive or indifferent at this grerat moment. No one must be under the illusion that the work will be done without him. Let us get together to build the Union. Let us through our united strength make an end to the misery, degradation, the sweat shop system and the "Company Union" which has brought it all about."

EXECUTE FIVE DON PLOTTERS

Commute Sentences of Six Others

MOSCOW, July 10.—Five of the eleven conspirators who were sentenced to death for organizing the Donetz coal conspiracy were executed today. Commutations of sentences had been recommended and granted in the cases of the six other conspirators. Those executed were Budney, Krishanovsky, Gorlietzky, Yusewitch and Boyarinof.

The trial of the conspirators, which lasted a month, revealed the existence of an imperialist plot to wreck the economy of the Soviet Union. Foreign official, as well as private capitalist enterprises, were involved in the plot.

RED CONGRESS REPORT FRIDAY

Speakers Will State New Policy

In order that the recently decided policy of the Red Trade Union International for its adherents in this country be clarified, Local New York of the Trade Union Educational League has called a mass meeting, Friday night, where a report will be given by the leaders of the recently returned delegation to the World Congress. The meeting will begin at 8 o'clock at Manhattan Lyceum, 66 E. 4th St.

27 Lands Represented

The Congress of the Red Trade Union International, held in Moscow, brought together the organizers of the revolutionary unions of 27 countries. The congress exposed the role which the reformist and reactionary labor leaders are playing in every country in collaboration with the government and employers towards the defeat of the revolutionary unions of the organized working class.

The congress devoted considerable attention to the American trade union movement and laid down a

'FARMER-LABOR' MEET ON

Lawyers, Businessmen Are Delegates

CHICAGO, July 10. — Mildly denouncing both the republican and democratic parties, delegates to the "Farmer-Labor" convention assembled here today to choose a presidential candidate.

While Herbert Hoover, republican presidential nominee was mentioned in the keynote speech of Laura Hughes Lunde, of Chicago, no direct reference was made of Gov. Al Smith. Hoover was referred to as "a member of that cabinet which knew what was going on" — a timorous hint of the oil scandals and corruption in the Harding administration.

Four men appear outstanding candidates for the presidential nomination, according to the United Press. Among them are former senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska; former governor Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania and Gov. Sweet of Colorado. The fourth is a dry southern democrat whose name was not revealed.

The majority of the delegates are small business men, lawyers and other professional men and a scattering of "gentleman farmers."

ASHLEY INCITED TERROR, CHARGE MILL STRIKERS

Picket Demonstration Great Success

BULLETIN

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., July 10.—A mass meeting is to be held of all the workers in the ten textile manufacturing plants not on strike in New Bedford, according to an announcement made by Eli Keller of the Textile Workers Union of the Textile Mills Committee.

The workers in these plants are to take up the question of joining the strike of the 28,000 men working in the factories of the New Bedford Cotton Manufacturing Association.

The ten mills mentioned include the Firstone Tire Fabric Mills and other automobile fabric concerns. The workers in these plants did not have their wages reduced when the general wage cut went into effect, but nevertheless suffered reductions in the recent past.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., July 10. — The slogan, "Oust Mayor Ashley," which was put forward several days ago by the New Bedford Textile Workers Union of the Textile Mills Committee is being taken up by so large a section of the entire New Bedford population that it no longer assumes the character of a strikers' protest alone. It was revealed yesterday that a citizens' body is in process of formation which will lead the fight to rid the city of the textile bosses' agent, Ashley.

Inquiries made at the office of the Textile Mills Committee later brought a statement from its spokesmen to the effect that they would be ready to give their whole-hearted endorsement to any such move. It was also learned there that a mass meeting to which the general public will be invited is already being planned.

Mayor Seeks Violence

Many sections of the New Bedford population are expressing the deepest resentment against Ashley's open attempt to provoke bloodshed in the big textile strike here, by ordering heavily armed troops to the 56 mills yesterday morning. Ashley, it is charged, was well acquainted with the fact that the mill owners had planted provocateurs among the 20,000 who turned out to picket the mills.

In addition to this, it is shown that the mayor had pursued a deliberate policy of breaking the strike, by a series of wholesale arrests for no greater crime than singing on the picket lines. These arrests were followed up by jailings of strikers and their leaders. Over 46 were arrested and either heavily fined or jailed for this "offense." Murdoch and Beal, the two leaders of the T. M. C. are still imprisoned for leading picket lines.

(Special To The Daily Worker)

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., July 10.—The mill owners staged the same farcical performance today as they did yesterday, when they had the factory whistles blow long and imperative blasts early in the morning, to show the strikers that they were ready to resume operations if they would only come back to work. The thousands of pickets of the Textile Mills Committee greeted the whistles and the wide-open gates with the same contemptuous scorn.

The widespread protest roused by the threat of armed terror is so great as to have caused the announcement that the militia will be withdrawn after today.

Enthusiastic Meetings

Mass meetings where the greatest enthusiasm yet exhibited were held yesterday. The strikers are thoroughly convinced that yesterday's events gave conclusive proof that the strike will be won. In addition to the local leaders of the strike, Albert Weisberd, national head of the Mills Committee, also spoke.

30,000 ATHLETES PARADE IN MOSCOW

By CLARINA MICHELSON.
(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., July 10.—Red Square was a moving mass of color today. 30,000 physical culturists from the trade unions paraded before Lenin's tomb where they were greeted by Tomsky, Maxim Gorky, Mihalov and Uhanov. Textile workers, transport workers, clothing workers, metal workers, food workers, municipal workers, wood workers—workers from every union,—swept by, bare-legged, five abreast. Each union had its own colors, light blue sweaters with dark blue shirts, red with white, green with black,—every conceivable color combination. Each union had its own banners and its own bands.

Many Sports.

The Metal Workers' Union alone was represented in 30 different groups—football, tennis, swimming, pole vaulting, disc throwing, etc. A group of chess enthusiasts carried a huge cardboard "castle," on which was written: "In October we checkmated capitalism. A little more effort and it will be eliminated all over." Another banner read: "Physical culturists: Fight for a new and healthy life." And another: "Long live healthy descendants of the builders of socialism." Several hundred tennis players, all in white, men and women, held their rackets aloft in salute as they passed the mausoleum. 1,500 bicyclists, several hundred motorcyclists and a group of physical culturists on horseback were also in the parade which took over two hours to pass the grandstand where thousands of onlookers watched the demonstration. Moscow Province, which 5 years ago had 20,000 physical culturists in the unions, now has 115,000. There are 3,000,000 organized physical culturists in the U. S. S. R. organized in the last 10 years.

Tomsky Greets Workers.

M. Tomsky, in the name of the Central Council of Trade Unions, greeting the workers, said: "Today's parade of physical culturists is a part of our cultural revolution and shows an achievement. Moscow physical culturists have in their ranks 30,000 workers. Red Square is already too small for them. Physical culture in our country is very necessary, in order to make our workers strong in the struggle, physically and morally. The industrialization of the country lies on the shoulders of the workers."

7 ADMIT ERRORS OF OPPOSITION

Ask To Be Readmitted To Communist Party

(Special Cable To Daily Worker.)

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., July 10.—Seven members of the former opposition in Leningrad, those who supported Trotzky in his opposition tactics, yesterday filed statements with the Central Control Commission of the Communist Party in which they admitted the errors that they had made in following the oppositionist policy last year, and requested that they be readmitted to the party.

Another announcement made by the commission states that the cases have been taken under consideration, and word of their readmittance will be officially given soon.

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., July 10.—The Presidium of the Central Control Commission of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union has published the following decision: "Having regard to the fact that Avdeyev, Babachen, Bakayev, Batashev, Belais, Belenkin, Burzev, Weintraub, Gertik, Hessen, Guralski, Yevdokimov, Yelkovitch, Savarykina, Saluzki, Zinoviev, Kamenev, Kuklin, Lashevitch, Levin, Lepeshinskaya, Lyalina, Matveyev, Machov, Minitchev, Nikolaiev, Pinson, Prigoshin, Rabkin, Ravitch, Retzkan, Sokolov, Solovyev, Fedorov, Furtitchev, Charitonov, Sharov and Shepshgleva have lodged declarations recognizing their fundamental errors, abandoning the platform of the Trotzkists, abandoning their fractional activity and announcing their absolute subordination to the decisions of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union and of the Communist International, and having regard to the fact that they have ceased their oppositional activity, they are to be re-admitted into the party upon the basis of the decisions of the fifteenth congress of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union concerning the opposition which was adopted on the 18th and 19th of December, 1927. The whole term of their party membership will be reckoned to them in their papers, but the time of the interruption of membership commencing with their expulsion is also to be noted."

Flint Glass Workers Want Dry Law Change

CUMBERLAND, Md., July 10.—The Flint Glass Workers' Union, in an annual session here today, adopted a resolution offered by President Clarke, calling upon congress to amend the Volstead Act "to the extent that wholesome beer and light wines may be made and sold under government control. The resolution was adopted by a 98 2-10 per cent standing vote.

MEXICAN BANDIT SLAIN.

VERA CRUZ, Mexico, July 10.—Travellers coming from the region of Tierra Blanca say that Mateo Amador, bandit chieftain who for a long time operated in the state of Vera Cruz, was recently assassinated. It is believed that one of his followers killed him while he slept. His body was taken to Tierra Blanca and exhibited in the Plaza.

LEAGUE PROTESTS USE OF NATIONAL GUARD IN STRIKE

Letter Calls Servicemen Not to Fight Workers

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., July 1.—Letters signed by members of the Young Workers Communist League in the National Guard were distributed today in the armory and elsewhere to the other National Guardsmen appealing to them to not allow themselves to be used as strike-breakers.

False Promises

The letters stated that the National Guardsmen had been led to enlist by false promises, only to find that they were trained to fight against their own interests, and that in the case of the New Bedford textile strike they faced the danger of being called upon to shoot down their own sisters and mothers on the picket lines. Many of the National Guardsmen in this city are strikers themselves and were drafted to fight their own families — and renounce their own struggles to protect their jobs from scabs. These facts were pointed out in the letters.

Protest Meeting

An appeal was made by the young Communists to their fellow guardsmen to take part in a protest meeting called here to fight against the use of servicemen for the mill owners against themselves and their fellow workers. They are asked to wake up before it is too late and to refuse to be strike-breakers.

The New Bedford Young Workers (Communist) League has announced that it will take action this week to expose the use of the National Guard in the strike, and to bring the issue more clearly before the workers, but the acting Organizer, Figuredo, will not say in advance just what the course of action will be.

The League has called attention to the fact that Major Winslow, who is commanding the National Guard against the strikers, is connected with the "Textile Council" which pretends to be a labor union.

AUTO PARADE TO VISIT MINE AREA

Prepare For Defense Week July 22-29

troopers swooped down upon the pickets that day, firing revolvers and tear gas bombs into their midst, the strikers say. Dozens were wounded.

There is one striker in Renton who remembers too well how the troopers returned the next morning, broke down the doors with their horses' hoofs and clubbed men women and children. His wife died as a result of the beating.

Avella, Library, Mollenauer, Castle Shanon, Coverdale, Harwick Harmarville, Newfield, Coverdale all famous as militant mining camps, will be visited by the caravan. Life in the barracks, hardships the fighting miners are enduring, the children running about barefoot and chattering about the strike, the union, picket lines, "them scabs and yeller dogs," the union hall where the state troopers ban meetings—all will be seen by the relief workers.

Begins Friday.

Some automobiles will start for the strike fields Friday and others Saturday, depending upon the distance. Everybody who wishes to participate in the caravan should get in touch with the local branches of the National Miners' Relief Committees or International Labor Defense branches in their cities, or get information directly from the national office at 611 Penn Avenue Pittsburgh, Pa. Remember, July 1? is the date set for the tour. Organizations, especially, are invited to send delegates to get first hand information of the relief organizations' activities.

RED SOLDIER IS KILLED BY BOMB OF MONARCHISTS

Blast Same Day as Shakhta Verdict

MOSCOW, July 10.—One soldier was killed when two Russian monarchist officers threw a home-made bomb into the headquarters of the Soviet political police on July 6, it was announced by Tass today.

One of the two officers, George Ratkievitch, was killed while trying to escape. The other was captured in a village outside the capital with the assistance of peasants.

The bombing occurred the day after the verdict was pronounced in the trial of 50-odd men for conspiracy to wreck the Donetz Basin mines.

According to the official story, the two monarchist officers arrived from Paris via Bulgaria and Roumania, where it is declared Roumanian spies helped them cross the frontier.

The two bombers ran, and were chased through the streets. Ratkievitch, said to be a former officer in the army of Gen. Wrangel, white guardist, was killed.

Federal Certificates on Cotton Cancelled

WASHINGTON, July 10 (UP).—The agriculture department today cancelled federal certificates on 1519 bales of untenderable cotton stored in New York City.

The action, taken by Secretary Jardine, was the result of a senate investigation. It was found that many samples were shy of requirements of the law.

FIRE CHIEF ON BOND.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., July 10 (UP). — William Kirschenbaum, Newark, N. J., fire insurance investigator, was bound over to the September term of criminal superior court in bonds of $9,000 today on charges of conspiracy in connection with a fire in a local rubber goods factory.

UNKNOWN MAN SUICIDE.

NIAGARA FALLS, July 10 (UP).—Authorities here today still were without any clues to the identity of the middle-aged man who climbed the railing of the Falls View Bridge and plunged to his death in the Niagara River, 175 feet below, on Sunday night.

Movie Must Be Pure, Walker Tells Scribes

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., July 10.—Living up to his reputation as a comedian, Mayor James J. Walker of New York today delivered himself of a moral sermon to the movie press agents of this community last night.

Politics of a national nature have no place in film circles and certain movie executives have appeared "rather silly" by participating in republican affairs, he told the press agents.

"For the movie to do anything but remain on a strictly neutral basis during a national election would be ruinous," the mayor declared. Expressing further his fear of the ill-fortunes of the democratic party, which converted him from a third-rate Broadway song writer to a mayor of equal standing. Walker said that "the screen should remember its fans."

direction of S. L. Rothafel ("Roxy"). The rehearsals take place after midnight, when the Roxy Theatre is empty, and an unusual program of Russian and Oriental dances is being ararnged.

Theremin Preparing Program

Prof. Leon Theremin, the great scientist from the Soviet Union, who has discovered the revolutionary principle of drawing music out of the air without the aid of a musical instrument, is keeping the detail of his program for Saturday evening a dark secret. All that he has announced thus far is that he will play both solos and selections, accompanied by Volpe's Symphony Orchestra.

Tickets for this concert of the century are now on sale at the office of The DAILY WORKER, 26-28 Union Square. All workers who want to make sure of being present at this epoch-making musical event should purchase their tickets without delay.

INTERNATIONALE COMPOSER NOW IN SOVIET UNION

Greeted by Thousands Upon Arrival

(Special Cable to the Daily Worker).

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., July 10.—Pierre DeGeyter, composer of the "Internationale," revolutionary anthem sung all over the world, arrived here today, materializing a visit to the Soviet Union that he had contemplated making for a long time.

He was received at the station by representatives of almost every trade union, cultural and athletic organization in Moscow. Thousands of the assembled group sang his own composition as he alighted from the platform. Young Pioneers and representatives from the Alliance of Communist Youth also joined in the huge reception.

During his stay in the Soviet Union, DeGeyter will be conducted through almost every form of activity now in existence there. He will visit the musical conservatories, the cultural clubs, the factories, the trade union organizations, and will address the youth of the Soviet Union in many cities.

COP ARRESTED AS THIEF.

NEW DRAFT PROGRAM OF THE COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL

II. The General Crisis of Capitalism. The First Phase of World Revolution

DOCUMENT TRACES COURSE OF REVOLUTIONARY DEVELOPMENTS AND PARTIAL STABILIZATION

Points Out Treacherous Role of Social Democracy and Rise of Fascism

Pictures Processes Corroding Capitalism and New Forces of Revolution

To All Sections of the Communist International:

The Programme Commission of the Executive Committee of the Communist International is publishing a DRAFT PROGRAM.

The Commission thinks it its duty to declare that while the text of this draft is of course based on the same fundamental principles as those upon which the draft programme provisionally passed by the Fifth Congress of the Communist International was based, nevertheless, it differs very considerably from that draft. The Program Commission felt that in view of the great changes that have taken place in many important spheres of international life and particularly in the revolutionary movement since the Fifth Congress, it could not confine itself to making merely editorial changes in the original draft. A change has taken place in the form of the general crisis of capitalism; a change has taken place in the relationships between various groups of powers. Great events have taken place, like the great revolution in China, which once again emphasized the significance of the agrarian-peasant question. Great progress has been made in building up socialism in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. The struggle between the aggressive capitalist world and the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics is becoming acute. Fascism is growing and becoming transformed into the terrorist dictatorship of big capital. Social democracy has degenerated into Chauvinist imperialism. The lessons that have been learned by the Communist International in the fight against opposition tendencies and finally the growth of Communism, the fact that the movement has really become internationalized, the new tasks that confront the Communist International as a single organization—all this has inevitably made it necessary considerably to alter and enlarge the former draft.

The general tendency of the changes that have been made is towards more concreteness and greater emphasis upon THE INTERNATIONAL aspects both in the theoretical section as well as in the sections dealing immediately with the struggles of the Communist Parties.

Acting on the decision of the Executive Committee of the Communist International, the Programme Commission, in publishing this draft program, calls upon all comrades to express their opinion and criticism of it in articles, remarks and concrete suggestions. The work done on the program has revealed how difficult it is to embrace in a single document all the problems of the present-day world Communist movement. The question of the program will be one of the central questions at the Sixth Congress. It is essential that sufficient material be collected by the time the discussion of the question takes place at the Congress. The Commission therefore invites all comrades to join in the fruitful discussion of the program.

THE PROGRAMME COMMISSION OF THE
EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE
COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL

The imperialist struggle among the largest capitalist states for the re-distribution of the globe led to the first World Imperialist War (1914-1918). This war shook the whole system of world capitalism and marked the beginning of the period of its general crisis. It bent to its service the whole of the national economy of the belligerent countries, thus creating the mailed fist of state capitalism. It increased unproductive expenditure to enormous dimensions, destroyed enormous quantities of means of production and human labor power, ruined large masses of the population and imposed incalculable burdens upon the industrial workers, the peasants and the colonial peoples. The war inevitably led to an intensification of the class struggle which grew into revolutionary mass action and civil war. The imperialist front was breached at its weakest link, in Czarist Russia. The FEBRUARY revolution of 1917 overthrew the domination of the big landlord autocracy. The "October" revolution overthrew the domination of the bourgeoisie. This victorious proletarian revolution expropriated the expropriators, took the means of production from the landlords and the capitalists and for the first time in human history set up and consolidated the dictatorship of the proletariat in an enormous country, brought into being a new Soviet type of state and laid the foundations for the International Proletarian Revolution.

The powerful shock to which the whole world of capitalism was subjected, the intensification of the class struggle and the direct influence of the October proletarian revolution gave rise to a series of revolutionary actions on the continent of Europe as well as in the colonial and semi-colonial countries: March, 1918, the workers' revolution in Finland; August, 1918, the "rice riots" in Japan; November, 1918, revolutions in Austria and Germany which overthrew the rule of the semi-feudal monarchies; March, 1919, the proletarian revolution in Hungary and the rebellion in Korea; April, 1919, the establishment of the Soviet government in Bavaria; January, 1920, the bourgeois national revolution in Turkey; September, 1920, the seizure of the factories by the workers in Italy; March, 1921, the uprising of the advanced workers in Germany; September, 1923, the uprising in Bulgaria; the autumn of 1923, the revolutionary crisis in Germany; December, 1924, rebellion in Esthonia; April, 1925, rebellion in Morocco and in Syria in August; May, 1926, general strike in England; 1927, the workers' uprising in Vienna. All these events, as well as the rebellion in Indonesia the deep ferment in India, the great Chinese revolution which shook the whole of the continent of Asia, are links in a single international revolutionary chain and the component parts of the profound general crisis of capitalism. The unity of world economy finds its expression in the international character of the revolution. The uneven development of its various parts is reflected in the uneven development of the revolution in separate countries.

The first attempts made to bring about a revolutionary change, which sprung from the acute crisis of capitalism (1918-1921) ended in the defeat of the proletariat in a number of countries. These defeats were brought about primarily by the treacherous tactics of the social democratic leaders and reformist trade union leaders and also by the fact that Communist parties had not yet been established in a number of important countries and that the majority of the working class had not yet accepted the lead of the Communists.

These defeats enabled the bourgeoisie to bring about a partial stabilization of capitalist relationships. The exploitation of the proletariat and of the colonial peoples was greatly intensified and their standard of living sharply depressed. The forces of production of world economy again began to increase, considerable progress was made in technique, the process of the trustification and the rationalization of industry was accelerated, the tendency of development towards state capitalism was resumed and the pressure brought to bear upon the working class and the colonies was increased.

In the course of progress of the international revolution the social democratic and reformist trade union leaders on the one hand and the militant capitalist organizations of the fascist type on the other, acquired special significance as a powerful counter-revolutionary force actively fighting against the revolution and actively supporting the partial stabilization of capitalism.

The war crisis of 1914-1918 was accompanied by the disgraceful collapse of the social democratic second international. Notwithstanding the thesis laid down by Marx and Engels in the "Communist Manifesto" that under capitalism the proletariat has no country, and notwithstanding the anti-war resolutions passed at the Stuttgart and Basle congresses, the leaders of the national social democratic parties, with a few exceptions, voted the war credits and strongly advocated the defense of imperialist "fatherlands" (i. e. the state organisations of the imperialist bourgeoisie) and instead of opposing the imperialist war became its most loyal soldiers, propagandists and its bards (social patriotism, which grew into social imperialism)

In the period that followed the social democrats supported the predatory treaties (Brest, Versailles). They came out as an active force on the side of the militarists at the time of the bloody suppression of proletarian uprisings (Noske); they conducted armed warfare against the first proletarian republic (Soviet Russia); they despicably betrayed the proletariat when it took power (Hungary); they joined the imperialist League of Nations (Albert Thomas, Paul Boncour, Vandervelde, Breitscheid); they openly took the side of the imperialist slave-owners against the colonial slaves (British "Labor Party"); they actively supported the most reactionary executioners of the working class (in Bulgaria and Poland); they took the initiative in introducing imperialist "military laws" (France); they betrayed the great general strike of the British proletariat; they helped to strangle the miners' strike. They helped strangle China and India (the MacDonald government); they act as the propagandists of the imperialist "League of Nations." They are capitalism's heralds and the organizing force in the fight against the dictatorship of the proletariat in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics (Kautsky, Hilferding).

In systematically conducting this counter-revolutionary policy, social democracy operates alternately first with one and then with the other of its two wings: the right wing of social democracy, avowedly counter-revolutionary, is essential for negotiating with the bourgeoisie; the "Left Wing" is essential for the subtle deception of the workers. While playing with pacifist and sometimes even with revolutionary phrases "Left Wing" Social Democracy in practice acts against the workers at the most critical moments (the British "independents" and "Lefts" leaders of the general council at the time of the general strike in 1926 Otto Bauer & Co. at the time of the Vienna uprising) and is for that reason the most pernicious fraction of the social democratic parties While serving the interests of the bourgeoisie within the working class and adopting entirely the principle of class cooperation, the social democrats periodically take up the position of an opposition party and pretend to lead the economic struggle in order to win the confidence of sections of the working class and in this way more shamefully to betray the lasting interests of the working class, particularly in the midst of decisive class battles.

In the domain of theory, social democracy has wholly and completely betrayed Marxism. It passed through the stage of revisionism to complete liberal-bourgeois reformism and avowed social imperialism; it has distorted the Marxian doctrine of class war into the advocacy of class peace. Instead of the doctrine of proletarian dictatorship it advocates the theory of coalition with the bourgeoisie. Instead of destruction of the bourgeois state it advocates active construction. Instead of pointing out that imperialist wars are inevitable under capitalism it advances the theory of peaceful "ultra-imperialism," and instead of international solidarity of the proletariat it preaches the doctrine of defense of imperialist fatherlands It has substituted the dialectical materialism of Marx by idealistic philosophy and playing with bourgeois religious trash.

Thus, international social democracy in all its shades: the Second International and its trade union branch, the Amsterdam Federation of Trade Unions, have become the reserves of bourgeois society and its most loyal pillar of support.

Side by side with social democracy through and by which the bourgeoisie suppresses the workers or lulls their class vigilance, is fascism

The epoch of imperialism, the growing acuteness of the class struggle and the growth of the elements of civil war,—particularly after the imperialist war,—have led to a crisis in parliamentarism. The instability of capitalist relationships in the post-war period, the existence of large declassed social elements, the impoverishment of broad strata of the urban petty bourgeoisie and intelligentsia (primarily in the European countries), and finally the constant menace of the mass proletarian action have caused the bankruptcy of parliamentarism as the democratic, camouflaged form of the bourgeois dictatorship and gave rise to fascism as a method of unconcealed dictatorship of the bourgeoisie. In order to secure for itself a more stable, firm and permanent rule, the bourgeoisie is being compelled more and more to abandon the parliamentary system and to adopt the method of fascism irrespective of inner-party relationships and combinations. It masks its "national idea" by the system of representation of the "professions" (i. e. of the various groups of the dominant class) and turns to its own advantage the discontent of the petty bourgeois, intellectual and other masses by a peculiar form of social demagogy (anti-semitism, sporadic attacks upon usurer capital, displays of indignation in the parliamentary "talking shop") and corruption—by creating a compact and well-paid hierarchy of facist units, party apparatus and bureaucracy.

At the same time fascism strives to permeate the working class. It recruits the most backward strata of the workers and turns their discontent with the passivity of social democracy to its own advantage The principal function of fascism is to destroy the revolutionary labor vanguard, i. e. the Communist units and the leaders of the proletariat The combination of social demagogy, corruption and active white terror conducted simultaneously with extreme imperialist aggression in the sphere of foreign politics, is a characteristic feature of fascism. In the periods most critical for the bourgeoisie, fascism, to suit its own ends, gave utterance to anti-capitalist phraseology. When it had strongly established itself at the helm of state it cast aside its anti-capitalist rattle and is now more and more revealing itself as the terroristic dictatorship of big capital (Mussolini, Pilsudski).

The bougeoisie resorts alternately to the methods of fascism or to the method of coalition with social democracy, according to the changes in the political situation. In this, social democracy not infrequently plays an openly fascist role (Noske in Germany, the Polish Socialist Party, etc.). Both these methods are unusual for "normal" capitalism; they are symptoms of the general capitalist crisis. Nevertheless, they retard the rate of advance of revolution.

The experience of the whole of the historical post-war period has shown however, that the stabilization of capitalism obtained by acts of repression against the working class and the systematic depression of its standard of living cannot but be a partial, temporary and decaying stabilization. This stabilization gives rise to new and more profound contradictions which cause the general crisis of capitalism to become more acute and create the conditions for a new phase in the world proletarian revolution.

As a result of the first round of imperialist wars (the world war of 1914-1918) and of the October victory of the working class in the former empire of the Russian Czar world economy has split up into two fundamentally hostile camps: The camp of the imperialist states and the camp of the dictatorship of the proletariat in the United Socialist Soviet Russia. The differences in class structure and the class character of the two states, the fundamental differences in the aims each pursues in internal, foreign, economic and cultural policy, the fundamental difference in the direction of development of the two camps, brings the capitalist world into sharp conflict with the victorious proletarian state. Two antagonistic systems are in conflict within the framework of a single world economy: the system of capitalism and the system of socialism. Hitherto, the class struggle was conducted in forms determined by the fact that the proletariat was not in possession of state power. Now it is being conducted on an enormous and really world scale and moreover the working class now has its own state,—the only fatherland of the international proletariat. The existence of the Soviet Union and the influence it exercises upon the masses of the toilers and oppressed all over the world is in itself the most striking expression of the profound crisis of the world capitalist system and of the expansion and intensification of the class struggle to a degree hitherto unparalleled in history.

The capitalist world, powerless to eliminate its inherent contradictions is striving to set up an international organization (the League of Nations) the main purpose of which is to restrain the surging tide of the revolutionary crisis and to strangle the Soviet proletarian republics by blockade or war. On the other hand all the forces of the revolutionary proletariat and of the oppressed colonial masses are rallying around the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. The unstable, internally corroding, but well armed coalition of capital is confronted by a single world coalition of labor.

Thus, as a result of the first round of imperialist wars new fundamental antagonisms have arisen of world historical scale and significance: the antagonisms between the Union of Socialists Soviet Republics and the capitalist world.

Meanwhile, the antagonisms within the capitalist sector of world economy have become more acute The economic centre of the world has shifted to the United States of America; the "dollar republic" has become the exploiter of all countries and this has caused the relations between United States and European capitalism, primarily British capitalism, to become more acute. The conflict between Great Britain, the most powerful of the old conservative imperialist countries, and the United States, the greatest of the young imperialist countries and which has already won world hegemony for itself, is becoming the pivot in the world conflicts of finance capital states. Germany, though plundered by the Versailles peace is now economically recovered and is again taking the path of imperialist politics. Once again she stands out as a serious competitor of Great Britain and France on the world market. The Pacific is becoming involved in a tangle of contradictions caused principally by the conflict between America and Japan Simultaneously the antagonism of interests between the constantly changing and unstable groupings of powers is developing, while the second-class powers act as auxiliary instruments in the hands of the imperialist giants and their coalitions.

The productive capacity of the industrial apparatus of world capitalism has been increased. Simultaneously the home markets in Europe have become restricted as a result of the war and of the Soviet Union, dropping out of the sphere of purely capitalist circulation. This and the close monopoly of the principal sources of raw materials and fuel have caused the conflicts between capitalist states to become wider. The "peaceful" struggle for oil, rubber, cotton, coal and metals the struggle for a redistribution of markets and spheres for the export of capital are inexorably leading to another world war, the destructiveness of which will increase parallel with the furious development of the technique of war.

Simultaneously, the antagonisms between the imperialist countries and the colonial and semi-colonial countries are growing. As a result of the war, the development of capitalism in the colonies, of the influence of the Soviet revolution and of the centrifugal tendencies going on within the principal naval and colonial empire, Great Britain (Canada, Australia, South Africa) European imperialism has become weakened and this has helped to release rebellion in the colonies and semi-colonies. The great Chinese revolution, which roused hundreds of millions of the Chinese people to action, has made an enormous breach in the imperialist system. The unceasing revolutionary ferment among hundreds of millions of the Indian workers and peasants threatens to break the domination of the world citadel of imperialism, Great Britain The existence of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics as the most important factor of revolutionary development opens up for those countries the prospect of transition to socialism.

Thus, the revolutionary process in the colonies which is drawing the overwhelming majority of the population into the fight against imperialism is also the expression of the profound general crisis of capitalism.

Finally, the revolutionary crisis is inevitably maturing in the very centers of imperialism—the bourgeois attack on the standard of living, the organizations and the political rights of the working class rouses growing resistance on the part of the broad masses of the proletariat and causes the class struggle between the working class and trustified capital to become more acute. The great battles between labor and capital in Great Britain (the general strike in 1926), in Germany and in the United States of America, the accelerated swing to the left of the masses, the growth of the influence and authority of the Communist parties, the enormous growth of sympathy of the broad masses of workers towards the land of the proletarian distatorship—all this is a clear indication that the revolutionary tide is again rising in the center of imperialism.

Thus, the world imperialist system, and with it the partial stabilization of capitalism, is being corroded from different causes; these are the conflicts and antagonisms among imperialist states, the rise to the struggle of millions of the masses in the colonies, the rise of the revolutionary proletariat in the home countries and, finally, the hegemony exercised over the whole world revolutionary movement by the proletarian distatorship in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. The international revolution is developed.

Against this revolution, imperialism is gathering its forces. Expeditions against the colonies, a new world war, a campaign against the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics are now practical questions of imperialist politics. This will lead to the release of all the forces of international revolution and the inevitable doom of capitalism.

POWER HEARING IS POSTPONED

Summer Recess Called By Commission

WASHINGTON, July 10 (FP).—Hearings before the Federal Trade Commission on the power trust inquiry ordered by the Senate have been suspended until September. Meanwhile the power companies are trying to answer questionnaires sent them by the commission's economic staff, as to watered stock, bond issues, customer ownership, rates, etc.

Since the investigation began 71 witnesses from 40 states and representing state committees or regional sub-divisions of the National Electric Light Association, American Gas Association and the Joint Committee of National Utility Associations have been examined in public hearings. Some 4,877 pages of testimony has been taken and 3,600 exhibits have been put in the record. All of this has dealt merely with the publicity and propaganda against public ownership and against strict public regulation of utilities.

States whose propaganda mills have yet to be exposed in similar testimony are Arizona, California, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, Oregon, Utah and Washington.

German Reformists Aid Imperialist Plan

BERLIN, July 10. — Kellogg's anti-war pact was hailed by the German socialist leader, Rudolf Breitscheid, at a meeting of the Reichstag Foreign Affairs Committee, as a favorable omen. He said that it would draw the United States into the league of nations.

In this way, it is thought, the European bloc against the Soviet Union would be strengthened and it would help to consolidate European forces.

HUGE LOSSES IN STOCKS CHARGED

Worthless Securities Sold By Millions

Charges that securities in excess of $1,000,000,000 sold since the war have defaulted or become worthless were made yesterday by Assistant Attorney General Timothy J. Shea in charge of the bureau of securities of the attorney general's office.

Shea said that "further revelations" would be made later, but did not name any individuals, groups, securities or plans for prosecutions.

Worthless Stock Sold.

"Revelation of the condition of affairs," the statement said, "is based upon an investigation of the activities of the "over the counter" market, the groundwork of which has just been completed. It was found that during the past years the number of over the counter dealers and traders has increased by hundreds. Millions of dollars of worthless securities have been sold. Many defaults and failures were also recorded by firms whose securities were floated through the over-the-counter market.

Parker Gilbert, Agent General for Reparations, is showing a sudden and deep concern for the welfare of the German workers. He is the real master of Germany and has just disapproved a 6 per cent general wage increase. He frankly admits this is a move for the benefit of the working class, because wage increases cause higher prices and therefore "tend sooner or later to cancel themselves." Gilbert's idea of liberating the working class would be to cut wages in half. This would cut down the price of commodities and all workers would then have plenty.

Sunday at Home

Capitalism is so corrupt that you can't find a cranny in the old edifice that hasn't got an odor of its own. In advertising thousands of men spend all their time and energy in an activity that is almost completely an economic loss. Their work is to doll up dishonesty in a new dress. If Diogenes were looking for an honest man in the advertising business he would blow out his lantern and use a navy searchlight. Nobody but a deaf, dumb and blind man from Mars would expect to find any truth in theatrical advertising which pays the very highest prices for fake publicity. The above picture, put out by an advertising agent, shows Camilla Crume, actress in "The Skull." She is supposed to have been smoking a pipe since she was 18. As a matter of fact she has never smoked anything in her life but cubebs and when she was handed the pipe, to pose for this picture, she didn't know which end to put in her mouth.

Hardly a day goes by that Mayor Walker doesn't do something for the working class. He needed [illegible] switch on [illegible] beacon and so he hired Clarence Chamberlain, transatlantic flier, shown above, to do the work. The beacon will guide airmen to a safe landing and will be operated impartially for the benefit of any workers who happen to be flying to and from the factories or members of the wealthy classes. The mayor's thoughtfulness is shown by the fact that he didn't let anybody turn on the light, who happened to be closest to the switch, but took the trouble to go out and hire an experienced aviator by the year to do the job.

U. S. SHIPPING HEADS EXTORT SAILORS' PAY

Union Formed to Fight Shippers' Tyranny

(By a Seaman Correspondent)

Recently there has been worldwide publicity in the capitalist press concerning the half million dollar mail robbery which took place on the S. S. Leviathan during its outward voyage from New York to Southampton. In investigating this robbery the authorities did not consider it necesary to grill the crew. Because they are aware of the fact that the crew of this ship is constantly watched and kept working from the time it signs on for the voyage until they pay off and couldn't possibly have robbed the mail. Robbery on this ship is a common occurrence however.

A dirtier, meaner method of robbery was never perpetrated than that which is being practised by the officials of the United States Lines in conjunction with the U. S. A. Shipping Commissioners. Of a total of 1165 comprising the crew of this giant liner an average of 900 are logged or docked a portion of their wages. Every 18-day voyage the fines range from two days' pay to as high as the total wages due. It is quite clear to all seafarers that those vultures have set a standard amount which they will wrest from the wages each trip.

On one of my trips as able seaman there were drunken passengers smoking on the foredeck while I was on the bow-watch from 12 p. m. to 2 a. m. with an ordinary seaman. Curtis, the second mate, summoned me by telephone from the bridge. When I went up, he led me to the chartroom, and asked me how long I had been going to sea. When I told him, he said it was long enough to know better than to smoke while on the lookout. I told him it was a passenger and not I who was smoking. He called me a liar and fined me four days' pay, which was deducted from my wages at paying off time. Now this dirty scoundrel Curtis knew perfectly well that I was not smoking.

Thousands of dollars are wrested from the poor seafarers' wages in various ways, and the only way left for the slaves of the sea to combat this tyranny is organization. Seafarers carry the trade of the world on their backs and get the least recompense. Seafarers of the world unite. You haven't anything to lose but your chains and a world to gain. Seamen organize yourselves into a new union; one which is not tarnished with the corruption of A. F. of L. officials. Marine workers' progressive committees are now organized in all the principal ports of the U. S. A. for the purpose of organizing a union which will stand for industrial amalgamation for the seafarers of the world. This organization has the support of marine workers in all countries. Join it, fellow seamen, and with our economic strength we can ring a higher standard of living out of the shipowner, and lead a decent life on the seas.

MISLEADERS TO STOP ELECTIONS

Machinists Officials In New Racket

WASHINGTON, July 10 (FP).—Arguments opposing the abandonment of the referendum system of election of officers and abandonment of the present executive council, in the International Association of Machinists, printed in the July issue of the Machinists Monthly Journal, show that a lively fight will mark the convention at Atlanta. Charles W. Fry, business agent of Lodge 126, Chicago, is sponsor for the proposed constitutional changes. He is opposed by Vice-President P. J. Conlon, by William R. Young of Lodge 202, and others. Fry's further proposal that the insurance feature be made mandatory on a basis of $1,000 insurance for $1 added to the dues, is opposed in an article by O. G. Remy, recording secretary of Lodge 234.

Fry argues that the referendum election should be abolished in order to keep the general officers busy at their trade union duties. He says they play politics at the expense of the union. Young replies that convention politics is worse than referendum politics, and he points out that only about one-fourth of the lodges are able to pay the cost of having a delegate at the convention. Their lack of money would disfranchise them in the selection of general officers.

DIPLOMA NO AID IN GETTING JOB

High School Graduate Not Wanted

(By a Worker Correspondent)

CHICAGO, (By Mail).— In our beloved richest country in the world everyone is claimed to have an equal chance to live happy. I find it is not true. I will give you an example of my father.

When my father came to this country in 1908, he was a boy of seventeen. He began work in a restaurant, which was washing dishes for $3.00 per week. He worked so hard that he could not stay any longer than three days. It was impossible for a man to work fifteen hours a day.

He then began to look around for work. Finally he found another job as a presser and at that time he worked very long hours for a very little salary. It was impossible to exist. He joined the union. The wages which he received under the United Garment Workers were so little that he became a union man with his heart and soul, although he did not receive very much education. The live spirit of the working class was on him.

Then began class struggles and strikes. He was always on picket duty. He never had to be told to go in the front line to fight, he always went because he always felt it was his duty to better the conditions of himself and his fellow workers.

When he became a family man he started to feel more than ever the class struggle to raise his little family. He wanted to give us children an education what he claimed that every American child is entitled to. Also my teacher said that education is a great value in this country.

We children were not behind in our father's principles because we felt there were many goods things in this country that we could not get. We know that our father is not lazy to work, but he gets only $15 a week and it isn't enough to buy bread for us to eat.

I have already reached the age of sixteen and am capable of working. I have received the so-called education of high school and am now looking for a job to use my great education, but I cannot find any. Any place I go I find hundreds of girls waiting for jobs and I, only a young girl, already feel the unemployment crisis.

When I need any clothing and my father can't afford to buy me any, I smile at the words: America, the richest country in the world, everyone has a chance to become rich. Communism is the only way to solve the problem of unemployment. Communism stands for the freedom of the working class from slavery and exploitation from capitalism's brutal yoke.

STEVEDORES TIE UP FINN PORTS

13,000 Workers Are Reported Out

WASHINGTON, July 10 (FP).—Frederick B. Lyon, American commercial attache at Helsingfors, has reported to the department of commerce on the stevedores' strike which began June 2 in Finnish ports. He says that it affected all Finnish harbors; that lumber yard workers as well as truck drivers carrying goods to and from the docks went on strike in sympathy with the stevedores and that the saw mill workers might also join in the sympathetic walkout.

"The strike is the result of a demand for higher wages," he reported," and the number of workers on strike, including those who have joined through sympathy, is estimated at 13,000. Voluntary labor has been called upon and it is thought that some 2,000 workers are now spread over the various Finnish harbors.

LUMBERVILLE, Pa., July 10.—This week, July 9 to July 16, is Miners' Relief Week at Cooperative Camp Huliet, at Lumberville, Pa. There will be a continuous program of activities, all the proceeds of which will go to the support of the miners' strike.

On Friday, July 13, the Pioneers will give a play. On Saturday, July 14, there will be a Miners' Relief Dance at the camp. On Sunday, July 15, at 3 p. m., there will be a concert and mass meeting.

This promises to be the biggest week of the whole summer at this proletarian camp. Already, a half dozen workers' clubs have decided to visit it in a body this week end.

The arrangements for the week are being made by the Philadelphia Conference for Miners' Relief, 39 North 10th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

DUAL UNION OF U. S. WORKERS

Federal Employes Plan Organization

WASHINGTON, July 10 (FP).—Dissatisfied with the degree of militancy shown by the National Federation of Federal Employes in general, and by its president, Luther C. Stewart, in particular, a group of government clerks in Washington has set up a dual union. The president of the new organization—called the League of the American Civil Service—is Mrs. Margaret Hopkins Worrell, who led a procession of 3,000 clerks to the first hearing of testimony on the Welch salary-increase bill before the house civil service committee last December.

Chairman Smoot of the Senate finance committee is recognized in the capital as boss of the civil service. For many years past he has made it his business to resist all wage increases and to cut down the appropriations for civil service staffs wherever possible. He is the most powerful foe of the Federation of Federal Employes. Under Smoot's control is the Bureau of Efficiency, headed by Herbert Brown. When Smoot wants evidence that civil service conditions are too easy on the employes, Brown furnishes him with the expert reports to support his contentions.

Whether the hand of Smoot or Brown is behind the dual union enterprise is doubtful, since Mrs. Worrell and her associates were quite active in demanding higher pay, during the Welch bill discussion. But if the new organization gets a start among the tens of thousands of federal workers who fail to maintain union membership, Smoot and Brown will be able to play the one group off against the other. Since the new organization has no affiliation with the regular labor movement its policies will be ruled by considerations of temporary advantage for the ruling element.

STORMS HINDER CHILIAN SEARCH

Only 6 Have Survived Boat Disaster

SANTIAGO, Chile, July 10 (UP)—Terrific storms still broke along the Chilean coast today seriously interfering with search for possible survivors of the disastrous sinking of the Chilean transport Angamos.

Upwards of 200 persons are believed to have perished. An official report said there was a crew of 133 aboard and that there were 82 passengers when the transport, attempting to escape furious winds, cracked onto a reef and went down immediately. Previous reports had indicated there might have been 300 persons aboard the vessel.

Only six survivors have been found thus far. They were among those who leaped into life boats when it was seen the vessel was a loss, only to be pitched clear of the fragile crafts once the heavy rolling sea was encountered. All six were landed on the beach some 200 yards from the scene of the disaster and recovered consciousness to find that the big transport had sunk, leaving not a trace except debris scattered along the coast line.

The last two survivors found were Carlos Avaniano and Sierpe Olegario.

FORMER SAILOR TELLS MISERY OF LIFE IN NAVY

Willing to Give Aid to Fellow Workers

(By a Navy Correspondent)

DETROIT, (By Mail).—I write these few lines to the best paper I read.

I am very sorry for John Porter, arrested recently in New Bedford Mass., because he was a striker.

I was in the navy before the war and when war came I was kicked out with a B. C. D. You see, I tried to do all I could to get the men to rebel against the terrible food. For this I got ten days on bread and water.

We must say yes, sir, and no sir, to our masters. I got 10 days of bread and water again for not saying yes, sir. Two weeks later the same thing happened when I refused to salute a big jackass they call captain. This was in Norfolk Virginia.

When I was put out of the navy I was asked whether I had cold feet if I was afraid to fight. I told them I wanted to leave only because I didn't want to shoot down my fellow workers.

You see, I am no church fellow was fined $62 for not wanting to go to war, but I didn't care because I had no money. They put me out anyway.

If I can help my fellow workers in anyway, I would like to know.

DRAMA

A Miracle Explained--the Russian Edison's Invention

RENEWED interest has been aroused to see the young Russian inventor, Leon Theremin, and his invention for obtaining music from the ether, in the announcement that the Soviet scientist will appear this Saturday night at the Coney Island Stadium. Theremin will again give a demonstration of his invention.

The instrument which the "Russian Edison," as they call the youthful physicist in Soviet Russia, has built, produces the entire audible tone scale by electrical means. After demonstrations in Berlin, Paris and London, and New York the new machine was pronounced by scientists, artists and laymen alike barely short of the miraculous. Tones are produced by free movement of the hands in air before two antennae attached to the apparatus.

Transforms Electricity Into Sound

The principle utilized by Professor Theremin is that of the transformation of electro-magnetic energy into acoustic energy. By altering conditions in an electro magnetic area by means of introducing into it an electrical conductor (the human body) he achieves changes in pitch, trimbre and volume.

Leon Theremin is 31 years old. He was born in St. Petersburg August 15, 1896, now Leningrad, Russia, the son of a prominent lawyer. At an early age he is said to have startled his teachers by his aptitude in solving the trickiest of scientific problems. This, coupled with the youngster's predeliction for music and art, branded him as a boy prodigy.

IN "BURLESQUE."

Barbara Stanwyck, who is featured in Arthur Hopkins' production of "Burlesque," now in its eleventh month at the Plymouth Theatre.

The judgment of his elders was justified by the events of later years. After completing his course at the state gymnasium he entered the School of Physics and Mathematics of the University of Leningrad, majoring in physics and astronomy.

The apparatus acts as a terminal and is never really touched by the hands, even tho the music rendered is closely allied to the artist's personality because it reproduces the music in the player's mind. There is nothing miraculous—it is merely the application of known scientific principles.

OLD ANTHRACITE INE CONFERENCE

orty Progressive Leaders Meet

(Special To The Daily Worker)

HAZELTON, Pa., July 10. — rty leaders of the progressive ces of district Nos. 1, 7 and 9 embled at a Tri-district confer- e gave full endorsement for a tional Miners Convention to be ld in Pittsburgh September 9th 15th. Wm. Gaffney the outside nding progressive leader in dis- ct No. 7 was elected chairman of conference, and Bill Gibert, sec- tary.

A Letter to Japanese Workers

(From the All-China Labor Federation)

Dear Comrades:

Reaction sweeps over the Japanese islands and seas. Persecution and suppression of revolutionary workers and peasants is going on persistently and systematically in your country. The crushing of your class-conscious trade union and proletarian party organizations is the order of the day in the realms of the Mikado. The arch-reactionary Seiyukai's government in the most brutal fashion is throwing your militant and revolutionaries in the prisons for many years. The Fascistic General Tanaka government is trying to break the backbone of your movement; to disarm you from working-class policies' and leadership: to switch your trade unions and proletarian parties into class collaboration and reformist swamps: to corrupt your movement—all for the benefit of the master class, the bourgeoisie and the landlords.

Urge Fight on Exploiters

We have no doubt, dear comrades, that you will meet and oppose the offensive of the exploiters and oppressors with determination and mass mobilization by closing your ranks and unifying your forces upon a militant program; a fighting program for your daily needs, for the defense and liberation of the arrested comrades, for the emancipation of your class from the yoke of capitalism and landlordism. To all workers and peasants who are organizing and fighting in this direction, and to all imprisoned comrades, the All-China Labor Federation sends its heartiest greetings and best wishes.

Kuomintang Betrayal

We are writing to you these few words from our bitter experience. Thus a couple of years ago we have not closed up our ranks sufficiently upon a clear-cut revolutionary program and have permitted to too great on extent the right wing and class-collaborationist elements within the Kuomintang and other organizations to exercise control and leadership of our revolution—the great Chinese revolution. The leaders of the Kuomintang, as you are well aware, have betrayed us, the Chinese workers and peasants, in the most vicious manner. They even turned the Kuomintang from a revolutionary organization into an instrument of extermination of the forces of the revolution. Indeed, the Kuomintang became the henchman of the imperialist oppressors of our country, and the executioner of tens of thousands of our comrades, not to speak of the endless and tireless persecution and suppression of strikes and our trade union and peasant organizations. And although the treacherous Kouminting—the Chiang Kai-sheks, Li Chi-suns, Feng Yu-hsians, etc., are beheading and heaping the bodies of our comrades piles upon piles; although these running dogs of the Chinese feudalists, financiers and merchants were able to defeat Soviet Canton and are driving a merciless war against the many local Soviets in South and Central China rural regions, yet the revolution is far from being crushed On the contrary, the revolutionary forces are steadily gathering and growing, regardless of the oppression and executions. The general discontent and unrest is not only widening but also deepening. The Chinese revolution has developed into a higher stage, namely, into the stage of the establishment of Soviets. Therefore, our slogans are: Down with the Kuomintang government! Long live the Soviets!

Fight Imperialism

But we are confronted not only by the Kuomintang as our deadly enemy, but also we have to fight against the imperialists—the Japanese, British, American, French, etc., invaders of our country. The imperialist powers have sent and stationed in Chinese ports large numbers of warships, police, spies and soldiers, who are all jointly with the Kuomintang, oppressing and strangling us at every occasion. They crush our strikes, they arrest us and kill our comrades by tens of thousands; they look upon us, the toiling masses of China, not as human beings, but rather as inferior people and beasts, and treat us accordingly. They occupy our cities and plunder our country; they have jointly ejected from our country the representatives of the only power friendly to the Chinese revolution—namely, Soviet Russia. At the same time in the plunder of our country. Rivalry among the imperialist powers is sharpening, which will inevitably result in a bloody war.

The Japanese imperialists are the most aggressive and provocative. Their military occupation of Shantung is aimed to divide our country, to subjugate it to a foreign control and exploitation for ages to come.

Drive Japan From China

We are, of course, determined to fight and drive out of our country the Japanese and all other imperialists with all our might and force. Likewise, with determination we will fight to the finish the running-dogs of imperialism—the Kuomintang government. But we want to state most emphatically that while we hate and condemn the Japanese imperialists and their running-dogs at home and abroad, we have the greater sympathy and love for the revolutionary workers and peasants of Japan. Ahd upon you, dear comrades, we call to intensify the campaign for the Hands Off China movement. Upon you, comrade trade unionists, we call to demand the immediate withdrawal of the Japanese army and naval forces from our country. Upon you, peasants and workers, we urge to arise in mass action.

Down with imperialism!

Long live the revolutionary working class bonds between the Japanese and Chinese workers!

Long live the workers and peasants government of Japan!

Long live the Chinese revolution!

LABOR DEFENSE SCORES TERRORISM OF FASCISTS

Commenting on th eadditional information concerning the Mussolini terror that has been received through underground channels at Zurich, the New York section of the International Labor Defense, in a statement issued last night, calls on all class-conscious workers to continue their fight against Italian fascism and to demand the immediate release of all class-war prisoners in Italy. The statement signed by Rose Baron, secretary of the section, follows:

"Mussolini's hangmen never go unrewarded. News has been received at Zurich through underground channels that Judge Albertini, the judge of appeals who hushed up the Matteoti trial, has now been made director general of the Italian prisons. We all know what this means. The judge who helped murder Matteoti has now been promoted to torturer-in-chief of Italian fascism.

"This is thoroughly consistent with all the other news concerning the fascist terror that has leaked out of Italy despite the rigid censorship. The murder of Matteoti and Sozzi were not isolated instances. Hundreds of others have been similarly murdered for no other crime than opposition to the bloody fascist regime. No one knows how many of the class-war prisoners of Italy are still alive. The recent trial of members of the Italian Communist Party condemned 18 of them to prison terms aggregating 383 years. How long will Mussolini, drunk with the blood of thousands of Italian workers and peasants, permit these leaders of the workers and peasants to remain alive?

"Workers of New York, the struggle against Italian fascism is your struggle and the struggle of workers of the world. This black monster that feeds on the blood and toil of the Italian workers owes its existenie to Wall St. and the Wall St. government. You must keep up the fight against fascism. Strike a blow for your own freedom by demanding immediate freedom for all those brave fighters who are now rotting in the dungeons of Italian fascism."

TEACHERS GAIN WAGE INCREASE

BOSTON, July 10 (UP).—Over vigorous opposition, the Boston school committee has adopted a new salary schedule for teachers, increasing the salaries of 25 mess groups $288 a year, and the salaries of 12 women's groups $96.

Only teachers now receiving socalled "maximum salaries"—the highest pay of their rank—will be immediately eligible for the pay increase.

ALLISON, FREED, GREETED BY RED INTERNATIONAL

Lately Released From Indian Jail

LONDON, July 10.—A Losovsky, general secretary of the Red International of Trade Unions, recently greeted George Allison, a member of the executive bureau of the International, upon his release from prison after his activity in organizing the Indian Trade Unions The message, which was sent to him after thousands of militant English workers had received him back into their ranks, follows:

"The Executive Bureau of the Red International of Trade Unions sends you hearty greetings and expresses its conviction that your stay in an Indian prison has not undermined your militant spirit and not only has not weakened, but on the contrary has strengthened your will to struggle for the independence of India and the establishment of fraternal connections between the proletariat of India and the revolutionary labor movement of the whole world."

The telegram was signed "with hearty greetings, A. Losovsky, general secretary, Red International of Trade Unions."

Allison went to India in 1926 to further cement and connect the proletariat of India with that of England. He began to work in the Indian trade unions. This was immediately noted with dissatisfaction by the British imperialist government, the Indian bourgeoisie, and the reactionary leaders of the trade unions, controlled by the British business interests.

After a series of frame-ups, he was sent up for "trial" and sentenced to imprisonment for a period of eighteen months. After he was freed, recently, the police bought a ticket for him under the name of Smith, and deported him from India.

Allison arrived in London, where he was warmly greeted by the militant workers of London, who recognized the significance of a strong united front of the English and Indian proletariat. It was here that he received his message from the Red International of Trade Unions praising him for his proven courage and expressing its faith in his future activities for the emancipation of the Indian and English workers

SHOP DELEGATES MINE MEET HERE

Conference July 27; Relief Urgent

Calling on all workers in shops and factories between 14th Street and 59th Street to rally to the relief of the striking miners and their dependents, the Provisional Committee for Shop Delegates' Conference at the Workers Club, 101 W. 27th St. is today issuing a call for a large shop delegates' conference for miners' relief, to be held on Thursday, July 26.

The provisional committee urges all workers in whose shops the conference call is not received, to elect one or two of their number as delegates to the conference; or, if this is impracticable, to attend themselves as individual representatives. The committee calling the conference, realizing that in the shop and factory the workers may best be reached for miners' relief, intends to establish a permanent Shop Delegates Miners' Relief Committee, to be elected at the conference July 26th.

RED CONGRESS REPORT FRIDAY

policy for the adherents of the R. I. L. U. in the United States, about which there is considerable controversy. The yellow socialist press and the I. W. W. have interpreted this decision to place the emphasis in the present situation upon the organization of the unorganized and the building of new unions as a movement on the part of the communists and left wing to desert the reactionary unions and to stop "boring from within."

This interpretation has been repudiated by the T. U. E. L. There still remains considerable confusion as to the real policy adopted at the congress for work in the American trade unions, for building up new unions of the unorganized workers.

Gitlow Among Speakers

Benjamin Gitlow, vice-presidential candidate on the Workers (Communist) Party ticket, will make the main report. Sasha Zimmerman will report for the needle trades. There will be additional reports from other members of the delegation on the various industrial conferences held, such as marine transport, shoe and leather, food industry, building trades, youth, etc.

U. S. S. R. FORMS HUGE SYSTEM TO PURCHASE GRAIN

Harvest Prospects Now Greatly Improved

By EUGENE LYONS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

MOSCOW, July 10 (UP). — The Soviet regime is forming one of the world's largest grain purchasing and distributing organizations in an effort to prevent a repetition of the 1927 difficulties in collecting grain.

Meanwhile, the harvest prospects appear to have improved and the peasants are selling more readily. Total collections to June amounted to 355,000 tons, compared with 281,000 in May and 310,000 in June, 1927.

Bread supplies in Moscow have noticeably increased.

All grain trading groups are being merged into a giant "bread trust" with a basic capital of 300,000,000 rubles.

Vice chairman Kapelinsky of the trust declared he will operate 40 large mills and 89 elevators.

The formal opening of grain collections July 1 was not auspicious and it was reported that the Ukraine and other sections were rationing bread, in some instances rather strictly. Flour is rationed throughout the nation.

In connection with the campaign to increase the winter wheat sowing, authorities were forced to admit that the crop was seriously short and for this reason the government was preparing to distribute 18,000,000 pounds of staple winter seeds and is arranging huge credits for farm machinery.

American Dictatorship

When the New York Times attempts to laugh off by referring to the "Dew tell" of the Vermont farmer and the "Oh Shucks" of the Kansas rangeman, the challenge of a French critic that there is now an "American dictatorship, capitalist, liberal and industrial," the New York Times fulfills its function but convinces no one.

M. Bernard Fay, who writes in the Paris Figaro on the presidential nominee of the republican party concludes in substance that the "internationalism" of Hoover is a myth; that he is a tried and true imperialist and that his reputed "warm love for Europe" should be taken with a ton of salt; nor will it prevent him from carrying on "the enormous development of American resources," which is his genius to fulfill.

Against this, of course, the New York Times, chief organ of the American ruling class, protests vehemently. But it protests too much.

It is true that certain sections of finance capital and various powerful banking interests made a gesture of opposition to the nomination of Hoover. Rather few telegrams of congratulation were sent to him by the Wall Street operators, a fact in striking contrast to the deluge which was poured over the victorious Coolidge. The financial journals are tireless in pointing out that Hoover is surly, sullen, sour, opinionated, and has a bump on himself. All this, of course, the campaign managers of the great engineer will utilize for their own interests. Hoover is not the bankers' man we are told because not all of the bankers were for him.

No one offers the opposition of the farmers to Hoover as an evidence that democracy was justified in his choice. No one claims that the working masses of the country are for Hoover, with the exception of such "workers" as John L. Lewis, arch-wrecker of the mine union. It can be taken as one of the significant proofs of the French critic's thesis that there is an American dictatorship, capitalist, liberal and industrial, that the outstanding spokesmen of this dictatorship find it necessary in their attempts to refute the charge to insist merely on certain insignificant differences between banking groups.

The real facts are that certain "doubts" about Hoover existed among the banking groups interested chiefly in industrial capital. The highest strata of finance capital know their Hoover. Who is so naive today as to believe that any candidate on one of the old political parties can be nominated against the wish of Morgan, Mellon, Baker and the Rockefellers. One might as well try to obtain a Tammany judgeship without contributing to the wigwam treasury.

None of this is, of course, new to Communists. When foreign critics speak thus openly of the American dictatorship it is because they fear the rising power and oppression of the western colossus. The American dictatorship through its Federal Reserve Banking system is in practical control of the finances of the earth. American gold has just stabilized the French currency. The Bank of England, nominally on a gold basis, has been forced to guard itself against extremity through a borrowing arrangement with the Federal Reserve System. The same Federal Reserve System is now engaged in a well-calculated policy of retrenching credit with the known purpose of depressing prices and wage levels within the country in order to meet the disparity between farm prices and industrial prices. In this way it hopes to solve the contradictions between agriculture and big business.

All this the American dictatorship does figuratively by pressing a button in offices centering about Wall and Broad Streets. Nor are the "lesser" things neglected.

When it becomes necessary to jail a few workers agitating against the war in Nicaragua, the thing is done smoothly and with precision. The cops jump, the judge wraps up and hands out a sentence, the jail opens, the papers report Reds who violate laws and democracy is justified.

Yes, there is an American dictatorship, ruthless, brazen, drunken with its super-power and unchallenged brutality.

But there is also a working class!

Miners' Defense Week

The week of July 22-29 has been set aside as Miners' Defense Week. The national Miners' Relief Committee, without whose activities the great mine struggle would long since probably have come to a disastrous conclusion, and the International Labor Defense, an organization which has won the right to demand the support and confidence of the working class, are co-operating in the nationwide drive.

The great mine struggle now in its fifteenth month has made labor history. It will unquestionably serve as one of the milestones in the development of a class conscious American labor movement. No matter what degree of immediate success will result from the struggle, the experience the miners have already gained will be of the utmost value to them in the even greater struggles ahead.

Arrests, imprisonments, fines, frame-ups, these are the inevitable accompaniments of the fight. The role of the International Labor Defense has become increasingly important.

The mine struggle must receive the continued support of the working class. The building up of a spirit of solidarity and sacrifice between groups and sections of workers is an obligation which rests especially on the militants. Amid the multiplicity of calls for relief the individual worker often stands dismayed, but the organized and more advanced sections of workers will not be discouraged by the growing demands upon them.

Support of the Miners' Defense Week is a major task in which every organization and unit of the Party must participate.

Bethlehem Steel Company Cuts Wages

(By a Worker Correspondent.)

SPARROWS POINT, Md. (By Mail).—Soon another edition of the "Sparrows Point Worker" will be issued; a shop bulletin edited by the militant steel workers of the Workers (Communist) Party working in the Bethlehem Steel Company located at Sparrows Point, Md.

Our shop bulletin appears just at a time when the Bethlehem Steel Company is waging a mighty campaign of wage cutting, speed-up and slave driving tactics against these unorganized steel workers. The steel workers' interests are completely disregarded by the bosses. Many workers who never dreamed that the bosses would exercise such absolute methods see the real color of things and feel the urgent necessity of organizing into unions.

Wage Cuts.

The order of the day in the Bethlehem Steel Company are wage cuts ranging from ten to fifty per cent on top of the already extremely low wages. New speed-up machinery is being introduced in every department accompanied by the discharging of many steel workers who are being displaced by modern machines requiring less men. In cases where foremen or superintendents have been showing signs of being in the human race or who appeared to be friendly to a group of workers, have been replaced by other bosses who have established a reputation in other mills as being regular "Simon Legree's." In some departments where the production level was considered a little too low, bosses of these departments have been discharged and replaced by bosses who are past masters of speeding up workers and raising production.

"Yellow-Dog."

Just recently in the company owned city, Sparrows Point, Maryland, the workers living in the houses were forced to sign new yellow dog contracts with clauses such as—that workers' families will be evicted if they allow men or women in their houses who are members of a union. Another clause where men or women or members of the family who have ever been evicted from Sparrows Point cannot be allowed in company owned houses to see their friends or it may even be a close relative. No worker can hold any kind of entertainment, social or dance in his house without consulting the company. Failure to comply with the clauses of the contract will be eviction within five days. These are typical of the many methods that are being conducted by the company to crush every right of the workers.

With the distribution of 1500 shop bulletins among the fifteen thousand steel workers, we carry to many of them for the first time the message of the Workers (Communist) Party and the Workers Party ticket nominees. They are especially enthusiastic over the demands to organize into a real workers' union for our demands. The exploited Negro workers here in sunny Sparrows Point, Maryland are elated when they see in our bulletin demands set up for the abolition of Jim Crowism, better wages conditions and less hours for the Negro workers. They take on new hopes when they run across the demand for organization of the Negro and white workers into one union.

Begin Last Search For Lost Amundsen

KINGS BAY, Spitzbergen, July 10 (UP).—The last search for Raold Amundsen, discoverer of the South Pole, who has been missing with five companions since June 18, began today when three ships started a twelve-day cruise of Arctic waters.

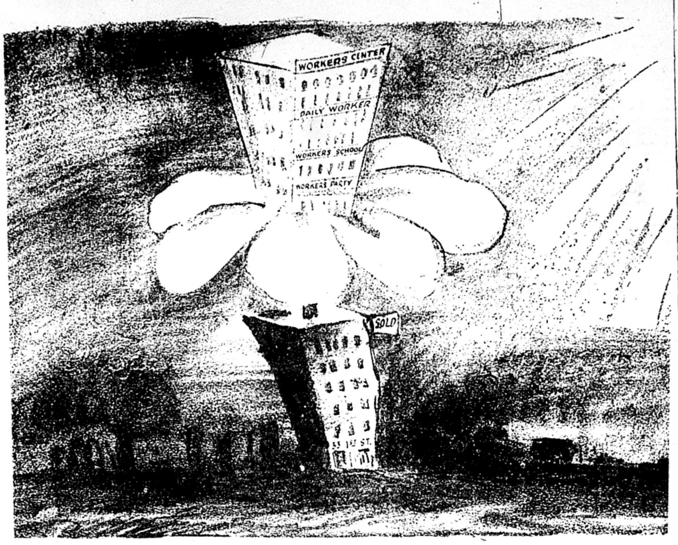
If no trace of the explorer is found by July 21, it was announced, he would be definitely given up as lost and rescue efforts abandoned.

NEW AIR MAIL ROUTE.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—An air mail route may be established between Louisville, Ky., and Dallas, Texas, with stops at Memphis, Nashville, and Little Rock, the Post Office Department announced today. A survey of the route has been ordered.

GROWTH

By Fred Ellis



Nurtured by the working class, this flower blooms for the delight of class conscious workers. Keep up the nourishment.

Shoe Workers Form New Union

Formation of a new union of shoe workers, the Independent Shoe Workers' Union of Greater New York and Vicinity, has been announced following a series of conferences initiated by the Unity Conference of shoe workers. The statement of policy and plans for the new organization follow:

One Union of Shoe Workers for Greater New York.

The conditions of the shoe workers of Greater New York have become so deplorable that they are beyond human endurance. Prices and wages have been constantly reduced, while at the same time working hours have increased. The 44-hour week standard is a thing of the distant past. Because of the long hours which at times range as high as 70 and 75 the army of unemployed is steadily increasing.

These conditions are the result of the failure to mobilize the 40,000 shoe workers of Greater New York into one powerful union. The workers were kept divided by the selfish, reactionary leaders into small petty craft unions which were concerned only with their narrow interests.

Bosses' Organization.

While the workers were engaged in a bitter struggle against the bosses during the year of 1919, the American Shoe Workers' Protective Union was organized by the bosses. This was a company union which the workers refused to join. The workers were, however, forced to join or lose their jobs, and gradually began to take an active part in its affairs. The bosses realizing that they were losing control over their company union, first forced a strike and succeeded in smashing it through the aid of their henchmen and stool-pigeons in the union.

When the Shoe Workers' Protective Union made its attempt to organize the trade in Greater New York it achieved some success as long as it relied upon the co-operation of the workers, but when the FitzGerald-Nolan machine began to apply their reactionary policies of expulsions and refused to aid in the struggles against the bosses in which the district council was involved, the workers lost confidence and the Protective began to disintegrate.

Revoke Charters.

The Nolan-FitzGerald machine, fearing their defeat in the Protective, preferred to smash the union by expelling the progressive elements and revoking the charters of the district council and four locals. Not satisfied with expulsion the Nolan-FitzGerald machine resorted to the injunction, which is the bosses' method of breaking unions in order to completely destroy the district council in furthering their rule or ruin policy. As a result of this, the workers of the shops which the former district council controlled sought protection in the movement to build a union which would be able to defend the interests of the workers. Several mass meetings were held which launched the Associated Shoe and Slipper Workers of Greater New York.

The Boot and Shoe Workers' Union tried to enter the situation upon the invitation of a few individuals who expected that the general office would spend thousands of dollars to organize the shoe trade in New York, but every shoe worker knows that the Baine-Lovely machine which is in control of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union will never fight in the interests of the workers. The Boot and Shoe Workers' Union in New York has remained just as small, weak and ineffectual as when it first came here. The shoe workers keep away from it because they want an organization whose policy is to carry on a struggle for the betterment of conditions instead of betrayal to the bosses. They want a workers' union instead of a company union controlled by the bosses and their agents, the Baine-Loveley machine.

Various groups of workers composed of different crafts began to organize themselves separately.

Unity Conference.

Such a group which held itself together as an organized body in one shop realized that without the unity of all organized forces, trade union conditions and standards of the workers cannot be successfully maintained. This group initiated a call for a unity conference which was held on May 19th, 1928. The various shoe workers' unions and groups responded to the call at which the question of establishing one union for Greater New York was discussed.

The first question before the conference was to unite all groups into one union in Greater New York. This question was decided by a unanimous vote to get together. The second question was whether this organization shall be national or local.

The delegation of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union attempted to convince the conference that the Boot and Shoe is the only national organization. Their attempt was in vain, because the delegates representing the other organizations have shown that the Boot and Shoe is not interested in organizing the unorganized. Its policy is one of conscious betrayal of the workers and it is no better than a company union. Although the conference voted to form a local organization they are ready to join a national organization provided the leadership and the policies of such an organization shall be militant and fighting for the interests of the workers and for organizing the unorganized.

Important Problems.

The question of a national organization was discussed at length. The Shoe Workers' Protective Union as well as the Boot and Shoe have been considered and it was plainly proven that neither one has a policy which will protect and organize the shoe workers. While the Protective had every opportunity of building a strong organization it has instead followed a policy of disruption and betrayal. The Protective is a national union only in name, being practically non-existant except in one city. Thus the question of joining any existing national organization has been voted down and the conference voted to stand by a local organization.

The delegation of the Associated Shoe & Slipper Workers of Greater New York pledged their full support, even to the extent of completely fusing with the new union.

One Union.

Though the Boot and Shoe delegation was absent from the second conference held on June second, a more important factor in the trade came in, a group of lasters and wood-heelers, which has recently been formed. After this group was informed of the proceedings of the previous conference, the delegation pledged its full support to the new movement and all indications point towards the direction that one union will be established in Greater New York.

An executive board was chosen to work out the necessary details and the drawing up of a constitution for the newly formed organization. The results of the conference was presented at a general membership meeting held on June 22, at Lorraine Hall, Brooklyn, N. Y. A name for the new organization was unanimously chosen at this meeting. The new union is to be known as the Independent Shoe Workers' Union of Greater New York & Vicinity. Constructive plans were mapped out, among which was the issuing of new books to begin July 16th and by that date all members of the different groups are to pay up their dues. Arrangements for a picnic to raise funds for organization work to be held on July 22 at Hause's Park & Casino in Astoria, L. I. was reported on and received with acclamation by those comprising the newly formed organization.

All Workers Invited.

The headquarters of the union will be located temporarily at 51 E. 10th St., N. Y. C. All shoe workers of Greater New York are invited to call at the office and file applications with the new organization.

With united forces, build one union for shoe workers of Greater New York!

Stop the bosses from imposing slave conditions in the factories!

Build one powerful union to raise wages and improve working conditions in every shoe factory in Greater New York!

Join the Independent Shoe Workers' Union of Greater New York!

Unity Conference of Shoe Workers of Greater New York.

Capitalists Aided in the Donetz Conspiracy

(Altho the Donetz trial is over, The DAILY WORKER publishes this article on the court proceedings because of the tremendous importance of the revelations which clearly indicate the existence of an imperialist sabotage plot. Evidence presented at the trial clearly proved that foreign official as well as business firms joined with the former Czarist owners of the Donetz mines in a conspiracy to wreck the coal industry of the Soviet Union.)

Moscow, June 21, 1928.

The court this week has been engaged in investigating the operations of the so-called Kharkov center of the sabotage organization that directed the work of economic destruction in the Don Basin. A number of the accused were examined in this connection. Some admitted their guilt entirely, some admitted part of the charges and others strenuously denied them all. But by cross-examination, the evidence of witnesses and the confronting of the accused with one another, the grim story of how this Kharkov center systematically sabotaged the development of work of the Don Basin and inflicted colossal damage on the coal industry, was dragged out of them.

The principal figure in this stage of the trial was the accused Baranovsky, who was a leading member of the Kharkov center and who, as he himself stated in concluding his evidence, "hoping to be pardoned and enabled to start a new life," made a clean breast of it.

Describes Meetings

Baranovsky described the meetings of the organization at which instructions received from the ex-mine owners abroad, Russian and foreign, were discussed and plans for carrying them out laid down. In the early period, Baranovsky stated, it suited the plans of the ex-owners abroad to have improvements carried out in the Don Basin. They gave instructions to the organization accordingly, which the latter carried out. Baranovsky at that time was manager of the Ekaterinov group of mines, and the order came to him. He, accordingly, set to work to carry it out, but, as he himself stated, he was "too zealous" and improved too much. For that (he was "cautioned" by the center and ordered to "go slow," and, as he said, he soon "rectified his mistake" and made up for it by committing a number of definite acts of destruction.

The method adopted at the Kharkov center in recent times was deliberately to delay the drafting of plans of development. "Procrastination and red tape was developed into a system," said Baranovsky. Plans were drawn up, "some of them positively fantastic," and then discussed at length, amended, again discussed and redrafted, and so without end, and when finally they were sent down to the district managers, who were in the plot, "they knew what to do with them."

Anti-Soviet Propaganda

Cross-examined by the prosecution, Baranovsky admitted that the aims of the organization were not purely economic. At the meetings of the Kharkov center they discussed political questions, such as methods of anti-Soviet propaganda, foreign intervention, the internal state of the Communist Party, etc. Krilenko put it to the accused:

"This organization was a political organization?"

"An economic-political organization," Baranovsky corrected him.

"But its ultimate game was the overthrow of the Soviet State?"

"Yes."

"Is it true to say that it was a political counter-revolutionary organization, having contact with foreign government institutions; that it was a branch of foreign capitalist state organizations?"

"Yes; in the latter period of its existence it became a foreign subsidized organization, operating on the territory of the U. S. S. R., for the purpose of definite sabotage in the event of intervention."

Cash From French Ex-Owners

The manner in which contact with foreign government organizations was maintained will be investigated in camera in a day or two. At this hearing Baranovsky stated that sums of money were received from the French ex-owners, who, accused presumed, obtained them from government sources. The accused stated also that sums of money were obtained in the form of "commissions" from German firms for orders placed with them. The firms mentioned were the Allgemeine Elektrische Geselschaft, Eihoff and Knapp, and money was expected from Siemens. This money was transmitted through representatives of the firms visiting Russia or through members of the organization on "business visits" to Germany.

It is significant that Prof. Wurms, counsel for the accused German engineers, in cross-examining Baranovsky, did not seek to refute the allegation that money was paid by the German firms to the Russian engineers; he strove to show that this was merely a "commercial custom."

A number of the accused indicated by Banarovsky's evidence were confronted with him. Their efforts to shake his testimony led to "scenes" and the president had to pull them up. Baranovsky remained unshaken.

Told You So

PHILLIPS, the sewer grafter, did a good job for Tammany hall when he died of kidney trouble in Atlantic City the other day. There are reports now that those political higher-ups who were involved with Phillips will go unscathed. Dead men tell no tales. It appears that the christian deity is not always on the side of the good. He seems to take a diabolical pleasure in doing the wicked a favor once in a while.

FIFTEEN thousand citizens surrounded a catholic church in Brooklyn to see a gangster buried. Thirty-eight flower-laden automobiles followed him to his grave. A catholic priest said mass for the repose of his soul. The gangster had paid for it in advance. This thug, Yale by name, made his living holding up small business men, furnishing strikebreakers and in other equally reprehensible ways. But he was generous to churches and the "deserving poor," the poor who voted for his political patrons on election day in return for a crumb now and then.

YALE'S political patrons are members of Tammany Hall. Despite the bunk that is peddled in the capitalist press to the effect that the Tammany of today is not the Tammany of Boss Tweed or Dick Croker days, that political institution is as closely connected with the underworld as ever. It is said that Yale, through this strong arm squad and his philanthropic activities, controlled 30,000 votes which he was able to sell at a good price.

PREMIER Poincare of France paid tribute to the dove of peace on the Fourth of July. He sincerely hoped that war would be forever banished from the face of the earth. What the honorable gentleman meant is that the bandit powers should be able to settle their differences without having to resort to war so that they would be able to fleece their colonial slaves and keep their own workingclass under the iron heel. A few days after July 4, the newspapers carried the story that the French navy had just launched the fastest warship afloat.

THE British trade union bureaucracy took a flying leap ahead of even the officialdom of the American Federation of Labor in discarding class warfare and joining hands with the employers in keeping the peace. Henceforth all will be quiet along the Thames between capital and labor, if the British labor fakers can help it. The General council of the British Trade Union Congress formed a united front with a committee of British industrialists to review British industry with a view to developing a plan whereby the best interests of industry could be served at the expense of the workers of course.

COINCIDENTAL with the announcement of this decision, J. H. Thomas, political secretary of the railwaymen's union, declared that the railroad workers must be prepared to accept a wage cut. Most of the official labor leaders and particularly J. H. Thomas are wealthy and care little whether the workers' standard goes up or down as long as they are permitted to retain their positions which give them prestige in the social world and enables them to mix freely with kings, queens, lords and dukes. But docile though the British workers have been there is a limit to their patience. There are some interesting developments in the British labor movement. The Communist Party recently decided to contest the elections against the labor party as well as against the liberal and tory parties. The Labor Party, under the leadership of MacDonald, Snowden, Thomas and others, is just as imperialistic as the tory and liberal parties. It has gone so far to the right that Maxton, the chairman of the independent labor party, the socialist kernel in the Labor Party, is now making open war on MacDonald and threatening to split the labor party. In this fight he is joined by A. J. Cook, the secretary of the Miners Federation, who is liable to be ousted from his position by his own reactionary executive backed by the General Council.

SOVIET FLYER FINDS 3 LOST "ITALIA" CREW

Braves Great Dangers On Ice Floe

By EUGENE LYONS.

MOSCOW, July 11 (UP).—Three men of the ill-fated trans-Iolago dirigible Italia who have been struggling for 42 days from ice floes toward land, and who had been given up for lost, were found today by an unknown Russian aviator on the Arctic wastes off Cape Platen, north east land.

The Russian ice ship Krassin reported that Soviet aviator Chuknovsky had circulated over the men—Prof. Finn Malmgrem, Swedish physicist, and Captains Adalberto Mariano and Filippo Zappi of the Royal Italian navy, and that it was hoped they could be rescued tonight or Thursday.

Chuknovsky circled over the bedraggled figures, outlined on the ice by the dazzling sun, and sought to find a place to land. Two of the men were standing and waved their hands to the aviator. The third was stretched out on the ice and Chuknovsky was uncertain whether he moved.

After he had made certain there was no safe landing place in the vicinity, Chuknovsky returned to his base ship, the Krassin, and the Russians began rushing preparations to rescue the three men, whose condition could be nothing less than desperate.

While only a short distance separates the Krassin from the Castaways great difficulties face the

PARTY IN CALL FOR BIG CONCERT

Mass Demonstration Urged Saturday

An appeal to all class-conscious workers of New York to attend the great concert at the Coney Island Stadium Saturday night was issued last night by the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party. The appeal, which urges that the concert being arranged under the joint auspices of The DAILY WORKER and the Freiheit be made a mass political demonstration, follows:

"Comrades! Fellow Workers!

"The two greatest dailies of our party, The DAILY WORKER and the Freiheit, have organized a great concert and rally to take place at the Coney Island Stadium on Saturday evening, July 14. This concert is more than an ordinary entertainment, just as July 14 is more than an ordinary day.

"July Fourteenth is Bastille Day This day is written with letters of fire in the history of the great French Revolution. It is the day when the masses of France, rising against their feudal oppressors took by storm and partly destroyed the formidable political prison of their old rulers, the citadel of Bastille. Our comrades of The DAILY WORKER and the Freiheit did well to choose this revolutionary day for their undertaking.

Program of Big Concert. Is Announced

At last the details of the program of the great concert to be held at Coney Island Stadium Saturday night have been completely worked out. And the program indicates that the committee in charge has done itself proud.

The first part of the program will consist of a concert by Arnold Volpe and his symphony orchestra of 50 musicians. The orchestra will open with the Coronation March from Meyerbeer's opera, The Prophet. Then will follow the famous Rienzi Overture of Wagner, Caucasian Sketches by Ippolitow-Ivanov, Fantasy from Bizet's opera, Carmen, and the ever-popular Marche Slav by Tschaikovsky. All of these numbers are among the most popular in the symphonic repertoire.

Ballet's Program.

After an intermission of 15 minutes, the noted Roxy Ballet, under the direction of A. Nelle, former partner of Pavlova, will present its program. This will consist of a Gypsy Dance and Mazourka from Delibes' ballet, Coppelia, and dances from Gounod's opera, Faust. The dancing of the ballet is certain to be a revelation to all those present.

DRIVE FOR NEW UNION SPREADS

Urge Anthracite To Stand Solid

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 11.—The call for a national miners' convention to be held at Pittsburgh on September 9-16 for the purpose of forming a new national miners' union, was forwarded to all local unions of the United Mine Workers with a request for the election of delegates to the convention, according to an announcement by Pat Toohey, secretary of the convention arrangements committee. Toohey added that the convention arrangements committee printed 100,000 copies of the Call for the convention for wide distribution among the miners in both the organized and unorganized sections of the industry.

Warns Miners.

The announcement warns the progressive miners that the Lewis henchmen will do everything in their power to prevent the local unions from taking action on the Call for a national miners' convention. Toohey therefore urges the progressive miners to make sure that the Call is brought before their local unions and that delegates loyal to the rank and file are elected to the convention.

JAILED WORKERS TO SPEAK UPON TOMBS RELEASE

Kate Gitlow Assails Vicious Judge

When the five cell doors in the Tombs swing open tomorrow, liberating the workers who were Monday sentenced to serve a five-day term for participating in the anti-imperialist demonstration at Broad and Wall Sts., July 13, a crowd of workers will greet them outside of the prison to escort them to Union Square.

There a monster protest meeting will be held at 4 o'clock. The speakers will include Robert Minor, editor of The DAILY WORKER and Workers (Communist) Party candidate for U. S. senator, Harriet Silverman, secretary of the New York branch of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League, which arranged the meeting; Rebecca Grecht, candidate for assembly and state campaign manager of the Workers (Communist) Party; Robert Wolf, novelist and poet, and Emanuel George, a striking miner from Ohio.

The meeting is expected to draw thousands of workers who will attend as a protest against the brutalities of Tammany's New York police and the vicious prejudice shown by Magistrate Gottlieb in the trial of the five militant workers during the farcical trial.

The huge protest Friday, which is being held under the auspices of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League, will be the beginning of a vigorous campaign for members among all workers and sympathizers for the fight against American imperialism.

AFFAIRS AIDING MILL STRIKERS

W. I. R. Appeals For Relief Activity

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., July 11.—The Workers International Relief, which has now become the chief strike relief distributing agency in the New Bedford strike of 28,000 textile workers has issued an appeal to workers' organizations to undertake activities that will bring in funds for strike aid. The statement enumerates the affairs already arranged and says in part:

"A smashing defeat was delivered to the textile corporations on Monday, July 9, when the mill gates were opened for the first time in 12 weeks. Not a striker returned to work. The attempt of the bosses to intimidate the workers by calling out an additional force of mounted police and the state militia was answered by the strikers by mass picketing.

State Stops Aid.

The state of Massachusetts announced through the press that since the mills were opened the state would no longer aid in giving relief to the needy. The city of New Bedford and the chamber of commerce who have been doling out charity will no doubt follow this capitalistic example within a few days in the hope that this will defeat and force the workers back into the mills.

"F. G. Biederkapp of the Workers International Relief says that the W. I. R. is arranging to open up ad-

PIONEERS RAP COURT

Denounce the Verdict on Rose Plotkin

Bitter condemnation of Magistrate Samuel D. Levy of the Children's Court who on Tuesday condemned Rose Plotkin, 13-year-old member of the Young Pioneers, to be sent back to her home town in Indiana is contained in a statement issued by the Communist youth organization last night.

The young militant was arrested at the anti-imperialists' demonstration at Broad and Wall Sts., July 3, and has been kept prisoner in the Heckscher Foundation since her arrest. Magistrate Levy had refused the request of Jacques Bruitenkant, representing the New York Section of the International Labor Defense, that judgment be postponed in order that Fanny Plotkin, sister of the young accused, might have an op-

Feeding the 28,000 New Bedford Mill Strikers and Their Families

FOOD FOR THE NEW BEDFORD TEXTILE STRIKERS

During the entire 13 weeks that the 28,000 textile workers of New Bedford have been on strike, the Workers International Relief has been supplying food for them and their dependents. The magnificent picketing demonstration last Monday, in which over 20,000 participated, indicated that victory is not far distant. Meanwhile relief is urgent. Photo shows but a small proportion of the thousands cared for by the W. I. R. relief kitchen in New Bedford. For a few weeks city charities provided some relief, but the moment the mill barons announced that they would attempt to reopen the mills if the strikers would return, the charity agencies ceased giving relief, telling the workers to return to the looms.

ACTION BEGINS IN PORTER CASE

Shorr, I.L.D. Attorney, Goes to Ft. Adams

By PAUL CROUCH

John Porter, imprisoned in an army jail for his militant strike activities, membership in the Young Workers Communist League and on the technical charge of desertion, will soon be brought before a court-martial or a civil court.

The National Office of the International Labor Defense, 80 East 11th St., has announced that Isaac Shorr, the attorney retained for the defense, is leaving today for Fort Adams, R. I., to start action on the case to attempt to stop the brutal methods being used in an effort to crush Porter's spirit.

Information was received yesterday that the military authorities, who have kept Porter in solitary confinement for almost a week, are resorting to the most extreme measures in their attempts to break the militant revolutionary stand of the young soldier-worker, although it is more than a month since John Porter was turned over to the military authorities.

The International Labor Defense has decided that the authorities will not be permitted to continue their brutal treatment of Porter, and Shorr will demand that the case be brought to trial immediately. If this is refused, action will be started in the civil courts.

On his visit to Porter in the prison cell, Shorr will be accompanied by Porter's sweetheart, Theresa Valente, a New Bedford strike leader and secretary of the National Committee recently formed to mobolize the young workers of the country for Porter's release and to expose the role of the army.

TO HOLD CONEY ISLAND DANCE

The Coney Island Workers Club will hold a Moonlight Dance, Saturday, July 14. The dance, which will begin at midnight, will be held at the Pythian Temple, 2864 W. 21st St., Coney Island.

The affair had originally been arranged to take place on the afternoon of the same day, and notices had appeared both in The DAILY WORKER and in other publications to that effect. But because it would have conflicted with The DAILY WORKER concert at the Coney Island Stadium at which Theremin, the noted Soviet musician is to play, the club moved the time ahead to midnight.

POLICE ARREST THREE DETROIT COMMUNISTS

DETROIT, Mich. (By Mail).—The first open air meeting in the Workers (Communist) Party election campaign was broken up by police the other night and three workers arrested. They are Alfred E. Goetz, Philip Bart, district organizer, Young Workers League, and Morris Fleishman. They were taken to the police station and at midnight were taken out of their cells by Detectives Delesle and Pendergrass, who were both under the influence of liquor, and severely beaten up.

The workers later declared that they were taken to the fourth floor of police headquarters and before questioned, were beaten up. They were beaten until they were unconscious, then forced to stand up and take another beating. The workers were then held incommunicado for two days when they were freed by the court without having had any charges preferred against them.

The Detroit campaign committee plans to take up the whole matter and will get out a complete policy on open air meetings in relation to the campaign. The committees will proceed with meetings on the street corners in spite of the police terror

SMITH IN PLEDGE TO BIG BUSINESS

Pick Morgan Bankers to Lead Drive

Governor Alfred E. Smith, in an interview given out to the press yesterday, boldly declared that the campaign of which he is to take personal direction will be based upon a determined effort to win the support of the big business interests of the country

In conformity with this plan the Tammany leader announced his choice of John J. Raskob, chairman of the finance committee of the finance committee of the General Motors Company, as head of the national committee of the democratic party and Herbert H. Lehman, head of several Morgan-controlled banks of New York City, as the treasurer of the committee.

Raskob, who is a republican, in a public declaration intended obviously for G. O. P. consumption yesterday assured them that Smith would not disturb the present status of the tariff.

N. Y. COMMUNIST CAMPAIGN IS ON

First Sprint For Big Signature Quota

Evidence that the election campaign of the Workers (Communist) Party in New York State and particularly in New York City was swinging into mid-season form was had yesterday with the announcement through Bert Miller, organization secretary of District 2, that a number of successful meetings have already been held in the drive to secure 25,000 signatures to put the local candidates of the Party on the ballot.

Running Start

While the full force in the campaign may not get under way before next week, it was announced, various sections have already begun with the house to house campaign to secure the necessary signatures. Those in charge report a greater degree of enthusiasm and interest in the present political campaign than was manifest in previous years when the value of political activity had not yet been so fully realized.

At a section meeting held in the Harlem headquarters of the Party, 143 E. 103rd St., last week preliminary plans were laid for the carrying out the campaign in that district. Signature squads were appointed under a program of activity which includes a seven-day drive until the necessary quota is secured. Every member is to report daily at 7 p. m. for work in the evening.

Both have been deeply interested in the frame-up case and have been working for the release of Mooney and Billings since 1916. 18,000 MARCH TO KILBURN MILLS AS SCAB RUMOR RISES

United Textile Worker Rank and File Defies Batty; Fraternize with Mill Committee

Pickets in Fishermen's Boats Guard Mill Gate on Waterfront Against 8 Scabs

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., July 11.—The most dramatic single event to take place since the big New Bedford textile strike began more than 12 weeks ago, occurred yesterday when it was rumored at a meeting of the Textile Workers Union strike committee that eight strikebreakers had entered the Kilburrn Mills and had started the looms.

The immediate call for a picket demonstration issued by the strike committee spread like wild-fire thruout the city and resulted in the formation of a picket line marching 3,000 strong, with over 15,000 other strikers and sympathizers jamming the entire South End where the Kilburn plant is situated.

Huge Demonstration.

Then followed a huge all night demonstration, spontaneity and enthusiasm of which did not diminish even after daylight had come. The picket line stretched along Rodney French Boulevard for several city blocks.

The peak of the demonstration was reached at about midnight, the many thousands of workers then going home, but many hundreds still stubbornly watched the waterfront thru which the eight scabs were reported to have entered the mills.

As the hours crept toward the early dawn, hundreds of men and women came to augment the picket line despite a pelting rain. Mothers who had left the Kilburn plant to take their children home returned to patrol the mill gates and the water front Spirit High.

The entire city is as one in agreement with the belief that this demonstration did more to display the iron determination underlying the spirit of the strikers than any other manifestation of strength.

Again the yellow role of the leaders of the textile council was shown here when Lieutenant Manning, and Chief McLeed in charge of the emergency police force called out, asked the picket line leaders that the mass picketing and the singing of strike songs be stopped. McLeed and Manning asked this of the picket captains of the Textile Workers Union of the T. M. C., Caesare Barbosa and August Gonsalves Pinto; and also of the Council leader Batty.

Batty Aids Bosses.

Batty immediately responded to the police request that picket lines be reduced to six at each gate and that marching cease. The T. M. C. Picket captains gave an immediate unconditional refusal to obey the police request.

Quits Picketing.

Batty then followed with a call to the council membership that they withdraw from the picket line and move to an adjourning lot. The council pickets protested saying that they wished to remain on the picket lines as long as the Mills Committee pickets were there. A large majority of his pickets remained on the line after disregarding his express order to withdraw.

At 2 a. m. the T. M. C. captains collected doughnuts and cookies from three bakers and handed them out to the pickets. At 3 a. m. a big truck loaded with sandwiches, milk and coffee with sent by the T. M. C. Relief Station and distribution to the Council as well as to the T. M. C. pickets. The Council picket captain at first hesitated, but then accepted

AUTO WORKERS IN FLINT, MICH., OUT ON STRIKE

Several Hundred Join in Walkout

FLINT, Mich., July 11.—Several hundred auto workers have walked out on strike in the Fisher Body Plant here. The spontaneous strike developed out of the speed-up system and the general worsening of working conditions.

The men are determined to put up a strong fight and are calling upon the rest of the workers in the plant to stand with them in the fight because it is a fight of all workers in the industry.

The strike and picket line have been organized under the leadership of the Auto Workers' Union. Philip Raymond, the organizer of the union, is in the strike field directing and leading these workers in their struggle against the open shoppers. Mass meetings are being arranged and all indications show that these meetings will be successful. It is the general feeling among strikers that the only way to stop General Motors from cutting their wages is by having all the workers organized into an Auto Workers' Union.

FUR UNION WAGE RAISE DRIVE ON

Wkr's in Right Wing Shops Join Campaign

The first repercussions of the drive for July wage raises now being conducted by the Joint Board Furriers Union, were heard yesterday when, as a result of the success the campaign is so far registering, the workers in two shops of the Associated Fur Manufactuers went out on strike after their demand for wage increases had been refused by the bosses.

Despite the fact that the shops of the Associated all have so-called agreements with the right wing Joint Council and do not recognize the Joint Board, the ability of the Joint Board to call and win several shop strikes in other shops caused the workers here to put up spontaneously these demands to their own bosses. In prosecuting the drive the Joint Board had thrown out the slogan to all workers in the trade to fight their bosses for the July raises.

The two shops in which the workers struck are Bloom and Gerber, 144 W. 27th St., and Brownstein

Over 5,000 Troy Shirt Workers Plan Sympathy Strike Against Wage Reduction

[illegible] ALREADY ON STRIKE AGAINST BIG WAGE SLASH

New System Means Cut of 35 to 50 Per Cent

TROY, N. Y., July 11.—The strike of 900 workers employed at the Cluett, Peabody and Company Collar and Shirt Manufacturers, has aroused such high feeling on the part of the rest of the workers in the city that the entire working force of over 5,000 are threatening to walk out on a general sympathy strike to come to the aid of their fellow workers.

After the stoppage of work caused by the strike of 900 workers. the company announced that it would close one of its local plants in retaliation against the buttonhole makers who walked out in protest against the inauguration of what the company calls "a new method of wage payments." This new method, the workers claim, is actually a crooked plan whereby the weekly wages of those employed in the plant will be greatly reduced.

Declare Solidarity.

When it became known to the rest of the workers that the company contemplated closing one of its plants the rest of the workers assured the strikers that if the action is taken, they would march out 5,000 strong, in a sympathy strike, thus tying up the entire works.

Wages Reduced 50 Per Cent.

The new system which the company tried to install, and in protest against which 900 workers went on strike, calls for a plan whereby workers will be paid on an hourly basis instead of on piece work. Approximately 1,000 workers would be affected by the new "system." This system, called by the officials of the company the "Bedeaux system," would result in a cut of from 35 to 50 per cent in the weekly earnings of the workers.

organization consisting of several thousand women in New York and other cities in the U. S.

"I and my organization are in full agreement with the policies of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League. We fully approve of the action of the Anti-Imperialist League in selecting the day before Independence Day to remind the workers that Independence Day is the symbol of the day when the American people have, thru fight and revolution, freed themselves from the yoke of England. This is Minor and the other seven workers as a result of the anti-imperialist demonstration in Wall Street on July 3.

"Mother" Gitlow was acquitted of the charge although she took an active part in the demonstration, and her letter points out the inconsistency of freeing her and convicting Minor and the others. Her letter follows:

"Magistrate Gottlieb.

New York City.
"Dear Sir:

"I am writing in reference to the dismissal of my case, in connection with the conviction of Robert Minor, Robert Wolf, Rebecca Grecht and the rest of my comrades, on July 9th, in the First District Court by Judge Gottlieb.

"I was one of the participants in the demonstration of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League on Wall Street, July 3 representing the United Council of Working Class Women, with offices at 80 E. 11th St. The U. W. is an or- Workingclass Women, protesting against the conviction of Robert [illegible] let the workers know that America today like England at that time is waging an imperialist war against the smaller nations which it can exploit. The workers must know this and must demand that the U. S. government keep off Nicaragua, Santo Domingo, etc.

"It was in this spirit that I participated in this peaceful demonstration with Robert Minor and the rest of our comrades. The accusation against me by the police officer was that I pushed the police. This accusation is as false as the accusation against Robert Minor and the others sentenced to 5 days in the workhouse, that they incited to riot. I was arrested when I passed by [illegible] as an officer seized a young [illegible] and knocked her to the pavement. I protested against such action and this resulted in my arrest.

"I and my organization protest against your decision of the conviction of Robert Minor and the others as an abuse against the use of free speech. I protest against the dismissal of my case. I accept this as an insult. If Robert Minor and the others are guilty, then I am guilty. If, however, I am not guilty, then, of course, Minor and the others are not guilty. I therefore demand that either convict me or that you dismiss the charges against Robert Minor and the rest.

WHY HAVE ROBERT MINOR AND SEVEN OTHER WORKERS BEEN JAILED?

By MOISSAYE J. OLGIN.

Robert Minor, militant editor of The DAILY WORKER, is serving a sentence in jail. Why is he there?

He appeared in a certain street of New York on July 3. He was in company with a number of workmen and women who carried placards. There were inscriptions on the placards. The inscriptions demanded the withdrawal of United States marines from Nicaragua and China.

Is this a crime? In which statute book, in which code of laws is it written that a citizen of the United States may not express his dissatisfaction with the policies of the powers that be? The marching workers did their duty before their fellow workers, before the masses of this country, when they voiced a protest against the outrages of the strongest republic in the world crushing weak, innocent peoples. Is this a crime?

Minor and his fellow protestants were arrested on the spot. Why? The policemen invented an excuse. They said the marchers had no permit to march. This was an open subterfuge. Peaceful picketing is an act allowed by the state of New York. Any picket may carry a sign. Minor and his comrades picketed Morgan's office while carrying signs. They committed no crime even from the point of view of capitalist law.

Minor and his comrades were brought before a magistrate charged with "disorderly conduct." This charge is also a subterfuge. The law punishing disorderly conduct had in view drunkenness, open prostitution, abuses of peaceful passers-by. Minor and his comrades did nothing of the kind. They attacked nobody. They interfered with nobody's work. They used the sidewalks of New York which are the common property of all. They expressed their political views on certain issues of public life. What is "disorderly" about their conduct?

They say: "Minor made an attempt to address the crowd." What is wrong in this? Since when has it become a crime to address fellow citizens on a political or other issue? At the spot where Minor was arrested, a minister of a church was addressing the crowd. Why was he not molested? Hundreds of people speak in the streets of New York every day. Why did the long arm of the bluecoated "law" single out Minor and his friends?

They were brought before a magistrate. Why did the magistrate behave like a bulldog, not like a judge? Why did he bark at Minor instead of maintaining at least a semblance of balance? Why did he not permit Minor to use his constitutional right to address the court? Why did he not interfere when policemen mishandled the defendant? Why did he stress the fact that the defendants were members of a "radical organization?" What business has a judge, if the case is not political, to pry into the political views of the accused? Why did he remark that the accused were mostly "of foreign extraction?" Is there a law in the U. S. according to which citizens of foreign extraction are to be more severely punished than citizens of American ancestry? (The magistrate's name Gottlieb surely indicates that he is of Mayflower descent!)

Why did all these people disregard and violate their own law? What made them rave?

O, a great crime was, indeed, committed by our comrades! A grave, unpardonable sin! They invaded the holy confines of Wall Street! They dared tread the street before the offices of the real American Emperor, Morgan! They protested against Wall Street's bloody hand in other countries!

Police are mobilized, judges bulldozed, jails are packed—not because a law of the land is violated (there are plenty of imbecilic laws made to oppress the workers), but here not even a capitalist law was violated! But the might of Wall Street is here concerned: "Wall Street, Wall Street ueber alles." No law higher than Wall Street. No government above Wall Street. Every American government, only a servant to Wall Street.

Minor is in jail because he protested against Wall Street. Minor and his friends were charged with disorderly conduct because in the eyes of American capitalism nothing is more disorderly than challenging Wall Street. The judge behaved like a prosecutor because he did the bidding of his masters in Wall Street. The judge referred to "radicalism" because in reality he sentenced our comrades not for disorderliness but for opposing Wall Street. The judge imposed a political sentence under a flimsy and ridiculous disguise. The judge crawled on his knees before the Moloch of Wall Street.

We, the workers of America, will not submit to this. We serve notice that we will not tolerate such treatment. We shall fight for our political rights. We shall protest whenever and wherever we see fit. We shall fight class justice, manipulated in favor of the Morgans. We, not the handful of imperialist plunderers, are the people of this country. We shall mobilize the working masses to resist Wall Street and its lackeys.

A large number of active Young Pioneers and a group of Young Workers League members participated in a farewell demonstration for Rose at Grand Central Station yesterday evening at 7 o'clock, just prior to her departure for La Porte, Indiana.

The statement of the Young Pioneers follows, in part:

"Rose Plotkin has been sent back to Indiana because she is an active Pioneer and realizes the role of capitalist justice. The Young Pioneers of District 2 know that she will be just as active in Indiana or wherever else workers children are as she has been in New York.

"The Young Pioneers therefore call upon all workers and workers' children to help it in its fight against the arrest of children and workers who take part in demonstrations of the workers against the bosses; against the capitalist courts who penalize workers' children when they protest against capitalist justice; against the children's society, which works hand in hand with the bosses. It also advocates a real workers' government, where children would not be arrested because they are active in workers' struggles.

FINANCE CAPITAL MODIFIES POLICY

Also Speeds Drive on Workers' Wages

By JOHN L. SHERMAN

Informed circles here are viewing with considerable doubt the announcement that the Chicago Federal Reserve Bank has increased its rediscount rate from 4 1/2 to 5 per cent primarily as a further curb on the speculative wave which has flowed over the country particularly on the New York stock market.

It is admitted here that the attempt to decrease brokers' loans, which form the basis for speculation in securities may be one of the factors in the present policy of the Federal Reserve Bank. It is pointed out, however, that previous to this month these loans had decreased by nearly a half billion from an earlier peak. The reason for the present policy must be looked for in another direction, it is stated.

Aimed At "Prosperity"

The policy of the Federal Reserve Bank which for over four years has been to maintain "easy money," was motivated, it is declared, by the desire to maintain "prosperity." Easy money, free credit, extension of installment buying, these it was believed would tend to maintain the upward trend of business.

The general aim, it is understood, is to restrict credit, force down prices and hence wages and thus "solve" the critical price question at the expense of the working class. This is the meaning of the increased discount rates. Other reserve banks will follow the lead of the Chicago branch which in the past has been the first to put into operation any changes.

MINERS REFUSE TO DO BIDDING OF 2 LABOR FAKERS

10,000 Lehigh Workers Will Continue Strike

(Special To DAILY WORKER.)

HAZLETON, Pa., July 11.—The order of District President Andrew Mattey of District 7 of the United Mine Workers of America in betraying the 10,000 striking workers of the fourteen collieries of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company by telling them to go back to work today, even though the demands for which the miners struck have not been granted, was frustrated today by the rank and file of the coal workers.

The General Mine Committee has refused to sanction the order of the district president, Mattey, who is serving the best interests of the coal barons instead of the miners whom he is supposed to represent. The coal barons for whom the corrupt Mattey is working recently sent a letter to all the local unions demanding their members be present at a meeting. At this meeting it is understood that machine men will be present to try to force the striking miners to return to work.

Another Faker Joins.

Thomas Gallegher, president of the Panther Valley sub-district of District 7, joined Mattey in his attempts to break the strike and issued a similar order that the miners return to work today. No response has thus far met the reactionary orders of the two corrupt officials.

The miners working at the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company went on a sympathy strike some time ago with the mass of mine workers now fighting for better conditions in the various American mining fields. Their strike closed fourteen collieries and the company was forced to close down mines Nos. 4, 5 and 6. The sympathy strike was declared by the workers against the "advice" of the union bureaucrats who are at present trying to crush the strike and force the miners into submission. But so far their orders have not affected the 10,000 miners who are on strike.

PORTER'S TRIAL WILL BEGIN SOON

Soldier-Worker Remains Firm; Would Give Life for Cause

By PAUL CROUCH

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., July 11.—The case of John Porter is moving rapidly, and unless there are mass protests of the workers immediately this brave soldier-worker may get a far worse sentence than Walter Trumbull and I received in 1925 (26 and 40 years, respectively).

According to military law, a prisoner must be brought to trial within one month after arrest and charges made one week before trial. To date, there has been no investigation or official charges made against Porter, but there can be no longer delay, and the case is coming to a climax.

Will Never Bow to Masters

The prospect of a militant fighter before a court martial is not pleasant to the authorities. They are trying to break his spirit—using the most brutal treatment in their efforts to make him submissive, but John Porter says that he will never. never become a cringing creature on his knees before the masters and the exploiters of his class. On the contrary, his spirit and determination has become like steel since he has been treated like a slave and thrown into solitary confinement because of his militant position.

In a recent letter to me, John Porter revealed his determination—his true character. He wrote little about himself, being more concerned about the struggles of his fellow-workers. "I am hoping to see the day when the people will be strong enough to say: 'Here, you've made your profits; now we'll have a workingman's government and receive living wages.'"

Porter continues:

"And that day, Comrade Paul, I believe is not so far away as one may think. Of course, it takes time, but so it did in Russia. My blood seems to be boiling to go out and do more for the working-class in the class war struggle. I look forward to that day and hope that it will soon come."

Interested in Strike

Always interested in the strike of the New Bedford textile workers, from which he was taken to a military prison, Porter writes:

"I am very glad to hear that the people of New Bedford are still showing solidarity. I hope they will continue to stick and fight until they win."

Speaking of the danger of years in prison he is facing, Porter says: "Regardless of the sentence that may be imposed upon me, I am ready to sacrifice even my life for the working class. I am now locked in a solitary confinement cell and am called a rebel, but nothing can make me turn my face from the working-class. . . . Hoping to hear from you again, I remain

"Comradely yours,
("Signed) JOHN PORTER."

The working-class must not permit this brave fighter to remain in prison. He must be released—free to continue his fight for the cause of the workers.

Asks for Correspondence

Books and printed matter can not be sent. Money or fruit, clothing and personal needs can be sent to the secretary of the National Porter Defense Committee, Theresa Valente, P. O. Box 278, New Bedford, Mass., as these articles may be sent to him by mail.

rescue workers; jagged, melting ice which prevented airplanes landing near; open water and rough ice on which dog sleds would be under the greatest handicaps, and pack ice through which the Krassin possibly could not force her way.

The giant ice ship Krassin left Leningrad, June 15, with 134 persons aboard, including a crew of 110, scientists, radio men, and newspaper reporters, and the aviator Chuknovsky, who had a reputation at home for intrepid aerial work in the Arctic.

At Bergen the Krassin picked up the explorer Adolph Hoel, a valuable aid to Prof. Samoilovitch, director of the expedition and an expert in Arctic exploration.

Day by day, the Krassin crept northward and then eastward, often held immovable for days in the thick ice, just breaking under the spring thaw. Only a few miles were made in many days, for many days no miles were made at all, but Chuknovsky avers they flew over the snowy land in search of the lost Italians.

Tuesday the Krassin reported she was only a short distance away.

The Nobile survivors had become so weak they could not stand upright—hungry, cold, threatened with pneumonia and with insanity. Russians aboard the Krassin had volunteered to attempt to row to the castaways, when suddenly the ice pack thickened, gripped the Krassin, and held her fast for hours.

Another Russian ice ship—the Maligin, from which another Soviet aviator, Babushkin has flown in valiant efforts to find the Italians, and once himself was lost for four days—is in the vicinity of the Krassin, but a magnetic storm and unfavorable weather for the last twelve hours have prevented communications between the two vessels.

The Maligin has two airplanes aboard, but one of them has been damaged. The ship left Archangel and for weeks has been waging a tenacious campaign with the ice floes to reach Nobile's companions.

WHITE GUARDISTS ATTACK CHINESE-USSR MAIL TRAIN

4 Killed in Assault Aided by Japanese

MOSCOW, July 11.—The attack on the Chinese Eastern Railway mail train near Harbin on July 5 has caused great indignation here. Four passengers were killed and seven seriously wounded, while 40 were kidnapped, including citizens of the Soviet Union. The attack is believed to have been carried out by white guardists with Japanese protection.

The Chinese Eastern Railway is jointly owned by the Soviet Union and the Chinese government. The white guardist attack on a mail train of the railway, which is believed to have received the sanction and protection of the Japanese government, is looked upon in authoritative circles as an additional effort to further Japanese imperialistic ambitions in China and to strike a blow at the Soviet Union. The Chinese Eastern Railway is a strategic connecting link, much coveted by the imperialist powers, who have made efforts in the past to capture it.

NEW DRAFT PROGRAM OF THE COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL

III. The Ultimate Aim of the Communist International—World Communism

COMMUNIST SOCIETY TO ABOLISH PRIVATE PROPERTY, CLASS RULE, EXPLOITATION, PROGRAM STATES

Work Will Cease To Be Toil; Property Will Disappear; Coercion Will Expire

Superstition, Mysticism, Religion, To Be Replaced by Rational Knowledge

The Programme Commission of the Executive Committee of the Communist International is publishing a DRAFT PROGRAM.

The Commission thinks it its duty to declare that while the text of this draft in of course based on the same fundamental principles as those upon which the draft programme provisionally passed by the Fifth Congress of the Communist International was based, nevertheless, it differs very considerably from that draft. The Program Commission felt that in view of the great changes that have taken place in many important spheres of international life and particularly in the revolutionary movement since the Fifth Congress, it could not confine itself to making merely editorial changes in the original draft. A change has taken place in the form of the general crisis of capitalism; a change has taken place in the relationships between various groups of powers. Great events have taken place, like the great revolution in China, which once again emphasized the significance of the agrarian-peasant question. Great progress has been made in building up socialism in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. The struggle between the aggressive capitalist world and the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics is becoming acute. Fascism is growing and becoming transformed into the terrorist dictatorship of big capital. Social democracy has degenerated into Chauvinist imperialism. The lessons that have been learned by the Communist International in the fight against opposition tendencies and finally the growth of Communism, the fact that the movement has really become internationalized, the new tasks that confront the Communist International as a single organization—all this has inevitably made it necessary considerably to alter and enlarge the former draft.

The general tendency of the changes that have been made is towards more concreteness and greater emphasis upon THE INTERNATIONAL aspects both in the theoretical section as well as in the sections dealing immediately with the struggles of the Communist Parties.

Acting on the decision of the Executive Committee of the Communist International, the Programme Commission, in publishing this draft program, calls upon all comrades to express their opinion and criticism of it in articles, remarks and concrete suggestions. The work done on the program has revealed how difficult it is to embrace in a single document all the problems of the present-day world Communist movement. The question of the program will be one of the central questions at the Sixth Congress. It is essential that sufficient material be collected by the time the discussion of the question takes place at the Congress. The Commission therefore invites all comrades to join in the fruitful discussion of the program.

THE PROGRAMME COMMISSION OF THE
EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE
COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL

The ultimate aim of the Communist International is to replace world capitalist economy by a world system of Communism. Communist society, the ground for which has been prepared by the whole progress of historical development, is mankind's only way out, for it alone can abolish the fundamental contradictions of the capitalist system which threaten man's degradation and destruction.

Communist society will abolish the division of society into classes, i. e. simultaneously with the abolition of anarchy in production it will abolish social anarchy. The place of conflicting classes will be taken by members of society cooperating in the labor of a single world society. The enormous unproductive expenditure of human energy, which in previous forms of society was called forth by the struggle of classes, will cease and the human energy thus released will be diverted to the struggle against nature and for the uplifting and development of the power and might of humanity.

After abolishing private property in the means of production and converting them into social property, the world system of Communism will replace the elemental forces of the world market, competition and the blind process of social production, by consciously organized and planned production. Devastating crises and still more devastating war will be abolished simultaneously with the abolition of anarchy of production and competition. The colossal waste of productive forces and the spasmodic development of society will give place to the planned management of all the resources and painless economic development on the basis of unrestricted, planned and rapidly developing productive forces.

The abolition of private property and classes will abolish the exploitation of man by man. Work will cease to be toiling for the benefit of a class enemy; instead of a means of livelihood it will become a necessity of life. The concepts of poverty and wealth will disappear because economic inequality, the poverty of enslaved classes and a wretched standard of material existence generally will disappear. The hierarchy established by the division of labor and with it the antagonism between physical and intellectual labor will be abolished. At the same time the organs of class domination and the state in the first place will disappear. The state, as the embodiment of class domination will die out in so far as classes die out and with it all laws of coercion will expire.

With the disappearance of classes monopoly of education in every form will be broken. Education, from elementary to the highest, will be accessible to all. Consequently, it will be impossible for any group to dominate over humanity and a great field will be opened for the selection and advancement of talent and genius in all spheres of culture.

In Communist society no restrictions of a social character will be imposed upon the growth of the forces of production. Private property in the means of production, the selfish desire for profits, the artificial retention of the masses in a state of ignorance, the poverty of the masses, which retards technical progress in capitalist society, and enormous waste will have no place in Communist society.

The forces of nature and the natural and climatic conditions of production in the various parts of the world economic system will be utilized to the best advantage. The distinction between town and country, which arises from agriculture systematically remaining at a lower technical level than the rest of the industry, will be removed. Science and technique will be combined to the utmost extent. Research work will be developed and applied to practical use on the widest social scale. Labor will be organized on the most scientific system. The most perfected methods of statistical accounting and planned regulation of economy will be employed. There will be a rapid increase in social requirements, the most powerful internal driving force of the whole system. All these will secure the maximum productivity of social labor, which, in its turn, will release human energy for the powerful development of science and art.

The development of the productive forces of world Communist society will render possible an improvement in the welfare of the whole of humanity and consequently will enable culture to flourish as never before in history. Humanity, united for the first time, will possess a culture that cuts across all state frontiers and will be based on clear and transparent mutual relations between men. For that reason it will destroy for ever all mysticism, religion, prejudice and superstition and give a powerful impetus to the development of all-conquering, rational knowledge.

This higher stage of Communism is the stage in which Communist society has already developed on its own foundation. Men and women have simultaneously acquired all-sided development and the forces of production have undergone enormous growth. In this stage, society has already inscribed upon its banner: "From each according to his abilities, to each according to his needs!" But this stage presupposes a lower stage of development as a preliminary historical condition. At this lower stage Communist society only just emerges from capitalist society and bears all the economic, ethical and intellectual birthmarks inherited from the society from whose womb it is just emerging. The socialist forces of production are as yet inadequately developed to permit of a distribution of the products of labor according to needs—these are distributed in accordance with the labor expended. The division of labor, i. e., the recognition of definite labor functions for definite groups of persons, and particularly the distinction between physical and intellectual labor has not yet been abolished. Although classes have been abolished, relics of the old class divisions of society, and consequently relics of the state power of the proletariat, coercion, rights, even "bourgeois rights" (rights to the private ownership in means of consumption), still exist. Consequently, certain traces of inequality, which have not yet managed to die out, still remain. The distinction between town and country has not yet altogether disappeared. But none of these survivals of the old society is protected or defended by any social force. They form part of a definite level of development of productive forces and will disappear as rapidly as mankind, emancipated from the fetters of the capitalist system, subordinates to itself the forces of nature, becomes itself trained in the spirit of Communism and passes from Socialism to complete Communism.

The Oil Peace Between the United States and Mexico

By H. LOWEN.

President Calles signed on March 27, 1928 the excutive regulations for the new petroleum law. In these executive regulations it is expressly stated that the Mexican oil law has no retrospective force and that confiscations are not permissible. All rights acquired before 1917 remain valid. It is true that they must be confirmed, but upon application for confirmation a permanent concession is granted instead of the former concession limited to fifty years.

In this manner the ten-year oil war between Mexico and the United States has come to a conclusion The petroleum trust of the United States, the Standard Oil Company, has won the fight. The attack of the Mexican oil capitalists (backed up by the British oil trust) upon the properties of the Standard Oil Company in Mexico has been beaten off. The "peace" just concluded between the United States and Mexico leaves behind a conqueror and a conquered. Therein lies the germ of fresh fights for the future.

Standard Oil Wins.

By this means the Standard Oil group will harvest the fruits of the world oil peace conducted in 1922 The world oil peace, which was negotiated between the two largest oil trusts of the world, viz., the Standard Oil group of the United States and the British-Dutch Royal Shell group, was directed against the Soviet Union. The two oil trusts formed an alliance in order to seize possession of the oil of the Soviet Union.

However, the Soviet Union was stronger than the two imperialistic trusts took it to be. From every conference the Soviet State emerged secure. It therefore became plain to the two capitalist trusts that the policy adopted in the year 1922 would not lead to the desired result. For this reason the oil trust of the United States betrayed its ally, the British oil trust, and entered on its own into negotiations with the Soviet Union, without the knowledge of the British concern. By so doing it secured oil concessions in the South of the Soviet Union.

The oil trust of the United States made very good use of the period of the world oil peace, which was in reality only an armistice. It consolidated its positions in North, South and Central America, but it employed the armistice chiefly to bring the oil war between the United States and Mexico to a successful conclusion.

The Mexican State had for a number of years defended itself energetically against the policy of strangulation followed by its big American brother. It was decreed by state law that foreigners having property in land in Mexico must bind themselves not to appeal to their home countries for diplomatic protection but must regard them selves in all legal relations as citizens of Mexico. The so-called Calles bill further decreed that all companies in possession of land, leases of land or concessions had within three years to convert themselves into Mexican companies, i. e. into companies, whose share capital should be in the hands of Mexican citizens to an extent of at least 50 per cent.

Owing to the resistance of the United States this law could not however, be put into force. The requisite "nationalization" (not to be confused with socialization) of the companies signified nothing less than that the petroleum magnates of the United States should withdraw from Mexico or give up their nationality and become Mexican citizens. As a result of this pressure the conflict became more acute. A lively exchange of notes began between the two countries.

At the negotiations, which took place in Mexico City between a committee representing the oil companies and, on the other hand, the Mexican authorities, there were many collisions. These negotiations of the representatives of the Standard Oil Company with the Mexican government were never broken off from 1925 on, until in March 1926 it came to a rupture. The representatives of the Standard Oil Company left the city. They threatened to intensify the fight by hinting that they had the Mexican petroleum industry in their hands and that they were in a position to bring the Mexican oil industry to a standstill. They also declared that they had for years been sabotaging the Mexican oil industry in order to compel the Mexican government to give way. The manager of the Association of American Producers of Petroleum in Mexico made it known in an unmistakable manner that the "attempts of the Mexican government to confiscate oilfields belonging to foreigners" had already resulted in a recession in the year 1925 of about 115,000,000 barrels in the crude oil output of Mexico. In accordance with this the revenue of the Mexican government from export dues would have fallen from $43,000,000 in 1923 to $21,000,000 in the year 1925.

The Mexican government was thus subjected to a double pressure On the one hand, it had to fight against private economy, i.e. against the Standard Oil Company, and against the power of the United States, on the other hand Mexico had to succumb to this pressure.

Calles Surrenders.

An agrement was arrived at Calles dropped his demand that the companies should be nationalized to an extent of at least 50 per cent of their capital. The demand that the oil magnates from the United States should become Mexican citizens was also dropped. The right of possession of oilfields by foreign individuals or trusts was acknowledged in principle. However, the foreign companies in question were to volunteer to apply to the Mexican state for concessions. This was to serve as an ostensible triumph for Mexico.

Capitalist "Peace."

The oil peace betwen the United States and Mexico means, in the first place, that the oil trust of the United States by adroitly exploiting the world oil peace has inflicted a defeat in North America on the British oil trust. In the second place, the oil trust of the United States has decided the ten-year fight against the Mexican oil capitalists in its own favor. The oil magnates of the United States, who are much stronger economically than the Mexican oil industrialists, have swallowed up the latter. Peace has been created in the genuine capitalist fashion.

This peace means that the oil trust of the United States now has on its own continent a free hand in the fight against other competitors; against the British oil trust and against the Soviet Union, the administrator and owner of the Russian mineral oil sources. The conclusion of peace in North America is therefore a peace action, which amounts to preparation for new and bigger fights.

'LEDGER JOCKEYS' WORST SLAVES, PENPUSHER SAYS

Correspondent Shows Wall Street Chances

(By a Worker Correspondent)

I take liberty to write of what I have never seen written about in The DAILY WORKER. It concerns the real Wall Street white collar Ledger Jockey. I happen to be one of these, not from desire, but from the conditions thrust upon me, after being locked out and black-listed in the Pressed Car Shops in Chicago and drifting to this "rosy" path of white collar slavery.

A great many outside of this job imagine the work of an office stiff to be soft. On the contrary, it is the most nerve-wrecking, as bad as any other line to which the masters harness us, especially, when one looks at this stupid, miserably exploited crowd without even the slightest semblance of an organization.

"Grand Profession."

After an aspirant for an office position graduates from a grammar school, two or four years of high school, he is started at the lowest "salary," which enables him to have spending money, providing his papa is furnishing the room and board. If he studied that "grand" profession every Henry Dubb studies, bookkeeping, after about five years he receives the enormous sum of $30 to $35 per week,—in some cases. If he is bounced by the good master for asking for more pay, the next place he may get, he must take a cut of $5 or more, "because you do not know our line of business." But the only difference between one or the other is their different system of files and routine which one is able to learn in two weeks. If you can't learn it, out you go.

One studying to be an accountant after going through high school and four years of grilling at this subject, gets $20 per, and after a year one advances "rapidly" to $30. But what I really mean is by a season, because only at such seasons that come on annually from about October to June when "most," or all of the corporations turn in the income tax. After that one walks around the ring as one of our cartoonists displayed some time ago—job, job, where? Finally one lands a place; again, "you don't know the method, so we'll have to start you off at $25, and if you prove good we'll raise you."

Out on the Street.

By that time you're mainly "raised" out on the sidewalk. Only through sheer luck some reach in and this is to them that all the practicin instructors in school point. These same poor slaves that carry all their lives, teaching day and night and studying when others sleep, after all of this strain most of them receive what a union plumber or a bricklayer earns.

I remember clearly several poems hung on the door-wall of our classroom, pointing to the dollar as the greatest aim, the thing to have, the one goal. The poisoned pupil goes out with this poem hanging on his nose. That is all he knows of and thinks. But it is like the straw that was tied before the head of a mule that would not pull its load.

Employment Agency Hoax.

The only place we white collar slaves can apply for a job is at the grafting employment agency. They charge us with a week's wages for merely furnishing us with an address to look for a job. The agency cannot do a wiggle in helping us get a position. An applicant must possess the required qualifications and many times many more than are actually necessary. The bosses usually call for a mere bookkeeper, but in many cases they require one to have years of experience and some knowledge of accounting and then offer him a common bookkeeper's assistant's wages.

Race Discrimination.

Last winter I, also, had a good dose of Coolidge's prosperity. I tramped around from one agency to another with battalions of men seeking work. In my daily routine I came in contact with a great number of Jewish lads, and old American "democracy" showed her hideous method of dealing. We are told of fair and square treatment to all, but the Anglo-Saxon masters that squawk about equality on the 4th of July, discriminate against the Jewish boys as they do against the Negroes. To every office that I accompanied with a Jewish lad, the master would curtly answer "nothing doing," but would hire the "real" Americans, all mainly of English birth. Or whenever they hire a number of Jewish workers, then they likewise hire a similar number of Christians, in order to have them nagging at each other in order to make them divided against each other instead of against the boss.

The American Telegraph and Telephone Company does not employ Jewish workers and a great many of the other Wall Street houses, as they suspect them all of socialism, laziness, and what not.

During this mad profit-making that is now going on in Wall Street the miserable Henry Dubbs are worked from morning to midnight and even until two and three in the morning. Whenever any of you readers of The DAILY WORKER happen to pass around that end of the exploited town look in towards the rear of the houses and you will see poor beings, who imagine they are "in with" the boss, working away. This is not the night shift, but those who start work early in the morning. When at 5 p. m. you see a crowd coming out of the buildings, don't imagine they are very lucky, being let off early, because on another day, when it's their turn they must remain at work late.

Last March I was working in a big French Pastry Company on 47th St. Upon hiring me the boss said that I was to start in the mornings. I was surprised and did not know when I was to leave at night. I soon found out. I was led to the rear of the building where the cashier's and bookkeeper's office is, a dungeon with no air and no daylight, with the stench of the bakery products to breathe. There I noticed a cot. I soon learned that the last bookkeeper worked day and night and that at night he had the privilege to lie on the cot whenever he felt exhausted. The work included slaving Saturdays and Sundays also, in order to retain that $30 per week. Not a cent extra for all this overtime. There was seldom any steam-heat.

"Efficiency."

I contracted a beastly cold. After some three weeks of work there, a new manager came in with some of his efficiency schemes. In fact they knew only one—reducing the wages. He hired two eighteen-year-old children, a girl and a boy, at $14 per week and laid me off. From this place I drifted to Wall Street.

The very same system that prevails in the mines is found in office work. Every bit of the day's work is postponed and overburdened. The bookkeepers are overtaxed with voluminous books to take care of. A minute check-up of their work is constantly made. They have a few "boss patriots" who speed up at a maniacal pace. If you cannot keep up with them out you go. These "patriots" get a tap on the shoulder and a nice smile from the foremen for their speed.

As to the general clerical work, every operation is timed and one is told how much he is to do and when it must be done. The slaves race and try to beat each other to show the boss how good they are. Anyone in poor health is simply out of luck. Such people are most of the time walking around the ring looking for that sign "Job."

Such is the case of the white-collar slave. Will any Wall Street Ledger Jockey answer me to the contrary?

USSR METAL WORKERS' ADVANTAGES GREAT

By CLARINA MICHELSON

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

LENINGRAD, U. S. S. R. (By Mail).—The many buildings of the metal foundry, the Red Putilov Works, stretch along the "Street of Strikes," in Leningrad. A river runs through the property, there is a large park and tracks run criss-cross between the many buildings. Here 12,000 workers make tools, cars, engines and tractors. The workers of Putilov have always been militant. In 1905 the demonstration led by the priest, Gapon, upon the Winter Palace to demand justice from the Czar was started by a strike in the Putilov Works. Throughout the revolution the Putilov workers were in the front rank. And now, when the Workers and Peasants government needs tractors, it seems appropriate that they are being made by Putilov workers. It is a 100-per cent union shop. Of the 12,000 workers, 7,000 are "activists," men and women, engaged in committee work, dues collecting and other active work; 2,200 are communists and 2,500 comsomols, members of the League of Communist Youth.

Wages Higher

During the World War there were as many as 39,000 workers in this great foundry, but after the war the plant was shut and not reopened until 1924. Four years is a short time for many achievements, but here are some of the accomplishments of these 12,000 metal workers, through their union, the Communist Party nucleus, and the Co-operative, with the help of the government.

Wages are in every case higher than before the revolution—this year they are 16 per cent higher than last year. All the workers get two weeks' vacation with pay and the men who work in the melting department get four and even six weeks. They work only 6 days out of every 8. The women get 2 months' leave before and after childbirth, with full pay. They get $15 to buy necessary things for the baby and receive $4 a month for nine months after the baby's birth. The plant still operates on an 8-hour day, though in a few departments, where there are two shifts, the late shift is 7 hours.

Youths Work Only 4 Hours

There are 200 "apprentices" from 16 to 18 years old who spend 4 hours in the factory and have 2 hours for theoretical training. About 350 young workers of 16 and 17 years also attend the three-year course in the factory school, 4 hours factory work and 4 hours school work. The workers of both these groups get paid and as they all belong to the union they also receive full union benefits. There is also a three-year evening technical school for workers of 21 and over who become lower grade engineers. Besides this, there are classes in history, courses on the labor movement, political classes, classes of all kinds, and many workers are sent to the universities.

Cultural Advantages

In the center of the grounds is a book store, where about 100 books are sold daily—80 per cent are books on technical subjects, although Tolstoy, Gorky and other novelists are popular. The new Soviet Encyclopedia of 20 volumes, costing $150, is in great demand, and for this and other books the workers can get long credit terms. Newspapers and magazines are also sold here. The Putilov workers get out their own printed paper every two weeks and in every department there is the usual wall paper written by the workers. Once a week each department receives a visit from the agent of a circulating library, who delivers books and takes orders in the half hour allotted to this. In some of the departments there are "Red Corners," where there are radios and tables where the workers eat their lunch and make their tea. At the same time, artists and speakers frequently come to entertain them. In every department one sees notices of excursions, notices of lectures and debates and many accident-prevention posters. The workers have their own library, a club, a theatre, a kino, a bath house, a restaurant and a fine chemical laboratory.

Fine Homes for Workers

On the streets near the foundry crowding out old wooden buildings, are many new stucco apartment houses, with large windows, balconies and gardens; homes for the workers, built by the Co-operative and the city. Nearby is a beautiful new building, "The House of Culture," put up by the Metal Workers Union and other unions of Leningrad, to celebrate the tenth anniversary. Here is a hall seating 2,000, where the finest Leningrad plays are often produced; 2 kinos, each seating 300; 2 concert halls, each seating 500; a reading room, a smoking room, a chess room, a billiard room, a buffet—over 70 rooms in all. This House of Culture is used each evening by over 5,000 workers—workers from the Red Putilov Works and other workers of the district. Across the front of the building a huge red banner reads: "Without books there can be no education. Without education there can be no Communism."

OLD WORKER WHO WAS FIRED KILLS SELF IN DESPAIR

Youths at Less Pay Replace Adults

(By a Worker Correspondent)

PHILADELPHIA, (By Mail).—How the capitalistic system of society throws workers on the scrap heap as it does with used out machinery was again gruesomely illustrated in this city, today.

To make both ends meet, Mrs. Mary Seum, 58, did housework by day. Her husband, Harry Seum, was a baker, when he could get the job. Since last Christmas, however, he worked only two days. He is 61 and the bosses need younger men to work under their speed-up system.

Fire Old Workers.

When Mary Seum arrived in her little home from her long and tedious day's work, she went straight to her bedroom.

Here she found a note from her husband which read: "Dear Mary, When I went to work this morning they told me they had taken on a younger man in my place. When you read this I'll be far away. Everything in the house I leave to you." This last sentence referred to the few little belongings, chairs, bed, etc.

Mary thought the note was a joke, but going into the bathroom she saw her husband's body hanging by the neck in the doorway with a short length of rope.

Constantly Unemployed.

Since last Christmas, until two days ago, a period of nearly seven months, Harry had been together with thousands of his fellow workers searching wearily and in vain for work. Finally, two days ago, he secured a employment on Dauphin St. in a bakery.

Despair Ends in Suicide.

For two days his troubles were apparently ended. But yesterday when he entered the bakery to start his day's work, the boss told him the job was no longer his.

Seum went home, wrote the note, drove a nail in the wall near the bathroom door, got a rope which he put around his neck, fixed the rope to the nail, climbed up a ladder, stepped off and thus ended permanently his vain search for employment in the alleged prosperous United States.

'PHANTOM PILOT' RUNS AIRPLANE

To Be Used in Bombing Raids

PARIS, July 10 (UP).—A "phantom pilot" created by Max Boucher French war flier, has been secretly tested at the Istres Aerodrome, it was revealed today. The tests were successful. The "phanton pilot" is constructed of steel and provided with muscles which respond instantly to controlling apparatus on the ground, permitting the plane to be maneuvered through any paces desired.

Extensive details of Boucher's creation were published today by La Petite Journal which said the secret tests had been conducted for many months during which the experiments were completed with great success.

Today's tests revealed the "phantom pilot" could go through regular maneuvers and bring the plane to earth at a speed of sixty miles per hour without the slightest shock. Experts of the aeronautics division who conducted the tests for the government were reported as highly pleased with the performance.

It was predicted that control of the mechanical pilot from a distance of 100 kilometres would be possible soon. The control is established by signals and a system of stabilizers which work through the automatic pilot.

The government probably would make use of the "phantom pilot" in bombing plane raids, it was said

DRAMA

"The Actress" at the Capitol Based on Pinero's "Trelawney"

SO THEY TOOK this old play out of the cannery, dusted it off a little, put a few nice faces in it and made a movie out of it. As a result you can see Pinero's well-known play "Trelawney of the Wells" as a movie called "The Actress" this week at the Capitol theatre.

It has all the virtues of unlimited American movie resources: fine photography, a capable cast headed by the beauty Norma Shearer, some good direction and lavish costuming. And all this is wasted on a lot of English poppycock that is aimed to prove that despite all their shortcomings and idiosyncrasies, the "upper clawses" are not so bad after all.

The story is of stage people. The little actress with a heart of gold, falls in love with a young blond of the near-nobility who's got spunk all over though by the looks of him you never would have guessed it. For blood will tell — blood is that way. Anyway, the old grandfather was at the bottom of all the trouble. But once a gentleman, always a gentleman. When he realizes that the cute little actress is no gold-digger, but loves the young noble blond nobly, he contributes his blessing and a little money besides.

Blood always tells. The story goes to prove it and it goes to say also that even poor working girls can marry nobility. It doesn't leave the field restricted to the Vanderbilts and the Astors. Could anything be sweeter? It's propaganda. An atrocious, sentimental sticky kind of class propaganda, too. Made for the most gullible, glorifying the titled "upper classes," throwing the sop of hope to the simple, that they too can enter this supposedly exclusive charmed circle, some day, perhaps——

Ralph Forbes, one of the newer of the handsome Harrys, is the full-blooded blue-blood. Owen Moore has a prominent part and so have such well-known movie people as Virginia Pearson, Roy D'Arcy, Gwen Lee, Lee Moran and others.

The usual program of Capitol presentations is on the bill: Walt Roesner and his orchestra, dancers, singers and it should be added, a theatre so cool on these hot days, that it's worth the price of admission to get into the rest rooms to read a book.

AMERICAN SAILOR PREFERS LIFE ON SHIP OF SOVIETS

"Bolshevism So Good Would Die For It"

(By a Worker Correspondent)

SEATTLE, Wash., (By Mail).—I write this just before we sail for Vladivostok on the S. S. Apex, recently bought by the government of the Soviet Union.

Soviet Employ Liked.

Just a few days ago I was on the beach here, had been for a month and it might have been months more if it wasn't for the Bolsheviks for whom I am now working under the following conditions. Seventy-five dollars for three watches; first class grub; plenty of vegetables and coffee; time in the middle of each watch; smoking at the wheel.

Everybody here is comrade, none of this Mr. and sir stuff.

The captain, who has been to the Soviet Union before with another ship which the U. S. S. R. bought in 1924, knows what conditions are on the Soviet ships. He suggested that we form a soviet on this ship so we are sailing with a ship's committee in control, composed of one A. B. (able-bodied seaman), one oiler, the captain and the mess-boy.

Proud of Bolshevism.

We have just received the Soviet flag from Amtorg (Russian American Trading Co.). I am sorry that I have no time to tell all that I would like to as we are taking on stores, and what stores!

WORKERS PARTY CITY ELECTION DRIVE SETS OFF

On Saturday the drive begins at 1:30 p. m. The Sunday work begins at 10 a. m. and lasts until 1 p. m.

Reports indicate an enthusiastic response to the work which is to be strengthened this week.

Section 1 Meeting

At a special meeting of the membership of Section 1, downtown Manhattan, the response, and the spirit and willingness displayed, has proven again that the Party members are fully aware of the importance of the campaign and are ready to do their best to make the campaign a success.

Definite plans of how to carry the campaign into the shops, factories and the residential sections, as well as how to extend the plan of the campaign within the party were presented.

A report by a district representative on the immediate technical methods of approach in the process of signature getting was taken up.

In line with the general mobilization of the Party membership for the collection of signatures in the city each section has called a general membership meeting to take up the technical points in the drive and to discuss the campaign. The meetings scheduled for this purpose are:

Tonight at 8 p. m. Astoria General membership meeting at Bohemian Hall, Woolsey and Second Sts., Astoria, L. I.

6:30 p. m. Monday, July 16: Sections 2 and 3 at 101 W. 27th St.

6 p. m. Monday, July 16: Williamsburgh Section at 29 Graham Ave.

WHITE GUARDIST BOMBER CAUGHT

Rumanian Espionage Aided Plot

(Special Cable To Daily Worker.)

MOSCOW, July 11.—Two white guardists threw the bomb in the ante-room of the headquarters here at 9:15 p. m. on July 6 which killed one Red Guardist and seriously injured another. One of the bombers Georg Radkovitch, 30, ex-member of the Imperial Page Corps, was shot dead, while the second bomber was caught in Podolsk, near Moscow.

The bombers came last week from Paris via Rumania with the assistance of the Rumanian espionage service. Peasants aided in the hunt for the white guardist.

the proffered refreshments for his pickets.

Picket Together.

When morning was reached the two picket lines were picketing together in the friendliest manner. When morning came the U. T. W. line was asked to share the breakfast sandwiches of the T. M. C. pickets. This was done with great enthusiasm.

Fishermen Help.

A sudden report circulated among the pickets in the early hours of the morning that the scabs were about to leave in boats brought an immediate proffer of aid from the fishermen, who are active strike sympathizers. The union accepted this offer and immediately ten pickets were dispatched in five boats to guard the waterside entrances of the mill.

ditional relief stations in addition to those already operated in order to meet the situation. Biedenkapp states that at present more than 1,000 families receive cooked food at the two W. I. R. relief stations and that milk and bread is daily distributed to thousands of children. He further states that the demand for relief is growing greater day by day and that it is imperative for the friends and comrades of the strikers to come to the aid of the W. I. R.

"The week of July 15 to the 22nd is Textile Relief Week. Every organization and its members and all workers in general must give their time, energy and money.

"Picnics, outings, entertainments, house to house collections, and other affairs must be arranged for and relief funds raised. The New England Relief Conference is holding an auto excursion Sunday, July 9. The destination is Camp Nitgedaiget at Franklin, Mass. A big program for the entertainment of all is provided. 'FARMER-LABOR' PARTY FADING

Ready To Merge With Old Parties

CHICAGO, July 11.—A resolution to combine the Farmer-Labor Party with the Prohibition Party was introduced at the conventions of the two parties today, after the Prohibition Party was confronted with a resolution to choose Hoover, Republican nominee, as their candidate for president.

The resolution was decided upon last night, the committee being in session until 2 a. m. today. It stated that the committee favored a coalition of the two parties during the 1928 campaign.

The Prohibition Party voted to table the resolution until the platform is decided upon. The Farmer-Labor convention started discussion of its platform without considering the resolution.

The complete degeneration of the so-called Farmer-Labor Party is seen here in its willingness to endorse Al Smith or possibly even Hoover while making a pretense of attacking the reaction in both old parties.

CLOAK COUNCIL MEETS TONIGHT

Representatives from the shops of cloak and dressmakers will tonight hold their first monthly conference of shop delegates at 5 p. m. in Webster Hall, 11th St. and Third Ave.

The intense organization campaign prepared by the Joint Board of the Cloak and Dressmakers Union and the Local Committee of the National Organization Committee will be officially launched by the conference tonight.

Represents Thousands

The conference, which will represent the great majority of the workers in the ladies' garment industry of New York, will take immediate steps to begin the fight against both the bosses and the right-wing Sigman clique in regaining union conditions in many of the New York shops. It will also move to launch an organization drive among the overwhelming number of open shops now swamping the trade, according to preliminary information of the agenda.

JAILS BROTHER FOR PICKETING

Henry Sazer, who yesterday declared that he intends to picket the Truefood Restaurant, owned by his brother, as a demonstration of sympathy to the workers on strike there, was arrested yesterday while marching before the place, together with the two union pickets usually permitted by the police.

In spite of being previously informed of the fact that the police would permit no more than two pickets, Sazer nevertheless determined to join the line.

Is Arrested

A huge crowd gathered in the Times Square section where the restaurant is situated. It watched Sazer as he patrolled the place carrying large signs denouncing his brother and calling for a boycott on the anti-labor place.

Several policemen at first tried to intimidate Sazer, but he insisted on his right to picket the place, disavowing any direct connections with the Waiters' and Waitresses' Union. He nevertheless maintained his own right to picket in sympathy with the strikers, police decided to arrest him.

Pose As Labor's Friends

The strike against this firm, the members of which made their money through the patronage of labor sympathizers, pose as semi-radicals, according to Sazer's statement. They own three restaurants, all of which are on strike. They are located at 153 W. 44th St., 110 W. 40th St., and 522 Seventh Ave. The strike is now in the third week.

Four Bodies Recovered in Pittsburgh Rivers

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 10.—Pittsburgh rivers today had surrendered the bodies of four persons who disappeared within the last few days during the heat spell.

Late last night the bodies of two women were recovered from the Ohio River. It was believed that they were suicides. The bodies of two boys, drowned while swimming near Sharpsburg, were taken from the Allegheny River near the Highland Park bridge.

URGE HELP FOR GREEK MILITANTS

Flays Reformists For Betrayal

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R. (By Mail).—In a statement issued here yesterday by the Red International of Labor Unions, the workers of Greece who have undergone brutal treatment at the hands of the Greek fascists, headed at present by Venizelos, and the imperialist officials of the American Tobacco Company in whose plant the strike originally broke out, were called upon to mobilize and continue their militant fight. The statement, which is addressed to "the proletariat of Greece, conducting an heroic fight," and to "the proletariat of the whole world," follows:

Imprison Thousands.

Hundreds and thousands of fighters in the cause of the working class are thrown into prisons. The troops and the police have been mobilized against the workers.

This struggle has been transformed into a spontaneous general strike of the Greek proletariat for the defense of its political rights and its organizations.

Reformists Betray Workers.

The reformist leaders of the Greek Confederation of Labor who a few weeks ago criminally split the trade union movement of Greece and expelled from its ranks the Tobacco Workers' Union and other revolutionary organizations, has now hypocritically joined the general strike. In reality the social-fascists are taking all measures to end the general strike of the Greek proletariat in a shameful compromise.

This must not take place. Immediate and decisive help of the international proletariat is required.

The Red International of Labor Unions expressing its fraternal solidarity with the Greek proletariat calls upon all trade union organizations, all workers' organizations, the workers of the whole world, to hurry to the aid of the heroically struggling proletariat of Greece.

A powerful act of international proletarian solidarity will prevent the execution of the plans of the Greek bourgeoisie and will defend the class organizations of the Greek proletariat.

Long live the victory of the fighting Greek proletariat!

Long live the united revolutionary class trade union movement of Greece!

Long live International Proletarian Solidarity!

International Relief Children Greeted At Unity Camp Reception

WINGDALE, N. Y., July 11.—All the children that were registered for the first two weeks at the Workers' International Relief camp arrived safely on Monday afternoon at their camp grounds at Wingdale, N. Y. An enthusiastic reception was given them by the campers and workers of the Unity Co-operative camp. When the children arrived in two big busses they were received with banners, cheers and songs.

The workers left their jobs and the campers came out of their resting places or the cool water to join in the reception. Long before the children arrived they were waiting patiently in the hot afternoon sun along the road which the busses had to pass. The construction workers carried a flag greeting the children of the Workers International Relief camp.

Other banners read "The Workers Child for the Working Class," etc. When the children stepped out of the busses everyone sang the International.

and Wollin, 330 Seventh Ave.

Seven workers in the former factory and one of the leading members of the Joint Board, Irving Potash, were arrested yesterday morning by detectives of the industrial squad who were called to the bosses' rescue by a right wing hireling of the Joint Council, Sam Weiner.

The events leading up to the arrests were related as follows: The workers of Bloom and Gerber's shop were telling Potash that they had decided to send a committee to their employer, who is a member of the board of directors of the Associated, and demand from him a wage raise for the entire shop. Weiner, a right wing agent in the factory heard this and immediately ran to call up the police. By this time the workers had received the bosses' reply that no raise would be granted and were already picketing the shop, when the police squad arrived and literally forced them back into the shop.

Those arrested were later haled before Magistrate Norris in the Jefferson Market Court. Potash and another worker who prefers his name not mentioned, were fined five dollars each, while the others were dismissed.

Cheers Up Boss

The workers of the shop of Brownstein and Wollin declared a strike when they were refused a wage raise, and declared their determination to picket the place till the bosses give in.

Later in the day the entire office force of business agents of the Joint Council came to Bloom and Gerber and assured them before the workers in the shop that they would not permit the workers to ask for any more raise or any other improvement in working standards.

URGE WORKERS ATTEND BIG 'DAILY' AFFAIR

"Many years have since passed. The bourgeoisie, helped to power by the masses' revolt in 1789, 1830 and 1848, soon became a reactionary force. The place of the old feudal lords was taken by the captains of industry and finance. The place of the old bondsman was taken by the new working class. In a different society, under different economic conditions, exploitation and oppression of the masses never ceased. The accumulation of wealth, the concentration of production brought about a rise and concentration of the working class. And now we are going through a period of new revolutions; the working class is rising against its capitalist overlords who are in command of the capitalist state.

"The era of proletarian revolutions began in 1917 with the establishment of the Soviet Republic in place of the Russian bourgeois state. The coming of proletarian revolution is felt everywhere. The proletarian revolution is the aim of all the Communist Parties of the world, including our own Workers (Communist) Party. The revolt against the capitalist distatorship of the United States is animating our militant dailies, The DAILY WORKER and the Freiheit.

"We, too, have a fortress to take. We, too, have a Bastille to destroy. It is the fortress of finance capital. It is the Bastille of Wall Street. It is to remind us of this historic task that the comrades chose the Fourteenth of July. Only several days ago a number of our comrades were sentenced to jail for protesting against the murderous actions of American imperialism in foreign lands. This rally of July Fourteenth must be also a mass demonstration against the enemies of the working class.

"We appeal to every class-conscious worker to join the demonstration. The concert and rally is planned as a means to secure funds for our papers. This alone should be sufficient ground to make it a success. Our dailies are the greatest weapon of the working class in all its struggles. Now that we have entered the election campaign in which we wish to mobilize large masses of workers for the revolutionary class struggle, the work of our dailies is more urgent and has a wider appeal than ever before. The task of improving their financial conditions should in itself be of great concern to the militant workers.

"The task, however, is not confined to funds. We want to make this a mass demonstration of the militant labor movement. We want this to be the first election rally where rare entertainment is combined with sympathy for the Workers (Communist) Party its candidates, its platform. We want this rally to be worthy of July 14th.

"We appeal to all party members to help make this undertaking a red banner day. We appeal to all workers to come to the Coney Island Stadium and demonstrate by their very numbers.

"Comrades and Fellow Workers! Remember July 14th! Make this a day of mass protest and a day of aid for the Red Press.

"CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY."

CHINESE JINGOES BREAK SILK UNION

Use Guns in Attempt To Break Strike

SHANGHAI, July 10.—The strike of 55,000 silk workers in the factories here was forcibly broken when the commander of the Chinese garrison in Shanghai used bullets to dissolve the union of the silk spinners because the union refused to appeal to the striking workers to return to work in accordance with the militarists' demand.

The spinners went on strike almost a month ago, when the conditions under which they had been working in the factories became unbearable. They struck against the long hours and the excessive overtime that they were forced to put in every day of the week; against the pay, which was even smaller than that of workers in American factories, and against the inhuman slave-driving treatment they received at the hands of the bosses' officials.

In spite of the forcible dissolution of the union by the military forces, however, only half of the factories originally hit by the strike have recommenced work.

6 "PARTY DAYS" CALLED IN N. Y.

Election Main Issue For Discussion

Six "Party Days" have been designated by District 2 of the Workers (Communist) Party, according to a statement issued last night by John J. Ballam, acting district organier and Bert Miller, organization secretary.

These "Party Days," called for the purpose of discussing the major party campaigns, are designated for July 23, 24, 25, 30, 31 and August 1.

The statement says in part:

"Many of our comrades are engaged in activities in the union and Party auxiliary organizations which take a great deal of their time and energy and fail, on this account, to attend to Party units.

"The major activity of our Party for the coming months will be the election campaign and it is for the purpose of clarification and discussion that these 'Party Days' are being called."

Speakers Conference To Be Held Saturday

A speakers conference of District 2 will be held Saturday at 2 p. m. at the Workers School, 26-28 Union Square.

All Workers Party speakers must attend this conference. D. Benjamin, district agitprop director, will lead the discussion.

DRIVE FOR NEW UNION SPREADS TO ALL FIELDS

ed the miners' union, the Call charges Lewis with refusing to organize the unorganized miners, smashing miners' strikes in Kansas and Nova Scotia; betraying the Fayette-Westmoreland miners in 1922 by leaving them out of the strike settlement, and playing a strike-breaking role in the recent Colorado strike.

Record of Betrayal.

Splitting the anthracite from the bituminous miners through separate agreements expiring at different times, and the policy of separate agreements in the present bituminous strike, is responsible, the Call declares, for the disastrous condition of the strike. The general effect of these policies has been "to isolate the strikers in the key districts of Pennsylvania and Ohio and to enable the employers to shatter the strikers' forces at their leisure, thus undermining the whole miners' organization." During all the long months of the strike, while the Pennsylvania and Ohio miners "have been starving on a dollar or two a week relief money, these false leaders drew their enormous salaries and lived on the fat of the land."

Lewis Sabotage.

"The inevitable result of all these corruptions, betrayals, and wrong policies by the leadership of the United Mine Workers of America, the Call concludes, "is the present breaking of the union. Democracy in the United Mine Workers of America is dead. To depend further on the broken United Mine Workers of America as our union, would be for us to sink deeper and deeper into open shop slavery. We must build a new union. We must take the situation in hand ourselves and break the control of the Lewis gang. We must organize a new miners' union, one with an honest progressive leadership and a fighting policy."

MONEY, BUT WHERE?

Washington, July 10.—The United States' population on July 1 was estimated at 118,364,000, the Treasury Department announced today. Money in circulation totalled $4,796,408,000 or $40.52 per capita, a 40 per cent increase in a month but a 96 per cent loss over last year. Total money stock in the U. S. was $8,117,768,786.

VOTE COMMUNIST!

WILLIAM Z. FOSTER

For Vice-President
BENJAMIN GITLOW

☭ ☒ WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY

For the Party of the Class Struggle!
For the Workers! Against the Capitalists!

New Ways of Old Politicians

The conviction of a few minor Tammany officials in the last chapter of the graft serial which the wigwam itself has been running for the edification of its gullible readers would be highly amusing were it not for the fact that thousands of workers will undoubtedly be deceived into believing that the tiger is attempting a real house cleaning.

Al Smith, that pure and sweet flower that has bloomed forth from out of the dunghill of Tammany corruption, may now venture to waft his delicate fragrance to the national political winds without the least suspicion on the part of his innocent Ku Klux Klan countrymen of what oderous stuff the perfume has been compounded.

Have not Al Smith and the "New Tammany" themselves taken the initiative in eliminating the aged-in-the-wood aroma of Tweed, Croker and Murphy!

This is the meaning of the mighty and courageous graft hunting now going on under the direction of the tiger. No doubt the tiger is anxious for its prey. A few clews would set him on the trail of new victims. He might even if properly directed catch up with the real grafters, those "higher-up." Let us see.

There sits at the head of Mayor Jimmie Walker's Department of Transportation a gentleman by the name of John H. Delaney. Delaney has one of the most responsible jobs ever held by a public official in the city of New York. Through his hands pass contracts for subway building amounting to a billion dollars.

This is the same John H. Delaney who for many years was the go-between Thomas F. Ryan, I. R. T. traction magnate, and Boss Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall. John H. Delaney's fingers have felt the touch of Ryan's dollars—some of which he turned over to "the Chief." For this Delaney has already once been exposed. But there he stands.

The head of the street cleaning department, Alfred A. Taylor, has been accused of being the chief culprit by no less an authority than Controller Charles W. Craig, chief watchdog for Al Smith in New York City. Here is an opportunity for some real head hunting.

But why consider the lesser culprits. There is Jimmie Walker himself, chief Tammany cake-eater, man about town and patron of the fine arts in New York night clubs. Jimmie Walker was able on a salary of $25,000 to report an income to the government last year of $[illegible]7,000. Looking at the genial Jimmie you might suppose he hardly knew enough to go into his regular Greenwich Village speakeasy from the rain. Not so, however. Early in 1926 after his election, he began buying Interborough stock at about 26. Now it stands at about 45. And watch it after election. . . .

Who really expects that Tammany Hall will clean house? Who believes that Al Smith will expose his connections with the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit Corporation, their temporary differences and their present reconciliation? Who supposes that Jimmie Walker will expose the scheme by which he and former Controller Craig with the sanction of Al Smith and the republican state legislature planned to sell to the city for a paltry seven millions three systems of junk called the Eighth Avenue Railroad, the Ninth Avenue Railroad and the Fourth and Madison Avenue Line. It was not their fault that the scheme did not go through.

Investigations have their purposes. There was the recent mine "investigation," as an example. It helped do the trick expected of John L. Lewis by the Mellon coal companys. The present Tammany graft hunt also has its purpose, that of helping put over Al Smith.

Graft is an integral part of the capitalist system, just as exploitation of the workers is its main characteristic. To eliminate graft just as to eliminate exploitation only one remedy is adequate: the overthrow of capitalism. There is a way to prepare the ground for that task: Vote Communist! For the Workers against the Bosses! Join the Workers Communist Party!

Negro Worker and the Elections.

The "Negro World," organ of Marcus Garvey, in the issue of July 7, carries a lengthy editorial commenting on the presidential candidates of the democratic and republican parties and the relation of the Negro to both parties.

"The United States of America," says the Negro World, "it is pretty well agreed, will be as safe with Smith as it will be with Hoover, but this does not touch the consideration that of necessity is uppermost in our minds. It will be beyond a doubt safe for the white citizenry, but what of that considerable band of fifteen million black men and women who, also accounted citizens, owing allegiance to the stars and stripes, yet are buffeted and hamstrung by an unsympathetic majority of their fellow citizens against all law and justice? These, we submit, should not be as satisfied with either choice as the rest of the citizenry."

The "Negro World" states quite correctly that the United States will be as safe with Smith as with Hoover. This means that both men are equally willing to serve the capitalist system.

What the "Negro World" ignores completely is the relation of the Negro as a worker as well as a member of an oppressed race to the capitalist system which is represented by both the democratic and republican parties.

The republican party which in the interests of the then revolutionary capitalism conducted a war against chattel slavery is today working in the interests of the new counter-revolutionary capitalism for the perpetuation of wage slavery. The republican party of today is nothing but a party of trusts, of finance capital of the biggest business interests of the country.

The democratic party was in the early stages of its history the party of slavery, against Northern capitalism and in the interests of the Southern plantation owners. Today though sometimes masked with phrases of liberalism it stands for the perpetuation of the peonage of Negroes in the South and for the maintainance of wage slavery throughout the country.

The election platform of the Workers (Communist) Party of America states:

> "There are no real political differences between the two big political parties. Both are parties of capitalism; both are enemies of the working class. The very existence of the two-party system is the most reactionary factor in American politics, is one of the factors which are responsible for the lack of an independent mass political party of the working class. . . . There are no political issues between these two parties. On the question of tariff, prohibition, taxation, imperialist war, farm relief, League of Nations and all other discussed political issues there is much more division within each party than between the two parties."

The "Negro World" is misleading the oppressed millions of Negro workers when it holds out a hope to them that Smith and Hoover or whoever of the two is elected, can do much for the harrassed Negro.

There is no record of Hoover ever having opened his mouth in protest against the lynching of Negroes and against the thousands of indignities that have been heaped on the Negroes in the south and also in the north.

A Negro was lynched at the gates of Houston on the eve of the democratic convention and Al Smith did not protest.

The only solution for the many evils that confront the Negro working class population is unity with the white exploited worker in a struggle against capitalism. Negroe leaders who urge the colored masses to isolate themselves from their white brothers and sisters are paying the game of the master class.

They must fight for political and social equality for the Negro race.

They must fight for the abolition of all Jim Crow distinctions. They must fight for a federal law against lynching and the protection of the Negro masses in their right of self-defense.

They must fight for the abolition of the convict lease system and of the chain gang and for equal pay for equal work for Negro and white workers.

The Negroes must wage this struggle in conjunction with their exploited comrades regardless of color. The parties of Al Smith and Herbert Hoover may be willing to confer favors on renegade Negro leaders who are ready to sell out their people for a mess of pottage. But those parties have nothing for the Negro masses but chains.

The Workers (Communist) Party is the only party that has a program which calls for the abolition of the capitalist system, a program that will free black and white alike and which calls for the building of a new society where the prejudices and hatreds fostered by the exploiting classes for centuries will be swept away and where all will be truly equal under a social order where the rendering of service and not the acquisition of wealth will be the badge of honor.

Hints on Open Air Meetings

By JULIUS CODKIND.

To be successful, an evening open air meeting should be opened at eight o'clock sharp, and in no case should it last above two and one-half hours. Usually two hours is sufficient to hold a meeting. Within this time the speaking, literature sale, and collection should be made and questions answered. Exceptions to the two-hour rule are advisable only when there is great interest or great excitement or enthusiasm.

It is always bad to have a crowd melt away while the meeting is still in progress. It is much better to discontinue a meeting at the two-hour limit with the announcement of when the next meeting will be held on the same spot. As a rule the crowd will come back for the next meeting, if your meeting was successful in gaining their interest or attention.

Advertising the Meeting.

Open-air meetings can be built up very easily with a little organization. If the meeting is to open at 8 p. m., the platform should be on the corner with a sign at least an hour earlier, announcing the time when the meeting will be opened. Try this a couple of times, and you will soon discover that the function of the chairman is to make a pleasant five-minute introduction of the meeting rather than to act as loud-speaker extraordinary. Where there is a newspaper, the meetings should be announced in the press. In small towns the local bourgeois paper will often carry a notice of even Communist meetings. A little three or four-line notice is often very helpful.

Building the Meetings.

In large cities open-air meetings can be built up by choosing a particular evening of the week for a given corner and having a meeting on the corner on the same evening every week. The crowd will soon learn to come to that corner every Monday or Wednesday or Friday, as the case may be.

Maintaining Order.

Maintain perfect order. An open-air meeting is a favorite spot for certain types of comrades to gather for sociability. They will stand around in groups, generally below the platform, and carry on all sorts of discussions. They become very noisy, become highly offended when approached to maintain order, and quickly succeed in demoralizing the meeting. Many good speeches are interrupted and numerous splendid meetings are destroyed by this nuisance. A strong committee, trained to deal gently but firmly with this evil, will quickly rid a corner of it.

Disturbers.

A worse evil even than the one above described is the disturber who knows more than the speaker. With a few telling remarks, he quickly destroys the faith of an audience in any speaker. This type of a crank can never be enticed to go up on the platform to show what he can do.

Very often he will not express his opinion openly. He simply decides that the speaker is not making a good job, so he finds a victim and sets out to convert him to Communism in his own way. Our crank is soon in the midst of a most enticing, know-nothing political discussion. The crowd, always attracted by a novelty, will quickly commence to gather around the debaters, a third will enter into the discussion, then a forth. The debaters split off into two teams each with its circle of admirers. This process continues until the speaker finds himself talking to several circles of backs, and the meeting quickly comes to an end.

The best method of dealing with this disease is to have a member of the committee break up the discussion by calling the debaters quietly aside and appealing to the debater who is friendly to discontinue. If he refuses, he can be invited to go to another corner and hold his own meeting. Sometimes a show of force is necessary. Sometimes a very popular speaker can appeal to the audience to expel the disturber. This nuisance is an ever-present danger, with which it is most difficult to deal.

The trouble lies in the fact that these disturbers secretly believe that they are superior to the speaker. As a general rule, this is not true. A speaker can be successful only thru special study of his subject, and is, therefore, the one best qualified as a propagandist. Besides this the speaker always has the advantage of being on a platform, which helps him to carry a mass appeal and to gain results far beyond anything that can be hoped for from the best of cranks.

"Packing" the Audience.

Interest is contagious. A crowd standing around with plenty of room to move around in will never have as good results as an audience that is closely packed. A well-organized committee can quickly pack a crowd by going to the outskirts and gently pushing forward. This is a very delicate maneuver. The crowding forward must be so carried out as to seem entirely unintentional and the result of great interest in what the speaker is saying. If clumsily done, trouble is very likely to result.

Patrolling the Meeting.

The best and most experienced comrades should be posted on the outskirts of the crowd to safeguard the meetings from disturbances of all kinds, to be ready to deal with cranks and nuisances, and to attend to the process of packing the crowd.

Order of Business.

A well-conducted meeting will open at 8 p. m. sharp with a five-minute speech by the chairman, not for the purpose of getting a crowd but to make a few important remarks and announcements. Chairmanship of this sort is first-class training for beginners.

About 75 minutes should be given to speaking, to be followed by a collection, then the sale of literature, and then questions. Special announcements can be made after the sale of literature. Good speakers do not lose the crowd by making a collection. If the crowd cannot be held thru a collection, it is best not to attempt the collection.

While the collection is being taken and literature sold, the speaker must frequently refer to the fact that the meeting is about to be opened for questions.

Pittsburgh and Steel in the Next War

By W. J. WHITE

No war can be carried on today without steel, chemicals and motor cars. Steel goes into the manufacture of guns, munitions, motor cars and trucks. Not a battleship, either submarine or destroyer, dreadnaught or fast cruiser but must be built out of steel these days. Even the super-dreadnaught must be built of steel and be covered with a belt of steel above the water line from 24 to 36 inches thick in order to withstand the most powerful of projectiles and torpedoes. Steel tanks played a ghastly and dreadful part in the last war, and in the wars of the future the "dry land dreadnaught" will play an even more ghastly and dreadful part. The steel "air cruiser" will sail over our cities in the next war and drop tons of poison gas into the streets. Great fleets of tanks will be part of the equipment of the thoroughly manned army in the next war. No battle will be fought without these death-dealing "dry land ships" being in the action and part of the main line of either defense or advance. Amored cars, made out of steel, will rush through our cities in the next war and nothing except specially made, heavy calibered machine guns can stop their advance.

100 Mile Range

Projectiles carrying tons of nerve-destroying explosives will be sent out on their errands of death from belching mouths of steel. Big Berthas with ranges that may be as far as 100 miles. Steel airplanes with cruising ranges of from three to four thousand miles, carrying the modern chemical poison gas bomb by tons into the interior of the enemy country, will be common in the next war. The super undersea dreadnaught, carrying guns of from six to eight inches calibre, with unlimited sailing ranges, will ravish the shipping of the enemy and destroy his ships of commerce in any of the seven seas. Chemicals, dealing their deaths to the thousands of non-combatants, will be dropped from the clouds in steel capsules and bombs. Bacteria will be sent out on its journey to impregnate and innoculate the man power and woman power of the enemy—and what matter if it come into contact with the child in its innocence. In all of this steel will play its part and be in at the death.

We can today say of steel what Shakespeare said of gold in one of his plays: "Much of this doth make of vice a virtue."

Greatest Steel Mills

All of this comes to me today as I look out on the hills of Pittsburgh, where the greatest combination of steel producing units in all the world are gathered. Here, in the industrial heart of the United States, the greatest of steel mills stand ready to turn out the steel for all of the above. Here we are ready to make the steel which will go into the projectiles and bombs for the subjugation of the insurgents of India. The Chinese have already felt the "blessing of our steel" on Socony hill. The plains of Manchuria will run red with the blood of the Chinese soldier—thanks to the guns and munitions of war coming from the mills of Pittsburgh and vicinity. The Yangste river has reverberated with the roar of "our guns" on "our battleships," the steel for which came from the vicinity of Pittsburgh and from the mills of the corporations of this district. In Nicaragua today the steel products of Pittsburgh are wiping out whole villages in order that the "blessings" of our "civilizing rule" of "Wall Street" may come down on the heads of the 'bandits" in the ranks of Sandino's noble army and show them the errors of their way. On the Amazon in South America "our steel barges" and steamboats" are plowing their way for the Armours and Wilsons, who are seeking new worlds to conquer. These barges and boats will turn to vipers and hissing adders when the time comes to pay the debts owed to Wall Street. Then will the South American hear the roar of "our guns" as did the Chinese in their efforts to shake from their back the imperialists of America and the world. Haiti and the Philippines have had their workers annihilated by the steel guns and the munitions of war manufactured in this industrial bee hive of imperialism.

Terrific Strain

Here the world's labor market has been raped for the workers who could stand up under the strain of the seven-day week and the 12-hour day. Here has been gathered the workers who have spoken the languages of the Indias and the lands of every clime under the sun, in order that steel might be produced and the few grow rich. Here the idealist has seen his visions and dreams turned into guns and munitions of war. Here he has seen the child of his fancy turned into the carnage and the blood bath of battle. Here has been gathered the private army of private wealth in order that the long toilsome road of organized labor might be wiped out in an hour of bloody battle. All of this in order that the slaves of steel might not stand in the way of the predatory parasites and their money bags in an organized body against the next war.

The workers in the steel mills of Pittsburgh, in the next war, or even before the next war, must be organized and educated, in order that they may lay down their tools and refuse to make the guns and munitions of war which will be aimed not only at the crushing out of organized resistance of all the workers in all those countries which are now tied to the wheels of the war chariots of the American and world imperialism, but also to destroy Soviet Russia.

In this drive there is only one organization that has the will to win the workers to this organized campaign against war and that is the Workers (Communist) Party. This organization, and it alone, can do this much-needed work. Let our party not lose an hour or a day, for there is not a day or an hour to be lost in this work. It is our task. Let us do it with a will to win.

Kansas Young Worker League Shocks Meet of Baptist Patriots

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 11. — The international convention of the Young People's Baptist Union closed here yesterday. Delegates were present from most of the western states and some from Canada. During the discussions the forum leader spoke of the war danger and was followed in the regular "church" manner by speakers speaking of the horrors of war and pious wishes for its cessation. Furthermore all delegates pledged allegiance to the flags and spoke of the glory of giving one's life for his country. That was an indication of the "peaceful" spirit.

On the closing day the Young Workers League of Kansas City distributed one thousand leaflets calling upon the workers and students to fight the citizen's military training camps and the capitalist war.

The leaflets were well received.

Told You So

While the managers of the two big capitalist parties are modestly asserting that they will not expend a penny more than $3,000,000 each in the presidential elections, the Workers (Communist) Party is going boldly ahead with its plans to raise $100,000. In fact, the Communists would have no objection to a campaign treasury of $5,000,000. Instead of printing and distributing leaflets we would have a few more daily papers strategically located thruout the country.

Members of the Workers (Communist) Party are working like beavers collecting the necessary number of signatures to place the Communist ticket on the ballot. Two comrades are touring parts of New York state in an automobile called the "Red Essex." Not only are they collecting signatures but they are organizing party units. Collecting signatures, funds, and organizing workers into the Party fit in nicely into the general campaign plan.

The Fourth of July has come and gone. Hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of firecrackers were exploded, which is a tribute to the ability of the great American business man to mix business with patriotism. The "Happy Warrior," Al Smith, waxed lyrical over the virtues of Tammany Hall, and declared that only a sound and politically moral organization could exist and flourish in this country for 139 years. Al may not know any better, since he admits that he only read two books in his life: The Life of John L. Sullivan and the Holy Bible. We suggest that Mrs. Moskovitz present him with a copy of "Boss" Tweed by Denis T. Lynch.

The estimable Tweed, while grand sachem of Tammany, took unto himself the tidy sum of $30,000.000 in less than three years, and it is estimated that the total "take" of the Tammany ring was in excess of $40,000,000. Even the Teapot Dome boys had nothing on Tammany. All the way down to "Glucose" Charlie Murphy, the abstaining saloon keeper, the leaders of Tammany headed a gang of plunderers that were without peer in the annals of American history.

Tammany is now waging a fake fight against the sewer pipe burglars in the Borough of Queens headed by Connolly and Patten. The truth is that Connolly and Patten are on the Tammany blacklist because they supported the Hylan ring and perhaps do not care to share their graft with the citizens of the Manhattan wigwam. How the teeth of the 14th Street (now Park Avenue) sachems must water at the prospect of getting their hands on this booty. One can imagine Tammany elders prospecting all over the sidewalks of New York, and muttering "Thars gold in them thar sewers."

Herbert Hoover is reported to be having trouble with his campaign managers. Some of the outstanding leaders of the G. O. P. are sulking in their tents. We suggest that Herbert commissions the Westinghouse people to build him a dozen mechanical men who will move in the best modern engineering fashion with the pressing of a button. This might give the capitalists hope that when Hoover is elected, if he should be, he will provide them with enough robots to man their factories, so that they could dispense with the pesky working class. Still there are drawbacks. Mechanical men would not consume the commodities, which are produced by the workers not primarily for their own consumption but for the greater glory and profit of the capitalists, and furthermore there would not be much of a thrill for Du Pont in manufacturing bullets that would glance off the robots like pebbles off the side of a ship. Too many contradictions in this system. I suppose they will have to bear with the workers as long as the workers will bear with them.

The democratic platform mildly protests against the occupation of Nicaragua, and yet when the All-America Anti-Imperialist League demonstrated against this crime in Wall Street, the protestants were arrested and beaten by policemen under the direction of a democratic police commissioner. The southern democrats have no scruples against the lynching of Negroes, but they have little to gain by an imperialist venture in Latin America. Morgan has tho. And Al Smith is the white-haired boy in the vicinity of Broad Street.

Democrats, socialists, and republicans are concerned only with catching votes in this election campaign. The two big parties are amassing their millions for the great political fair next November. The poor decrepit socialist party is collecting shekels from lawyers, pawnbrokers, and the handful of labor fakers that still pay lip loyalty to socialism. It is appealing to the liberal "conscience" and the "sad young men" of the colleges to get behind the reverend Thomas. The class struggle is completely ignored. The vote's the only thing.

WELCOME FR WORKERS TO

Union Square Meet To Protest Frame-up

The release of four of the workers who were jailed for participation in an anti-imperialist demonstration on July 3 will be celebrated with a huge welcome in Union Square at 4:30 this afternoon at which several thousand militant workers are expected to be present. The welcome will also take the form of a protest against the jailing of the workers and particularly against the frame-up of Nathan Kaplan, young furrier, who is now out on $1,500 bail on a charge of felonious assault, awaiting a grand jury hearing. Kaplan, it is pointed out, has been selected as the scapegoat, and unless the class-conscious workers of the city launch a drive for his immediate release, he will be railroaded to jail.

The chief speakers at the welcome and protest meeting this afternoon will be the four released workers, Robert Minor, editor of The DAILY WORKER and Workers Party candidate for U. S. Senator; Rebecca Grecht, Workers Party candidate for assembly and election campaign manager of District 2; Harriet Silverman, secretary of the New York branch of the All - America Anti - Imperialist League, which arranged the July 3rd demonstration, and Robert Wolf, poet and novelist.

Kate Gitlow, secretary of the United Council of Workingclass Women, who was also arrested and later released, will also speak and demand that she be given the same treatment as her comrades.

VIENNA FORBIDS DEMONSTRATION

Fear Show of Power By Communists

VIENNA, July 12. — Fearing the pressive demonstrations of mili- labor now being planned in lebration of the July uprising of Vienna workers last year, police today forbade all public meetings, semblies and parades between July and August 12.

The order is specifically aimed at the Communist Party which has been in the forefront in exposing the treacheries of the social-democratic rulers of the city.

KILLS WIFE, COMMITS SUICIDE

OMAHA, Neb., July 12 (UP).— Belief that Clifford McWilliams killed his wife and then committed suicide was expressed by police today. The bodies of the two were found in their rooms in an apartment house here late today. Police learned that Mrs. McWilliams returned from Bristol, Col., this morn-

... director, to relief committees and sympathizers all over the country, for funds to furnish roofs to cover the heads of the striking miners' children.

Houses Dilapidated.

Thousands of families in McDonald, Atlasburg and Primrose will be affected. The company houses are smoky, broken-down shacks, bordering the hills in crooked rows. The walls are streaked with the remains of years' old paper, holes in the windows are stuffed with rags, there is hardly any plumbing and the roofs are leaky. But they are the only roofs the miners' families have to protect them from the frequent rain storms. Hunger, lack of clothing, privations and hardships innumerable they have lived through, these fifteen months. Nevertheless the threat of losing what little shelter they have, comes like a thunderbolt.

Great Solidarity Week.

"The greatest manifestation of solidarity that the workers of America have ever shown for their striking brothers will be seen everywhere during the week of July 22 to the 29th" Wagenknecht said in the appeal sent broadcast from the Pittsburgh office. "The International Labor Defense is cooperating with us to raise money to buy tents for the evicted miners, food for their children and defense for their arrested leaders."

"The miners are in the vanguard of the struggle against the open shop and slave standards of work and life for all labor," Martin Abern of the International Labor Defense added to the appeal. "They are on the firing line, and we must rush ammunition to them. Every dollar, every dime available must be rushed to the relief headquarters at 611 Penn Avenue, Pittsburgh. Every worker must join the drive, to swell the national relief-defense week drive, July 22 to the 29, to mass proportions!

Join the Caravan.

"Join the caravan to Pittsburgh, Saturday, July 14, and see for yourself how the courageous strikers and their families are living!" the official communication concluded.

Arrangements for joining the automobile campaign can be made through local national miners relief committees or International Labor Defense branches, or directly through the national headquarters in Pittsburgh.

WORKERS PARTY NEEDS $20,000 BEFORE AUGUST

$100,000 Required For Election Drive

The first response to the call of the National Election Campaign Committee for contributions to the $100,000 Communist Campaign Fund have been highly gratifying and have given the fund a fine start, according to a statement issued by the Committee last night.

Hereafter, until the full quota is reached, the job will require steady work by all elements in the Communist movement.

The National Office of the Workers Party is reporting an extreme shortage of funds. Work on the campaign has been steadily carried on for months. Numerous organizers and speakers have been maintained in the field thruout this period. Much of the preliminary work of organizing the campaign on a country-wide basis and of putting the party on the ballot has already been accomplished.

Neew Funds Now.

Quite a number of states are already on the ballot. Several more states are daily expected to report success in this field, while reports from all sections of the country indicate that everywhere the tempo of the election campaign is increasing.

Launch Tours.

If the success already gained are to be continued, twenty thousand ... fore August ... sums. The campaign depends wholly on the contributions of large numbers of individual workers, and the Campaign Committee is confident that the workers will respond generously.

All contributions should be addressed to Alexander Trachtenberg, Treasurer, 43 East 125th St., New York.

orrow evening 25,000 workers at last have the opportunity to and hear this distinguished scientist of the Soviet Union at the greatest proletarian musical event ever held in this country, the concert at Coney Island Stadium arranged by The DAILY WORKER.

Theremin's program has already been announced, a program that will display to the full all the possibilities of his wonderful invention which enables music of the greatest beauty to be drawn out of the air with movements of the hand. In another part of this paper a special interview with Theremin will be found which discusses in fuller detail the achievement of this great scientist.

Theremin alone would be a sufficient attraction to pack Coney Stadium. But in addition to him the committee in charge has secured Arnold Volpe and his famous orchestra of 50 picked musicians in a program of symphonic favorites and the Roxy Ballet in oriental and Russian dances under the direction of A. Nelle, former dance partner of Pavlova.

Tickets have been selling so fast that it is likely that the demand will surpass the supply. Workers who want to make sure of not missing this event of the centurry should therefore buy their tickets at once at the office of The DAILY WORKER, 26-28 Union Square.

Workers Sports Clubs Disbanded

PRAGUE, Czechoslavakia, July 12.—Smirchov and Vysocan, the leaders of the relief organizations and Vrsovic of the Federation of Proletarian Physical Culture received an order from the Prague police that their organizations are from now on dissolved, and that all their possessions and documents are to be turned over to the police. The order was based on certain slogans which were used by these organizations in a demonstration. The wording of these slogans were censured by the police.

Similar organizations were disbanded by the police in Liben and Klado, and in the latter place the children were forbidden to participate in proletarian sport festivals. The police at Liben expropriated the treasury of the sport organization and all their papers.

When Lackett was injured, he was robbed not only of his sight, but also of the compensation which the law grants for such accidents in Ohio State. MALMGREN DEAD; FIRST SEEN BY SOVIET AIRMAN

Five U. S. S. R. Fliers Now Missing

By EUGENE LYONS
(U. P. Staff Correspondent)

MOSCOW, July 12.—The giant Russian icebreaker Krassin today rescued Captain Adalberto Mariano and Captain Filippo Zappi, of the dirigible Italia.

The third man of the group of three which left the dirigible Italia ice camp forty-three days ago—Finn Malmgren, Swedish meteorologist—was dead. He died a month ago.

With Malmgren's body, over which they had kept vigil, the two Italian naval officers were taken aboard the Krassin, which resumed at once her fight through the ice to effect other rescues.

The rescue was made possile by flights Tuesday of the Russian aviator, Chukhnovsky, and four companions, who today were themselves stranded on the Arctic ice awaiting rescue by the Krassin.

Plane Damaged

They were forced to attempt a landing on the ice when they lost their bearings on a later flight. The plane was damaged, and today, with ample provisions and a radio, they waited for rescue by the big icebreaker.

Zappi and Mariano said that they had abandoned hope until Chukhnovsky's airplane roared through the air toward them through the fog, sighted them as they waved with excitement and circled over them five times, to indicate that it had seen them.

During the intervening hours they knew that rescue was near, they said.

Zappi and Mariano had been without food for thirteen days when they were found. Chukhnovsky and his companions, flying over the ice between the Krassin and the camp where four members of the Italia crew are awaiting resuce, spotted the three men who had been given up for lost. Two were standing on the ice waving their arms to attract the plane's attention. The third was lying on the ice. It was not known until today that this was Malmgren, dead.

Wrecked on Third Flight

Chukhnovsky flew back to the Krassin, reported his discovery and returned to attempt to land near the men. He was unable to find a safe landing place on the rough ice and returned to the Krassin.

He started out on a third flight, it was brought out today, this time to drop a message to the party that help was only a few miles away—a litle more than thirteen, to be exact, for the Krassin was reported earlier only that distance away, fighting her way, nosing aside one by one the ice floes in her path.

This time Chukhnovsky and his companions met disaster themselves.

They made a forced landing on the ice and smashed their plane. Taking their fourteen days' rations, the fliers made for the coast, found it and radioed their position to the Krassin.

MUSSOLINI URGES MORE SLAVERY

ROME, July 12. — At the first national conference of fascist industrialists Mussolini, in his keynote address, laid the basis of fascist "labor" policy by proclaiming that "Wage workers should accept wage reductions in time of crisis."

He patted the fascist bosses on the back for recognizing the fact that "high wages are impossible in Italy" for workers and urged them to continue their present policy. He promised them that any worker who goes on strike to better his conditions will be immediately arrested.

"FARMER-LABOR" MEET NOMINATES MILL BOSS

CHICAGO, July 12.—Will Vereen, of Moultrie, Ga., a cotton mill owner who operates a non-union shop, was today chosen to be the vice-presidential candidate of the "Farmer-Labor" party in session here. Vereen has never been a farmer or wage worker, one delegate charged, in opposing his nomination

Vereen's selection followed the naming of Sen. Norris of Nebraska to be the party's presidential choice Despite Norris' refusal to run, the "organization for a time at least must consider him its candidate." This was announced today by Bert Martin, of Denver, chairman of the executive committee of the party.

The convention, which consists for the most part of petty businessmen lawyers, accountants and a sprinkling of "gentlemen farmers," floundered between Norris and Norman Thomas for its presidential hope, and finally settled on the western senator. In the final ballot Norris received 16 votes and Thomas 14.

The plan of colition with the prohibition party has been dropped by mutual consent.

THREE KILLED IN MINE BLAST

Gas Explosion Brings Down Walls

MINERSVILLE, Pa., July 12 (FP).—A black ambulance scurried toward the mine, throwing dust into the eyes of patch people as they followed its progress. It waddled through mud and shimmied over humps, finally arriving at the top of the shaft of the Lytle colliery.

Pinched old women wearing sunbonnets rushed through their gardens to the colliery. Wives, mothers, barefooted kids, trotted to the top of the shaft to see. Everybody asked everybody else, "What happened? Who is it?"

Who Is It?

Minutes seemed hours, as they watched the cages of the shaft bringing loaded cars up, taking empty ones down. It didn't seem there was any hurry about bringing up the man—whoever he was Finally the shaft bell rang for an "empty cage." Everyone watched the vibrating rope as the cage came up. But when it landed, a surly-faced fireboss got off it, holding a lighted safety lamp. "Who is it?" they asked in unison.

"We don't know yet," replied the fireboss gloomily. "Three men closed in by a gas explosion down the second lift. Gotta dig 'em out We'll know tonight when the tickets are in."

Men and Disks.

He referred to the numbered metal discs miners use for checking themselves in and out of the mines. When they leave the mine they hang up the discs in the places assigned them, each miner having a number.

The explosion started a heavy fall of rock and it would probably take two days to get the men out. The women gradually disappeared; the kids stood for hours, waiting. But many hearts beat fast all that day trusting that those three unlucky devils were "someone else." The victims, finally dug out of the rockfall, were all from nearby patches.

Red Aid Organizes Big Demonstration

ANTWERP, July 12.—To demand the release of the fiery working class leader, Jef van Extergem, who has already been in prison for five years, the International Red Aid staged a huge demonstration in which 6000 workers participated. Among them were the striking dock workers of Antwerp, who have awakened great sympathy in the city.

A resolution was passed demanding the freedom of all political prisoners.

32 Rescued From Sea After Yacht Capsizes

ROCKPORT, Mass., July 12 (UP).—Although handicapped by darkness and a choppy sea, coast guards succeeded early today in rescuing 32 persons, including 15 young women, after the Gloucester yacht Connie had crashed onto submerged rocks off Sandy Bay, about two miles from here.

The wrecked yacht quickly filled with water and became partially submerged on the ledge, but red flares brought a crew from the Straits South Coast Guard station in time to save all on board.

GERMAN SAILORS MUTINY

Workers Greet Them With Cheers

HAMBERG, July 12.—When the Tirpitz, a freighter of the Hamburg-American Line, left New York for Hamburg on June 27 the watch from his look-out on the mast called "All's well" at the ringing of the bells. In the course of the trip there was no one to yell "All's well" from the masthead, for the crew, under the leadership of the Communist Nucleus, has rebelled against their officers.

The workers of Hamburg heard of the mutiny. When the ship reached Hamburg the docks were covered with a mass of workers singing the International and the sailors heard the cheering of their fellow-workers. From dockhand to sailor, from factory worker to stoker, from working woman to stevedore came the greetings "Long Live the International Working Class!" "Long Live the Soviet Union!" "Long Live the Communist International!"

BATTY BANKRUPT ADMITS HE CAN'T CHECK MEMBERS

Couldn't Stop His Men Picketing with T.M.C.

The principal trade organ of the textile manufacturers, The Daily News Record, published in New York, in its leading textile article declared yesterday that there is "dissatisfaction among manufacturers and a disinclination to continue idle, leading to the opinion that the struggle will soon end favorable for the operatives."

This, alone, clearly shows that a split is expected in the New Bedford Cotton Manufacturers' Association.

The article says further: "Many mills are not in favor of continuing the struggle much longer . . . There is growing talk that dissatisfaction is spreading among the ranks of the manufacturers. With assurances that the operatives will not return to the mills this week while the gates are open, there is every indication that some manufacturers will protest against closing the mills for another indefinite period. The association will soon find itself in an embarrassing situation as a result of this difference of opinion."

The publication then continues: "There is a tendency among some members of the manufacturers' association to question the authority of a few of the older members of the body, and the smoldering fire may soon break into flame."

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., July 12. —Conclusive proof that the Textile Workers' Union of the Textile Mills Committee is now the outstanding leader of the 28,000 textile workers in their thirteenth week of strike against a wage reduction, has come from no less a reliable source than the officials of the Textile Council of the United Textile Workers' Union.

An open admission that they are panic stricken at the growing power and prestige of the T. W. U. was made by William E. G. Batty, Council secretary, in a statement to the local press yesterday. The police had criticized him for permitting the Council membership to participate in an all-night picket demonstration together with the Mill Committee members at the Kilburn Mills.

No Heed, He Says.

Batty's response to this criticism was a public statement absolving himself and the other Council leaders from blame for the irresponsible behavior of his members. He reassured the police that he had done all that was possible to call off the pickets but to no avail. Some refused to leave the mill, he said, and others came back after he had led them away.

Completely confessing his bankruptcy despite the lavish aid being rendered him by the socialists, Batty declares: "As a result of my interview with Chief of Police McLeod, the chief says he is satisfied that I gave 100 per cent cooperation. He is satisfied I am not responsible for men who stayed on the picket line after I thought they had left. I could not have done any more.

Criticized.

"Already I am being roughly criticized by my own people for cooperating with Chief McLeod as much as I did. Lieutenant Manning told me the chief wished I could cooperate with the department as far as possible in clearing the crowd away from the mill. Despite murmurs from my own people that I was going too far, and despite the fact that they wanted to keep on picketing I worked up to the head of the line and led it off to the South End, calling on those behind me to follow me.

"I led the line away from the plant to a vacant lot and spoke to them till 11:30 p. m., when I left for home in the belief that the several hundred Textile Council pickets would also leave for home. This morning I learnt that they had returned to the mill and had picketed all night." Batty at the same time denied that the Textile Council members had joined the T. M. C. pickets in singing strike songs on the picket line.

l Smith's Campaign Manager Exposed as Biggest Scab Boss

ION BUSTER IS POWER TRUST, LANNING STEAL

Connected With Mellon and Republicans

WASHINGTON, (FP), July 12.—Al Smith has dealt a stinging blow in the face of the labor movement of the United States, by designating his personal friend John J. Raskob vice-president and chairman of the finance committee of the General Motors Corporation, as chairman of the democratic national committee.

Raskob is a duPont executive by training. He has been treasurer, vice-president and member of the finance committee of the E. I. duPont de Nemours Company, and through the duPont capture of General Motors from Durant some years ago he was placed in charge of the financing of the biggest non-union employing concern in the world. Recent estimates have placed the number of wage workers employed by General Motors and its subsidiaries at more than 500,000. Not 1 per cent of these—so far as is known—are organized.

Company Unions.

The only dent made thus far in the solid anti-union front maintained by General Motors under the Raskob regime has been the revolt of the company union in the Canadian plant at Oshawa, Ont., when some 2,500 workers joined the various trade unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. After a vigorous fight they compelled this Canadian branch to recognize the unions.

In the huge plants of General Motors in Michigan, especially, the industrial spy system is maintained at pitiless efficiency. Let a man become known in his section of the shop as a trade union sympathizer and he becomes conscious that his fellow-workers are afraid of being seen talking with him. Let him propose any step toward unionism and he loses his job. The slugging of trade union sentiment is as ruthless as in the mills of the United States Steel Corporation or in the shops of the Pennsylvania Railroad. While the heads of these latter corporations are supporting Hoover and the republican ticket, Raskob has shown other anti-union bosses that the democrats are equally anxious to line up with them as a pledge of industrial policy for the coming four years.

Labor Fakers Pretend.

American Federation of Labor executives who support Smith were momentarily staggered by the news of the Raskob appointment, but quickly recovered with the suggestion that other high officials of General Motors were for Hoover. Leaders of the metal trades unions who did not want to be quoted in connection with the political campaign—on the ground that religious and other feeling might be aroused, to the injury of their unions, pointed out that both the republican and democratic national committees have now declared their debts paid, thanks to the kindness of big business corporations.

Who Are Al's Pals?

Another phase of the Raskob appointment is seen in the power trust influence over Raskob's career. The duPonts are heavily interested in waterpower, especially through their connection with the American Pioneer Power Co., which proposes development of power along the St Lawrence when the deep waterway to the Great Lakes is constructed. The Mellon and General Electric interests are in this venture with the duPonts. Raskob, in other words, is one of the power trust group. His influence on democratic party policy, in the next congress, as to operation of giant power stations, can easily be forecast. And the whole power trust group is anti-union in labor policy, just as the duPonts and General Motors are anti-union.

Whitewashing Fuller in Six Big Volumes

NEW YORK, July 12. — A record of the trial and execution of Sacco and Vanzetti has been printed in six volumes. Although the kind individuals who financed the publication are not known the whitewashing nature of the volumes can be estimated from the committee in charge of the publication. They are Newton Baker, former secretary of War, John Davis, former candidate for president of the democrats and Elihu Root former secretary of State.

ANTI-JINGO POSTERS WORRY DETROIT COPS

DETROIT, July 12.—The department of justice and the local police force of Detroit are usy trying to find a way to satisfy their rage, following the appearance of gummed posters exposing the citizens' military training camp, which were pasted on public buildings, recruiting signs, etc., the night of July 4.

Philip Bart, of the Young Workers (Communist) League, was arrested here a few days ago at an open-air meeting. While he'd in prison, he was [illegible] unmercifully [illegible] and later questioned by an agent of the department of "justice" regarding the stickers. They tried to intimidate him, saying that they had a copy of a letter of instructions from the league regarding the stickers; but when challenged to produce the letter were unable to do so.

Two party members, arrested at the same time, also were questioned regarding the stickers and instructions for their use, but none of them were able to give the department of "justice" any information about the [illegible]

TROY COLLAR WORKERS WIN STRIKE AGAINST FIFTY PER CEN

TROY, N. Y., July 12.—The nine hundred employes of Cluett, Peabody and Company, Inc., shirt and collar manufacturers, who went on strike Monday against the installation of a new "system" of wage paying, which actually meant a 35 to 50 per cent reduction in the wages of the workers employed at the plant, were back on their jobs today with their demands completely won.

Solid United Front.

The cause of the capitulation on the part of the company was the solid united front of the workers in the other plants owned and operated by the Cluett, Peabody Company, who threatened, as soon as the strike was declared by the 900 workers, to go out on a general sympathy strike, 5,000 strong, unless the demands of the strikers were immediately granted.

The general sympathy strike threat was made more acute when the company officials declared that unless the striking workers went back to work immediately, it would close another of its plants in "retaliation against" the 900 out on strike. This added to the militancy and solidarity of the workers of the entire company, who said that if the action was taken, they would quit work, thus tying up the entire works.

Victory Won at Parley.

With the threat of a complete tie-up hanging over them, the company officials decided to hold meeting with a committee of workers representing the strike At the meeting, the officials tri to cajole the workers into acceptin the new system but the committ never lost sight of its demand maintaining throughout the mee ing that unless the old wage syst were reinstalled, they would st same court by Magistrate Maurice Gottlieb, Magistrate Simpson dismissed their cases.

"Free Speech"

In a hypocritical speech Magistrate Simpson declared that the defendants had merely exercised their right of "free speech" and had not broken the peace. The fact that only one witness, the policeman who claimed to have made the arrests, appeared against them, the others (also policemen) being away on their vacations, as well as the unsavory publicity the entire case has received, is believed to have been responsible for the magistrate's hypocritical dismissal.

Jacques Buitenkant, representing the New York Section of the International Labor Defense, defended all the accused. The I. L. D. has issued an appeal, through its secretary, Rose Baron, for funds with which to fight the threatened frame-up of Kaplan. The appeal also urges support of the I. L. D. outing Saturday, July 21, which will help furnish funds for the defense.

DISCOVER FAKED SUITS IN COURT

Corporations Still Halt Genuine Claims

An elaborate system of inventing accident cases, in which girls posed as plaintiffs and men fell over manhole covers and other obstructions in the street before feigning injury to collect damages on faked doctor's certificates, was uncovered yesterday at the ambulance chasing inquiry. Daniel Lamlicht, who is now serving a three-year sentence in Great Meadow prison in connection with the system, took the stand and named thirteen doctors and several lawyers alleged to have participated in fraudulent claims.

Business Overseers' Inquiry

These new revelations followed closely on the arrest of the lawyers who had participated in false suits and who had swindled workers, injured through the negligence of corporations, of over half of the damages they collected.

Reports from workers involved in these accidents state that the inquiry is being continued merely as a move on the part of the corporations in order to do away with legitimate suits of workers actually injured in accidents.

AID FOR MINERS URGED BY I. L. D.

"Fighting the Great Battle of Labor"

An urgent appeal for support to the joint miners' defense and relief drive to be conducted by the International Labor Defense and the national relief committee was yesterday issued from the national office of the I. L. D., at 80 East 11th St., by ass't ant secretary Martin Abern

Plans are now being perfected for the drive which is to last from Sunday, July 22nd to Sunday, July 29th inclusive.

The I. L. D. statement points out the pressing necessity for adequate means to carry on the defense of the literally hundreds of miners who have been arrested, indicted or imprisoned in the present miners' struggle. Among the most important cases are cited those of Anthony Minerich, chairman of the national miners relief committee, whose appeal is now before a higher court; John Brophy and Pat H. Toohey, the framing up of Frank Brbot, a striking miner of Triadelphia, West Virginia, the cases of the fifty-one women in St. Clairsville, Ohio, and hundreds of others who are falling victim to the violent class "justice" of the coal operators' police and judges and courts in the Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia and Illinois mining districts.

"The miners are fighting the battle for all of labor," said Abern. "They are in the vanguard of the struggle against the open shop and slave standards of work and life. These imprisoned and indicted fighters need the support of all. The International Labor Defense has been called upon repeatedly for aid, and it has not been found wanting in a single instance. Just because the resources of our enemy are so great, must our work of solidarity be generous and swift. Every worker must respond to the appeal of the men and women behind the bars."

Friends and sympathizers are requested to send funds for the joint drive during that week to the national miners' relief committee, 611 Penn Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa. In the present drive this office has been established to centralize and make more efficient the collection of funds to be used for both the purpose of defense and relief.

DAILY WORKER FOR SERVICEMEN

Y. W. C. L. Distributes Paper to Soldiers

Members of the Young Workers (Communist) Leage yesterday evening successfully conducted a distribution of The DAILY WORKER, containing a letter from a marine in and sailors received copies

The distribution was carried out at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, where the Daily Worker was given to marines and sailors by two girl League members, and at the Battery Park ferry, where many soldiers, mariner are not as bad as those in Nicaragua

Members of the Marine Corps said they approved the work being done by the League for improvement of the conditions in the service, and the withdrawal of the forces of intervention from Nicaragua. One stated that even in posts in this country, where conditions are not as bad as those in Nicaragua exposed by the Daily Worker a very large percentage of the recruits desert when they discover what they have been lured into by recruiting officers.

The servicemen expressed their gratitude for the papers distributed to them by members of the League

MINE DELEGATES WELL RECEIVED IN ANTHRACITE

Soft Coal Diggers Report on Strike

(Special To DAILY WORKER.)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 12.—The delegations from the striking miners of Districts Two and Five now visiting the anthracite, are getting splendid response from the rank and file miners in the tri-district territory, despite the sabotage and terrorism of the Lewis machine, according to information reaching the National Miners' Convention Arrangements Committee from Hazleton, Pa., in District 7.

Machine Tactics.

The delegation has everywhere encountered an attempt on the part of the reactionary officialdom to block them from speaking before the local unions, although they had credentials from many locals in the strike area. A "warning" that they must not be accorded the privilege of the floor was carried prominently in the "Anthracite Miner," the tri-district organ of the reactionary machine. Letters to the same effect were sent to all local unions And on top of this the delegations were constantly trailed by henchmen of the machine and some district official would follow them into the meetings of the local unions personally to terrorize the membership.

Only in a few cases was the terrorism successful. In most cases after listening to warnings and threats from one or two of the district officials the miners would give the delegation the floor and then vote a donation for relief from its treasury.

Locals Contribute.

Thus, the Eckley local, No. 1507 gave $125. The McAdoo local, No 5516, $100. Another small local in McAdoo, No. 2168, gave $25. The Lattimer local, No. 250, in addition to donating $215 from its treasury made a collection on the floor for the fare and living expenses of the delegation, and wound up with inviting the delegates, Charles Killinger and Mike Vasilaney, of District Two, to visit the local again in the near future.

It should be borne in mind that the anthracite miners have been paying a monthly assessment of $2 presumably for strike relief. After learning that the rank and file strikers have been getting only $1 a week, with the addition of 25 cents for the wife and 20 cents for a child—and even this not regularly—and that many locals and thousands of progressive miners, in reprisal for taking a stand against their betrayers, have been altogether cut off the relief lists, the anthracite miners are now asking how much of the assessment is really going for the salaries and "expenses" of the Lewis officials and their campaign to bolster up their autocratic rule.

For a New Fighting Union.

The effect of this, and of the terrorism of the Mattey-Kennedy-Lewis machine in District 7, is to increase the determination of the membership to smash the machine and to elect the progressive slate The rank and file is lining up with the miners in the rest of the country for a successful national convention at Pittsburgh on September 9-16 and for a new, progressive and fighting union.

to speak against the injustice done to his class by the steel magnates and the government.

Jailed for Speech.

It was in 1926 that Lackett spoke to a group of workers, in Midland, Pa., in which he attacked the capitalist system. Immediately he was thrown into jail, and deprived of his pension. The blind Negro worker at that time realized that a strong organized labor force is required to take up the cause of the workers. And under the influence of Roy Mahoney, he joined the Workers (Communist) Party.

Now "Daily Agent"

Lackett is now a fighter for his cause and an active member of the Workers (Communist) Party. In spite of his blindness, he recently collected over thirty signatures to put the Communist candidates on the state ballot. And, most of all, he has now become the Daily Worker agent at East Liverpool, Ohio.

Often Lackett comes out to speak to and for the colored workers, and tells them about our "democracy." Since his release from jail, he has become a fearless revolutionary fighter.

ILLINOIS WOMEN TOIL LONG DAYS

employed women and girls in state 197,499 are not covered eith
by the 10-hour law or by the child labor law. Most of them are at the mercy of their employers.

The greatest number of women and girls outside the protection of the laws in regard to hours of work are those in domestic and personal service. The department estimates the number without protection in this group at 95,337 or 76 per cent of the total number in these occupations. It also finds 64,024 or 97.5 per cent of those engaged in professional service and 17,947 or 14.6 per cent of those engaged in manufacture unprotected by the laws limiting hours of work.

"No More Than 10 Hours."

The present law, which has been in force since 1911, provides "that no female shall be employed in any mechanical or mercantile establishment, or factory, or laundry, or hotel, or restaurant, or telegraph or telephone establishment, or in any place of amusement, or by any person, firm or corporation engaged in any express or transportation or public utility business, or by any common carrier, or in any public institution, incorporated or unincorporated in this state, more than 10 hours during any one day."

Wage Slavery.

A study of wage rates given on accident reports involving 1934 accidents to women and girls in 1926 shows that those 16 years of age average between $10 and $14 a week while women from 17 to 64 years of age average $15 to $19 a week. In other words the average wage of these women throughout their lives corresponds to the wage paid boys of 17 years. The average wage for men does not become stationary until they reach 25 years after which their range is from $30 to $34.

YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE SCORES THE JINGOISTS

Fail, Trying To Break Communist Meeting

(By a Worker Correspondent)

KENOSHA, Wis., July 12.—Recently the Loyal Order of Moose, in collaboration with the other "loyal" elements of the capitalist system of this city, staged a large parade through the main section of the city as a climax to their state convention. Militia, mounted on horses, participated, as well as American Legion squads, carrying guns on their shoulders as they marched with their faces flushed by other causes beside the balmy air of the city.

As they marched by, the Young Workers (Communist) League, Kenosha section, held an open-air meeting in the center of the downtown section. A crowd, estimated at over 800 people, listened to the league speaker, Herman, as he pointed out the role of the patriotic organizations, such as the American Legion, the Moose, Elks and the rest. The conditions of the workers in America, and the role of the government as a strikebreaker at home and abroad, were exposed in detail.

"All the noise of the patriotic bands of the Moose and the American Legion, all the noise of the cluttering heels of the mounted militia's horses, all the hurrahs of the paraders as they march by," the league speaker said, "can not drown out the misery of the millions of child workers in this, the most prosperous nation in the world, or the wretchedness of the 5,000,000 unemployed workers who tramp the streets daily in search of work.

The meeting lasted for one hour and a half, and the huge crowd that blocked the street and sidewalk responded enthusiastically every few minutes. Many striking workers of the Allan Company were present, as well as workers from the local factory of the Nash Motor Company. Nearly 200 copies of The DAILY WORKER were sold, and the necessity of subscribing to the only militant daily paper in the English language was stressed constantly throughout the meeting.

The Young Workers (Communist) League of Kenosha has been holding regular weekly meetings, Saturdays, in the downtown section, as well as frequent meetings outside the American Brass, Nash Motor Company plants, Simmons Company and the unorganized mills of the Allan A. Company. The Workers everywhere are familiar with the Young Worers (Communist) League, The DAILY WORKER and the Workers (Communist) Party.

NEW UFA FILM AT THE CAMEO DIRECTED BY PABST

The new UFA film, "The Loves of Jeanne Ney," which is showing at the Cameo Theatre this week was directed by G. W. Pabst. The director is best remembered for his remarkable film, "Secrets of a Soul" based on Freud's theories on psychoanalysis. Some of his other films were "Streets of Sorrow" with Greta Garbo and "The Treasure" with Werner Karus.

In "The Loves of Jeanne Ney," Pabst has evolved some new ideas in camera work as well as lighting and the acting of Brigitte Helm who was last seen in "Metropolis," Fritz Rasp, Edith Jehanne, Uno Henning, Vladimir Sokoloff, recently of the Reinhardt troupe, make this film of outstanding interest and indicate that the UFA productions are beginning to return to their former high level of excellence.

ITALIAN BIRTHS DROP GREATLY

MILAN, July 12 (UP).—Italy's population of 50,000,000 will be reduced to 30,000,000 or less within 50 years unless birth control is halted in central and northern portions of the country, the Popolo D'Italia asserted today.

During the last 20 years, the newspaper said, the birth rate for the country has decreased from 35 per 1,000 of population to 27 per 1,000. In all towns, large and small, from Rome northward, it was said, the birth rate is on the decline.

Manslaughter Charged Flier For Two Deaths

ASBURY PARK, N. J., July 12 (UP) — A charge of manslaughter was filed against Lieut. Archer H. Saki, aviator, today in connection with the plane crash at Spring Lake Heights Sunday in which Mary Jobling, English actress, and C. P. McCormack, Cleveland, O., engineer, were killed.

COLLEGES HELP MILL BARONS IN NORTH CAROLINA

Boast of 'Cheap White' Labor

CHAPEL HILL, N. C. (FP). — Onto the bandwagon of boosters of southern cheap white labor the University of North Carolina has climbed.

"Our labor supply is home raised, adequate and dependable, and is not of the kind that falls prey to the radical organizer," reads a recent university extension bulletin on Alamance county. Chamber of commerce stuff—paid for by the university, Alamance county funds and the Burlington chamber of commerce. Burlington is the county's largest industrial town—population 6,000.

Protest Standards.

"Wages are as good here, as in northern states, and a more comfortable living is always afforded," is the amazing statement of the student-author, John W. Harden, O. K.'d by professors of rural social-economics. Burlington hosiery workers who joined the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers and struck last fall tell a different story. Some are now working in Philadelphia union shops for over twice what they made in Alamance county. Cost of living is hardly higher for the same things, but the northern standard is considerably above the southern in comforts.

Alamance textile workers have at various times protested against their low standards by strikes. As long ago as the early nineteen hundreds there was a protracted strike for union and better living. The county has about 30 small cotton mills scattered through its rural districts. Most are old as southern mills go, and some, like the Saxapahaw and Haw River, have dilapidated old mill villages. The 30 or more hosiery and knitting mills are mostly newer than the cotton mills and have no villages attached. Several furniture factories, including a big coffin plant, and a dozen or so miscellaneous small factories, complete the county list of industries.

Poorly Paid.

Even county employes are poorly paid in Alamance. True, white rural high school teachers average $144.82 a month. But white rural elementary teachers average only $85.10 and rural colored teachers (high and elementary) average $62.13. The county jailer and his wife get living quarters at the lockup but only $40 a month salary between them. The wife cooks for the prisoners, getting 60c per prisoner to feed him two meals a day, and what she saves off the prisoners' food goes to increase her joint wage. The jailer gets 30c turnkey fee for each prisoner put in or discharged.

"Alice in Wonderland" in Hammerstein Season Plays

Lewis Carroll's classic fantasy, "Alice in Wonderland," is the latest new addition upon the production schedule of Arthur Hammerstein this coming season, according to news sent out by the producer yesterday.

Besides the two musical shows peviously announced, "Good Boy and "Polly," "Golden Dawn," "Rose Marie," and an Americanization of the Hamburg success, "The Optimists," are also listed for early production. Two motion pictures, "The End of St. Petersburg" and "Ten Days That Shook The World," both Russian Soviet pictures, the first named current at Hammerstein's Theatre, and the latter scheduled for an imminent New York showing, will be released in the fall to the entire country.

"Alice in Wonderland" will be presented in Hammerstein's Theatre Christmas week, when the Lewis Carroll classic will be prepared for the stage by Henry Myers with a score by Herbert Stothart. This project has long been a pet proposal of the producer. It will be played by juvenile actors only, and its production is possible at Hammerstein's Theatre, because of certain scenic and mechanical equipment to be given the theatre by virtue of the impending presentation there of "Good Boy."

"Golden Dawn," with Robert Chisholm heading the cast, will open its key cities tour in Boston on Labor Day. "Rose Marie," with the same cast which has been touring for the past four years, will tour Canada.

FASCISTS FACING ECONOMIC CRISIS AS WAGES DROP

Volpi Loses Job as Conditions Worsen

GENEVA, July 12. — In an attempt to hide the present financial and industrial crisis in Italy, Mussolini has accepted the "resignation" of Count Volpi, who has been minister of finance for the last three years. Trying to conceal the actual state of affairs Mussolini has announced that Volpi may be sent as ambassador to either Washington or London, probably the former.

Although the fascists have done their utmost to prevent the facts from leaking out, figures are available, from reliable sources, that show the almost complete collapse of Italy's finance.

In a recent speech before the national convention of industrialists in Rome Mussolini urged them to do all at their power to keep wages as low as possible, and promised them that any worker who objected would immediately be thrust into jail.

NEW DRAFT PROGRAM OF THE COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL

IV. The Period of Transition from Capitalism to Socialism and the Dictatorship of the Proletariat.

DOCUMENT SHOWS MEANING OF BOURGEOIS DEMOCRACY AND PREDICTS COMING WORKER RULE

Conquest of Power by Proletariat First Prerequisite of Socialism

Soviet Democracy of the Toiling Masses To Replace Democracy of Exploiters

The Programme Commission of the Executive Committee of the Communist International is publishing a DRAFT PROGRAM.

The Commission thinks it its duty to declare that while the text of this draft is of course based on the same fundamental principles as those upon which the draft programme provisionally passed by the Fifth Congress of the Communist International was based, nevertheless, it differs very considerably from that draft. The Program Commission felt that in view of the great changes that have taken place in many important spheres of international life and particularly in the revolutionary movement since the Fifth Congress, it could not confine itself to making merely editorial changes in the original draft. A change has taken place in the form of the general crisis of capitalism; a change has taken place in the relationships between various groups of powers. Great events have taken place, like the great revolution in China, which once again emphasized the significance of the agrarian-peasant question. Great progress has been made in building up socialism in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. The struggle between the aggressive capitalist world and the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics is becoming acute. Fascism is growing and becoming transformed into the terrorist dictatorship of big capital. Social democracy has degenerated into Chauvinist imperialism. The lessons that have been learned by the Communist International in the fight against opposition tendencies and finally the growth of Communism, the fact that the movement has really become internationalized, the new tasks that confront the Communist International as a single organization—all this has inevitably made it necessary considerably to alter and enlarge the former draft.

The general tendency of the changes that have been made is towards more concreteness and greater emphasis upon THE INTERNATIONAL aspects both in the theoretical section as well as in the sections dealing immediately with the struggles of the Communist Parties.

Acting on the decision of the Executive Committee of the Communist International, the Programme Commission, in publishing this draft program, calls upon all comrades to express their opinion and criticism of it in articles, remarks and concrete suggestions. The work done on the program has revealed how difficult it is to embrace in a single document all the problems of the present-day world Communist movement. The question of the program will be one of the central questions at the Sixth Congress. It is essential that sufficient material be collected by the time the discussion of the question takes place at the Congress. The Commission therefore invites all comrades to join in the fruitful discussion of the program.

THE PROGRAMME COMMISSION OF THE
EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE
COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL

Capitalist society is separated from socialist society by a period of revolutionary transformation, in which the one changes into the other. To this corresponds a political transitional period in which the State can be nothing else than the revolutionary dictatorship of the proletariat. The transition from the world dictatorship of imperialism to the world dictatorship of the proletariat extends over a long period of proletarian struggles, defeats and victories. This is a period of continuous general crisis in capitalist relationships and maturing social revolution; a period of national wars and colonial rebellions, which, although not in themselves revolutionary socialist proletarian movements, objectively become a component part of the world proletarian revolution in so far as they undermine the domination of imperialism. It is a period in which capitalist and socialist economic and social systems exist side by side in "peaceful" relationship and armed conflict. In this period federations of socialist Soviet states are formed which wage war against imperialist States, establish closer and closer ties with colonial peoples, etc.

Bourgeois revolutions signified merely the political liberation of a system of productive relationships that had already established itself and became economically dominant in the transference of power from the hands of one class of exploiters to the hands of another. The proletarian revolution however, signifies the forcible invasion of the proletariat into the domain of bourgeois property relationships, the expropriation of the expropriating classes and the transference of power to a class whose aim is the radical reconstruction of the economic foundations of society and the abolition of all exploitation of man by man. Bourgeois revolutions took centuries to put an end to the political domination of the feudal barons all over the world and broke that domination in a series of separate revolutions. The international proletarian revolution will not be a single and simultaneous act, but will extend over a whole epoch; nevertheless, owing to the closer ties that now exist between countries, it can fulfil its mission in a much shorter period. A prolonged epoch of intense work of building up world socialist economy will set in only after the world socialist revolution has been completed and after the proletariat has consolidated its world power.

The conquest of power by the proletariat is a pre-requisite for the growth of socialist forms of economy and for the cultural growth of the proletariat, which changing its own nature, is ripening into the [illegible] of society in all spheres of [illegible] is drawing into this process [illegible] of transformation all other [illegible] and in this way laying the [illegible] for the abolition of classes.

In the struggle for the dictatorship of the proletariat and for the subsequent transformation of the social system, an alliance of workers and peasants is formed against the alliance of the landlords and the capitalists, under the intellectual and political hegemony of the proletariat, and this alliance serves as the basis of the dictatorship of the proletariat.

The characteristic features of the transitional period are: the ruthless suppression of the resistance of the exploiters; the organization of socialist construction; the mass training of men and women in the spirit of socialism and the overcoming of classes.

The transitional period begins to change into Communist society only after these great historical tasks have been fulfilled.

Thus, a necessary condition precedent for the transition of world capitalist economy to socialist economy is the dictatorship of the world proletariat. This dictatorship can be brought about only after socialism has achieved victory in certain countries, when the newly established proletarian republics have entered into federation with already existing proletarian republics, when this federation has grown and attracted to itself the colonies which have emancipated themselves from the yoke of imperialism and finally when this federation of republics has become the World Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, which will unite the whole of mankind under the hegemony of the international, State organized proletariat.

The conquest of power by the proletariat is not the peaceful "conquest" of the existing bourgeois State machine by means of a parliamentary majority. The conquest of power by the proletariat is the violent overthrow of bourgeois power, the destruction of the capitalist State apparatus (bourgeois armies, police, bureaucratic hierarchy, courts, parliaments, etc.) and its replacement by a new organ of proletarian power, primarily as a weapon for the suppression of exploiters.

As was shown by the Russian and Hungarian revolutions — which immeasurably enlarged the experience of the Paris Commune of 1871 — the most expedient form of proletarian state power, as a rule, is the Soviet State.

This is precisely the type of State, which emerging directly from the very broadest mass movement, brings out the maximum of mass activity and consequently serves as the surest guarantee of final victory. The Soviet form of State represents the highest form of democracy, namely, proletarian democracy, as distinct from bourgeois democracy, which represents bourgeois dictatorship in a masked form. Unlike bourgeois democracy, proletarian democracy openly admits its class character and aims avowedly at the suppression of the exploiters in the interests of the overwhelming majority of the population. It deprives its class enemies of political rights and grants to the proletariat a number of temporary privileges over the diffused, petty bourgeois peasantry in order that its role of leadership may be consolidated. At the same time the Soviets represent an all-embracing form of unity and organization of the masses under the leadership of the proletariat, and consequently they in fact draw the masses of the proletariat and peasantry into the struggle and into the work of building up socialism, and into the practical work of administering the State. In all their work they rely on the mass organizations of the working class, put into practice the principles of broad democracy among the toilers and are immeasurably closer in touch with the masses than any other form of government. The right of electing and recalling delegates, the combination of the executive with the legislature, the electoral system based on production and not on place of residence (election by the workshops, factories, etc.) — all this marks the sharp difference that exists between the bourgeois parliamentary republic and the Soviet dictatorship of the proletariat.

Bourgeois democracy, while formally recognizing the equality of all citizens before the law, is really based on crying, class, material and economic inequality. By leaving inviolable and even strengthening the capitalist class monopoly of the means of production and other vital forms of material wealth, bourgeois democracy converts this formal equality before the law, and these democratic rights and liberties into a juridical fiction as far as the exploited classes and particularly the proletariat is concerned, and consequently, it utilizes them as a means of deceiving and subjugating the masses. Hence, it is capitalist democracy. On the other hand, the Soviet State, by depriving the exploiting classes of the means of production and securing for the working class houses, public buildings, printing plants, means of travelling, etc., first and foremost guarantees to the working class and to the toilers generally the material conditions for the exercise of their rights.

In the domain of formal rights, the Soviet State, by depriving the exploiters and the enemies of the people of political rights, for the first time utterly abolishes inequality among citizens, which, under the exploiting systems was based on differences of sex, religion and nationality; in this sphere it establishes an equality that exists in no other country in the world. At the same time, the dictatorship of the proletariat steadily lays down the material basis for the actual realization of this equality by such measures as the emancipation of women, facilitating the industrialization of former colonies, etc.

Soviet democracy, therefore, is proletarian democracy, democracy of the toiling masses, democracy directed against the exploiters.

The Soviet State presupposes the complete disarming of the bourgeoisie and the concentration of arms in the hands of the proletariat: it is the State of the armed proletariat. The organization of the armed forces is carried out on the basis of the class principle, which corresponds to the whole system of the proletarian dictatorship and guarantees the role of leadership to the industrial proletariat. This organization rests on revolutionary discipline but at the same time provides for the maintenance of close and constant contact between the warriors in the Red Army and Navy and the masses of the toilers, and for their participation in the administration of the country and in the work of building up socialism.

The victorious proletariat utilizes the conquest of power as a lever of economic revolution, i.e., the revolutionary transformation of the property relationships of capitalism into relationships of the socialist method of production. The starting point of this great economic revolution is the expropriation of the landlords and capitalists, i.e., the conversion of the monopolized property of the bourgeoisie into the property of a proletarian State.

In this sphere the Communist International advances the following as the fundamental tasks of the proletarian dictatorship:

1) Industry, Transport and Communication Services.

(a) The confiscation and proletarian nationalization of all large industrial enterprises (factories, works, mines, electrical power stations) in the hands of private capital and the transference of all State and municipal enterprises to the Soviets.

(b) The confiscation and proletarian nationalization of private capitalist railways and waterways and the air transport services (commercial and passenger air fleets) and the transference of State and municipal transport services to the Soviets.

(c) The confiscation and proletarian nationalizatoin of private capitalist means of communication (telegraphs, telephones, and radio) with the transference of state and municipal communication services to the Soviets.

2) Agriculture.

(a) The confiscation and proletarian nationalization of all large landed properties in town and country (private, church monasterial and other lands) with the transference of State and municipal landed properties including forests, minerals, lakes, rivers, etc., to the Soviets; to be followed subsequently by the nationalization of all the land.

(b) The confiscation of all property connected with production belonging to large landed estates, such as: buildings, machinery and other stock, cattle, enterprises for the working up of agricultural produce (large flour mills, dairy farms, fruit and vegetable drying works, etc.).

(c) All large estates, particularly model estates and those which are of considerable economic importance to be transferred to the management of the organs of the proletarian dictatorship and the Soviet farm organizations.

(d) Allotments of land, particularly those which have been cultivated by tenant farmers, to be handed over for the use of poor and partly also of middle peasants (the amount of land to be so transferred to the peasantry to be determined by economic expediency as well as by the necessity to neutralize the peasantry and to win them over to the side of the proletariat. This must necessarily differ in accordance with different circumstances).

(e) The prohibition of the sale and purchase of land. Breach of this law to be vigorously prosecuted.

(f) To combat usury. The annulment of all transactions imposing conditions of bondage. The annulment of all debts of the exploited strata of the peasantry.

(g) The organization of credit schemes for the improvement of agriculture.

(h) Financial and other support of agricultural cooperative societies collective farms and communes.

3) Trade and Credit.

(a) The proletarian nationalization of private banks (including the transfer to the proletarian State of the whole of the gold reserve, securities, deposits, etc.) and the transference to the proletarian State of State, municipal, etc., banks.

(b) The centralization of banking; the subordination of all nationalized big banks to the Central State Bank.

(c) The nationalization of wholesale trade (warehouses, elevators, stores, stocks of goods, etc.) and their transference to the organs of the Soviet State.

(d) The monopoly of foreign trade.

(e) The repudiation of State debts to foreign and home capitalists.

4) So-called "Intellectual Production."

(a) The nationalization of printing plants.

(b) The monopoly of newspaper and book publishing.

(c) The nationalization of the big Cinema enterprises, theatres, etc.

5) Housing.

(a) The confiscation of big house property.

(b) Confiscated houses to be transferred to the administration of local Soviets.

(c) Workers to be removed to the bourgeois quarters.

(d) Palaces and large private and public premises to be placed at the disposal of working class organizations.

(6) The Working Day and Workers' Management of Industry.

(a) The roduction of the working day to 7 hours and the regulation of the working day in harmful occupations with a view to still further reduction.

(b) The organization of workers' management of industry. The establishment of state organs of management with provision for the close cooperation of the trade unions in the management of industry.

In carrying out all these tasks the dictatorship of the proletariat must bear in mind the following postulates:

(1) The complete abolition of private property in land and the nationalization of the land cannot be brought about immediately in the more developed capitalist countries where the principle of private property has become deep-rooted among broad strata of the peasantry. In such countries the nationalization of all the land can only be brought about gradually by means of a series of transitional measures. Nationalization of industry should not, as a rule, be applied to small and middle-sized enterprises (peasants, small artisans, handicraftsmen, small and medium shopkeepers, etc.). First of all because in the first phases of the dictatorship the proletariat in power may not have sufficient organizing forces at its disposal for the purpose of destroying capitalism and at the same time to organize contacts with the small and medium individual units of production on a new socialist basis. Secondly, because the proletariat cannot but draw a strict distinction between the property of the simple commodity producer working for himself, who can and must be gradually brought into the groove of socialist construction, and the property of the capitalist exploiter, the liquidation of which is an essential condition for any worker of socialist construction.

(2) The existence of a considerable number of small units of production (primarily, peasant farms, farmers' enterprises, small artisans, small shopkeepers, etc.), not only in colonies, semi-colonies and economically backward countries where the petty bourgeois masses represent the overwhelming majority of the population, but even in centres of capitalist world industry (the United States of America, Germany, and to a certain extent also England), makes it necessary to some extent, in the first stage of development, to preserve market forms of economic contacts, the money system, etc. The existence of a variety of economic forms (from socialized large-scale industry to small peasant and artisan enterprises), of a variety of class groups having a variety of stimuli for their economic activities and the existence of a variety of interests corresponding to these economic forms demands that the proletariat, in its management of industry, shall properly combine large-scale socialist industry with the small-scale economy of the peasant simple commodity producers, who are linked up with each other and with the towns by market relationships. For that reason, if diffused, peasant labor occupies a relatively important place in the general economy of the country, market relationships will occupy a correspondingly important place in that economy, and planned economic management will occupy a correspondingly minor place. The general economic plan will be to a greater extent based on forecasts of unorganized economic relationships. On the contrary, if small-scale economy occupies a relatively minor place, social labor will be correspondingly larger. The concentration and socialization of the bulk of the means of production will be greater; the extent of market relations will be smaller. Planned economy will play a much greater part than unorganized economy and the methods of directly planning production and distribution will be applied on a larger and more universal scale.

If the proletarian dictatorship carries out a correct policy, the technical and economic superiority of large-scale, socialized production, the centralization of all the most important economic key-positions (industry, transport, large agricultural enterprises, banks, etc.) in the hands of the proletarian state, planned management of industry and the power of the state apparatus as a whole (the budget, taxes, administrative legislation and legislation generally) will lead to the continuous and systematic squeezing out of private capital as well as of the new outcrops of capitalism which emerge with the development of simple commodity producing economy in the period of more or less free commercial and market relationships. At the same time, by organizing peasant farming on cooperative lines and as a result of the growth of collective forms of economy, the great bulk of the peasant enterprises will be systematically drawn into the general system of developing socialism. The outwardly capitalistic forms and methods of economic activity which are connected with market relationships (money form of accounting, payment for labor in money, buying and selling, credit and banks, etc) serve as levers of the social revolution in so far as they, to an increasing degree, serve the consistent socialist type of enterprise, i. e., the socialist section of economy.

Thus, in the conditions of proletarian dictatorship, and providing the Soviet state carries out a correct policy, market relationships, in the course of other development, bear within themselves the seeds of their own destruction: by helping to squeeze out private capital, by changing the character of peasant economy,—while the means of production are becoming more and more centralized and concentrated in the hands of the proletarian state, they, at the same time, help to destroy all market relationships.

(3) In view of the possibility of capitalist military intervention and of prolonged counter-revolutionary wars against the dictatorship, of the for a war-Communist economic proletariat, the necessity may arise policy ("War Communism") which is nothing more nor less than the organization of rational consumption for the purpose of defence at a time when there has been a sharp decline in the productive forces of the country, and when the individualist stimuli to production of small producers are seriously disturbed (the system of confiscation and requisition). Although this policy undermines the material basis of that strata within the country that is hostile to the working class, secures a rational distribution of available stocks and facilities the military struggle of the proletarian dictatorship,—which gives it its historical justification, nevertheless, it cannot be regarded as the "normal" economic policy of the proletarian dictatorship.

The dictatorship of the proletariat is a continuation of the class struggle under new conditions. The dictatorship of the proletariat is a stubborn fight,—bloody and bloodless, violent and peaceful, military and economic, pedagogical and administrative, against the forces and traditions of the old society: against external capitalist enemies, against the remnants of the exploiting classes within the country, against the outcrops of the new bourgeoisie which arises on the basis of still existing commodity production.

In the conditions prevailing during the liquidation of the civil war, the class struggle continues in other forms, primarily, in the form of the struggle between the survivals of previous economic systems on the one hand and socialist forms of economy on the other; and these forms of struggle undergo a change at various stages of socialist development.

In the first stage of the proletarian dictatorship the policy of the proletariat towards other classes and social groups within the country is determined by the following postulates:

1. The big bourgeoisie and big landlords, and the loyal adherents, the officer class, the generals and the higher bureaucracy, are consistent enemies of the working class against whom it is necessary to wage ruthless war. The organizing skill of a certain section of these may be utilized, but as a rule, this is possible only after the dictatorship has been consolidated and after all conspiracies and rebellions of exploiters have been decisively crushed.

2. In regard to the technical intelligentsia, which has been brought up on bourgeois traditions, the proletariat must ruthlessly suppress every counter-revolutionary action in their ranks but at the same time bear in mind the necessity for utilizing this skilled social force for the purposes of socialist construction. In the process of developing this work of construction,—economic, technical and cultural, on a wide social scale, the proletariat must systematically win over the technical intelligentsia to its side, subject it to its ideological influence and secure its close cooperation in the work of social transformation.

3. In regard to the peasantry, the task of a Communist Party is to rely on the agricultural proletariat but strive to win over to its side all the exploited and toiling strata of the rural districts. The victorious proletariat must draw strict lines of distinction between the various groups of the peasantry, properly judge the relative importance of each and render every support to the propertyless and semi-proletarian strata of the peasantry. It must transfer to the latter part of the land of the big landlords, help them in their struggles against usurer capital, etc. Moreover, the proletariat must neutralize the intermediary strata of the peasantry and actively repel every attack on the part of the rural bourgeois,—which enters into alliance with the landlords. As its dictatorship becomes consolidated and socialist construction develops the proletariat must abandon the policy of neutralization and adopt the policy of direct alliance with the masses of middle peasantry; but it must refrain from adopting the point of view of sharing power in any way.

4. The petty urban bourgeoisie which constantly oscillates between extreme reaction and sympathy for the proletariat, must also be neutralized and as far as possible won over to the side of the proletariat. This can be achieved by permitting it to retain its small property and a certain amount of freedom of trade and by abolishing usurious credit, etc.

In the course of fulfilment of all these tasks of the proletarian dictatorship a radical change takes place in the tasks and functions of the mass organizations and primarily of the labor organizations. Under capitalism, the mass labor organizations in which the broadest strata of the proletariat are for the first time organized and trained, i. e. the trade (industrial) unions, represent the principal weapon in the industrial struggle and subsequently in the mass struggle against trustified capital and its state. Under the proletarian dictatorship, these organizations become transformed into the principal lever of the dictatorship, into a school of Communism which draws overwhelming masses of the proletariat into the work of the socialist management of industry. Thus, in so far as they promote from their ranks leaders in the work of construction, in so far as they draw into this work the broad strata of the proletariat and insofar as they set themselves the task of combating the bureaucratic distortions which inevitably arise as the result of the inadequate cultural development of the masses and of the operation of class influences alien to the proletariat, the trade unions become the backbone of the economic organization of the proletarian state.

Notwithstanding reformist utopias, cooperative organizations under capitalism are doomed to play a relatively modest part and in the environment of the general conditions of the capitalist system not infrequently degenerate and become transformed into a mere overweight to capitalism. Under the dictatorship of the proletariat however, they may become the most important units of the distributing apparatus. Finally, peasant agricultural co-operative societies (sale, purchasing, credit and producing co-operatives) with proper guidance and providing the influence of the toiling sections of the rural population who support the dictatorship of the proletariat is maintained in them, may become one of the principal organizational means of linking up town and country. To the extent that they are able to maintain their existence at all under capitalism, co-operative peasant enterprises under the capitalist system inevitably become transformed into capitalist enterprises, for they are dependent upon capitalist industry, capitalist banks and capitalist environment. Under the proletarian dictatorship however, they develop amidst a different system of relationships and depend upon proletarian industry proletarian banks, etc. Thus, providing the proletarian conducts a proper policy, providing the class struggle against the capitalist elements in the rural districts is systematically carried on and providing socialist industry exercises guidance over it, agricultural co-operation may become one of the most important levers for the socialist transformation and collectivization of the countryside.

In the course of all this militant and constructive work carried on through the medium of every variety of proletarian organization (primarily the trade unions and Soviets), which indeed should serve as the levers of the Soviet state and link it up with the broad masses of every stratum of the working class, the proletariat secures and exercises unity of will and action by means of the leading role played by the Communist Party in the system of proletarian dictatorship.

The Party of the proletariat relies directly on the trade unions and a number of other organizations which embrace the masses of the workers and through them the peasantry (Soviets, Co-operative societies, Young Communist League etc.), and by means of this system of levers guides the Soviet system as a whole. The proletariat can fulfill its role as organizer of the new society only if the Soviet government is loyally supported by all the mass organizations, only, if the unity of class will is maintained and only under the guidance of the party.

The role of organizer of the new human society presupposes that the proletariat will become culturally ripe, that it will transform its own nature, advance from its ranks increasing numbers of men and women capable of acquiring a knowledge of science, technique and administration for the purpose of building up socialism and a new socialist culture.

In destroying the monopoly of the capitalist class in the means of production, the working class must also destroy its monopoly of education, i. e., it must take possession of all the schools, from the elementary schools right up to the highest universities. It is particularly important for the proletariat to train members of the working class as experts in the sphere of production (engineers, technicians, organizers, accountants, etc.), as well as in the spheres of science, military affairs, etc. Simultaneously the cultural level of the masses of the proletariat must be raised; their political education and their general standard of knowledge must be raised; their technical skill and their abilities for public work and administration must be developed and the survivals of bourgeois and petty bourgeois prejudices, etc., must be combated.

A particularly important task in connection with the fight against bourgeois prejudices and superstitions is that of combating religion —which is opium for the people. The struggle against religion must be conducted systematically and persistently. The proletarian government must abolish all state support of the church which is an agency of the dominant classes and imperialist cliques. It must prevent all church interference in state organized education and ruthlessly crush the counter-revolutionary activities of ecclesiastical organizations. While carrying on anti-religious propaganda by all the means at its disposal—although permitting freedom of worship and abolishing the privileged position ocupied by previously predominant religions—the Soviet government must at the same time reorganize all its educational work on the basis of scientific, materialist philosophy.

The International proletarian revolution is a combination of processes varying in time and character—purely proletarian revolutions; revolutions of a bourgeois-democratic type which grow into proletarian revolutions; wars for national liberation; colonial revolutions. The world dictatorship of the proletariat comes only as the final outcome of the revolutionary process.

The uneven development of capitalism, which became more accentuated in the period of imperialism, has given rise to a variety of types of capitalism, to differences in stage of ripeness in various countries and to a variety of and specific conditions of revolutionary process. These circumstances make it absolutely inevitable that the proletariat will come to power by a variety of ways and degrees of rapidity; that in a number of countries certain transitional stages leading to the dictatorship of the proletariat and a variety of forms of building up socialism will be necessary.

The various conditions and ways by which the proletariat will achieve its dictatorship in various countries may be divided schematically into three main types:

Countries of highly developed capitalism (United States, Germany, Great Britain, etc.) with powerful productive forces, a high degree of centralization of production, relatively small significance of small production and with a long established bourgeois, democratic, political system. In these countries, the fundamental political demand of the program is direct transition to the dictatorship of the proletariat. In the sphere of economics the most characteristic are: The expropriation of the whole of large-scale production; the organization of a large number of state Soviet farms, only a small share of the land to be transferred to the peasantry; unorganized market relationships to be permitted only on a small scale. Socialist development generally and the collectivization of peasant farming in particular to proceed at a rapid rate.

Countries with a medium development of capitalism (Russia up to 1917, Poland, etc.), having considerable survivals of semi-feudal relationships in agriculture, a certain minimum of industry, sufficient for successful socialist construction and with as yet incomplete bourgeois democratic reforms. In these countries the bourgeois-democratic revolution may grow into social revolution. Here democratic demands may be advanced which, in the process of the struggle, may grow into the demand for a workers' revolution. In these countries the agrarian revolution plays a more or less important part. The dictatorship of the proletariat may not be brought about immediately, but in the process of the bourgeois democratic revolution growing into the social revolution, i. e., in the process of transition from the democratic dictatorship of the proletariat and the peasantry to the socialist dictatorship of the proletariat and the peasantry to the socialist dictatorship of the proletariat. In the process of expropriating large landed property a considerable portion of the confiscated land is placed at the disposal of the peasantry. The extent of market relationships is considerable. The task of organizing the peasantry in co-operative societies and later to combine them in production is one of the most important tasks in the work of socialist construction. The rate of this work of construction is much slower than it will be in the countries in the first mentioned group.

Colonial and semi-colonial countries (China, India, etc.). In these countries industry is in an embryonic stage, sometimes in a fairly well developed stage, but inadequate for independent socialist construction. Feudal medieval relationships predominate in the economics as well as in their political superstructure, and the important industries, commerce, banks and principal means of transport, etc., are concentrated in the hands of foreign imperialist groups. The most important task in such countries is to fight against feudalism and consistently to conduct the agrarian peasant revolution on the one hand, and to fight for national independence against the foreign imperialists on the other. The transition to the dictatorship of the proletariat in such countries is possible only through a series of preparatory stages, only after the bourgeois-democratic revolution has grown into social revolution. Successful socialist construction will be possible only on the condition that direct support is obtained from countries in which the proletarian dictatorship is established.

In the present epoch, in which the task of the proletariat capturing power has come to the front in developed capitalist countries, in which the dictatorship of the proletariat is already established in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics and represents a factor of world significance, the movement for liberation in colonies and semi-colonial countries brought into being by the penetration of world capitalism into these countries, may—notwithstanding the unripeness of social relationships in these countries—lead to their socialist development, provided they receive the support and assistance of the proletarian dictatorship and the international proletarian movement in general.

The special conditions of the revolutionary struggle prevailing in colonial and semi-colonial countries, the inevitably long period of struggle required for the democratic dictatorship of the proletariat and the peasantry and for the growth of this dictatorship into the dictatorship of the proletariat, and, finally, the decisive significance of the national aspect of the struggle impose upon the Communist parties of all countries special tasks which represent preparatory stages to the general tasks of the dictatorship of the proletariat. The Communist International considers the most important of these special tasks to be:

1. To overthrow the rule of the feudal rulers, of the landlord democracy and of foreign imperialism.

2. To establish the democratic-dictatorship of the proletariat and the peasantry.

3. To secure complete national independence and national unity.

4. To nationalize the large enterprises (industrial, transport, banking and others) belonging to the imperialists.

5. Confiscation of landlord, church and monasterial lands. Nationalization of all the land.

6. Introduction of the 8-hour day.

7. The establishment of Soviets of Workers and Peasants Deputies.

Colonial revolutions and movements for national emancipation are of enormous significance from the standpoint of the struggle against imperialism and of the conquest of power by the working class. Colonies and semi-colonies are of importance in the transitional period also for the reason that they represent the world rural districts in relation to the industrial countries, which are the world towns, and that the problem of organizing socialist world economy is the problem of relation towards the former colonies of imperialism. Consequently the establishment of a fraternal militant alliance with the toiling masses of the colonies is one of the principal tasks to be carried out by the world industrial proletariat.

Thus, in rousing the workers in the home countries for the struggle for the dictatorship of the proletariat, the progress of the world revolution simultaneously rouses hundreds of millions of colonial workers and peasants to the fight against foreign imperialism. In view of the existence of socialist centers represented by Soviet Republics of increasing economic power the colonies which break away from imperialism economically gravitate and gradually combine with the industrial centers of world socialism, are drawn into the groove of socialist construction, thus avoiding the capitalist phase of development as the predominating system and obtain opportunities for rapid economic and cultural development. The peasant Soviets in the backward ex-colonies and the Soviets of workers and peasants in the more developed type of ex-colony group themselves politically around the centers of proletarian dictatorship and join the general system of the growing federation of Soviet Republics and consequently the system of the world proletarian dictatorship.

The development of socialism as the new method of production obtains world-wide scope.

JAILS BROTHER FOR PICKETING

Henry Sazer, who yesterday declared that he intends to picket the Truefood Restaurant, owned by his brother, as a demonstration of sympathy to the workers on strike there, was arrested yesterday while marching before the place, together with the two union pickets usually permitted by the police.

In spite of being previously informed of the fact that the police would permit no more than two pickets, Sazer nevertheless determined to join the line.

Is Arrested

A huge crowd gathered in the Times Square section where the restaurant is situated. It watched Sazer as he patrolled the place carrying large signs denouncing his brother and calling for a boycott on the anti-labor place.

Several policemen at first tried to intimidate Sazer, but he insisted on his right to picket the place, disavowing any direct connections with the Waiters' and Waitresses' Union. He nevertheless maintained his own right to picket in sympathy with the strikers, police decided to arrest him.

Pose As Labor's Friends

The strike against this firm, the members of which made their money through the patronage of labor sympathizers, pose as semi-radicals, according to Sazer's statement. They own three restaurants, all of which are on strike. They are located at 158 W. 44th St., 110 W. 40th St., and 522 Seventh Ave. The strike is now in the third week.

ATLANTA, Ga., July 11 (UP).—W. R. Manley, former president of the Bankers Trust Company which failed two years ago taking more than 80 Georgia and Florida banks with it, must serve from nine to ten years in the state penitentiary for fraudulent insolvency, the Georgia supreme court ruled today.

FUR UNION WAGE RAISE DRIVE ON

Wkr's in Right Wing Shops Join Campaign

The first repercussions of the drive for July wage raises now being conducted by the Joint Board Furriers Union, were heard yesterday when, as a result of the success the campaign is so far registering, the workers in two shops of the Associated Fur Manufacturers went out on strike after their demand for wage increases had been refused by the bosses.

Despite the fact that the shops of the Associated all have so-called agreements with the right wing Joint Council and do not recognize the Joint Board, the ability of the Joint Board to call and win several shop strikes in other shops caused the workers here to put up spontaneously these demands to their own bosses. In prosecuting the drive the Joint Board had thrown out the slogan to all workers in the trade to fight their bosses for the July raises.

The two shops in which the workers struck are Bloom and Gerber, 144 W. 27th St., and Brownstein and Wollin, 330 Seventh Ave.

Seven workers in the former factory and one of the leading members of the Joint Board, Irving Potash, were arrested yesterday morning by detectives of the industrial squad who were called to the bosses' rescue by a right wing hireling of the Joint Council, Sam Weiner.

The events leading up to the arrests were related as follows: The workers of Bloom and Gerber's shop were telling Potash that they had decided to send a committee to their employer, who is a member of the board of directors of the Associated, and demand from him a wage raise for the entire shop. Weiner, a right wing agent in the factory heard this and immediately ran to call up the police. By this time the workers had received the bosses' reply that no raise would be granted and were already picketing the shop, when the police squad arrived and literally forced them back into the shop.

Those arrested were later haled before Magistrate Norris in the Jefferson Market Court. Potash and another worker who prefers his name not mentioned, were fined five dollars each, while the others were dismissed.

Cheers Up Boss

The workers of the shop of Brownstein and Wellin declared a strike when they were refused a wage raise, and declared their determination to picket the place till the bosses give in.

Later in the day the entire office force of business agents of the Joint Council came to Bloom and Gerber and assured them before the workers in the shop that they would not permit the workers to ask for any more raise or any other improvement in working standards.

SMITH IN PLEDGE TO BIG BUSINESS

Pick Morgan Bankers to Lead Drive

Governor Alfred E. Smith, in an interview given out to the press yesterday, boldly declared that the campaign of which he is to take personal direction will be based upon a determined effort to win the support of the big business interests of the country

In conformity with this plan the Tammany leader announced his choice of John J. Raskob, chairman of the finance committee of the finance committee of the General Motors Company, as head of the national committee of the democratic party and Herbert H. Lehman, head of several Morgan-controlled banks of New York City, as the treasurer of the committee.

Raskob, who is a republican, in a public declaration intended obviously for G. O. P. consumption yesterday assured them that Smith would not disturb the present status of the tariff.

International Relief Children Greeted At Unity Camp Reception

WINGDALE, N. Y., July 11.—All the children that were registered for the first two weeks at the Workers' International Relief camp arrived safely on Monday afternoon at their camp grounds at Wingdale, N. Y. An enthusiastic reception was given them by the campers and workers of the Unity Co-operative camp. When the children arrived in two big busses they were received with banners, cheers and songs.

The workers left their jobs and the campers came out of their resting places or the cool water to join in the reception. Long before the children arrived they were waiting patiently in the hot afternoon sun along the road which the busses had to pass. The construction workers carried a flag greeting the children of the Workers International Relief camp.

Other banners read "The Workers Child for the Working Class," etc. When the children stepped out of the busses everyone sang the International

FINANCE CAPITAL MODIFIES POLICY

Also Speeds Drive on Workers' Wages

By JOHN L. SHERMAN

Informed circles here are viewing with considerable doubt the announcement that the Chicago Federal Reserve Bank has increased its rediscount rate from 4 1/2 to 5 per cent primarily as a further curb on the speculative wave which has flowed over the country particularly on the New York stock market.

It is admitted here that the attempt to decrease brokers' loans, which form the basis for speculation in securities may be one of the factors in the present policy of the Federal Reserve Bank. It is pointed out, however, that previous to this month these loans had decreased by nearly a half billion from an earlier peak. The reason for the present policy must be looked for in another direction, it is stated.

Aimed At "Prosperity"

The policy of the Federal Reserve Bank which for over four years has been to maintain "easy money," was motivated, it is declared, by the desire to maintain "prosperity." Easy money, free credit, extension of installment buying, these it was believed would tend to maintain the upward trend of business.

The general aim, it is understood, is to restrict credit, force down prices and hence wages and thus "solve" the critical price question at the expense of the working class. This is the meaning of the increased discount rates. Other reserve banks will follow the lead of the Chicago branch which in the past has been the first to put into operation any changes.

6 "PARTY DAYS" CALLED IN N. Y.

Election Main Issue For Discussion

Six "Party Days" have been designated by District 2 of the Workers (Communist) Party, according to a statement issued last night by John J. Ballam, acting district organier and Bert Miller, organization secretary.

These "Party Days," called for the purpose of discussing the major party campaigns, are designated for July 23, 24, 25, 30, 31 and August 1.

The statement says in part:

"Many of our comrades are engaged in activities in the union and Party auxiliary organizations which take a great deal of their time and energy and fail, on this account, to attend to Party units.

"The major activity of our Party for the coming months will be the election campaign and it is for the purpose of clarification and discussion that these 'Party Days' are being called."

Speakers Conference To Be Held Saturday

A speakers conference of District 2 will be held Saturday at 2 p. m. at the Workers School, 26-28 Union Square.

All Workers Party speakers must attend this conference. D. Benjamin, district agitprop director, will lead the discussion.

WORKERS PARTY CITY ELECTION DRIVE SETS OFF

First Sprint For Big Signature Quota

Evidence that the election campaign of the Workers (Communist) Party in New York State and particularly in New York City was swinging into mid-season form was had yesterday with the announcement through Bert Miller, organization secretary of District 2, that a number of successful meetings have already been held in the drive to secure 25,000 signatures to put the local candidates of the Party on the ballot.

Running Start

While the full force in the campaign may not get under way before next week, it was announced, various sections have already begun with the house to house campaign to secure the necessary signatures. Those in charge report a greater degree of enthusiasm and interest in the present political campaign than was manifest in previous years when the value of political activity had not yet been so fully realized.

At a section meeting held in the Harlem headquarters of the Party, 143 E. 103rd St., last week preliminary plans were laid for the carrying out the campaign in that district. Signature squads were appointed under a program of activity which includes a seven-day drive until the necessary quota is secured. Every member is to report daily at 7 p. m. for work in the evening. On Saturday the drive begins at 1:30 p. m. The Sunday work begins at 10 a. m. and lasts until 1 p. m.

Reports indicate an enthusiastic response to the work which is to be strengthened this week.

Section 1 Meeting

At a special meeting of the membership of Section 1, downtown Manhattan, the response, and the spirit and willingness displayed, has proven again that the Party members are fully aware of the importance of the campaign and are ready to do their best to make the campaign a success.

Definite plans of how to carry the campaign into the shops, factories and the residential sections, as well as how to extend the plan of the campaign within the party were presented.

A report by a district representative on the immediate technical methods of approach in the process of signature getting was taken up.

URGE WORKERS ATTEND BIG 'DAILY' AFFAIR

Mass Demonstration Urged Saturday

An appeal to all class-conscious workers of New York to attend the great concert at the Coney Island Stadium Saturday night was issued last night by the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party. The appeal, which urges that the concert being arranged under the joint auspices of The DAILY WORKER and the Freiheit be made a mass political demonstration, follows:

"Comrades! Fellow Workers!

"The two greatest dailies of our party, The DAILY WORKER and the Freiheit, have organized a great concert and rally to take place at the Coney Island Stadium on Saturday evening, July 14. This concert is more than an ordinary entertainment, just as July 14 is more than an ordinary day.

"July Fourteenth is Bastille Day. This day is written with letters of fire in the history of the great French Revolution. It is the day when the masses of France, rising against their feudal oppressors took by storm and partly destroyed the formidable political prison of their old rulers, the citadel of Bastille. Our comrades of The DAILY WORKER and the Freiheit did well to choose this revolutionary day for their undertaking.

"We appeal to every class-conscious worker to join the demonstration. The concert and rally is planned as a means to secure funds for our papers. This alone should be sufficient ground to make it a success. Our dailies are the greatest weapon of the working class in all its struggles.

"More Business in Government"

When John J. Raskob declares that "Governor Smith is a strong advocate of less government in business and more business in government," he speaks with the unquestionable authority of the man who has inherited the mantle of Elbert H. Gary and who is recognized as one of the leading spokesmen of big business. If anything further were needed to prove Raskob as an authority on the Tammany governor, there is the added fact that the latter-day Smith is the full-blown flower of Raskob's planting and nurture. Smith boasts of the fact and the records confirm him.

The declaration of Raskob is not an idle one. The Morgan industrialist and banker has no time for trifling. Less government in business, more business in government. In this slogan, Raskob, newly named chairman of the democratic national committee, has summarized not only the full program of Al Smith but of the whole democratic party. And, of course, of the republican party as well.

Less government in business. To millions of deluded, hene exploited, wage slaves and poverty-stricken farmers, this phrase, as it is intended, will still mean less interference with "prosperity," less tampering with "efficiency," less red tape. For the most part they will read and nod a sort of passive assent. To the small minority comprising the ruling class in the country, the phrase is intended to carry the full measure of assurance already indicated by Raskob that Smith will do the right thing; that the tariff will not be molested, that nothing will be done to interfere with the supertrustification process now going on; that the "government," in a word, will take orders.

More business in government. This is even more important. For the powers that be to doubt even for a moment that business would not be free to enter government at will would be disastrous to the prospects of any candidate. But how, more business in government. More than Andrew Mellon in the treasury? More than Dwight W. Morrow in Mexico? More than Wall Street already become the capital of the United States?

The explanation of Raskob's paradoxical remark is not as difficult as may appear on first sight. As was recently pointed out, the control over government by big business through the democratic party and particularly through Al Smith, has been indirect rather than immediate as with the republican party. Big business has worked in Al Smith's state and Jimmie Walker's city through the public service commissions, through legislative bodies, thru other appointees of the "democracy" rather than directly as in the case of Mellon, Morrow, Daugherty, Fall, and the others of the republican regime.

Al Smith has at various times hedged a bit about carrying out orders, notably two years ago when the Morgan-controlled General Electric Company desired to put over its state power steal. At the time they had to be content with a postponement and a temporary compromise worked out between them and Al Smith by that great "Inquisitor," Samuel Untermeyer. At another time in his relations with Jerry Dahl of the B-M.T., Smith has even "double-crossed" the great ones, a fact happily now atoned for again through the instrumentality of the omnipresent Untermeyer.

So what Raskob means is, that from now on business will not have to enter through the side door to control the democratic party and the "untainted" Al Smith. Their relations will be direct, immediate and in the open. Less government in business; more business in government in business, a fitting slogan for the greatest political hypocrite on the modern stage.

Porter Must Be Saved.

John Porter has sent an urgent call for immediate aid. The military authorities at Fort Adams are using the most extreme means to crush this militant's fighting spirit.

This appeal from Porter is no sign of weakness. In a recent letter, after having been thrown into solitary confinement, he wrote: "I am ready to give my life, if necessary, for the working class." Now, he realizes that there are only two roads to freedom. First, surrender to the enemies of his class and complete repudiation of his principles. Second, the nation-wide protests of the workers.

The army czars do not wish to permit John Porter to defend his cause and thereby to expose the role of the army in a court-martial scene open to the public. The military authorities have kept him in prison for almost a month under inhuman conditions without trial or even any charge against him. During this time, they have resorted to increasingly brutal methods to crush his militant spirit. Even death would be preferable to a continuation of Porter's present existence.

Porter refuses to desert the cause of the working class. His hope is that the working class will come to his aid.

Everything possible on the legal side is being done by the International Labor Defense. The attorneys retained by the International Labor Defense are now seeking to force the authorities to bring him to trial at once.

But there should be no illusions about the sort of "justice" to be expected from a military court-martial, and unless action by the workers begins at once Porter will be faced with a living death in a military prison compared with which the frightful lot of other prisoners may be considered tame.

The Porter case is another indication of the rise of class consciousness in the army, which was shown for the first time in Hawaii in 1925 by the organization of a Young Workers (Communist) League at Schofield Barracks. For their efforts in this work, Grouch and Trumbull received sentences of 40 and 26 years, later reduced to 3 and 1 years through mass protests of the working class under the leadership of the Communists.

The imprisonment of Porter is of special significance because of his activities in the New Bedford strke. The case is again significant in its clear portrayal of the role of the military forces in industrial conflicts.

Even though American capitalism as yet faces no real danger from the rising class consciousness of its soldiers, the military authorities are sufficiently alert to make an example of Porter.

The army intends to use this as a test case. The workers must take up the challenge and by mass demonstrations notify the war department that the issue of John Porter will resound about the earth.

Thousands of workers participated in a mass protest meeting in New Bedford a few days ago, demanding Porter's release. There will be a huge protest meeting in Boston Sunday, and others have been called.

The voice of the workers throughout the country must be raised!

Save Porter for the working class!

BIG PROFITS FOR TELEPHONE BARONS

(Federated Press.)

The $185,000,000 additional stock offered to shareholders in the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. calls attention to the extraordinary growth of this corporation's annual contribution to the investing class. Within the last decade the annual cash dividends disbursed by the A. T. & T. have just about [illegible], reflecting profits multiplied [illegible] over since 1918.

The cash dividends to the owners of this great communications trust amounted in 1927 to $97,379,934. This year they will run to more than [illegible] while within a year they will exceed $116,000,000. Ten years ago the annual dividends amounted to [illegible].

Fat Profits.

The telephone trust's regular method of expanding its capital is to offer stockholders the right to subscribe to a certain number of shares at par. As the shares always have a market value considerably over par such an offering really includes what amounts to a stock dividend.

This year's offering gave the right to subscribe to 1 new share for each 6 shares held. The present market value of a share of American T. & T. stock is about $178 which makes the right to subscribe worth something more than $12 a share. These rights have been selling on the stock exchange at $10 to $16. Altogether the transaction may be reckoned as a gift of more than $125,000,000 to the stockholders.

Much publicity is being given the elaborate machinery to make sure that every one of the 430,000 stockholders hears of the opportunity to subscribe to new shares of stock. To handle the correspondence the financial department is expanded from 250 to about 1,000 chiefly by hiring college boys out to make money during vacation. The object of all this noise is to convince the public that the ownership of the telephone trust is widely distributed among small investors.

The stockholders average about 26 shares apiece. This average at par means an investment of $2,600 in a single block of stock, which puts it considerably above the average wage earner or salaried worker. And there is some heavy concentration of ownership in the stockholder list.

Morgan Busy.

The Sun Life Assurance Co. has a block of 76,711 shares. It is only 1 of 20 holding from 9,000 shares up. The most interesting figure in the stockholder list is George F. Baker, chairman of J. P. Morgan's First National Bank of N. Y. Baker holds personally 53,322 shares of A. T. & T. stock. Holdings of 31,391 shares by D. T. Waters and 21,000 shares by F. H. Pierson, both of Baker's bank, are generally assumed part of his interest in the telephone trust.

Drawing Music from the Air

An Exclusive Interview With Professor Leon Theremin

By A. B. MAGIL

PROF. LEON THEREMIN led the way into the modestly furnished bedroom of his suite at the Plaza Hotel. With me was William Abrams of the Freiheit, and it was lucky, for Prof. Theremin speaks no English, I speak no Russian and Abrams — a versatile fellow — speaks both.

It sounds a little incongruous to call him professor — he looks so boyish. Tall and slender, with close-cropped brownish-blond hair and a small mustache, he looks several years younger than his almost thirty-two. His face is sensitive — the face of an artist rather than a scientist — and he looks at you out of two soft blue-gray eyes behind which there lies something cool and strong.

Theremin sat between us and we talked. Or rather, Abrams and he talked while I listened, trying to catch a word here and there and asking my questions through Abrams. Theremin is both friendly and reserved, modest yet assured, a person who is evidently intent on his work in a clear, resolute fashion.

Eight years ago this man, hardly more than a boy then, first startled the scientific world by demonstrating the production of musical tones without the aid of a musical instrument. The tones were "drawn" out of the air by converting electromagnetic energy into acoustic energy. No one before him had ever demonstrated that the air is a potential musical instrument of infinite possibilities, containing tones that could not be produced on any musical instrument known to man. This great discovery immediately brought the young physicist to the attention of the scientists of the world, though he remained unknown to the general public for a number of years. In 1925 Prof. Theremin made another important discovery, this time in the field of television. But his primary interest has been in his original invention.

He told us of his work, work that never ends. I noticed that every room in his suite is a laboratory. Even in the bedroom where we were sitting odd-looking instruments were installed. And as we talked strange, ethereal sounds came out of the room next door, a familiar melody in unfamiliar tones: a pupil of his was practicing on the new ether-music instrument. Prof. Theremin told us of his pupils and his plans.

"I have about thirty pupils now," he said, "whom I am instructing in the art of producing this new music. Eventually, when they are fully trained, they will constitute an orchestra that will be able to give concerts such as have never been heard before. No music is too difficult to be played. On the contrary, variations of tone are possible which cannot be produced on any ordinary musical instrument."

BUT Prof. Theremin's work is by no means completed. He has greatly improved his invention since he first began his experiments, but there is still much to be done. The beauty of tone, which has been remarked by all who have heard Theremin play, is still far from that beauty which it will some day be possible to produce.

As Abrams and he did most of the talking, I had ample opportunity to observe this great product of the first workers' and peasants' republic as he sat there with his calm blue eyes and his long slim hands resting easily on his knees. He is the new scientist, the scientist who has come out of the pain and turmoil of the greatest of revolutions and who has pursued his work under the stimulus of the proletarian dictatorship. And though his work leaves him little time for social and economic questions, it is evident that the Soviet Union is close to Prof. Theremin's heart.

Prof. Theremin has visited many European countries, where he has been warmly received. In Germany and England he created a sensation. His first public appearance in this country was in New York last January when scientists and musicians were astounded at his remarkable discovery and its even more remarkable possibilities. Theremin showed us copies of some of the comments concerning his new invention.

"Professor Theremin's invention has made the deepest impression on me," wrote Bruno Walter, famous German conductor. "Here indeed seems to be new country. I cannot say which affected me most, the method of tone production which suggests the miraculous or the completely novel character of the tone itself. In any case it was a moving experience."

Ottorino Respighi, the great Italian composer, declared: "Without claiming to be a prophet I can readily assure you that the Theremin apparatus will have the greatest importance for the orchestra. What interests me above all else is that the apparatus produces a tone-color approximating the human voice."

After hearing Prof. Theremin for the first time Leo Slezik, famous singer, said: "One is confronted as with a miracle on seeing a man picking about in the air and conjuring from the void notes of unprecedented beauty and splendor such as no existing instrument is capable of producing."

"A real miracle has been produced," said Morris Gest. "There is no absolutely perfect fusion of note on any other instrument," declared Joseph Szigeti, distinguished violinist.

This is the comment of Ossip Gabrilowitsch, famous pianist and conductor: "Leon Theremin's musical invention is indeed epoch-making. I am convinced that it opens a vista of unlimited possibilities in the future development of musical art. The many different ways in which the discovery can be applied can hardly be foretold now, but undoubtedly its influence on the music of the future will be revolutionizing."

AT THE concerts that Prof. Theremin has thus far given in this country he has appeared before audiences composed largely of scientific and musical experts and the wealthy bourgeoisie. The workers, the great toiling masses who have heard so much of the achievements of this great discoverer, have been unable to hear him because of the forbidding prices. But the tables will be turned at the great concert tomorrow evening at Coney Island Stadium where Prof. Theremin will perform. There are not likely to be many members of the wealthy bourgeoisie there. Instead there will be some 25,000 workers listening under the open sky to a new music drawn out of the air by the representative of a new culture at a proletarian music fest arranged jointly by The DAILY WORKER and the Freiheit.

We asked Theremin whether he had ever appeared before so large an audience before. He told us that he had played before large crowds in the Soviet Union and in London, but that never had he performed before an audience of 25,000. He also expressed gratification that he was able to bring his new music to the American masses in this fashion. His concerts are few as his work occupies most of his time, and Theremin's appearance tomorrow will be one of his last in this country.

In the next room the girl was still playing, her hands trembling over the mysterious instrument. Theremin shooks hands with us warmly as we left and his soft blue eyes escorted us to the door.

MINE TOWN IN UPROAR AS WORKERS JEER SCABS

By BARBARA RAND.

PITTSBURGH, July 12.—The Avella barracks were in uproar yesterday. Dish pans, pots and tin pails were banged with spoons. Children cried out scornfully, "You're scabbing on our dads!" All the women were shouting at the same time in half a dozen languages, to make sure they'd be understood. "When you see what conditions and pay they'll give your man, you'll want to come back. You'll be sorry you didn't stick with the strikers."

Company agents are combing the mining towns, spreading defeatism and looking for men to return to the open shop mines. Exhorbitant wages are promised to strikers who will betray their brothers. Moonshine is dispensed liberally until the victim becomes maudlin, and then the plight of his "hungry babies" is dinned into his ears; as a "good American citizen and a decent father," it is his duty to scab against his fellow-workers, he is told. As soon as a "yes" is drilled out of him, a company truck calls at the barracks, escorted by coal and iron police, to carry his furniture to a company house near the mine, and his family to the scab patch.

Whole Family in Fight.

Not many Avella boys are convinced so easily. Avella is known thruout district five as one of the most militant strike communities. The women are banded together into a women's auxiliary to help their men win the strike. The children, several hundred strong, are organized into strike clubs. The whole family is in the fight in Avella.

When a company truck came to the barracks the other day, Avella strikers went wild with indignation. "You can't bring that truck into our grounds," they cried. Two state troopers came down to watch the job. The company agent wanted his commission, and wasn't taking any chances about the miner changing his mind. "We've got an injunction against the company, too!" two women declared scoffingly. The troopers were nonplussed—miners getting injunctions against the coal barons? Surely, this was something new. The truck was not brought on the barrack property, and the strikers' families were jubilant at having hoodwinked the cops.

Turn Live Stock Loose.

As the furniture was carried from the barracks to the road, the children pranced and shouted, the women played their tin cans derisively, and an old accordion was dragged from the storehouse by a striker to add to the uproar. The children turned loose the ground hogs and rabbits which were perpetually running between the legs of the moving men.

The wife of the miner who was returning to the scab pits attempted to justify her husband's desertion. Her children had no shoes, no clothing; there was no food in her cupboard.

"Our stomachs are just as empty!" the militant women shot back at her. See, our toes are coming out of our shoes. Look at our children! Are they any better off than yours? But we're sticking! We've got to fight now, or it'll always be like this.

"The National Miners' Relief Committee will send out relief soon," they said. "They're helping us all they can. Even if they didn't—this is our fight, and if we don't stick together, what'll happen to us? We left the mines together, and we must go back together!"

The National Miners' Relief Committee is swamped with heartrending appeals for bread. Thousands of families are being fed once or twice a day, sometimes once or twice a week. Thousands of other families are urging that their locals be added to the relief lists. "We don't want to scab," is reiterated in almost every letter received at the relief headquarters, 611 Penn Ave. Every dollar sent to the relief committee is a blow against open-shopdom, against scabdom.

Pacific Coast School for Workers Opened

WOODLAND, Wash., July 12.—A network of cities stretching from as far south as Los Angeles to as far north as Vancouver B. C. are represented by students at the Pacific Coast Workers' Summer School at Woodland, Washington. On June 24, official date of the opening of the school, fifty-two students gathered in the Finnish Hall, which thanks to the cooperation of farmers of the district, is being utilized for classes during the six weeks which school is to be in session.

The students enrolled range in age from seventeen to thirty-four representing thirteen nationalities.

The curiculum, numbering among courses economics, social and labor history of the United States, theory practice and organizational forms of the world's labor movement, current events, etc., is composed of those subjects which are of vital importance to a correct understanding of the problems of the working class.

Told You So

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER has entered on his ninetieth year and, as is quite proper, the capitalist press has taken due notice of such an important event. A special article written by a sob-sister in a Scripps-Howard sheet dwells on the good relationship that exists between John and his domestic employes. Oh, no, John does not call out the army and navy to mow down his domestic flunkeys! It's hardly worth while and the spirit of revolt is seldom found among footmen, doormen and valets. John condescends to nod to his servants and he even distributes dimes among them once in a while.

Roscoe Anguvine, gatekeeper at the Rockefeller estate at Pocantico Hills, is cheered by a daily nod from his master. He tells of the annoyances to which a wealthy man is sometimes subjected. For instance, a woman walked in on the grounds one day and insisted on seeing John D. She wanted $2,000,000. The servants had her consigned to a crazy house. "Anyone is crazy who thinks they can walk in and get two million," commented Roscoe. "I have been here ten years and all I've gotten is some shiny new dimes and the usual $50 present at Christmas time. And I haven't had any new dimes in more than a year." The reward of faithful service! Perhaps Roscoe will be buried decently with John saying a prayer for the repose of his carcass.

There will be no third party this year writes Ludwell Denny, staff correspondent for the Scripps-Howard newspaper syndicate, but he believes there will be one in 1932. The third partyites lack a popular leader, he thinks, and furthermore Al Smoth and Herbert Hoover are going to gobble up all the liberal votes. But the liberals are going to be disappointed with Al or Herbert and four years from now they will be on the war path. The liberals are always getting disappointed. No doubt they will have another good reason for postponing the threatened revolt in 1932.

In the meantime the workers and exploited farmers have an opportunity to express their opposition to the capitalist system in the elections this year through the Workers (Communist) Party. The Communists are not waiting for a Messiah house of bondage. They believe in organizing the workers for their own emancipation. Unlike the liberals who would merely clip the claws of the capitalist tiger, the Communists intend to tear up the robber system by the roots and substitute for it a social order based on the interests of the producing classes.

The New York Welfare Council reports that a single person cannot live independently and decently on less than $25 a week. Hundreds of thousands and perhaps millions are doing it nevertheless. That is, they are living on less, but whether independently or decently is another question. During the industrial quiz conducted by Frank P. Walsh, in the good old muckraking days several years ago, J. P. Morgan was asked if he thought ten dollars a week was a sufficient wage for a longshoreman. "Yes," he replied, "if he is satisfied with it." Likewise we suppose a million a year would not be enough if the recipient did not think it adequate.

While walking along the waterfront one hot day last week I noticed a small army of men lined up four deep outside the entrance to the Cunard Line docks. They were longshoremen with hooks slung over their shoulders and dressed in overalls that bore marks of hardship. They were as silent as so many mummies. Two stevedores walked up and down the line picking the huskiest. Rarely was a word spoken. One of the stevedores would crook his finger and the worker beckoned to would walk out of the crowd and receive a badge. When a sufficient number of men were hired to unload the two Cunard vessels the stevedores walked away and so did the men who failed to get work. It looked like a slave market alright.

Mayor Jimmy Walker is visiting William Randolph Hearst at the publisher's California ranch. While the song and dance mayor is ostensibly out for a good time and relaxation, the real object of the visit is to attempt a rapprochement between Hearst and Al Smith. Hearst has already declared for Hoover but it would not be surprising to see the yellow journalist switch from the elephant to the jackass in the middle of the election stream.

There is a regular epidemic of "jumps" among capitalists these days. A Belgian multimillionaire jumped from an airplane flying at an altitude of 4,000 feet. Another plute jumped from a liner in mid-ocean. The president of a New York bank jumped from a fourth story hospital window and was saved by a plucky nurse who got a grip on his shins and held on until policemen and taxi drivers came to his rescue.

THREE THOUSAND MINERS STRIKE IN ANTHRACITE

Walk Out When Boss Attacks Worker

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

NANTICOCKE, Pa., July 13. — Thre thousand miners and mine workers of collieries 5 and 7 of the Suquehanna Coal Company went on strike when section foreman of the colliery, Robert Davis, beat up the motorman, John Beyer. The miners demand that section foreman Davis be discharged and punished in accordance with the mine rules. Beyer was beaten up by the foreman when he 'disobeyed' some rulings of the boss.

This brutally of the bosses has aroused miners in Nanticocke, and they are determined to stay on strike until boss Davis will be discharged.

Over 1,500 mine workers, members of the local union No. 1432, working in Maxwell colliery No. 20 of Lehigh and Wilkes-Barre Coal Co. went out on strike today against the coal company who by speeding up has in the past several weeks fired 30 men from the job without making any provisions for them. District organizer Mile Sweeney, as usual is trying to force the local union No. 1432 into going back to work without provisions being made for the discharged miners.

TAXI INSPECTORS IN NEW RACKET

Drivers Complain of Lost Cards

Charges that hack inspectors, acting under orders from the Hack License Bureau, were stealing criminal identification cards from taxicabs as drivers were inside of restaurants, attending to other business, have been made during the past two weeks by taxi drivers and officials of taxi associations.

Hugo Werber, business manager of the Broad Street Taxi Owners Association, has been quoted as saying that "thousands of taxi drivers have had their card- taken in this way."

Inspectors have had orders, it was learned, from Commissioner Ruttenberg, in charge of the hack bureau, to pick up cards in cabs that are left vacant. According to hack regulations, cards must be displayed conspicuously in the driver's cab.

Garages Raided

The Tammany hack inspectors, drivers state, are not satisfied with picking up these identification cards on the streets. These inspectors are known to go to garages and pick up cards left in the cabs by their owners.

Drivers going to work in the morning, on examining their cabs, are known to have found their card missing. The driver then must report the loss to his precinct station house. Here he is usually told that his card is on the way downtown. If the driver lives in the far end of the Bronx or Queens, this means a trip down to the hack license bureau on Grenwich St. By the time he arrives there half his day is usually gone. There he must stand in line and wait his chance to inquire from one of the clerks about the

DEMAND STRIKE IN FALL RIVER

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

FALL RIVER, Mass., July 13.—Over three thousand Fall River textile workers responded to a mass meeting called by the Textile Mills Committee, and showed the greatest enthusiasm when the speakers threw out the slogan "Prepare for a Strike."

The meeting was held on a lot located in the heart of the mill district and was purchased outright by the T. M. C. for $1,000 contributed by Fall River workers. This was imperative because of the police refusal to permit any landowner to rent a meeting place to the T. M. C.

Youth League Has Military Training Now

A new course in the curriculum of the summer training schools for young workers this year is military training. While the capitalist military organizations are preparing for imperialist wars, and to use the military forces against the workers, the students in the training schools are obtaining military knowledge to use for their own class interests.

The Young Workers (Communist) League is opposed to capitalist militarism and will continue to fight the C. M. T. C. and other institutions of this type, but we realize that pacifism is an equally effective instrument of imperialism. The military courses for young workers demonstrates our stand for military knowledge—when it will be used for the interest of the working class.

GREAT THRONG AT CONCERT TONIGHT

25,000 are Expected to Hear Theremin

Tonight is the night. Thousands of workers — to be more specific, some 25,000 of them — will gather in Coney Island Stadium at the greatest proletarian concert ever held in this country, arranged by The DAILY WORKER.

All the participating artists, who have been rehearsing faithful'y during the past few weeks, have put the finishing touches on their work. When Arnold Volpe lifts up his baton to lead his orchestra of 50 picked musicians in the Coronation March from Meyerbeer's opera, The Prophet, it will inaugurate an event which will make musical history.

In the event of rain tonight The DAILY WORKER concert will be held on Saturday, July 21, at the Coney Island Stadium.

The Roxy Ballet, under the direction of the famous dancer, A. Nelle, former partner of Pavlowa, is certain to find favor with the great stadium crowd tonight. The ballet will present a program of dances of an international character.

But of course Theremin will be the hero of the evening. The fame of this great Soviet scientist has spread to every part of the world. Tonight thousands of workers will have their first opportunity of hearing this new ether-music.

Revolutionary Demonstration.

Tonight's affair will be something more than a concert. It will also be a demonstration of the New York workingclass in celebration of the anniversary of the fall of the Bastille. The spirit of the evening will be in keeping with the revolutionary traditions of the day and for this great occasion Ben Gitlow, acting secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, will appear to bring the revolutionary message of July 14 to the thousands assembled in the stadium.

Five hundred volunteers are needed for important work in connection with The DAILY WORKER concert. All willing to assist should report from 2 in the afternoon on. Ask for Harry Fox.

Just how many will try to get in to Coney Island Stadium tonight is unknown. What is known is that only those lucky enough to have tickets will be admitted. The only way to be lucky enough is to buy these precious little pasteboards at once. They are on sale at the office of The DAILY WORKER, 26-28 Union Square.

FREED WORKERS WELCOMED AT DEMONSTRATION

Hundreds Gather at Union Square

A demonstration in which hundreds of workers braved the rain late yesterday afternoon was held at Union Square to welcome the four workers released from the Tombs and the Workhouse, where they had served a sentence of five days for participation in an anti-imperial demonstration in front of the office of J. P. Morgan on July 3.

Robert Minor, editor of The DAILY WORKER and Workers (Communist) candidate for U. S. Senator, and Robert Wolf, novelist and poet, were freed from the Tombs; Rebecca Grecht, New York state campaign manager of the Workers Party, and Harriet Silverman, secretary of the local branch of the Anti-Imperialist League, which arranged both the July 3 demonstration and yesterday's meeting, were released from the Workhouse.

Speakers at the meeting included Minor, Grecht, Shachtman, editor of "The Labor Defender"; D. Benjamin, asistant director of the Workers School, and Arthur Stein of the Young Workers League and Jessie Taft of the Young Pioneers.

The speakers denounced the brutal attack on the demonstration and called for continued agitation against the imperialistic aggression of American capitalists.

"Jail sentences do not frighten us Communists," Minor declared. "That is what we expect as long as we continue our fight on the ruling class of the United States and in the interests of the workers.

"We were not thrown into the Tombs because we violated any so-called statute. Beside us in the street a minister speaking on a subject which did not menace the ruling class was, of course, unmolested.

"But such acts of intimidation and terrorism will not prevent the Communists from bringing their message to the working class. It will only heighten our agitation and spur us to greater activity."

WORKERS PARTY SPEEDS DRIVE

Reports reaching the national campaign headquarters of theWorkers (Communist) Party from all sections of the country indicate that interest in the Communist campaign is daily becoming more widespread Everything points to the fact that the Party will succeed in mobilizing a tremendous following of militant workers and farmers thruout the country, if successful in its efforts to secure a place on the ballots of the various states. This will enable the Party to carry on the vigorous fighting campaign for which the situation is actually rotten ripe.

In a statement issued by the national campaign headquarters of the Workers (Communist) Party, the need for political organization, and an appeal for funds to make possible this political organization, was stressed. The appeal follows:

"The need for funds to put the Party on the ballot in the numerous states still remaining to maintain the many speakers and field organizers thruout the country, and to print the immediately necessary

GORKI FINDS A DOUBLE

Relates Incident of His American Visit

MOSCOW, July 13.—At a banquet given in his honor Maxim Gorky related the following story to the great amusement of his listeners.

While on one of his visits to the United States Gorky was greatly surprised one day to see advertised on a bill board that the "great Maxim Gorky" was to appear on the stage of the theatre where "The Lower Depths" was to be played.

The writer went to see the play. On the stage there appeared a man, greatly acclaimed by the public, who looked exactly like him. During the intermission Gorki wished to make the acquaintance of his double. The latter was overcome with fear, and his whole body trembling, he said to the novelist.

"I am an unfortunate man, encumbered with a large family. I have a contract with the director to represent the author of all plays that he stages. You are my specialty, but I have posed successfully for Suderman, Rostand and Donnay.' '

Gorky had pity on the poor devil, and did not unmask him.

HOLD MEETINGS TO FREE PORTER

Youth Takes Up Fight For Young Rebel

The voice of the working class is beginning to be heard in answer to the challenge of Porter's imprisonment for his revolutionary labor activities while technically subject to military law.

In New Bedford, where three thousand workers took part in a protest meeting, the first drive for Porter's freedom was launched, so far as the masses are concerned. The International Labor Defense and the Young Workers (Communist) League issued appeals immediately to the workers to come to the defense of John Porter—to defeat the sinister purposes of the military authorities, and now the fight against the capitalist military machine is gaining momentum.

This drive must be intensified if Porter is to be saved from a living death behind iron bars during the rest of his life. Arrangements are being made for defense committees, composed primarily of young workers, in cities all over the country to Pilsudski, military dictator of Poland, is expected to arrive momentarily as well as representatives of other Little Entente states for the purpose of holding a secret military conference which is to take place under the direction of the French general staff.

According to reliable information the purpose of this conference is to prepare the way for war on the Soviet Union.

ELECTION MEET AT BISCUIT PLANT

For the first time the Election Campaign Committee of Section 2 of the Workers (Communist) Party conducted an open-air noonday meeting at 15th Street and Tenth Avenue, alongside the four huge plants of the National Biscuit Company yesterday.

The workers of the Nabisco plants, usually idle during their lunch hour, gathered around Bert Miller and listened attentively to his talk on the Workers (Communist) Party and what it means to workers. Besides speaking on the election campaign, Miller emphasized the fact that the poor conditions in the Nabisco factories were due to lack of organization among the workers, and urged his eager listeners to organize into a union.

Despite the spy system used by the Nabisco bosses, the workers listening to the speaker evinced great interest, interjecting occasional words of approval. Copies of "The Coolidge Program" and "The Workers (Communist) Party And What It Stands For" were distributed

Jail 37 New Bedford Textile Mill Pickets

6 MONTHS, HEAVY FINE FOR EACH OF DEFENDANTS

Bosses Desperate As Ranks Hold Firm

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., July 13. —The vicious hatred of the Massachusetts courts for the workers here has again made itself felt when the judges of the District Court today imposed six months' jail sentences and $20 fines on each of the 37 New Bedford textile strikers tried before them yesterday.

Most of the defendants, who include the most active unionists, were arrested when the New Bedford police force broke up a strikers' parade arranged by the New Bedford Textile Workers Union on July 1. Three were arrested for picketing July 6; six of those tried were arrested during a monster picket demonstration last night that continued far into the early hours of the morning.

4,000 Picket

More than 4,000 strikers marched in picket formation up and down before the gates of the Whitman, Page, Nield and Nonquist Spinning Mills, while about 11,000 strikers and sympathizers jammed the streets leading to the factories in a demonstration that lasted many hours late last night. They had come out at the call of the T. W. U. strike committee when the news spread that a few scabs had gone to work.

A tremendous wave of indignation spread rapidly throughout the entire city as the news of the half-year prison sentences imposed upon the strikers became known. Many of those imprisoned are middle-aged workers who are heads of families.

The attorney for the International Labor Defense announced that all cases would be appealed immediately. Release of the strikers, however, is dependent upon the raising of a total of $20,000 for bail bonds. It was not learned whether the necessary total had been secured.

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., July 13. —An excellent guage of determining which is the real union in the New Bedford textile strike was offered here late Wednesday night when the strike committee of the New Bedford Textile Workers Union of the T. M. C. went to the picket lines before the Kilburn Mill and led the thousands of pickets away from the mill in parade formation to a huge mass meeting in Saulnier's field. This contrasts sharply with the impotent leaders of the Textile Council, who publicly admitted not being able to influence the actions of their members.

The T. M. C. leaders had told the workers to halt picketing here so that they can go home and take a needed rest before coming out for the big demonstration at other mills in the morning.

The membership of the council, on the other hand, had defied the order of their officials when they were ordered to cease picketing with the members of the mills committee.

Enthusiastic Meeting

The mass meeting, which was held about 10:30 p. m., presented an inspiring sight as the huge electric bulb over the platform lit up the sea of listening faces.

Eli Keller, one of the speakers, pointed to the iron discipline that existed in the Textile Workers Union, and concluded by saying that they were the only organization that has complete control of the New Bedford strike.

Jack Rubinstein, speaking later declared that the continuous picket line that lasted more than 36 hours showed conclusively to the mill bosses that the strikers will fight

ARCTIC VETERANS ON SOVIET ICE-BREAKERS

In order to effectively organize the rescue expedition for Nobile and his companions the Soviet government appointed a special commission. Each of the two ice-breakers, the "Krassin," the most powerful in the world, and the "Malygin" included in their parties scientists and aviators with long experience in Artic exploration. Professor Samoilovich, the leader of the "Krassin" party, is director of the Institute of the North and has made extensive researches in the region of Spitzbergen. Aviators Chukhnovsky and Babushkin are considered among the foremost of Soviet aviators, having made many notable flights in the Arctic regions.

Veteran Explorer.

Professor Wise, the chief explorer of the "Malygin," spent considerable time in making a reconnoissance of the regions of Novaya Zembla and Franz Joseph Land with the Saydov expedition in 1912 and 1914. The foggy weather which so greatly hampered the work of rescue was predicted in the reports of Professor Multanovsky, director of the meteorological section of the Central Geophysical Laboratory, on the basis of observations made by Nansen in 1893-96, by the Saydov expedition and by others. According to these studies, as many as 25 foggy days have been observed during the month of June in this region.

Powerful Ice Cutter.

The "Krassin," which is of 10,000 indicated horse power, is commanded by Captain Egge who is assisted by four special sub-commanders from other steamers added to the party on account of their wide experience in the Arctic regions. The "Krassin" left Leningrad for Kings Bay on June 15. It is capable of cutting through ice from 3 to 4 meters in thickness. The "Krassin" radio works on wave lengths of 450, 600 and 800 meters The short wave station operates on a length of from 30 to 40 meters.

The ice-breaker "Malygin," commanded by Capt. Chertkov, was completely overhauled last winter at Since 1923 it has been used each Hamburg and is perfectly equipped summer to accompany the commercial fleet carrying freight from the mouth of the Yenisei River in Siberia through the Kara Sea to european ports. It carries coal sufficient for twenty days cruising in the open sea. When used in the ice, however, with only one boiler working in order to furnish light and heat, the supply of fuel is sufficient for 80 days.

The expedition is organized under the direction of J. Unschlicht, assistant commissar of war, with the cooperation of the All-Union Society for Aviation and Chemistry M. Groza, chairman of the rescue committee, stated that the ice-breakers and aeroplanes of the Soviet expedition carried supplies sufficient for three months.

The following radio message was sent yesterday to the Soviet ice-breaker Krassin by M. G. Gurevitch, vice-chairman of the board of directors of the Amtorg Trading Corporation, and other Soviet citizens in the United States:

To crew, aviator Chukhnovsky and his assistants, Prof. Samoilovich and captain icebreaker Krassin:

Soviet citizens in the United States hail the skill and courage which have made possible the rescuing of the marooned Italia explorers. Public opinion is deeply moved by the supreme heroism of your aviators and crew. Your act is another illustration of the spirit of sympathy and self-sacrifice which manifests itself in times of great human need and reveals the strong bonds of international good will underlying the stress and strain of everyday life.

OFFICERS FEAR “DAILY”

Sailors May Get 6 Months for Reading

PHILADELPHIA, July 13.—Reading the DAILY WORKER is a serious crime, according to the naval authorities, and they have announced that sailors who continue to read the Communist paper will be imprisoned at hard labor for six months and fined one hundred dollars.

Many of the sailors on the U. S. S. Oklahoma were called before the authorities and charged with reading the DAILY WORKER and the Young Worker. They were question individually how they happened to get the papers, whether they approved the principles of the Communist organizations, etc.

The officers then announced that those who continue to read the DAILY WORKER and Young Worker will be court-martialed; and made threats of "action against those sending the papers." Then, they indulged in extreme abuse of the Young Workers Communist League.

Several of the sailors practically told their officers that they were liars, because they had been at meet-

REPORT 5 OTHERS FOUND IN THE FAR ARCTIC WASTES

Icebreaker Searching for Amundson Now

By EUGENE LYONS.

MOSCOW, July 13 (UP). — A tale of triumph of a sturdy Soviet ice ship and hardy Soviet seamen, scientists and navigators over the ruthless, elemental forces of the Arctic was told in messages from the Steamship Krassin which reported today the rescue of all known living survivors of the transpolar dirigible Italia.

This rescue accounted for all of the sixteen men aboard the Italia when it crashed on its homeward journey from a flight over the North Pole, except the six men blown away in the hulk of the dirigible after the commander and nine men had been thrown on the ice from the shattered gondola.

The Krassin sighted the Viglieri group from a distance of three miles —a faded red silk tent and bits of wreckage from the Italia's cabin surrounded by blocks of ice—and sounded its siren.

MOSCOW, July 13 (UP). — On the last short stage of the most triumphant voyage of rescue in modern history, the Russian ice-breaker Krassin radioed today that she had picked up two dogsled men off North East Land and was proceeding to rescue five men stranded on the coast with their damaged airplane.

In her last brief message, the Krassin wirelessed that she had rescued Capt. Sora and Sefj Van Dongen, who with a dogsled team had gone in search of survivors from the wrecked dirigible Italia.

At almost the same moment, an unconfirmed report from Virgo Bay said that Ludwig M. Varming, third member of the Little Expedition had been picked up with the dogsled team where Sora and Van Dongen had left him, near Cape Brun.

The only other party of known survivors now on the Arctic ice that fought such a long, bitter and for a time winning battle to rescue the victims is that of aviator Chukhnovsky, off Cape Platen. Chuknovsky and four companions crashed after they had flashed back word that they had located Capt. Filippo Zappi and Capt. Adalberto Mariano, of the Italia.

During their vigil on the ice, the two men saw eight airplanes pass over them. They almost went insane, they said, as they waved their blankets and rags vainly, and saw each plane disappear.

Then Chuknovsky's big plane roared over them, turned, circled over them five times, and sped back to the Krassin, its powerful radio crackling out the news of their discovery.

As it pushed its way along the coast to the rescue of the Sora and Chukhnovsky's parties, the Krassin radioed she had aboard seven men brought back from death to life after the wrecking of the Italia.

In describing the rescue it is revealed that two hundred yards away from the two men the Krassin could get no further through the ice. The two men were on a floe 24 feet in width. They were balancing themselves with difficulty on the block

8,000 PORTERS DEMAND STRIKE

Over 8,000 members of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters are due to strike shortly unless the officials of the organization, working together with President Green of the American Federation of Labor, again forestall the move as they did several weeks ago.

Secret strike directions are said to have been issued in concealed envelopes, it became known yesterday. According to A. Philip Randolph, general organizer of the union, who was instrumental in calling off the previous order for a walkout, these envelopes are not to be opened until orders are received from a two-man strike committee composed of Randolph and M. P. Webster, division organizer of Chicago.

Workers and Peasants of Mexico Elected 4 Communists to the Chamber of Deputies

HEADS OF R. R. UNION, PEASANT LEAGUE CHOSEN

Glavan and Laborde are Members of C.E.C.

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

MEXICO CITY, July 13.—The incomplete election returns indicate that four Communist deputies have been elected in Mexico. Among these are Ursulo Galván, leader of the National Peasants League, and Hernán Laborde, leader in the Railwaymen's Union. Both are members of the Central Executive Committee of the Mexican Communist Party.

The elections now taking place in Mexico, with Obregon slated as the successor of Calles and his victory assured, have thus far resulted in the election of four Communist deputies to the legislature. The National Peasants League, which has a strong Communist faction, and the Railwaymen's Union, many of whose leaders are Communists, are two of the central points of the revolutionary peasants and workers.

The success thus far in the elections for the Communists has surprised the reactionary leaders of the CROM, the Mexican Federation of Labor, who have attempted by all means to suppress the voice of the rank and file of Mexican labor.

Volunteers from the Krassin leaped overboard onto the ice that jammed against the ship. Planks were handed out to them, and one by one the planks were pushed ahead in a path over and between the floes the 600 feet to the party.

In her reports, the Krassin said that Malgrem was dead, and indicated that his body was taken aboard.

But latest reports from the Krassin indicate that the body of the explorer is not aboard and that it has not been found.

MOSCOW, July 13—(UP)—The Russian ice-breaker Maligin, one of the Soviet boats sent into the Arctic area for Italia relief work, today was ordered to make another attempt to locate the Roald Amundsen Party and then return to Archangel.

The Soviet Committee ordered this last search for Amundsen—who with five aides has been missing since June 18—in the belief the party still might be alive some place in the treacherous, ice bound territory from which seven members of the Italia crew have been brought out alive.

Lines of pickets marching to a central point at the south end of the city and moving in increased numbers from 4 o'clock in the morning were enthusiastically cheered by the workers waiting for the whistle at the Fiske, Goodyear and Firestone Tire Fabric Mills. Committees of workers from these mills had asked the Textile Mills Committee to form them into an organization. This is being done, the union stated.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., July 13.—Over twenty-five English and French workers, members of the Textile Council of the United Textile Workers Union, came to the headquarters of the Textile Workers Union of the Textile Mills Committee yesterday and requested that a joint meeting of the membership of both organizations be called by the T. M. C. The voluntary delegation declared that the A. F. T. O. members were overwhelmingly dissatisfied with their officials.

This request was complied with and a meeting will be held for A. F. T. O. members at the Potomska St. Hall, Saturday at 10 a. m. Albert Weisbord leader of the National Textile Committee will be one of the speakers.

ORGANIZATIONAL NEED FOR TROY WORKERS URGENT

Worker Says Factory Council Needed

(By a Worker Correspondent)

TROY, N. Y., July 13. — The 900 Cluett Peabody collar workers employed at the Jay St. factory here have won their strike. They have prevented the introduction of a new system of wage-paying which would have meant a reduction of 35 to 50 per cent in the workers' weekly wage.

The strike started spontaneously on Monday morning after the cut had been announced for only one department, the buttonholers. At once every worker in the plant, the majority of them girls, 900 in all, refused to work. All stood solidly behind those who had been affected by the wage slash. No one walked out. Even without leadership, they understood what had to be done. They stayed on the job, came to the factory for three days, but did no work.

Workers Gave Support.

You have won your fight, Jay Street workers! The Workers Party hails your victory as one more proof of the growing fighting spirit of American workers, and young workers.

But, what are you going to do now? Do you think for one minute that Cluett, Peabody and Co. have given up the idea of cutting wages? Not a bit. They are waiting for an opportunity to break your ranks, buy off or fire your leaders and then will come the same cut in different language.

Form Factory Council.

Jay Street workers, you must have a permanent factory workers council. You have the basis for it in the committee just elected to deal with the bosses in this strike. Make that committee a permanent committee.

Form a Jay Street Factory Workers Council. Prepare to defend yourselves against further attacks on your already too low wages, and perhaps to win back the losses of former cuts.

And read the DAILY WORKER. Daily Worker representatives were with you in Troy during the strike. We were ready to help you win your strike had the bosses not given in at once. Wherever workers are fighting for better wages or to prevent any cut in their wages or conditions—the DAILY WORKER is on the job to help them. The DAILY WORKER is the weapon which fights in every struggle of the workers.

POLICE BAN ON TEXTILE STRIKE TAG DAY SCORED

Passaic Relief Body to Defy Order

The action of the Chief of Police of Passaic in withdrawing his previously granted permit for a tag-day for the New Bedford textile strikers relief, was condemned in a statement issued recently by the Textile Strikers Relief Conference of Passaic. It was also learned that the higher officials of the United Textile Workers Union had been very active in getting the police head to rescind the permit. The statement, which is signed by Stephen Milus, Jr., the conference secretary, says in part:

"We are determined to carry on our activity and raise funds in Passaic and vicinity for the New Bedford strikers, despite all attempts to stop us.

"Twenty-eight thousand textile workers have been on strike for 13 weeks—the mill bosses have tried to open the mills Monday morning, July 9, the militia was called out to intimidate the strikers, and the strikers of New Bedford answered the bosses by mass picket lines around 56 mills on strike. The New Bedford Textile Workers Union represents the main body of strikers, the unskilled men and women. In order to win the strike they must be fed. Since when have the Passaic authorities supported strikes? Why are they so anxious now to support Fuller?

"Neither the city authorities nor Fuller cannot deny us our right to help our fellow-workers in New Bedford. We intend to carry out our purpose for which the new Bedford Strikers Relief Conference of Passaic was organized—to raise money for New Bedford, and do everything possible to support them so that they can win their strike."

NEW DRAFT PROGRAM OF THE COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL

V. The Dictatorship of the Proletariat in the USSR and the International Social Revolution

CAPITALIST CRISIS MARKED BY DIVISION OF WORLD INTO TWO ECONOMIES, PROGRAM DECLARES

Proletarian Dictatorship in the Soviet Union is Base of World Revolution

World Workers Must Rise to Defense of USSR in the Event of War

The Programme Commission of the Executive Committee of the Communist International is publishing a DRAFT PROGRAM.

The Commission thinks it its duty to declare that while the text of this draft is of course based on the same fundamental principles as those upon which the draft programme provisionally passed by the Fifth Congress of the Communist International was based, nevertheless, it differs very considerably from that draft. The Program Commission felt that in view of the great changes that have taken place in many important spheres of international life and particularly in the revolutionary movement since the Fifth Congress, it could not confine itself to making merely editorial changes in the original draft. A change has taken place in the form of the general crisis of capitalism; a change has taken place in the relationships between various groups of powers. Great events have taken place, like the great revolution in China, which once again emphasized the significance of the agrarian-peasant question. Great progress has been made in building up socialism in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. The struggle between the aggressive capitalist world and the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics is becoming acute. Fascism is growing and becoming transformed into the terrorist dictatorship of big capital. Social democracy has degenerated into Chauvinist imperialism. The lessons that have been learned by the Communist International in the fight against opposition tendencies and finally the growth of Communism, the fact that the movement has really become internationalized, the new tasks that confront the Communist International as a single organization—all this has inevitably made it necessary considerably to alter and enlarge the former draft.

The general tendency of the changes that have been made is towards more concreteness and greater emphasis upon THE INTERNATIONAL aspects both in the theoretical section as well as in the sections dealing immediately with the struggles of the Communist Parties.

Acting on the decision of the Executive Committee of the Communist International, the Programme Commission, in publishing this draft program, calls upon all comrades to express their opinion and criticism of it in articles, remarks and concrete suggestions. The work done on the program has revealed how difficult it is to embrace in a single document all the problems of the present-day world Communist movement. The question of the program will be one of the central questions at the Sixth Congress. It is essential that sufficient material be collected by the time the discussion of the question takes place at the Congress. The Commission therefore invites all comrades to join in the fruitful discussion of the program.

THE PROGRAMME COMMISSION OF THE
EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE
COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL

The principal manifestation of the ofound crisis of the capitalist stem is the division of world onomy into capitalist countries on e one hand and countries building Socialism on the other. Consently, the internal consolidation of e proletarian dictatorship in the SR, the successes achieved in the rk of Socialist construction, the owth of the influence and author- of the USSR among the masses the proletariat and the oppressed oples of the colonies, signify the ntinuation, intensification and exnsion of the international social volution. The proletarian dictarship in the USSR is an important mponent part of the international cial revolution; it is its vanguard d the base for its development.

Possessing in the country the necssary, and sufficient material prequisites for the overthrow of the ndlords and the bourgeoisie as ll as for the establishment of mplete Socialism, the workers in Soviet Republics, aided by the [illegible] proletariat, heroically pelled the attacks of the armed es of the internal and foreign unter - revolution, consolidated ir alliance with the bulk of the santry and have achieved conerable successes in the sphere of cialist construction.

The proletariat was enabled to ake a rapid advance along the ad of socialist construction beuse of the proper contacts it esblished between proletarian Soalist industry and small peasant onomy, which secured the growth the productive forces of agricule and guarantee the leading role Socialist industry; because of the ks it established between Social- industry and agriculture, thus eventing the latter from serving unproductive consumption of rasitic classes; because it proses, not for capitalist profit but order to satisfy the constantly owing needs of the mass of conmers,—which in the last analysis ually stimulates the whole pros of production, and finally because the economic key positions re concentrated in the hands of proletarian State, planned manement acquired increasing sigficance and as a consequence the ans of production are being disibuted more economically and exdiently.

Having raised the productive ces of the whole economy of the ntry to a hihger level and deloping large-scale industry at a e exceeding that of capitalist ntries to establish a financial and onomic boycott, the proletariat of USSR is systematically increas- the share of the socialised (So- [illegible]) section of national economy the total output of means of proction, in the total output of instry and the total trade of the ntry.

[illegible] by manipulating the levers [illegible] trade, of rapidly growing cooperation and the nationalization of the land, State Socialist industry, transport and banking are leading small and minute petty peasant farming in their train, to an ever-increasing extent.

In the sphere of agriculture particularly, the raising of the level of the forces of production proceeds amidst conditions which restrict the process of differentiation among the peasantry (nationalization of the land—and consequently the prohibition of the sale and purchase of land; sharply graded progressive taxes; the financing of poor and middle peasants' cooperative societies and productive organizations; the laws governing the hiring of labor; depriving the kulaks of certain political and public rights etc.). However, in so far as the productive forces of Socialist industry have not yet grown sufficiently to enable a broad new technical base to be laid for agriculture and consequently to enable an immediate and rapid productive combination of peasant farms into large public enterprises—collective farms—the kulak class tends to grow and establishes economic, and later, political contact with elements of the so called "new bourgeoisie."

The proletariat of the USSR holds the principal economic key-positions in the country. It systematically squeezes out the remnants of urban private capital, which has considerably diminished during the last few years of the "New Eoconmic Policy." It imposes all manner of restrictions upon the exploiting strata in the rural districts, which spring out of the development of commodity-money relationships. It draws the bulk of the peasant, simple commodity producers into the general system of Soviet economic organization and consequently into the work of Socialist construction through the medium of rapidly-growing cooperation—which in the conditions of proletarian dictatorship and the economic leadership of Socialist industry is identical with the development of Socialism, and is passing from the process of restoration to the expanded reconstruction of the whole productive and technical basis of the country. Thus, the proletariat of the USSR has undertaken and is adready fulfilling the task of large-scale construction (the production of means of production generally and the development of the heavy industry and electrification in particular) and simultaneously with developing, selling, buying and credit cooperation, has undertaken the task of organizing the peasantry in productive, cooperative societies on the basis of collectivism.

Socialism is already a decisive economic force in the USSR which in the main, determines the whole economic development of the country and by that very fact stimulates still greater progress in its development.

Owing to the technical and economical backwardness of the country and the damage caused during the imperialist and civil wars large capital outlays have to be made for renewals of equipment and developing new enterprises and this places serious obstacles in the path of socialist development. Nevertheless the standard of living of the working class and of the broad masses of the toilers is steadily rising and simultaneously with the socialist rationalization and scientific organization of industry the 7-hour day is being gradually introduced.

Thanks to the economic growth of the USSR and to the growing importance of the socialist section of industry and relying upon the poorer sections of the rural population—while maintaining a durable alliance with the bulk of the peasant population, viz., the middle peasants, the working class, united and led by the COMMUNIST PARTY—which has been seasoned in revolutionary battles, is able to draw increasing numbers of the toilers into the work of building up Socialism. The most important means employed for this purpose are: the development of broad mass organizations (the PARTY, the trade unions, the YOUNG COMMUNIST LEAGUE, co-operative societies of all forms, women's organizations,—for working women and peasant women, various kinds of so-called "voluntary societies," worker and rural correspondents' societies, sports clubs, scientific societies, cultural and educational organizations); encouragement of the initiative of the masses and the promotion of fresh strata of workers to high posts in all spheres of economy and administration. The continuous attraction of the masses into the process of Socialist construction, the continuous renewal of the whole state, economic, trade union and PARTY apparatus by infusing into them workers from the factories, the practice of training workers generally and young workers in particular in the higher educational establishments and special courses, etc., as socialist experts in all branches of construction—serve as a guarantee against the bureaucratic ossification and social degeneration of the proletariat directly engaged in administration.

Having defeated Russian imperialism and liberated all the former colonies and oppressed nations in the Russian Empire the dictatorship of the proletariat in the USSR guarantees not only formal but actual equality for the various nationalities in the Union. It is systematically laying a firm foundation for their cultural and political development by industrializing these territories. It clearly establishes the legal position of the autonomous territories, autonomous republics and allied republics in the constitution of the Soviet Union and carries out to the full the principle of the right of nations to self-determination.

The USSR is the land of the dictatorship of the proletariat and of socialist construction. It is a land in which the working class has won enormous gains and established a close alliance with the peasants. It is the land of a new culture which follows the banner of Marxism Hence, the USSR is inevitably becoming the base of the world movement of all oppressed classes, the centre of the international revolution, the greatest factor in world history.

In the USSR the world proletariat for the first time acquires a real fatherland of its own and the USSR becomes the greatest centre of gravity for colonial movements.

Thus, the USSR is a great factor in the general crisis of capitalism not only becouse it has dropped out of purely capitalist economic intercourse, and has created the basis for the socialist system of production but also because it plays an exceptionally great revolutionary role generally: it is the international driving force of the proletarian revolution, stimulating the proletariat of all countries to strive to capture power. It is a living example of the ability of the working class not only to destroy capitalism, but to build up socialism. It is the prototype of the fraternal relations between all nationalities that will exist in the World Union of Socialist Republics and of the economic unity of all toilers in the single world economy of socialism that the conquest of power by the proletariat in all countries will establish.

The simultaneous existence of two economic systems: the socialist system in the USSR and the capitalist system in the other countries, imposes on the proletarian State the task of repelling the blows showered upon it by the capitalist world (boycott, blockade, etc.,) and at the same time compels it to resort to economic manoeuvres and make use of economic contacts with capitalist countries (by means of the monopoly of foreign trade, credits loans, concessions, so-called "technical aid," etc.). The principal and fundamental line to be adopted in this respect is the establishment of the widest possible contacts with foreign countries within limits determined by the advantages they will bring for the USSR, i. e., primarily for strengthening industry in the USSR itself, for the purpose of laying a basis for its own heavy industry and electrification and finally for the development of its own socialist engineering industry. Only to the extent that the economic independence of the USSR in the midst of a capitalist environment is secured can guarantees be obtained against the danger of the work of socialist construction in the USSR being disturbed and of her becoming an adjunct of the capitalist system

On the other hand, the capitalist states continuously oscillate between their commercial interest in the markets of the USSR and their fear of the growth of the USSR which signifies the growth of international revolution. For that reason the principal and fundamental tendency in the politics of the Imperialist Powers is to encircle the USSR and to conduct counter-revolutionary war against her for the purpose of strangling her and of establishing a world, bourgeois, terrorist regime.

However, the systematic attempts of Imperialism politically to encircle the USSR and the growing danger of military aggression against her to prevent the Communist Party of the Soviet Union,— a Section of the Communist International and leader of the proletarian dictatorship in the USSR,—from fulfilling its international obligations and from rendering assistance to all the oppressed, to the labour movement in capitalist countries, to the movement of colonial peoples against imperialism, and to the struggle against national oppression in all its forms.

As the USSR is the only fatherland of the international proletariat, the principal bulwark of their achievements and the most important factor in the cause of international emancipation, the international proletariat must facilitate the success of the work of socialist construction in the USSR and by all means in their power defend it against the attacks of the capitalist powers.

> "The world political situation has now brought to the front the dictatorship of the proletariat as an immediate issue and all the events in world politics are inevitably concentrating around one central point, viz: the struggle of the world bourgeoisie against the Soviet Russian Republic, which must group itself around the Soviet movements of the advanced workers of all countries, on the one hand, and all the national liberation movements of the colonial and oppressed nationalities on the other." (Lenin).

In the event of the Imperialist states declaring war upon and attacking the USSR, the international proletariat must retaliate by the boldest and most determined mass action and struggle for the overthrow of the imperialist governments with the slogan of dictatorship of the proletariat and alliance with the USSR.

In the colonies, and particularly in the colonies belonging to the imperialist countries which are attacking the USSR, it is necessary to take advantage of the diversion of the imperialist military forces to develop the anti-imperialist struggle to the utmost and to organize revolutionary action for the purpose of throwing off the yoke of imperialism and of winning complete independence.

The development of socialism in the USSR and the growth of its international influence not only rouse against her the hatred of capitalist states and their social democratic agents, but they also inspire towards her the greatest sympathy of the broad masses of the toilers all over the world, and stimulate the readiness of the oppressed classes of all countries to fight in defence of the land of the proletarian dictatorship in the event of an imperialistic attack upon her.

Thus, the development of the contradictions within modern world economy, the development of the general capitalist crises and the military attacks of the Imperialists upon the Soviet Union must inevitably lead to a mighty revolutionary outbreak which must overwhelm the capitalist system in a number of so-called civilized countries, unleash the victorious revolution in the colonies, widen the basis of the proletarian dictatorship to an enormous degree and by that carry us a tremendous way nearer to the final world victory of socialism.

Labor Fakers Admit Mussolini's Union

The fascist "Union" delegation was headed by Rossini, who at one time headed an anarchist paper in Boston.

4 COMMUNIST EDITORS JAILED

Fascists Hold Militants Incommunicado

GENEVA, July 13. — The former leading officials of the free trades union confederation (Confederazione Generale del Lavoro) and members of the Communist Party have been arrested and tried by the Fascist police in Rome.

Those arrested are: Giuseppe Amoretti, former editor of the "Unita," the legal and official organ of the Communist Party of Italy: Anna Amoretti, his wife: Dr. Girolamo Li Causi, the former responsible editor of the "Unita"; Signora Li Causi; Eduardo D'Onofria, the former editor of the "Avanguardia", the legal and official organ of the Young Communist League of Italy, and Grandi, a former employee of the "Unita."

Although the arrests took place four weeks ago, the friends and relatives of the arrested men and women have not yet been able to secure any information whatever from the authorities concerning the fate of those arrested. No information can be obtained concerning the charges that will be made against the prisoners.

The maltreatment and torture of prisoners which has been made into a system since the explosion in Milan, for which the Fascists were themselves responsible, justifies the worst fears for the fate of the prisoners.

WORKER SCHOOL IN WASHINGTON

Offer Large Variety of Courses

WINLOCK, Wash., July 3 (By mail).—Fifty-two students at the young workers training school here are engaged in the study of class study problems so that they may be of greater service to the labor movement.

The school began June 23 with a program given by the students and teachers. Soon the classes were organized and the students began work.

Subjects taught at the training school this year are sociology, economics, history of the United States (from the workers' viewpoint), theory, practice and organizational forms of the world's labor movement, public speaking, study circles and discussion periods. The study is by no means confined to the class work and visits are made to factories in this section for actual study of conditions.

Many nationalities are represented at the school, including two Letts and one Chinese student. Instructors are from New York, California and Washington.

After the training school for young workers last year considerable progress was made in organizing the Young Workers Communist League in this district, and the school this year is certain to be of considerable value to the revolutionary youth movement on the Pacific Coast.

WALL ST. LOANS GRIP THE WORLD

Foreign Loans Exceed Record

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Foreign loans during the period from January 1 and July 1 of this year accumulated to over $1,053,164,000, according to the figures of the department of commerce.

This is the first time in American history that capital was shipped at such a rate into other countries, exceeding any previous period and even exceeding the war loans offered for sale in this country during any half year.

The principal borrower is Europe, with Germany as the highest, Canada obtaining largest sums and Latin America running a close third. Latin America, which had borrowed so profusely during 1927, is still borrowing heavily from United States capitalists.

Vare Elected By Bribe is Accusation

PHILADELPHIA, July 13 (UP).—Less than 24 hours after he testified before the senate committee investigating the election of William S. Vare to the senate in 1926, Frederick Schadt, former deputy tax collector, was arrested and taken before the magistrate he named as the payer of tax receipts for some voters.

In his testimony Schadt said the former republican ward committeeman and present Magistrate Edward J. Connor had paid the tax receipts for some of the voters who registered. Yesterday Schadt appeared before Connor for violation of the peace.

Registration can be made any evening at Room 209, 211 Monroe, or 1057 Hamilton N. W. The camp will be in charge of an experienced camp director.

Make Huge Profit

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 13.—While the Sante Fe Railroad bought up the Kansas City, Mexico and Orient Railroad about four years ago and made a profit of $6,000,000, the men working on these systems will have their wages cut so drastically that they will be the lowest paid railroad workers in the country.

When the workers appealed to the Railroad Board of Labor and Mediation, the board meditated. When Coolidge was appealed to, he appointed a board of investigation which reported that the workers were "unjustified" in asking for more money.

U.S.S.R. DENIES GERMAN SPYING

Soviet Berlin Embassy Surprised at Charge

BERLIN, July 13.—The Soviet embassy here yesterday denied knowledge of the existence of espionage in the German aeronautic works by spies working for the Soviet government, as charged by Berlin police. The statement of the Soviet ambassador said that not only had the Soviet government had nothing to do with the alleged espionage, but that it had not heard anything about it until the announcement was made by the Berlin police.

The cause of the charges is the arrest yesterday of Wilhelm Ludwig and two other Germans for their alleged participation in the betrayal of German flying secrets to Moscow.

MOTHER OF TOM MOONEY GIVEN HUGE OVATION

Hold Picnics, Meetings for Frame-Up Victims

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif. (By Mail). — Mrs. Mooney, mother of Tom Mooney, noted class war prisoner, now in San Quentin, was given a great ovation when introduced by Comrade J. E. Snyder at the annual Bay District I. L. D. picnic, held in East Lake Park on July 4.

The picnic, a joint affair of the I. L. D. locals of San Francisco, Oakland, Berkeley and Richmond was turned into an impressive demonstration in the campaign to "Free Mooney and Billings." This opened the Pacific Coast campaign under the direction of Edgar Owens, organizer of the I. L. D., who was principal speaker of the day.

Mrs. Mooney was visibly impressed with the great ovation of the assembled workers. She expressed her pleasure in this demonstration of labor solidarity and her confidence that such support thru the renewed campaign of the I. L. D. was sure to secure the release of her son Tom Mooney and his Comrade Warren K. Billings.

The social feature of the outing was the singing of the Russian-Ukrainian chorus of San Francisco which was cheered into repeated encores.

More picnics and public meetings are being turned into demonstrations for the release of Mooney and Billings according to word from the national office of the I. L. D. Those scheduled for the coming weeks are: Cleveland Mooney-Billings demonstration on the public square, July 27; Akron Picnic July 29; New York Outing at Pleasant Bay Park, Bronx, July 21; Detroit Mooney-Billings International Picnic at Rochester Park, Sunday, August 5.

CAB INSPECTORS LIFT TAXI CARDS

Tammany Officials in New Graft Racket

card. The chances are ten to one, drivers report, that the mailman has not delivered the mail with his card and he is then told to come back the next day.

Wilful Delay

Hundreds of drivers complain that hack inspectors have held up their cards two and three days before mailing them downtown. One driver, who had left his cab in front of an office building on Park Row, had his card picked up. He had merely gone into the building to wash his hands. When he came out he noticed that his card was missing. A private chauffeur told him that a hack inspector had "lifted" the card. The taxi driver went to the Ook St. police station, where he was told by the captain in charge to go to the hack license bureau. It took this driver three days to get his credentials back. This case is typical.

Hack inspectors who take cards in this way are guilty of larceny and are liable to civil or criminal prosecution. Many taxi drivers, it is said, have paid graft to inspectors for the return of their cards.

Same Story

Another driver stated that his card had been taken from his cab while he was inside a coffee pot on Seventh Ave., Harlem, and declared that it was "just another scheme to mulct graft from us drivers. If a meter seal should break on my clock, and they break quite often, it costs me just one 'buck.' But to get my card back is more expensive. If I only had a 'pound' ($5) I could get my card back from that louse (pointing to an inspector walking in the next block) in thirty minutes. It's just a case of graft, graft, graft."

CLOAK CHAIRMEN PLAN BIG DRIVE

Boston Workers Spurn Sigman Pledge

Despite a torrential downpour of rain that continued from the time the workers quit their shops and lasted far into the evening, hundreds of cloakmakers came to the first monthly shop delegates conference yesterday, called by the local committee of the National Organization Committee and occupied every available seat in Webster Hall, 11th St. and Third Ave.

The meeting of workers' representatives enthusiastically discussed and carried thru a series of measures that will further the fight for the reestablishment of union conditions in the ladies' garment making industry.

Hyman Discusses Situation.

After the meeting was opened by J. Cohen, chairman, Louis Hyman, leader of the National Organization Committee, gave a brief survey of the present status of the cloakmakers in the struggle with the bosses and Sigman.

He ridiculed the new blare of trumpets with which the right wing was heralding a second fake organization drive.

A report by the committee secretary on the work of the Organization Committee of 500, which was organized since the original shop delegates' conference, was then delivered.

Plan for Future Work.

The meeting then adopted a plan for future work, the six major points of which are:

1.—Shop chairmen must join the work undertaken by bringing in complaints to the Joint Board and by reporting information about the open shops in the trade.

2.—An intensive campaign is to be launched to bring workers into the organization with the payment of a fee of $3.30.

3.—The organization campaign shall begin with a mass meeting in the Bronx Stadium, which has a seating capacity of between 15,000 and 18,000.

SHIRT WORKERS FIGHT WAGE CUT IN PERTH AMBOY

Young Pioneers Give Picket Aid

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., July 13. —The second day of the strike of young shirt workers here finds the ranks holding fast and firm. A large and strong line of strikers picketed the Jaco Co. today. No one has returned to work and all were present at the strike meeting held this afternoon. The Young Workers (Communist) League is actively participating in the struggle of the young strikers.

The publicity committee, elected yesterday, was refused any space in the local newspapers for news of the strike. The one woman, 74 years of age, who remained in the shop, joined the strike, it was learned late last night.

A leaflet was distributed today to all shirt workers in Perth Amboy urging them to join the Jaco Co. strikers in their fight against the wage-cut and against the speed-up. It calls upon all workers to organize into a union, demands the abolition of the wage-cut, a minimum of $20 a week in place of the $3, $5 and $9 average the bosses intend to pay, an 8-hour day, no piece work, jobs back to those fired when the cut came and recognition of the union so that the workers "will be protected against further cuts.

The Young Workers (Communist) League donated $10 of its own meager funds to aid the young shirt workers in carrying on their strike to victory. The Young Pioneers, the children's section of the Young Workers (Communist) League, has decided that it will aid the strikers in their picket work.

Wall Street Will Drive Al Smith's Bandwagon

John J. Raskob, vice-president and chairman of the finance committee of General Motors, the greatest open-shop concern in the world, has been chosen by Al Smith to be chairman of the democratic national committee. Thus Al dispels all those malicious rumors that it would be a sour day for Big Business if he is elected to succeed the Wall Street footman, Coolidge. Photo shows a happy family scene: from left to right, front row: Nellie Taylor Ross, "progressive" ex-governor of Wyoming; Gov. Smith, Raskob, Senator Joseph T. Robinson, democratic candidate for vice-president; and Herbert H. Lehman, millionaire banker and finance chairman of the democratic national committee.

GIVE OUT "DAILY" AT BELLAS PLANT

Threats of the manager of the Bellas Hess Suit and Cloak Co., on 24th Street, that he would call the police failed yesterday to break up a distribution of hundreds of copies of The DAILY WORKER in front of the shop or prevent the workers from accepting the paper.

Alarmed by the eagerness with which the workers accepted the paper, the manager appeared shortly after distribution began and threatened to call the police.

By the time a policeman arrived however, all the papers were gone and the baffled officer was finally forced to give up.

THE BIGGEST EVENT of the YEAR

A PLEASANT JOB FOR LIFE; A SHORT STORY

BY MARTIN MORIARTY

ON the time clock the shuffling old man with the stolid expression of the oldtimer who has served his twenty-one years in the army was Watkins, No. 939. In the paper cable department of Jolson and Killicks, Electrical Enginners, Inc. he was old Sam. When a rush made him excited he shouted too many orders. Then he became bloody old Sam.

But labels, whether from fellow-worker or time clock, did not worry Sam. He plodded round the shop, chewed richly colored plugs of tobacco contentedly, tightened bolts on the cable drums, taking a just pride in the record of Watkins No. 939 who had punched the time clock ten minutes late only once in fifteen years.

Sam was a good worker. So ruthlessly had army discipline been ironed into him that he had learned to do what he was told without question. He had learned to move with the mass without concerning himself over the wisdom of the movement. His life as a soldier had been planned with the precision of a time-sheet, from "reveille" to "lights out." So, if he was asked to get through with a job by 10:30 he would report ready for the next one at 10:25. He would never sneak out two minutes before quitting time to wash his hands. He would wait for the siren. True, like the others he went outside for a smoke in the morning. But the toilet attendant was never obliged to call "939" to remind Sam that his eight minutes were up. Sam was a good worker. . . .

Sam always swung a wrench in his hand in his wanderings round the shop. His job was to supervise gangs of five or six men as they unwound paper-lapped cable into the pickling tank. At stated periods of the day, in accordance with an instruction slip given him by the shop foreman, Sam would let out the oil in the tanks and adjust the heating apparatus. Then the foreman would give him a gang.

A drum of paper-lapped cable would be pushed into position, and hoisted on a pair of lifting jacks. One man would turn the drum. Another would pull up slack cable. Two others would flake it in the bottom of the tank. Theirs was the worst job. The edge of the tank was hot and sticky with resin and oil. The heat would rise up from the bottom of the tank, making the throat dry and wafting a smell of stale smoked fish in the nose.

SAM would stand by, giving a hand where necessary. He had a thick, bellowing voice and was not slow to shout when the foreman was around. The gang would either laugh loudly as if they knew how to take a joke, or mutter something about bloody old Sam and what he could do with his cable drums. For even though he had the patience of stolidity, he could become irritated by trifles. If a new man wanted to tie a tag on a cable end, Sam would tell him to get out of the way. He liked to tie the tag himself.

Newcomers to the factory would find Sam interesting and amusing. They would wonder sometimes at his absorption in a world of wrenches and cable drums. If they wanted to razz him, they would quote the remark of an office clerk who once said that Sam's coming was heralded half an hour in advance. He did possess rather a full nose. It was broad and pugnacious. It was the nose of a private who had drunk beer in the army canteen for twenty-one years.

His eyes were pale blue and watery—the eyes of the city, dull, lifeless, seeing nothing but cable drums, wrenches and time sheets. His misshapen teeth were stained a dull brown from chewing many plugs of tobacco. Two front teeth were missing, which accounted for a slight lisp in his bellowing voice. The few strands of colorless hair on his head were brushed into a military quiff. The "quiff" would show beneath the peak of the old cap thrown on the back of his head.

For fifteen years Sam had obeyed orders, tightened bolts and organised vacuum tank gangs till he performed his job as naturally and mechanically as he shined officers shoes and cleaned latrines in the army.

THEN the job changed.

Jolson and Killicks had made handsome profits for several years. Engineers were reorganizing the shop machinery. New equipment did better work with less men. On the latest model paper cable lapping machines electric clocks were installed. They stopped when the machine stopped. On a slip of paper attached to the clock the driver wrote down the reason for the stoppage. Four speed men were fired—they were no longer necessary.

Huge vacuum tanks were built in place of the old, and in the great work of re-organization Sam was called upon to fit in. He had to empty the oil from the tanks just as before. When cable was ready for soaking he signalled Jack the crane driver. While Jack was coming he swung open the doors of the new tanks. Two men slung the cable drum to the crane hooks. They helped guide it into position as the crane lifted the drum into the tank. Then they would go, and leave the rest to Sam.

The wrench was still Sam's crucifix. He closed the doors and tightened up every bolt from the bottom to the top of the tank religiously. He would kneel on the concrete floor to tighten the lower bolts. To get to those at the top he would use a ladder.

THE taste of noon-day beer was still in Sam's mouth as he climbed the ladder on Monday afternoon. He drew his hand across his mouth reminiscently before he started working with the wrench. The bolts were good and and tight. Up one step. Tighten. Another step. Turn. His head was nearly level with the crane rail.

Jack the craneman was busy. The foreman had bawled him out for punching in after second siren after lunch. Everyone wanted him. He slammed the controller of the crane to high as the lead press man signalled.

Sam was at the second bolt from the top. They had good beer at the Brown Bear. Turn wrench. Try the Bear again tomorrow. "Look out Sam!" someone yelled.

Jack was too slow with the brakes. The iron girder of the crane smashed into Sam's face as he turned around. The edge of the girder sliced off the tip of his nose like a razor blade as the crane was slowing down. The blood gushed from his forehead and eyes and nose and he felt the crunch of breaking teeth. The wrench hit the concrete floor with a little clang. He dropped, shrieking in agony. But he got up, pointing a trembling finger to Jack, while the blood soaked into his shirt, "Oh, you b——!" he shrieked. "You done it!" You done it! You mad b——!" Then he fainted.

A machine driver brought an old sack for him to lie on. It was greasy and stank of oil and resin. Then the ambulance came.

SAM was off work six months before he swung the wrench again. The surgeon had left some of his nose. There was a big scar on his forehead which showed up white against the yellow skin. His eyes watered a lot, and he had to bathe them with boracic every night. And once, when he was working night shift, he found Ted the wire-winder pouring tea in his cup. "Don't use that cup, Ted," he said. "I just washed me eye in it." "Oh Christ," Ted said, and vomited.

The suggestion of the lisp was gone—he had no teeth. And he was no longer the loud mouthed old b—— Sam. He became old Sam. His voice was thin and piping, like the voice of an old man selling shoelaces on the market square.

The machine driver who put the sack under him would tell the story to every new man told off to help him.

"What compensation did he get?" he was asked one night.

"Ah, he got compensation while he was out. When he came back the firm offered him a lump sum or a job for life. He took the job for life. Sam always wanted a steady job."

U. S. POLICY TOWARD THE USSR

THE history of the Soviet-American relations, from the October Revolution to the recent refusal of the U. S. Treasury to accept a shipment of Soviet gold, is contained in a volume published by International Publishers, New York, "American Policy Toward Russia Since 1917," by Frederick Lewis Schuman, an instructor in Political Science in the University of Chicago.

The author traces the gradual development of American policy from blockade and armed intervention in 1917-1918 to the pretended policy of "Trade Without Recognition" in 1928. In conclusion, the policy of the United States toward the Soviet Union is summarized as follows:

"The United States, alone of the world powers, has refused recognition and has acted upon the assumption of the impossibility of peaceable intercourse and the inevitability of conflict. . . . Few would contend that the American government has handled the Russian problem since 1917 in a manner to contribute to international peace and understanding. Its past behavior, though intelligible to the American student as a natural manifestation of the fear and aversion with which the dominant class of one social order views another which casts its sacred idols in the mire and threatens it with destruction, can appear to Russians only as an incomprehensible combination of muddle-headed stupidity and scheming malevolence. Its present policy, like that of the Baldwin cabinet in Great Britain since May, 1927, rejects all hope of peace and reconciliation and proclaims implacable war between capitalism and Communism until one has destroyed the other or both have destroyed civilization between them."

THE recent attempts of Secretary of State Kellogg and Under-Secretary of the Treasury Mills (Hoover's lieutenant) to assert that the policy of non-recognition is no obstacle to commerce are refuted by the actions of the state department and the treasury department, respectively, in opposing Soviet credits and refusing to accept Soviet gold. The author points out that the recent gold rejection, "like the ban on long term loans, constitutes an important qualification to the official policy of 'trade without recognition.'" "The official position maintained at Washington, that non-recognition does not constitute an obstacle to commerce, is therefore not in accordance with the facts."

The Story of Sacco and Vanzetti in Literature

By WALT CARMON

THOUGH the monstrous murder of Sacco and Vanzetti occurred only one year ago, there is already a substantial and growing literature to remind us of the facts of their innocence, their courage, their loyalty to the working class and the great movement of world labor in their behalf. Workers will find in this literature much interest and much inspiration for their activity in the struggle.

"The Life and Death of Sacco and Vanzetti," by Eugene Lyons, is dramatic reading. It is the complete story of the two workers who came from Italy to the "land of opportunity," their struggle for a livelihood, their activity in the labor movement and finally their judicial murder.

"Sacco and Vanzetti—Labor's Martyrs," by Max Shachtman, presents just as dramatic reading, with a sharper working class viewpoint.

John Dos Passos, noted poet and playwright, wrote of the frame-up more briefly in a pamphlet, "Facing the Chair."

"The case of Sacco and Vanzetti," by Felix Frankfurter, is a lawyer's analysis of the evidence and facts.

All of these have much of interest for the worker. Here is the history, the evidence, the drama and the lessons of the great crime. But poetry and art were also effected. Stirred by the fierce struggle between the oligarchy and the workers for the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti, Fred Ellis, noted staff artist of The DAILY WORKER, for a full month preceding the execution, contributed a series of powerful cartoons that attracted attention not only throughout the country, but in Europe and Latin America as well. These drawings are issued in the collection, "The Case of Sacco and Vanzetti in Cartoons."

"An Anthology of Poetry on Sacco and Vanzetti" contains but little of value. Editing and most of the poetry coming from writers far removed from the labor movement, their horror is expressed in purely humanitarian approach. It does, however, include some good verse which appeared in the radical press, particularly "Murder at Midnight," by A. B. Magil.

Motion pictures of those stirring days have been ordered destroyed. The ruling class wants no visible evidence of their black deed. The daily press accounts and magazine articles must be found in the files of libraries. This literature, meager as yet, but growing, will serve as labor history to remind us ever of the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti—two martyrs of our class.

"Everyone in Moscow Now Buys Books"

By CLARINA MICHELSON

ALL Moscow is buying books. The annual two weeks' "Book Market" is on. On a long boulevard stretching from the statue of Pushkin to the statue of Timiriasev are over 100 gaily decorated booths where books are being sold—scientific books, children's books, works by Lenin, French magazines, books on economics, books on the theatre, books of poems, books of cartoons, English Tauschnitz editions, books on the radio, the new Soviet Encyclopedia, old books, new books, books on every conceivable subject.

An orchestra is playing. Some children are dancing. Others are digging in a large sand pile. Red streamers stretched across the boulevard read: "Books are needed as much as bread." "Without books man is blind." "Without books workers are slaves." Up and down the workers, men and women, looking, buying, reading.

STEEL WORKERS CALL OFF 7 YEAR STRIKE

NEWPORT, Ky., July 12 (FP).—The steel strike of Newport, begun July 7, 1921, is over. It was called off after exactly 7 years of struggle, ending in defeat for Locals 5, 15, 16 and 17 of the Amalgamated Assn. of Iron, Steel & Tin Workers. The fight was waged for union recognition. The Andrews Steel Co. and the Newport Rolling Mill Co. were ready to recognize Local 5 of the skilled steel workers but would not recognize the semi-skilled and unskilled in the other locals of the union. All the 1900 workers struck together.

Governor Sends Tanks.

It was a winning strike until Gov. Morrow of Kentucky sent armored tanks and machine gun companies to Newport. Homes of strikers were riddled with bullets, tanks rode down pickets. Federal Judge Cochran granted injunctions that set a new record for judicial oppression though they have been surpassed since by many other state and federal judges. Gunmen ran wild.

"Our" Government.

Morrow's political career in Kentucky did not last long after that but the Harding-Coolidge national administration rewarded his services to the steel trust by putting him on the rail labor board. When the railroad unions succeeded in having the board abolished Coolidge put Morrow on the rail mediation board under the Watson-Parker act.

The steel workers, out for 7 years, will try to regain their old jobs. The companies are said to be willing to rehire a considerable proportion.

Workers of Two Trains Escape Death

SHELBURNE FALLS, Mass., July 13 (UP). — Members of two train crews escaped injury here today when a locomotive and eight cars were derailed at the Shelburne Falls station of the Boston and Maine Railroad.

A Troy-Deerfield freight train was standing near the station when a Mechanicsville-Ayer freight train crashed into it. Several cars were demolished and their contents thrown against the station, one end of which was considerably damaged.

FASCIST POLICE TORTURE WOMAN

KISHINEFF, Rumania, July 13.—After being submitted to cruel tortures for three days by the Rumanian police to extract "information," Mme. Kollantay, aunt of the Soviet ambassador to Norway, was declared insane and taken to an insane asylum in a straitjacket.

She was arrested in connection with the murder of an editor of a monarchist newspaper, and the Rumanian police took this as an opportunity to attempt to make her "talk." The information extracting torture was so severe, that either she really became insane or was declared so by the police in order to get rid of her after their false charges.

She was charged with lodging a Soviet spy in her house, and was therefore considered by the police as a person who had much desirable information.

McGarry Forces Mine Strikers Back to Work

WILKES-BARRE, July 13—Frank McGarry, so-called insurgent president of district No. 1, forced miners of the Florence Colliery working under the Lehigh & Wilkes-Barre Valley Coal Mining Co., at Dupont to go back to work, stating that grievances would be taken up by him with the representatives of the same company.

DRAMA

Theremin, Volpe, Roxy Ballet to Feature Big Concert Tonight

THE program of the massive concert and entertainment, to be given tonight at the Coney Island Stadium, will be divided into three parts. Arnold Volpe and a symphony orchestra of fifty musicians from the major orchestras of the city; the Roxy Ballet, directed by I. Nelle, and Prof. Leon Theremin, the noted and brilliant Russian inventor.

Arnold Volpe will lead his orchestra in the following program: the Coronation March from Meyerbeer's opera, "The Prophet"; the famous Rienzi Overture of Wagner, "Caucasian Sketches" by Ippolitow-Ivanov, Fantasy from Bizet's opera, "Carmen," and the popular "Marche Slave" by Tschaikovsky.

The orchestral numbers will be followed by the Roxy Ballet under the direction of I. Nelle. The numbers include popular Gypsy dances and the Mazourka from Delibes' ballet, "Coppelia" and a group of dances from Gounod's opera "Faust." Other numbers will follow later in the evening.

Prof. Leon Theremin, the world-famous scientist and inventor, called the Russian Edison, will be reserved for the climax of the evening's entertainment. Theremin will again demonstrate his remarkable invention by which he draws music out of the air, and will play both solos and with orchestra accompaniment. In the solos he will be accompanied on the piano by Arie Abileah.

His solo numbers will be "Night" by Rubinstein and Etude by Scriabine. With orchestra accompaniment he will play Golterman's Concerto in A Minor and Saint-Saens' famous composition, "The Swan."

"STARK LOVE" AND "MOANA" AT CAME OTODAY

Beginning today the Film Arts Guild is presenting at the Cameo Theatre for its revival showing "Stark Love," the motion picture of life among the southern mountaineers, which is actually portrayed by the natives. This film which was directed by Karl Brown, is being shown coincidentally with its release in Europe where it received an excellent reception in all the continental capitals.

The companion film to "Stark Love" is Robert J. Flaherty's cinema of the South Sea Islands, "Moana." On the same program the Film Arts Guild has exhumed from private vaults some unique examples of the earliest films ever taken including what is reputed to be the very first motion picture ever "shot," that called "The Charge of the French Brigade." This selection is particularly notable because it contains the very first screen test ever submitted to by Charlie Chaplin. In the short space of about fifty feet we see Charlie exhibiting his famous waddle-walk and shoulder-shrug, which was later to convulse the nations and to give him the first universal niche in the motion picture hall of fame.

League Worries CMTC Officers

FORT EUSTIS, Va., July 13. — The first lecture given to the Citizens Military Training Camp recruits here was devoted to denunciation of letters sent to those going to the camps by the Young Workers (Communist) League in Philadelphia.

C. M. T. C. recruits were warned of the danger of reading radical literature, and all who believe in the rule of Morgan were called upon to defend "their" institutions against the "Reds."

The letters, which worry the military authorities so much, pointed out to young workers going to the camps the role of the CMTC and the nature of the preparations for new imperialist wars.

Labor Fakers Brew Votes for Wall St.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, July 13 (U P).. — The executive board of the International Union of Brewery, Flour, Cereal and Soft Drinks Workers has endorsed Gov. Smith for president.

The board denounced the present republican administration because it is committed to destruction to local government through attempted enforcement of the Volstead act, unwarranted invasion of personal rights, destruction of the principles of personal liberty and destruction of home life and child welfare.

HEADS THE ROXY BALLET AT MASSIVE CONCERT

I. Nelle, noted and talented dancer will appear with the famous Roxy Ballet in the special concert at the Coney Island Stadium this evening.

LONDON, July 13. (UP). — Four persons were killed today when a small, single engined Imperial Airways plane crashed at Purley, the Imperial Airways announced.

All of those killed were employes of the Croydon airdrome.

Early reports said that the plane, generally used to carry baggage on the London-to-Continent air route, had been taken out by several members of the Croydon staff. Those in the plane included two women, and three men besides the pilot.

Signs of Coming Storm

The crash of the stock market for a record drop since the declaration of the World War in 1914 following upon an almost equal drop a month ago undoubtedly points to certain significant forces at work both in the financial and industrial structure of American capitalism. These are not yet basic, but they cut both deep and wide.

Primarily the present developments are connected with gold movements and with credit operations. But these in turn are directly related if not entirely determined by the increasing surplus of goods which the American market is unable to absorb and the continued disparity betwen agricultural and industrial wages.

Under the theory that "easy money," that is easy credit, would by facilitating borrowing for commercial purposes, increase business and maintain "prosperity," the Federal Reserve System has since the war adhered to a policy of a low rediscount rate. Whether or not the ruling finance capitalists who operate through the Federal Reserve Bank and through it control practically the world economic structure, really believed that they could by this means solve the fundamental contradiction of capitalism, the inability of the masses under a money economy to buy back the product which they create, is not important. The program of encouraging business by tremendous credit extensions, installment buying, low discount rates, nevertheless, met with the inevitable wall of the surplus value which the working masses do not, of course, receive and which the capitalists cannot consume.

Rising unemployment, an increasing disparity between agricultural and industrial prices, forced a change in policy about the middle of last year. A qualified restriction of credit effected by an increase in the rediscount rate was adopted. At the same time the Federal Reserve Bank dumped hundreds of millions of government securities on the market with the object of absorbing free funds in use for either speculation or excessive business operations. The heavy export of gold used to stabilize European currencies, particularly that of France, has acted similarly to restrict the basis of credit operations in this country.

None of these have suffered to solve the inevitable contradictions of capitalist economy. The stock market not now as indicative of basic conditions as in the past, nevertheless, in its record crash reflects the play of fundamental processes. Referring to the sudden spurt in call money which rose to 10 per cent on the stock market on Monday July 2, Emerson Wirt Axe, writing in the "Annalist" of July 6th declared:

> "Under normal conditions money does not go to 10 per cent even temporarily. It is high time that the public realized that we are faced today with a credit situation nearly as dangerous as that of 1906 or 1920."

Finance capital in the United States still believes there is a way out of the growing disparity between agricultural and industrial prices: depression in wages of labor. American policy in recent weeks has been devised specifically to increase the value of gold with the ultimate aim of depressing the wage scale and thus restoring parity between the farmer and the wage slave.

It is an elementary proposition in Marxian economics that this device will only add to the existing contradictions by creating larger surpluses which the "market" cannot consume.

American capitalism is not yet facing a major crisis but it will have its hands full with the growing youngster.

Those Bolsheviks —

Seven men, given up as lost in the ice-deserts of the north, have been rescued by the Soviet ice-breaker, Krassin. After weeks of heart-breaking effort, of petty rivalry among various "humanitarian" capitalist countries, it remained for an aviator of the Soviet Union, Chukhnovsky, and a Soviet ship to effect the rescue of the fascist Nobile party.

The policy and tactics of the Soviet Union thruout this rescue work have been in striking contrast to the behavior of the capitalist nations. The expedition of Gen. Umberto Nobile into the north was hardly actuated by scientific motives. It was primarily an inflated publicity stunt for the greater glory of Italian fascism and Gen. Nobile himself. Yet when it became definitely known that the Nobile party had met with disaster and was in danger, the Soviet Union immediately offered the resources at its command in the rescue work. The original aims of the expedition had failed miserably. Only the practical task of saving 16 human beings now remained.

What co-operation did it receive from the rescue parties of other countries? None at all. The Soviet government proposed that a central commission be formed to direct the rescue work in an organized fashion. The fascist Italian government and the governments of the countries that had sent out rescue parties refused. It would have been too great a concession for the capitalist nations for them to accept the plan of their hated enemy, the first workers' and peasants' republic.

And when Lieut. Lundborg, the Swedish aviator, finally succeeded in locating one group of the lost expedition, whom did he rescue? The fascist Gen. Nobile, leaving the others to shift for themselves.

Now even the capitalist press is forced to praise the Soviet ice-breaker Krassin and the heroic aviator, Chukhnovsky, who has himself been temporarily stranded with his companions. It is a bitter pill for the capitalist countries to swallow. The Krassin is proceeding with the rescue work. Seven men have been saved and another party is reported to have been sighted.

Meanwhile the toll of this grandiose fascist expedition thus far is two known dead, with 15 others, including the Amundsen rescue party, still lost—perhaps forever.

Marine Life in Nicaragua

Capitalism has little gratitude for those who do its dirty work. Soldiers may be "heroes" when there is a shortage of cannon fodder, but after the bosses' profits are safe the brave are but rubbish cast aside.

The life of servicemen in Nicaragua, revealed by a letter from a marine, published a few days ago in The DAILY WORKER, illustrates the gratitude of Wall Street to those who defend its investments.

Visions are presented to the young workers of the delights to be enjoyed in Nicaragua. When on arrival he finds himself actually a prisoner with no prospect of release, the glitter of abstract soldiering turns into the dross of reality, when the recruit finds himself forced to carry ninety-four pounds of equipment thirty miles daily thru mud knee deep, to replace oxen in pulling supply wagons the enchantment borne of distance and the lying tongue of a recruiting officer soon fades.

These marines learn to know the facts of their actual conditions, but few realize that when they are fighting against the freedom of Nicaragua they are continuing their own enslavement.

The two marines who deserted the imperialist forces of intervention to join the army of Sandino pointed out the only road to their freedom and followed the true interests of the servicemen who have been sent to Nicaragua by Wall Street.

TORTURE USED IN INDIAN PRISONS

LONDON, July 12.—Writing in the Communist newspaper, Workers' Life, George Allison, who recently was released from prison in India, tells of prison conditions there.

Allison, an English miner, went to India to help trade union organization. To prevent his activities among the Indian workers, Allison was imprisoned 18 months on a technical charge of violating passport regulations. He served his sentence in the Yeravda prison, near Poona.

Breakfast of "Kunji."

Were the conditions of the "white" prisoners are much better than those of the natives, they were subjected to extremely harsh treatment and brutal tortures.

They rose at 6 every morning were given thirty minutes' drill and then breakfeast of "Kunji." During the rest of the day, until 4 o'clock, they worked in their cells. The work, for the most part, consisted of grinding meal between two small millstones, making envelopes and making quinine tablets. At night, during most of the period Allison was confined, there were no lights in the cells.

Use Salted Rod.

For the slightest excuse, the prisoners were punished by flogging, being forced to wear clothing next to the skin made of coarse sacking, and to work with iron bars fastened to the legs from ankles to the waist. On some occasions, as many as 30 prisoners were flogged in one day. The victims were tied to a triangular wooden frame, their arms stretched upwards, and flogged with a salted rod. Among the "crimes" for which such punishments are given is that of having a pencil.

Lawmakers as Lawbreakers and Why They Are Out of Jail

(EDITORIAL NOTE: The following letter written to The DAILY WORKER by Charles Bright, an engineer and former builder, who has fought crooked judges, officials and politicians and "money power" their master, big business and other servants of big business for many years, is timely in connection with the arrests of our comrades for their participation in the July 4 demonstration in Wall Street.)

Editor, DAILY WORKER:
Sir:

From the daily press and The DAILY WORKER I gather that Robert Minor, editor of The DAILY WORKER and Workers (Communist) Party candidate for the United States senate, was assaulted by the police and dragged by the heels from an automobile when making an address near the corner of Broad and Wall Sts., New York City, against the imperialist acts of our president in waging an illegal and unauthorized war carried on at the behest of interested American capitalists, schemers, and their political tools against that part of the patriotic people of a weak and almost defenseless nation. Nicaragua who object to and resist such invasions of their sovereignty—people who refuse to acknowledge the authority of Diaz, a former clerk of these foreign capitalists, to act as president of Nicaragua.

Acts of Terrorism.

This man Diaz, they declare, has been unconstitutionally seated there by the money and armed forces of foreigners, and is now sustained in power by the military forces of the United States and principally by their acts of terrorism in dropping bombs from their places of vantage and safety in the American military planes above, upon the homes of these patriots and their non-combatant women and children, and upon their heads in the brush where they rush for shelter and safety should they unfortunately make any movement that would indicate the presence of an animal or human being to the American military aviators above.

The daily press further stated that the candidate for the U. S senate was charged at the police station with the offense of speaking without a permit. From the same sources I learned that when Minor attempted to exercise his legal rights to address the court after Magistrate Maurice H. Gottlieb had pronounced the sentence of $25 fine or five days in jail, he was manhandled and forced into prison.

Misconduct of Police.

Upon these two points, "Arrests for speaking without a permit," and "misconduct of police magistrates of the city of New York in denying accused parties their legal and constitutional rights and fair hearing." I happen to be a qualified expert and perhaps New York's most successful expert judging by results. For I have won out in the end in every case, either at the station house, or in a dozen cases tried out at the police courts, and in one case of alleged criminal libel tried out before a jury for nine days in the Court of General Sessions, all ending with "not guilty."

In each case I traced the false arrest or interference back to its source. In the beginning I always found the arrest was due to the agents of the crooked judges, officials and lawyers whom I am exposing for conniving with the Rockefeller group in putting through the courts a series of frauds.

These criminal acts are now the subject matter of an action pending and brought by me in the supreme court of Queens county against the Rockefellers, certain judges, and others for damages for their guilty participation in said frauds.

Improper Influences.

Of late I have found that I was interfered with and molested and even arrested but the charges not accepted at the precinct station, not only because of the above mentioned improper influences, but because I was interfering unwittingly with certain "Racketeers of Justice," or what might be described in short as the "graft" of certain magistrates, police court clerks, prosecuting attorneys and officials and a few police officers and the politicians or district leaders, or their captains, lieutenants and aides, and other accomplices involved.

In the Bronx I have just completed gathering the necessary legal evidence against a magistrate, a prosecuting attorney, a clerk of the court, a police sergeant, detectives and others who utilize the West Farms Police Court as a base from which they work this racket.

"Absent" Officials.

I am forced to go slow because the district attorney of the Bronx is absent on vacation, likewise his assistant Mr. Ryan. Then the Commissioner of Police Warren is hard to see on such matters. The acting mayor objects to go into such matters while the mayor is absent and the mayor is not expected before August. So we are now preparing to lay it before Governor Smith who has the power of removing the district attorney for negligently failing to act after being advised of these violations of the criminal law and who likewise can act should Mayor Walker fail to compel the police commissioner to do his duty.

Since I have unwittingly interfered with and spoiled the graft of these Racketeers of Justice, I am suffering a new form of molestation as a result of a conspiracy in violation of Section 19 of the U. S Criminal Code to feloniously prevent me, among other things, from exercising my legal rights under the first and fourteenth amendments of the constitution to circulate and obtain signatures to a petition to congress of the Equality League, Inc. for investigation and impeachment of certain federal judges.

This new hostile spirit was manifested as soon as a late copy of my magazines "Vigilante" and "The Vigilant American" disclosed the fact that the sheriff of New York was involved and that some of the big "higher-ups" in Tammany had been influenced by George Gordon Battle, the "liason officer" employed by the Rockefeller group in procuring certain democratic magistrates, judges, and district attorneys and officials of justice to misconduct matters officially before them. I am sending you several issues of my magazines that contain these charges as well as part of the incriminating documentary evidence to sustain and prove my charges.

While police headquarters admit that I have the legal right to do what I am doing, and the manner in which I am proceeding, it is obvious that the police department heads are woefully inefficient and incompetent, or that they are not acting in good faith.

At any rate, they are not able to stop the unlawful acts, illegal molestations and uncalled for interferences of their patrolmen, sergeants and officials, and with the evidence our Vigilantes have now collected, I can not resist the conclusion that it is but the carrying out of a criminal conspiracy to injure, threaten, coerce and intimidate me and others associated with me in the exercise of our legal rights in violation of section 19 of the Criminal Code which makes such offenses punishable with 10 years imprisonment and $5,000 fine.

Distort Law.

This law was originally passed to suppress the activities of the Ku Klux Klan, but now covers all conspiracies against the legal rights of citizens. I note that while Police Commissioner Warren is quick to take action against assemblage and processions of the K. K. K., he is practically inaccessable when a citizen wishes to end the criminal practices of certain members of his force when operating in collusion with certain "Racketeers of Justice."

Told You So

The Workers (Communist) Party will regard the Communist vote cast in the next elections as a barometer of the revolutionary temperature of the masses, but campaigning for votes for the sake of votes is not on its agenda. A glance at The DAILY WORKER or any other Communist organ proves this. The Party concerns itself with the miners' strike, with the textile workers' strike, with the fight to release class war prisoners, with the organization of the unorganized, and with the many other burning issues that face the American workers today.

The Communist Party participates in the elections in order to mobilize the masses for struggle, to expose capitalist democracy, and to teach them that only thru a revolutionary struggle can capitalism be abolished. Nevertheless, when it nominates its candidates for the various legislative bodies, it intends to strive to the utmost to have them elected, in order that these legislative bodies may be used as a forum from which to advocate the overthrow of the capitalist system.

The socialist "New Leader" boasts that Herr Hermann Mueller, the German socialist leader, has succeeded in organizing a cabinet tho this cabinet includes only four socialists out of a total of eleven. What a victory! Is it not surprising that the old monarchist worshipper, Von Hindenburg, should approve this selection?

The British labor party, headed by the socialist MacDonald, has issued its platform, which declares its approval of American imperialism by endorsing the fake Kellogg peace treaty. It should not be forgotten that it was during the premiership of MacDonald that the Dawes Plan was fastened on Germany with the valuable assistance of MacDonald. International socialism is all things to all imperialisms.

Every dollar contributed to the Communist Election Campaign Fund will help to bring the workers a step nearer to a Workers' and Farmers' Government, which means the rule of the workers and farmers with the capitalists having the choice of going to work or quietly starving. There can be no solution of the class struggle short of this. Leaders may sell out to the enemy, but the great mass of the workers and farmers cannot be bribed by the capitalist class. There are too many of them.

In this campaign the Workers (Communist) Party will mobilize the workers in the industries and the exploited farmers in agriculture for a fight against the capitalist system. The $100,000 Communist Party Election Campaign Fund will be used for this purpose. The treasure chests of the other parties will be used to put officials in office who will serve the master class and who will profit by the system they live on and defend. The raising of this Communist campaign fund is a first charge on the duty of the Party membership.

Andrew Mellon, secretary of the treasury, is able to show a treasury surplus of $398,000,000. This is offered as evidence by the supporters of the republican administration that prosperity is still with us. Unfortunately for this contention however approximately 4,000,000 unemployed and the low wages received by those employed does not bear out the boasts of the G. O. P. boosters.

The Textile Strikers and the Election

New Bedford Mill Workers Rally Behind the Workers (Communist) Party

By OLGA GOLD

The process of "rationalizing" the textile industry has affected it to a greater extent than most other industries. Not only has the installation of new machinery left thousands of experienced workers jobless, but the shifting of textile mills' cotton to the southern states, silk to the coal regions, have contributed greatly to this process.

The capitalists have discovered that the south is an extremely good place for the slave driving textile industry. In the first place, it is close to the raw material; in the second place, there is, as yet, no sign of organization among the workers. In the south, where all the evils of chattel slavery exist in practice, the workers are consequently more submissive.

Must Sign Contract

In many instances a worker cannot obtain employment in the south unless he signs a contract that his whole family will work for the same slave driver. The following table, from the "Monthly Labor Review," shows average wages and hours of labor in cotton goods manufacturing for 1925; since then several wage cuts have been forced upon the workers:

State	Hours	Wages
Georgia	57	$11.39
Alabama	54.8	10.51
Maine	53.9	16.67
Massachusetts	48.5	18.78
North Carolina	55.8	13.63
South Carolina	55.1	13.42
Virginia	55.2	10.33

The mills in the coal regions are of no less value to the bosses. There, too, they can get cheap coal, cheap rent and cheaper labor. Workers are paid as low as 15 to 20 cents an hour. They are on a different economic plane from the workers in the textile centers, because there men and women find their only means of earning a living, whereas in the mining region, except for a few mechanics, the workers are all women and children, who use their work as a side job to help out the meager earnings received by the miners. The bosses here, therefore, pay a much lower wage than even the very low average paid in the textile centers.

The general outcome of this situation for the workers is the unprecedented growth of unemployment, wage cuts, etc. Official government statistics show that in March 1928, only 38 per cent of cotton workers were working full time. While in April, 1928, cotton goods workers only 32 per cent, silk goods workers 48 per cent, woolen and worsted workers 28 per cent worked full time.

There are thousands of skilled workers in the New England textile centers who have lost hope of ever securing employment. Hundreds of families who have resided in the textile area for years are compelled daily to leave the communities. In New England men depend economically on the women, who, because their labor power is much cheaper, obtain work more easily than the men. A specific instance is that of a Polish woman of my acquaintance who made $16.00 weekly and had to support her husband and little ones. And such cases are extremely common.

Some Factors

Some of the important factors of the present cotton workers' strike in New Bedford are as follows: First, it indicates the awakening of the most exploited section of the American working class; that the sufferings of these workers have reached such a degree that they can no longer endure it. They are beginning to awaken to the need of calling strikes, protesting and demanding their rights. They are determined to build a new union to include not only a few loomfixers and a few other skilled workers, but to embrace the entire mass of textile workers. Another important factor of utmost significance is that the strike is taking place during an election year at the time when the capitalist class is most energetically and effectively carrying on a campaign to poison the minds of the workers with various injurious illusions about its government. These workers are learning daily on the picket lines and at mass meetings about the nature and structure of this government. The knowledge which the workers are obtaining about the functioning of the capitalist state during strikes is of far greater value than that gained through academic education.

Become Disillusioned

Here the workers, directly through the harsh, tyrannical measures of the police, are slowly becoming disillusioned about the impartiality of our governmental apparatus. It is thus shown to the workers that against the efforts of the working class to improve its standard of living, to demand a little more of the values which we, the workers, have produced, the capitalists are fighting with all the weapons in their possession, press, court, church, etc.

During election they will challenge the bosses; that they will do this is shown by the fact that they sent representative Eulalie Mendes to greet the National Nominating Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party, which was held in New York City May 25, 26 and 27. In her greetings on behalf of the 26,000 workers she told us of the role of the police, of the discovery of who is their enemy and who their friend, and that they see that those leaders who are labelled as Communists are always in the forefront of the struggle, unafraid of the terrors the bosses use against them.

Our Own Candidates

She told us, too, that she was instructed to ask the Workers Party to put up Albert Weisbord, national secretary of the Textile Mills Committees, in opposition to Butler, who is chief adviser to Coolidge and himself a manufacturer.

We are sure that the workers of New Bedford will not only register their vote for labor candidates, but the most class-conscious of them will follow in the steps of the 500 fighting miners who recently joined the Workers Party and together with the thousands of militant men and women fight the battles of the working class, to its victory.

THREE THOUSAND MINERS STRIKE IN ANTHRACITE

Walk Out When Boss Attacks Worker

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

NANTICOCKE, Pa., July 13. — Three thousand miners and mine workers of collieries 5 and 7 of the Suquehanna Coal Company went on strike when section foreman of the colliery, Robert Davis, beat up the motorman, John Beyer. The miners demand that section foreman Davis be discharged and punished in accordance with the mine rules. Beyer was beaten up by the foreman when he 'disobeyed' some rulings of the boss.

This brutally of the bosses has aroused miners in Nanticocke, and they are determined to stay on strike until boss Davis will be discharged.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., July 13. Over 1,500 mine workers, members of the local union No. 1432, working in Maxwell colliery No. 20 of Lehigh and Wilkes-Barre Coal Co. went out on strike today against the coal company who by speeding up has in the past several weeks fired 30 men from the job without making any provisions for them. District organizer Mile Sweeney, as usual is trying to force the local union No. 1432 into going back to work without provisions being made for the discharged miners.

PORTER IS HELD INCOMMUNICADO

I. L. D. to Force Hearing in the Courts

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., June 13. —John Porter, textile strike leader and organizer of the Communist Youth League here, is being held incommunicado at the Fort Adams R. I. guard house. No news has been received from Porter for several days, and it is feared that the authorities are using the most extreme tortures to break down his spirit and prevent the militant stand before the court-martial he has declared that he will make. No reply has been received to letters and telegrams sent to Porter.

The last news from Porter said that the authorities are trying to weaken his attitude. At that time, he was in solitary confinement because of his revolutionary stand and had become ill as a result of the brutal treatment to which he has been subjected since arrest June 18.

The International Labor Defense has announced that action will be started in the courts; and if the army officers continue their refusal to make charges and set a date for trial, the I. L. D. attorneys will begin habeas corpus proceedings.

JUGOSLAV CHIEF OF POLICE KILLED

BELGRADE, Jugoslavia, July 13 —The unrest in the Jugoslav Serb-Macedonia-Croat kingdom arising out of the enmity of the national groups and precipitated by the assassination of Gen. Protogeroff Macedonian nationalist leader, has led to the assassination of Lazarevitch, chief of the political police and chief of the police in Belgrade.

Lazarevitch was chief of the Macedonian department of the ministry of the interior before he assumed his post in Belgrade. While in Macedonia he ruthlessly suppressed all strikes and national uprisings, and made a [illegible] for himself as a terrorist.

PRISON FOR AID TO SERVICEMEN

LONDON, July 13.—Four Blantyre miners recently were sentenced to jail for one month on a charge of "exciting disaffection, commotion and resistance to lawful authority" by distributing a leaflet to troops at Hamilton Barracks.

The leaflet called on the soldiers to make "doddering old commanding officers sit up" and to fight for the right to join unions and to wear civilian clothes when off duty.

According to the British laws, any one [illegible] sent to prison for agitating [illegible] better conditions for the servicemen.

Big Business will direct the campaign of Al Smith directly without recourse to a middleman. So Al has "selected" John J. Raskob is worth more than $100,000,000.

DAILY WORKER CONCERT TONITE

Gitlow to Speak at Big Demonstration

Tonight is the night. Thousands of workers — to be more specific, some 25,000 of them — will gather in Coney Island Stadium at the greatest proletarian concert ever held in this country, arranged by The DAILY WORKER.

All the participating artists, who have been rehearsing faithfully during the past few weeks, have put the finishing touches on their work. When Arnold Volpe lifts up his baton to lead his orchestra of 50 picked musicians in the Coronation March from Meyerbeer's opera, The Prophet, it will inaugurate an event which will make musical history.

The Roxy Ballet, under the direction of the famous dancer, A. Nelle, former partner of Pavlowa, is certain to find favor with the great stadium crowd tonight. The ballet will present a program of dances of an international character.

But of course Theremin will be the hero of the evening. The fame of this great Soviet scientist has spread to every part of the world. Tonight thousands of workers will have their first opportunity of hearing this new ether-music.

Revolutionary Demonstration.

Tonight's affair will be something more than a concert. It will also be a demonstration of the New York workingclass in celebration of the anniversary of the fall of the Bastille. The spirit of the evening will be in keeping with the revolutionary traditions of the day and for this great occasion Ben Gitlow, acting secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, will appear to bring the revolutionary message of July 14 to the thousands assembled in the stadium.

Just how many will try to get into Coney Island Stadium tonight is unknown. What is known is that only those lucky enough to have tickets will be admitted. The only way to be lucky enough is to buy these precious little pasteboards at once. They are on sale at the office of The DAILY WORKER, 26-28 Union Square.

CHILE AND PERU ACCEPT U.S. PLAN

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Secretary of State Kellogg announced today that the governments of Chile and Peru have resumed diplomatic relations and accepted the proposals made by the American government.

The American plan is to settle the disputes by secret negotiations and to prevent any choice by the inhabitants of the disputed Tacna-Arica section. Representatives of U. S. imperialism will supervise the negotiations and no settlement will be reached contrary to interests of Wall Street.

WORKERS PARTY ELECTION DRIVE IS INTENSIFIED

Campaign to Win Over Auto Workers

Reports reaching the national campaign headquarters of the Workers (Communist) Party from all sections of the country indicate that interest in the Communist campaign is daily becoming more widespread Everything points to the fact that the Party will succeed in mobilizing a tremendous following of militant workers and farmers thruout the country, if successful in its efforts to secure a place on the ballots of the various states. This will enable the Party to carry on the vigorous fighting campaign for which the situation is actually rotten ripe.

In a statement issued by the national campaign headquarters of the Workers (Communist) Party, the need for political organization, and an appeal for funds to make possible this political organization, was stressed. The appeal follows:

Must Organize Politically.

"The automobile workers now on strike at Flint, Michigan, will not be allowed to forget the fact that Mr. Raskob, the general manager of the corporation, feels that big business has nothing to fear from the election of Governor Al Smith. The Workers Party in Michigan, while helping the workers to continue their strike to a victorious conclusion, can be depended upon to teach the workers that their fight is part of the general class struggle and that they must organize politically as well as economically.

"Fortunately, the Party is already on the ballot in Michigan, and the workers can be shown definitely just how best to organize politically.

"The need for funds to put the Party on the ballot in the numerous states still remaining to maintain the many speakers and field organizers thruout the country, and to print the immediately necessary

AUTO CARAVAN BEGINS TODAY

Great Mine Defense Week Under Way

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

PITTSBURGH, July 13. — A unique auto parade, the cars of which will start at scores of cities east of Chicago and converge on the industrial battle front in Western Pennsylvania begins Saturday in preparation for the Miners' Defense Week, July 22-29 which is being arranged under the joint auspices of the National Miners' Relief Committee and the International Labor Defense.

Those who go will see the mounted state troopers and coal and iron police patrol the roads. They will see the scab patch, where imported strikebreakers live, hemmed in by high walls.

See Scenes of Attack.

Renton, scene of the infamous attack of the state troopers upon men, women and children pickets who gathered along the road to keep the first shipment of scabs from entering the coal pits, will be one of the first camps visited. Thirty mounted troopers swooped down upon the pickets that day, firing revolvers and tear gas bombs into their midst, the strikers say. Dozens were wounded.

First Hand View.

Avella, Library, Mollenauer, Castle, Shanon, Coverdale, Harwick, Harmarville, Newfield, Coverdale, all famous as militant mining camps, will be visited by the caravan. Life in the barracks, hardships the fighting miners are enduring, the children running about barefoot and chattering about the strike, the union, picket lines, "them scabs and yeller dogs," the union hall where the state troopers ban meetings—all will be seen by the relief workers.

GORKI FINDS A DOUBLE

Relates Incident of His American Visit

MOSCOW, July 13.—At a banquet given in his honor Maxim Gorky related the following story to the great amusement of his listeners.

While on one of his visits to the United States Gorky was greatly surprised one day to see advertised on a bill board that the "great Maxim Gorky" was to appear on the stage of the theatre where "The Lower Depths" was to be played.

The writer went to see the play. On the stage there appeared a man, greatly acclaimed by the public, who looked exactly like him. During the intermission Gorki wished to make the acquaintance of his double. The latter was overcome with fear, and his whole body trembling, he said to the novelist.

"I am an unfortunate man, encumbered with a large family. I have a contract with the director to represent the author of all plays that he stages. You are my specialty, but I have posed successfully for Suderman, Rostand and Donnay."

Gorky had pity on the poor devil and did not unmask him.

Youth League Has Military Training Now

By PAUL CROUCH

A new course in the curriculum of the summer training schools for young workers this year is military training. While the capitalist military organizations are preparing for imperialist wars, and to use the military forces against the workers, the students in the training schools are obtaining military knowledge to use for their own class interests.

The Young Workers (Communist) League is opposed to capitalist militarism and will continue to fight the C. M. T. C. and other institutions of this type, but we realize that pacifism is an equally effective instrument of imperialism. The military courses for young workers demonstrates our stand for military knowledge—when it will be used for the interest of the working class.

HOLD MEETINGS TO FREE PORTER

Youth Takes Up Fight For Young Rebel

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 13.—A huge protest meeting was held here yesterday at 8 p. m., demanding the release of John Porter. Speakers exposed the role of the army, pointing out that Porter is imprisoned for his militant participation in the struggles of the workers while subject to military law, and that mass protests must prevent the War Department from giving him a 99 year sentence.

The protest meeting was held under the auspices of the Young Workers (Communist) League.

By PAUL CROUCH.

The voice of the working class is beginning to be heard in answer to the challenge of Porter's imprisonment for his revolutionary labor activities while technically subject to military law.

In New Bedford, where three thousand workers took part in a protest meeting, the first drive for Porter's freedom was launched, so far as the masses are concerned. The International Labor Defense and the Young Workers (Communist) League issued appeals immediately to the workers to come to the defense of John Porter—to defeat the sinister purposes of the military authorities, and now the fight against the capitalist military machine is gaining momentum.

This drive must be intensified if Porter is to be saved from a living death behind iron bars during the rest of his life. Arrangements are being made for defense committees, composed primarily of young workers, in cities all over the country to

CHICAGO PICNIC PLANS NOW SET

Affair For Miners' Relief

(Special To The Daily Worker)

CHICAGO, July 13.—An affair to which the eyes of the whole militant and progressive labor movement in this city has been directed and which according to all present indications will be attended by over ten thousand workers is the picnic to be held Saturday, July 14, at Riverside Park, Belmont and Western Aves. one of Chicago's largest amusement places.

Aid of Miners.

The picnic which is being given in aid of the striking miners will begin at 12 noon and will continue after midnight.

Among the speakers to be present is Mother Bloor, veteran militant of the labor and revolutionary movement. Mother Bloor has just returned from an extensive tour from the mine fields and other battle fronts of the class struggle.

Band and Frolic.

In the evening a twelve-piece band, one of the best in the city will provide music for a monster dance. The frolicing will end an hour after midnight. Steve Rubicki and Hans Peterson, old times at staging huge and lively outings are in charge of the arrangements for the picnic.

FARM WORKERS FOUND DEAD

CHARLES CITY, Ia., July 13 (UP).—William Schmidt, 39, a farmer, and Leland Van Sickle, 24, employed on Schmidt's farm, near here, were found shot to death on the farm today. Whether it was a case of suicide or both were murdered has not been determined.

JAIL FOR 37 MILL PICKETS

2 More Rescued by Soviet Ship "Krassin"

REPORT 5 OTHERS SIGHTED IN FAR ARCTIC WASTES

Icebreaker Searching for Amundson Now

By EUGENE LYONS.

MOSCOW, July 13 (UP). — A tale of triumph of a sturdy Soviet ice ship and hardy Soviet seamen scientists and navigators over the ruthless, elemental forces of the Arctic was told in messages from the Steamship Krassin which reported today the rescue of all known living survivors of the transpolar dirigible Italia.

This rescue accounted for all of the sixteen men aboard the Italia when it crashed on its homeward journey from a flight over the North Pole, except the six men blown away in the hulk of the dirigible after the commander and nine men had been thrown on the ice from the shattered gondola.

The messages being received here from the Krassin and other rescue ships—coming in four languages—Russian, Italian, Norwegian and Swedish—did not make clear whether all the men in the Viglieri group were alive.

The Krassin sighted the Viglieri group from a distance of three miles —a faded red silk tent and bits of wreckage from the Italia's cabin surrounded by blocks of ice—and sounded its siren.

Viglieri had ordered a smoke signal sent up when the survivors had first seen the ship and the smoke from the burning pieces of wreckage and rags of the explorers' clothing was clearly visible in the bright light.

The ragged men had scarcely been brought aboard, however, before a heavy mist descended which would have held up rescue had it appeared half an hour earlier—perhaps have meant the loss of the lives of Viglieri and his companions who were being swept about the swirling currents of the Arctic Sea.

By EUGENE LYONS.

MOSCOW, July 13 (UP). — On the last short stage of the most triumphant voyage of rescue in modern history, the Russian ice-breaker Krassin radioed today that she had picked up two dogsled men off North East Land and was proceeding to rescue five men stranded on the coast with their damaged airplane.

In her last brief message, the Krassin wirelessed that she had rescued Capt. Sora and Sefj Van Dongen, who with a dogsled team had gone in search of survivors from the wrecked dirigible Italia.

At almost the same moment, an unconfirmed report from Virgo Bay said that Ludwig M. Varming, third member of the Little Expedition had been picked up with the dogsled team where Sora and Van Dongen had left him, near Cape Brun.

The only other party of known survivors now on the Arctic ice that fought such a long, bitter and for a time winning battle to rescue the victims is that of aviator Chukhnovsky, off Cape Platen. Chuknovsky and four companions crashed after they had flashed back word that they had located Capt. Filippo Zappi and Capt. Adalberto Mariano, of the Italia.

During their vigil on the ice, the two men saw eight airplanes pass over them. They almost went insane, they said, as they waved their blankets and rags vainly, and saw each plane disappear.

Then Chuknovsky's big plane roared over them, turned, circled over them five times, and sped back to the Krassin, its powerful radio crackling out the news of their discovery.

As it pushed its way along the coast to the rescue of the Sora and Chukhnovsky's parties, the Krassin radioed she had aboard seven men brought back from death to life after the wrecking of the Italia.

In describing the rescue it is revealed that two hundred yards away from the two men the Krassin could get no further through the ice. The two men were on a floe 24 feet in width. They were balancing themselves with difficulty on the block

FASCISTS PLAN WAR ON SOVIET UNION

BUCHAREST, July 13. — The French general, Rond, arrived here today. Pilsudski, military dictator of Poland, is expected to arrive momentarily as well as representatives of other Little Entente states for the purpose of holding a secret military conference which is to take place under the direction of the French general staff.

According to reliable information the purpose of this conference is to prepare the way for war on the Soviet Union.

BIG STATE FARMS PLANNED IN USSR

Soviet to Pay Higher Prices for Grain

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., July 13.—A modification of the policy of collecting grain from the peasants of the Soviet Union, entailing the establishment of huge collective farms under the direct supervision of the state, was recommended here today by the Central Executive Committee of the Communist Party.

The decision stated that higher prices would be paid to the farmers for their produce, that freedom of the peasants to sell their grain in the open market would be assured, and that huge collective farms should be established.

This latest move is in direct line with the Soviet policy of releasing the burden placed on the peasants during the revolution and during the counter-revolutionary attacks on the Soviet Union in the years after the revolution when food famine threatened the existence of the peasants and workers of the entire U. S. S. R.

DEMAND STRIKE IN FALL RIVER

Workers Prepare For Big Walkout

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

FALL RIVER, Mass., July 13.—Over three thousand Fall River textile workers responded to a mass meeting called by the Textile Mills Committee, and showed the greatest enthusiasm when the speakers threw out the slogan "Prepare for a Strike."

The meeting was held on a lot located in the heart of the mill district and was purchased outright by the T. M. C. for $1,000 contributed by Fall River workers. This was imperative because of the police refusal to permit any landowner to rent a meeting place to the T. M. C.

Speakers at the meeting were Albert Weisbord, leader of the National T. M. C.; James P. Reid, Fall River organizer, and other unionists and strikers from New Bedford.

Even the officials of the two reactionary unions here are afraid to oppose a strike that will affect tens of thousands. The meetings of the U. T. W. and of the A. F. T. O. are in continuous turmoil by the demands of the workers for a general strike to regain the 10 per cent wage cut.

Hundreds of members are streaming daily into the Textile Mills Committee Unit in Fall River, signed cards show.

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

PRAGUE, July 13.—The Central Committee of the Communist Party of Chekoslovakia on the anniversary of the fifteenth of July shootings in Austria addressed an open letter to the Austrian Communist Party stressing the latter's heroic role in the July struggles of last year.

The letter also condemns the treacherous attitude of the Social-Democratic Party and expresses full solidarity of the Chekoslovakian Party with the Communist Party of Austria.

OFFICERS FEAR "DAILY"

Sailors May Get 6 Months for Reading

PHILADELPHIA, July 13.—Reading the DAILY WORKER is a serious crime, according to the naval authorities, and they have announced that sailors who continue to read the Communist paper will be imprisoned at hard labor for six months and fined one hundred dollars.

Many of the sailors on the U. S. S. Oklahoma were called before the authorities and charged with reading the DAILY WORKER and the Young Worker. They were question individually how they happened to get the papers, whether they approved the principles of the Communist organizations, etc.

The officers then announced that those who continue to read the DAILY WORKER and Young Worker will be court-martialed; and made threats of "action against those sending the papers." Then, they indulged in extreme abuse of the Young Workers Communist League.

Several of the sailors practically told their officers that they were liars because they had been at meet-

6 MONTHS, HEAVY FINE FOR EACH OF DEFENDANTS

Bosses Desperate As Ranks Hold Firm

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., July 13. —The vicious hatred of the Massachusetts courts for the workers here has again made itself felt when the judges of the District Court today imposed six months' jail sentences and $20 fines on each of the 37 New Bedford textile strikers tried before them yesterday.

Most of the defendants, who include the most active unionists, were arrested when the New Bedford police force broke up a strikers' parade arranged by the New Bedford Textile Workers Union on July 1. Three were arrested for picketing July 6; six of those tried were arrested during a monster picket demonstration last night that continued far into the early hours of the morning.

4,000 Picket

More than 4,000 strikers marched in picket formation up and down before the gates of the Whitman, Page, Nield and Nonquist Spinning Mills, while about 11,000 strikers and sympathizers jammed the streets leading to the factories in a demonstration that lasted many hours late last night. They had come out at the call of the T. W. U. strike committee when the news spread that a few scabs had gone to work.

A tremendous wave of indignation spread rapidly throughout the entire city as the news of the half-year prison sentences imposed upon the strikers became known. Many of those imprisoned are middle-aged workers who are heads of families.

The attorney for the International Labor Defense announced that all cases would be appealed immediately. Release of the strikers, however, is dependent upon the raising of a total of $20,000 for bail bonds. It was not learned whether the necessary total had been secured.

Stirred by Fall River News

As a result of the brutal sentences the picketing tonight, as well as tomorrow morning, is expected to bring added thousands out of their homes to the mill gates, it is generally believed.

Another situation that is stirring the workers here is the news that the tens of thousands of workers in Fall River are considering the question of going out in a general strike to regain a wage cut forced upon them by the mill owners and condoned by the officials of the American Federation of Textile Operatives.

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., July 13. —An excellent guage of determining which is the real union in the New Bedford textile strike was offered here late Wednesday night when the strike committee of the New Bedford Textile Workers Union of the T. M. C. went to the picket lines before the Kilburn Mill and led the thousands of pickets away from the mill in parade formation to a huge mass meeting in Saulnier's field. This contrasts sharply with the impotent leaders of the Textile Council, who publicly admitted not being able to influence the actions of their members.

The T. M. C. leaders had told the workers to halt picketing here so that they can go home and take a needed rest before coming out for the big demonstration at other mills in the morning.

The membership of the council, on the other hand, had defied the order of their officials when they were ordered to cease picketing with the members of the mills committee.

Enthusiastic Meeting

The mass meeting, which was held about 10:30 p. m., presented an inspiring sight as the huge electric bulb over the platform lit up the sea of listening faces.

Eli Keller, one of the speakers, pointed to the iron discipline that existed in the Textile Workers Union, and concluded by saying that they were the only organization that has complete control of the New Bedford strike.

Jack Rubinstein, speaking later, declared that the continuous picket line that lasted more than 36 hours showed conclusively to the mill bosses that the strikers will fight

Workers and Peasants of Mexico Elected 4 Communists to the Chamber of Deputies

HEADS OF R. R. UNION, PEASANT LEAGUE CHOSEN

Glavan and Laborde are Members of C.E.C.

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

MEXICO CITY, July 13.—The incomplete election returns indicate that four Communist deputies have been elected in Mexico. Among these are Ursulo Galván, leader of the National Peasants League, and Hernán Laborde, leader in the Railwaymen's Union. Both are members of the Central Executive Committee of the Mexican Communist Party.

"The elections now taking place in Mexico, with Obregon slated as the successor of Calles and his victory assured, have thus far resulted in the election of four Communist deputies to the legislature. The National Peasants League, which has a strong Communist faction, and the Railwaymen's Union, many of whose leaders are Communists, are one of the central points of the revolutionary peasants and workers.

The success thus far in the elections for the Communists has surprised the reactionary leaders of the CROM, the Mexican Federation of Labor, who have attempted by all means to suppress the voice of the rank and file of Mexican labor.

MOSCOW, July 13—(UP)—The Russian ice-breaker Maligin, one of the Soviet boats sent into the Arctic area for Italia relief work, today was ordered to make another attempt to locate the Roald Amundsen Party and then return to Archangel.

The Soviet Committee ordered this last search for Amundsen—who with five aides has been missing since June 18—in the belief the party still might be alive some place in the treacherous, ice bound territory from which seven members of the Italia crew have been brought out alive.

Ford Stole His Invention, Says Worker in Suit

DETROIT, Mich., July 13.—Henry Ford was sued today for approximately $2,000,000 by one of his former workers, who claimed the automobile manufacturer failed to pay him for certain inventions used on Ford cars and tractors.

Antonio Felix Jajalish, the plaintiff, charges that Ford promised to compensate him for improvement made on the fans, used in the Ford car and tractor, and oil pipe, coil box and fuel tank for the tractor.

TURIN, Italy, July 13.—One hundred and twenty Italian business men, residing in France, arrived today and were welcomed by the Prefect. They will tour the country under the special supervision of the fascists and will have an interview with Mussolini.

The visit is looked upon as an attempt to save Italy from economic collapse, which has been especially marked during the last year, when banks failed for billions of lire. With the aid of foreign capitalists Mussolini will attempt to attain stabilization, it is thought.

Lines of pickets marching to a central point at the south end of the city and moving in increased numbers from 4 o'clock in the morning were enthusiastically cheered by the workers waiting for the whistle at the Fiske, Goodyear and Firestone Tire Fabric Mills. Committees of workers from these mills had asked the Textile Mills Committee to form them into an organization. This is being done, the union stated.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., July 13.—Over twenty-five English and French workers, members of the Textile Council of the United Textile Workers Union, came to the headquarters of the Textile Workers Union of the Textile Mills Committee yesterday and requested that a joint meeting of the membership of both organizations be called by the T. M. C. The voluntary delegation declared that the A. F. T. O. members were overwhelmingly dissatisfied with their officials.

This request was complied with and a meeting will be held for A. F. T. O. members at the Potomska St. Hall, Saturday at 10 a. m. Albert Weisbord leader of the National Textile Committee will be one of the speakers.

ORGANIZATIONAL NEED FOR TROY WORKERS URGENT

Worker Says Factory Council Needed

(By a Worker Correspondent)

TROY, N. Y., July 13. — The 900 Cluett Peabody collar workers employed at the Jay St. factory here have won their strike. They have prevented the introduction of a new system of wage-paying which would have meant a reduction of 35 to 50 per cent in the workers' weekly wage.

The strike started spontaneously on Monday morning after the cut had been announced for only one department, the buttonholers. At once every worker in the plant, the majority of them girls, 900 in all, refused to work. All stood solidly behind those who had been affected by the wage slash. No one walked out. Even without leadership, they understood what had to be done. They stayed on the job, came to the factory for three days, but did no work.

Workers Gave Support.

You have won your fight, Jay Street workers! The Workers Party hails your victory as one more proof of the growing fighting spirit of American workers, and young workers.

But, what are you going to do now? Do you think for one minute that Cluett, Peabody and Co. have given up the idea of cutting wages? Not a bit. They are waiting for an opportunity to break your ranks, buy off or fire your leaders and then will come the same cut in different language.

Form Factory Council.

Jay Street workers, you must have a permanent factory workers council. You have the basis for it in the committee just elected to deal with the bosses in this strike. Make that committee a permanent committee.

Form a Jay Street Factory Workers Council. Prepare to defend yourselves against further attacks on your already too low wages, and perhaps to win back the losses of former cuts.

And read the DAILY WORKER. Daily Worker representatives were with you in Troy during the strike. We were ready to help you win your strike had the bosses not given in at once. Wherever workers are fighting for better wages or to prevent any cut in their wages or conditions—the DAILY WORKER is on the job to help them. The DAILY WORKER is the weapon which fights in every struggle of the workers.

POLICE BAN ON TEXTILE STRIKE TAG DAY SCORED

Passaic Relief Body to Defy Order

The action of the Chief of Police of Passaic in withdrawing his previously granted permit for a tag-day for the New Bedford textile strikers relief, was condemned in a statement issued recently by the Textile Strikers Relief Conference of Passaic. It was also learned that the higher officials of the United Textile Workers Union had been very active in getting the police head to rescind the permit. The statement, which is signed by Stephen Milus, Jr., the conference secretary, says in part:

"We are determined to carry on our activity and raise funds in Passaic and vicinity for the New Bedford strikers, despite all attempts to stop us.

"Twenty-eight thousand textile workers have been on strike for 13 weeks—the mill bosses have tried to open the mills Monday morning, July 9, the militia was called out to intimidate the strikers, and the strikers of New Bedford answered the bosses by mass picket lines around 56 mills on strike. The New Bedford Textile Workers Union represents the main body of strikers, the unskilled men and women. In order to win the strike they must be fed. Since when have the Passaic authorities supported strikes? Why are they so anxious now to support Fuller?

"Neither the city authorities nor Fuller cannot deny us our right to help our fellow-workers in New Bedford. We intend to carry out our purpose for which the new Bedford Strikers Relief Conference of Passaic was organized—to raise money for New Bedford, and do everything possible to support them so that they can win their strike."

NEW DRAFT PROGRAM OF THE COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL

V. The Dictatorship of the Proletariat in the USSR and the International Social Revolution

CAPITALIST CRISIS MARKED BY DIVISION OF WORLD INTO TWO ECONOMIES, PROGRAM DECLARES

Proletarian Dictatorship in the Soviet Union is Base of World Revolution

World Workers Must Rise to Defense of USSR in the Event of War

The Programme Commission of the Executive Committee of the Communist International is publishing a DRAFT PROGRAM.

The Commission thinks it its duty to declare that while the text of this draft is of course based on the same fundamental principles as those upon which the draft programme provisionally passed by the Fifth Congress of the Communist International was based, nevertheless, it differs very considerably from that draft. The Program Commission felt that in view of the great changes that have taken place in many important spheres of international life and particularly in the revolutionary movement since the Fifth Congress, it could not confine itself to making merely editorial changes in the original draft. A change has taken place in the form of the general crisis of capitalism; a change has taken place in the relationships between various groups of powers. Great events have taken place, like the great revolution in China, which once again emphasized the significance of the agrarian-peasant question. Great progress has been made in building up socialism in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. The struggle between the aggressive capitalist world and the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics is becoming acute. Fascism is growing and becoming transformed into the terrorist dictatorship of big capital. Social democracy has degenerated into Chauvinist imperialism. The lessons that have been learned by the Communist International in the fight against opposition tendencies and finally the growth of Communism, the fact that the movement has really become internationalized, the new tasks that confront the Communist International as a single organization—all this has inevitably made it necessary considerably to alter and enlarge the former draft.

The general tendency of the changes that have been made is towards more concreteness and greater emphasis upon THE INTERNATIONAL aspects both in the theoretical section as well as in the sections dealing immediately with the struggles of the Communist Parties.

Acting on the decision of the Executive Committee of the Communist International, the Programme Commission, in publishing this draft program, calls upon all comrades to express their opinion and criticism of it in articles, remarks and concrete suggestions. The work done on the program has revealed how difficult it is to embrace in a single document all the problems of the present-day world Communist movement. The question of the program will be one of the central questions at the Sixth Congress. It is essential that sufficient material be collected by the time the discussion of the question takes place at the Congress. The Commission therefore invites all comrades to join in the fruitful discussion of the program.

THE PROGRAMME COMMISSION OF THE
EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE
COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL

The principal manifestation of the profound crisis of the capitalist system is the division of world economy into capitalist countries on the one hand and countries building up Socialism on the other. Consequently, the internal consolidation of the proletarian dictatorship in the USSR, the successes achieved in the work of Socialist construction, the growth of the influence and authority of the USSR among the masses of the proletariat and the oppressed peoples of the colonies, signify the continuation, intensification and expansion of the international social revolution. The proletarian dictatorship in the USSR is an important component part of the international social revolution; it is its vanguard and the base for its development.

Possessing in the country the necessary, and sufficient material prerequisites for the overthrow of the landlords and the bourgeoisie as well as for the establishment of complete Socialism, the workers in the Soviet Republics, aided by the international proletariat, heroically repelled the attacks of the armed forces of the internal and foreign counter - revolution, consolidated their alliance with the bulk of the peasantry and have achieved considerable successes in the sphere of Socialist construction.

The proletariat was enabled to make a rapid advance along the road of socialist construction because of the proper contacts it established between proletarian Socialist industry and small peasant economy, which secured the growth of the productive forces of agriculture and guarantee the leading role to Socialist industry; because of the links it established between Socialist industry and agriculture, thus preventing the latter from serving the unproductive consumption of parasitic classes; because it produces, not for capitalist profit but in order to satisfy the constantly growing needs of the mass of consumers,—which in the last analysis greatly stimulates the whole process of production, and finally because the economic key positions were concentrated in the hands of the proletarian State, planned management acquired increasing significance and as a consequence the means of production are being distributed more economically and expediently.

Having raised the productive forces of the whole economy of the country to a hihger level and developing large-scale industry at a rate exceeding that of capitalist powers to establish a financial and economic boycott, the proletariat of the USSR is systematically increasing the share of the socialized (Socialist) section of national economy in the total output of means of production, in the total output of industry and the total trade of the country.

Thus, by manipulating the levers of State trade, of rapidly growing cooperation and the nationalization of the land, State Socialist industry transport and banking are leading small and minute petty peasant farming in their train, to an ever-increasing extent.

In the sphere of agriculture particularly, the raising of the level of the forces of production proceeds amidst conditions which restrict the process of differentiation among the peasantry (nationalization of the land—and consequently the prohibition of the sale and purchase of land; sharply graded progressive taxes; the financing of poor and middle peasants' cooperative societies and productive organization of the laws governing the hiring of labor; depriving the kulaks of certain political and public rights etc.). However, in so far as the productive forces of Socialist industry have not yet grown sufficiently to enable a broad new technical base to be laid for agriculture and consequently to enable an immediate and rapid productive combination of peasant farms into large public enterprises—collective farms—the kulak class tends to grow and establishes economic, and later, political contact with elements of the so-called "new bourgeoisie."

The proletariat of the USSR holds the principal economic key-positions in the country. It systematically squeezes out the remnants of urban private capital, which has considerably diminished during the last few years of the "New Eoconmic Policy." It imposes all manner of restrictions upon the exploiting strata in the rural districts, which spring out of the development of commodity-money relationships. It draws the bulk of the peasant, simple commodity producers into the general system of Soviet economic organization and consequently into the work of Socialist construction through the medium of rapidly-growing cooperation—which in the conditions of proletarian dictatorship and the economic leadership of Socialist industry is identical with the development of Socialism, and is passing from the process of restoration to the expanded reconstruction of the whole productive and technical basis of the country. Thus, the proletariat of the USSR has undertaken and is adready fulfilling the task of large-scale construction (the production of means of production generally and the development of the heavy industry and electrification in particular) and simultaneously with developing, selling, buying and credit cooperation, has undertaken the task of organizing the peasantry in productive, cooperative societies on the basis of collectivism.

Socialism is already a decisive economic force in the USSR which in the main, determines the whole economic development of the country and by that very fact stimulates still greater progress in its development.

Owing to the technical and economical backwardness of the country and the damage caused during the imperialist and civil wars large capital outlays have to be made for renewals of equipment and developing new enterprises and this places serious obstacles in the path of socialist development. Nevertheless the standard of living of the working class and of the broad masses of the toilers is steadily rising and simultaneously with the socialist rationalization and scientific organization of industry the 7-hour day is being gradually introduced.

Thanks to the economic growth of the USSR and to the growing importance of the socialist section of industry and relying upon the poorer sections of the rural population—while maintaining a durable alliance with the bulk of the peasant population, viz., the middle peasants, the working class, united and led by the COMMUNIST PARTY—which has been seasoned in revolutionary battles, is able to draw increasing numbers of the toilers into the work of building up Socialism. The most important means employed for this purpose are: „the development of broad mass organizations (the PARTY, the trade unions, the YOUNG COMMUNIST LEAGUE, co-operative societies of all forms, women's organizations,—for working women and peasant women, various kinds of so-called "voluntary societies," worker and rural correspondents' societies, sports clubs, scientific societies, cultural and educational organizations); encouragement of the initiative of the masses and the promotion of fresh strata of workers to high posts in all spheres of economy and administration. The continuous attraction of the masses into the process of Socialist construction, the continuous renewal of the whole state, economic, trade union and PARTY apparatus by infusing into them workers from the factories, the practice of training workers generally and young workers in particular in the higher educational establishments and special courses, etc., as socialist experts in all branches of construction—serve as a guarantee against the bureaucratic ossification and social degeneration of the proletariat directly engaged in administration.

Having defeated Russian imperialism and liberated all the former colonies and oppressed nations in the Russian Empire the dictatorship of the proletariat in the USSR guarantees not only formal but actual equality for the various nationalities in the Union. It is systematically laying a firm foundation for their cultural and political development by industrializing these territories. It clearly establishes the legal position of the autonomous territories, autonomous republics and allied republics in the constitution of the Soviet Union and carries out to the full the principle of the right of nations to self-determination.

The USSR is the land of the dictatorship of the proletariat and of socialist construction. It is a land in which the working class has won enormous gains and established a close alliance with the peasants. It is the land of a new culture which follows the banner of Marxism Hence, the USSR is inevitably becoming the base of the world movement of all oppressed classes, the centre of the international revolution, the greatest factor in world history.

In the USSR the world proletariat for the first time acquires a real fatherland of its own and the USSR becomes the greatest centre of gravity for colonial movements.

Thus, the USSR is a great factor in the general crisis of capitalism not only becouse it has dropped out of purely capitalist economic intercourse, and has created the basis for the socialist system of production but also because it plays an exceptionally great revolutionary role generally: it is the international driving force of the proletarian revolution, stimulating the proletariat of all countries to strive to capture power. It is a living example of the ability of the working class not only to destroy capitalism, but to build up socialism. It is the prototype of the fraternal relations between all nationalities that will exist in the World Union of Socialist Republics and of the economic unity of all toilers in the single world economy of socialism that the conquest of power by the proletariat in all countries will establish.

The simultaneous existence of two economic systems: the socialist system in the USSR and the capitalist system in the other countries, imposes on the proletarian State the task of repelling the blows showered upon it by the capitalist world (boycott, blockade, etc.,) and at the same time compels it to resort to economic manoeuvres and make use of economic contacts with capitalist countries (by means of the monopoly of foreign trade, credits, loans, concessions, so-called "technical aid," etc.). The principal and fundamental line to be adopted in this respect is the establishment of the widest possible contacts with foreign countries within limits determined by the advantages they will bring for the USSR, i. e., primarily for strengthening industry in the USSR itself, for the purpose of laying a basis for its own heavy industry and electrification and finally for the development of its own socialist engineering industry. Only to the extent that the economic independence of the USSR in the midst of a capitalist environment is secured can guarantees be obtained against the danger of the work of socialist construction in the USSR being disturbed and of her becoming an adjunct of the capitalist system

On the other hand, the capitalist states continuously oscillate between their commercial interest in the markets of the USSR and their fear of the growth of the USSR which signifies the growth of international revolution. For that reason the principal and fundamental tendency in the politics of the Imperialist Powers is to encircle the USSR and to conduct counter-revolutionary war against her for the purpose of strangling her and of establishing a world, bourgeois, terrorist regime.

However, the systematic attempts of Imperialism politically to encircle the USSR and the growing danger of military aggression against her to prevent the Communist Party of the Soviet Union,— a Section of the Communist International and leader of the proletarian dictatorship in the USSR,—from fulfilling its international obligations and from rendering assistance to all the oppressed, to the labour movement in capitalist countries, to the movement of colonial peoples against imperialism, and to the struggle against national oppression in all its forms.

As the USSR is the only fatherland of the international proletariat, the principal bulwark of their achievements and the most important factor in the cause of international emancipation, the international proletariat must facilitate the success of the work of socialist construction in the USSR and by all means in their power defend it against the attacks of the capitalist powers.

> "The world political situation has now brought to the front the dictatorship of the proletariat as an immediate issue and all the events in world politics are inevitably concentrating around one central point, viz: the struggle of the world bourgeoisie against the Soviet Russian Republic, which must group itself around the Soviet movements of the advanced workers of all countries, on the one hand, and all the national liberation movements of the colonial and oppressed nationalities on the other." (Lenin).

In the event of the Imperialist states declaring war upon and attacking the USSR, the international proletariat must retaliate by the boldest and most determined mass action and struggle for the overthrow of the imperialist governments with the slogan of dictatorship of the proletariat and alliance with the USSR.

In the colonies, and particularly in the colonies belonging to the imperialist countries which are attacking the USSR, it is necessary to take advantage of the diversion of the imperialist military forces to develop the anti-imperialist struggle to the utmost and to organize revolutionary action for the purpose of throwing off the yoke of imperialism and of winning complete independence.

The development of socialism in the USSR and the growth of its international influence not only rouse against her the hatred of capitalist states and their social democratic agents, but they also inspire towards her the greatest sympathy of the broad masses of the toilers all over the world, and stimulate the readiness of the oppressed classes of all countries to fight in defence of the land of the proletarian dictatorship in the event of an imperialistic attack upon her.

Thus, the development of the contradictions within modern world economy, the development of the general capitalist crises and the military attacks of the Imperialists upon the Soviet Union must inevitably lead to a mighty revolutionary outbreak which must overwhelm the capitalist system in a number of so-called civilized countries, unleash the victorious revolution in the colonies, widen the basis of the proletarian dictatorship to an enormous degree and by that carry us a tremendous way nearer to the final world victory of socialism.

4 COMMUNIST EDITORS JAILED

Fascists Hold Militants Incommunicado

GENEVA, July 13. — The former leading officials of the free trades union confederation (Confederazione Generale del Lavoro) and members of the Communist Party have been arrested and tried by the Fascist police in Rome.

Those arrested are: Giuseppe Amoretti, former editor of the "Unita," the legal and official organ of the Communist Party of Italy; Anna Amoretti, his wife; Dr. Girolamo Li Causi, the former responsible editor of the "Unita"; Signora Li Causi; Eduardo D'Onofria, the former editor of the "Avanguardia", the legal and official organ of the Young Communist League of Italy, and Grandi, a former employee of the "Unita."

Although the arrests took place four weeks ago, the friends and relatives of the arrested men and women have not yet been able to secure any information whatever from the authorities concerning the fate of those arrested. No information can be obtained concerning the charges that will be made against the prisoners.

The maltreatment and torture of prisoners which has been made into a system since the explosion in Milan, for which the Fascists were themselves responsible, justifies the worst fears for the fate of the prisoners.

WORKER SCHOOL IN WASHINGTON

Offer Large Variety of Courses

WINLOCK, Wash., July 3 (By mail).—Fifty-two students at the young workers training school here are engaged in the study of class study problems so that they may be of greater service to the labor movement.

The school began June 23 with a program given by the students and teachers. Soon the classes were organized and the students began work.

Subjects taught at the training school this year are sociology, economics, history of the United States (from the workers' viewpoint), theory, practice and organizational forms of the world's labor movement, public speaking, study circles and discussion periods. The study is by no means confined to the class work and visits are made to factories in this section for actual study of conditions.

MOTHER OF TOM MOONEY GIVEN HUGE OVATION

Hold Picnics, Meetings for Frame-Up Victims

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif. (By Mail). — Mrs. Mooney, mother of Tom Mooney, noted class war prisoner, now in San Quentin, was given a great ovation when introduced by Comrade J. E. Snyder at the annual Bay District I. L. D. picnic, held in East Lake Park on July 4.

The picnic, a joint affair of the I. L. D. locals of San Francisco Oakland, Berkeley and Richmond was turned into an impressive demonstration in the campaign to "Free Mooney and Billings." This opened the Pacific Coast campaign under the direction of Edgar Owens, organizer of the I. L. D., who was principal speaker of the day.

Mrs. Mooney was visibly impressed with the great ovation of the assembled workers. She expressed her pleasure in this demonstration of labor solidarity and her confidence that such support thru the renewed campaign of the I. L. D. was sure to secure the release of her son Tom Mooney and his Comrade Warren K. Billings.

The social feature of the outing was the singing of the Russian-Ukrainian chorus of San Francisco which was cheered into repeated encores.

More picnics and public meetings are being turned into demonstrations for the release of Mooney and Billings according to word from the national office of the I. L. D. Those scheduled for the coming weeks are: Cleveland Mooney-Billings demonstration on the public square, July 27; Akron Picnic July 29; New York Outing at Pleasant Bay Park Bronx, July 21; Detroit Mooney-Billings International Picnic at Rochester Park, Sunday, August 5.

SHIRT WORKERS FIGHT WAGE CUT

Strike in Perth Amboy Against Speed-Up

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., July 13.—A strike was called this morning in the Perth Amboy Shirt Manufacturing Company against a vicious wage-cut and speed-up initiated by the proprietor, Mr. Schwartz. Sixty-two of the sixty-six workers have joined the shirt makers' strike; those remaining are old women and little children. The Young Workers (Communist) League is taking an active interest in the strike.

The conditions of the Schwartz factory are miserable, it is reported. Girls have been receiving $6 and $7 per week, sometimes $12 and, in rare occasions, more. The wage cut means a reduction of $6 to $4 and of $5 to $3 in a number of instances. One young worker's wage was cut from $18 to half, $9. For the remainder of the workers the cut means a 10 per cent lowering of wages.

Mr. Schwartz's speed-up scheme meant the firing of three girls. It also meant that other girls had to do an extra section of the entire work, in addition to their regular work. No increase in pay was intended to be granted with this doubling of work.

Veronica Kovacs, a young shirt worker, was fired because she is one of the most militant fighters for better conditions, against the wage-cut and speed-up. A strike leaflet demands that she and the other girls be taken back, that the cut be removed and the strikers organize a union.

Together with the fired young workers, members of the Young Workers (Communist) League distributed leaflets calling the strike and carried placards in demonstration at the factory. At the strike meeting this morning a league representative spoke, giving the strikers courage and greater conviction to carry on their fight to a successful end.

With great enthusiasm a strike committee was formed. Veronica Kovacs, militant striker, was made a member of it.

A committee was elected to present demands to the bosses. The strike committee decided to distribute a leaflet to all shirt workers in Perth Amboy to fight against the wage-cut which will shortly be instituted in all shirt factories.

The strike committee particularly urges the importance of forming a strong union, to have it as a means of effectively combatting the wage-cut and speed-up and for winning the present strike.

Two Workers Injured in Train Derailment

COLUMBIA, Pa., July 13. (U. P.) — Two trainmen were slightly injured at Chickies, near here today, when a westbound Pennsylvania freight train was derailed and wrecked.

The injured men were J. W. Ritchie, flagman and J. P. Jacobs, conductor, both of Enola, Pa. The freight cars were derailed and wrecked, when the engine jumped the track after splitting a switch.

Wall Street Will Drive Al Smith's Bandwagon

John J. Raskob, vice-president and chairman of finance committee of General Motors, the greatest open-shop concern in the world, has been chosen by Al Smith to be chairman of the democratic national committee. Thus Al dispels all those malicious rumors that it would be a sour day for Big Business if he is elected to succeed the Wall Street footman, Coolidge. Photo shows a happy family scene: from left to right, front row: Nellie Taylor Ross, "progressive" ex-governor of Wyoming; Gov. Smith, Raskob, Senator Joseph T. Robinson, democratic candidate for vice-president; and Herbert H. Lehman, millionaire banker and finance chairman of the democratic national committee.

LABOR DEFENSE PICNIC TO BE HELD JULY 21

The annual outing of the New York Section of the International Labor Defense at Pleasant Bay Park, Saturday, July 21, promises to be a truly international affair Workers of many nationalities are co-operating in the arrangements for the outing, and the thousands of workers who will be present will also be representative of almost every nationality in a single demonstration of international solidarity.

The program for the affair will be of great variety, including athletics and games of all sorts, open air dancing to the music of a jazz band, a torch light parade, refreshments and a mass scene symbolizing the struggle of the workers to free their comrades behind the bars.

A unique feature will be the taking of movies of the outing and its various activities. These movies will be shown sometime shortly after the outing and workers will be able to see themselves and their friends on the screen.

The outing will be one of the red-letter days on the proletarian social calendar of the year and many workers thruout the city are preparing to attend. Since all the proceeds of the affair will go to aid class war prisoners and their families, workers are strongly urged to attend the outing and secure the attendance of their friends. Tickets are on sale at the office of the International Labor Defense, 799 Broadway, Room 422, and at the Workers Center, 26-28 Union Square.

THOUSANDS OF TAXIS LAID UP

Driver Pictures Bad Conditions

(By Taxi Correspondent)

Twenty-five taxicabs, covered with a layer of dust and with tires flat, yet in otherwise good running condition, bear mute testimony to the fact that conditions among taxi drivers are not so rosy as pictured by H. A. Innes Brown, editor of the Taxi Weekly, who since his open-shop paper came into existence has been editorializing on the "prosperity of the taxi industry and of the nation generally.

Rest In Idleness

The twenty-five cabs, originally owned and paid for by hackmen, have ben resting in idleness for the past four months in a garage on Fourth Ave., Brooklyn. The cabs, which are in "dead" storage, will remain there until the police stop their daily raids on the hackmen of this city, a condition which is making it increasingly impossible to work in the trade.

"The cabs you see there were stored months ago," said the owner of the garage, "and the owners would not touch them until the cops stop 'hounding' them."

When asked if there were many other cabs stored away by their owners, the garage man said: "In the borough of Brooklyn there are over 1,500 of them in storage and in Manhattan and the Bronx there are two thousand more. The men are discouraged and disgusted. Some have taken jobs on trucks and others are driving for fleet owners. Most of them are probably walking the streets."

One driver, who did not want his name mentioned and who has "deadened" his cab, said to the owner of the garage in the presence of a reporter for The DAILY WORKER: "Last week, after struggling for 18 months to pay off the cab, which cost $2,800, I decided to lay her up. The conditions on the streets are getting worse and worse. If it is not the passengers it's the cops and if it isn't the cops it's the hack inspector.

"Last month I had the cab passed for inspection, which must be done every four months. Yesterday, while cruising on Fourth Ave., Brooklyn, I was stopped by hack inspectors three different times."

Police and Big Fleeters

"Every thing seems to indicate," said an official of one of the independent taxi associations, that the police department and the big companies are trying to force the little fellows off the streets. It is far easier for the cops to regulate taxis operated by a few large companies than to be worrying over a lot of individuals."

500 COMMUNISTS JAILED IN SPAIN

BORDEAUX, France, July 13.—Spanish military officials yesterday seized and threw into prisons over 500 members of the Communist Party of Spain, after alleging that they had come into knowledge of a nation-wide "plot" to overthrow the Spanish monarchy. The raids were held throughout the country, but the greatest number of arrests were centered around the provinces of Catalonia and Galicia.

The so-called plot is alleged to have been arranged for July 17, when King Alfonso and the fascist premier, Primo de Riviera, are to attend the opening of the Pyrennes tunnel at Canfranc, a small Spanish town.

After the brutal arrests and beatings administered to the Communist Party members seized in the raid, an official government note was released to the press, calling upon all "patriots" to refuse to "respond to the invitations of the "conspirators."

JAILS 5 IN FREE SPEECH FIGHT IN ILLINOIS

Young Wkr's League to Defy Police

WAUKEGAN, Ill., July 13.—Five members of the Young Workers (Communist) League were arrested yesterday for trying to hold an open-air street meeting in the downtown section of the city.

The authorities of this industrial town have always shown a violent hatred toward the Communists, whom they fear particularly because of their organizational activities among the large working population here.

Samuel Herman, who has been active in the Kenosha, Wis., strike against the Allen-A Hosiery Company and who acted as the chairman, was the first to be placed under arrest. He had spoken for about thirty minutes.

Kay Ahola, Joe Plotkin, Gertrude Cranholm and Sulo Karjala were dragged off the platform in turn as they rose to speak. One of the speakers, before being pulled down, pointed out to the large assemblage of workers the mockery of the bosses' "democracy." They are all to come up for trial tomorrow.

The Young Workers (Communist) League has declared its intention to conduct a free speech fight here until meetings can be held undisturbed.

BRUTAL ATTACK ON FRUIT CLERK

Striker Assaulted By Bsss' Thugs

A gang of thugs, armed with iron pipes made a brutal assault yesterday upon a striking fruit store clerk while he was buying provisions for the workers' co-operative fruit and vegetable store in the Harlem wholesale market. The striker was compelled to receive treatment at a neighboring clinic for wounds in his head.

He and five other fruit store clerks have been working in the co-operative fruit store at 936 E. Tremont Ave. since shortly after Taub's Fruit Market, at 933 E. Tremont Ave., was declared on strike by the Retail Grocery, Dairy and Fruit Clerks' Union.

As a result of an almost complete boycott affected by the working class residents of the district against the anti-union store, effectively carried through when they transferred their trade to the workers' co-operative across the street, the bosses' association, to which the store belongs, had hired a gang of thugs to put the co-operative out of existence.

Twenty-one cases of previously arrested fruit store strikers came up for trial yesterday in the 8th District Magistrate Court. Magistrate H. Bush dismissed eight of them and postponed the trials of the 13 others until July 30.

MARKET CRASHES AS MONEY RISES

Big Business Fears Growing Depression

Following the increase in the rediscount rate by the Chicago Federal Reserve Board, the New York branch, as was expected, yesterday set its own rate at the 5% figure adopted by Chicago.

The policy of increasing rediscount rates, which is given as the major reason to account for the greatest break in the stock market since the world war, is believed to be a precautionary measure against the increasing financial and industrial depression which is facing U. S. industry.

The earlier policy of easy money rates has failed to maintain permanent "prosperity" as was promised. The growing inability of wages to purchase back the increased American product is understood to be behind the present policy of depressing prices in the hope of bringing about a balance between prices and wages.

'DAILY' TO START SPORTS SECTION

New Department Begins Next Tuesday

In response to numerous requests from workers thruout the country The DAILY WORKER has decided to start a sports department. Beginning next Tuesday, news of the sports world in every field of athletic activity will appear daily.

The DAILY WORKER is of course particularly anxious to give as much space as possible to labor sports. Tho labor sports have not in this country reached the stage of development that they have elsewhere, there have been many signs of increased interest in this important field of workingclass activity. The DAILY WORKER wants to encourage and further this interest at all times.

In addition, the sports department will print all the important news of the capitalist sports world the latest baseball scores, the results of boxing bouts, etc.

The decision to start a sports department is in line with the general improvements that have recently become part of The DAILY WORKER and which have been made possible by the generous support of the workers.

PLEASANT JOB FOR FE; A SHORT STORY

Y MARTIN MORIARTY

he time clock the shuffling man with the stolid expres- f the oldtimer who has served wenty-one years in the army Watkins, No. 939. In the pa- able department of Jolson and ks, Electrical Enginners, Inc. s old Sam. When a rush made excited he shouted too many . Then he became bloody old labels, whether from fellow- r or time clock, did not worry He plodded round [illegible] shop. d richly colored [illegible]gs of to- contentedly, tightened bolts on able drums, taking a just pride e record of Watkins No. 939. had punched the time clock ten tes late, only once in fifteen .

m was a good worker. So ruth- y had army discipline been d into him that he had learned o what he was told without tion. He had learned to move the mass without concerning elf over the wisdom of the ment. His life as a soldier had planned with the precision of ime-sheet, from "reveille" to ts out." So, if he was asked et through with - job by 10:30 ould report ready for the next at 10:25. He would never sneak two minutes before quitting time ash his hands. He would wait the siren. True, like the others. went outside for a smoke in the ning. But the toilet attendant never obliged to call "939" to ind Sam that his eight minutes e up. Sam was a good ker. . . .

am always swung a wrench in hand in his wanderings round shop. His job was to supervise gs of five or six men as they round paper-lapped cable into pickling tank. At stated peri- of the day, in accordance with instruction slip given him by the p foreman, Sam would let out the in the tanks and adjust the heat- apparatus. Then the foreman uld give him a gang.

A drum of paper-lapped cable uld be pushed into position, and sted on a pair of lifting jacks e man would turn the drum. other would pull up slack cable. o others would flake it in the bot- n of the tank. Theirs was the rst job. The edge of the tank s hot and sticky with resin and . The heat would rise up from bottom of the tank, making the roat dry and wafting a smell of ale smoked fish in the nose.

AM would stand by, giving a hand where necessary. He had a ick, bellowing voice and was not w to shout when the foreman was round. The gang would either ugh loudly as if they knew how take a joke, or mutter something out bloody old Sam and what he uld do with his cable drums. For en though he had the patience of olidity, he could become irritated y trifles. If a new man wanted to a tag on a cable end, Sam would ll him to get out of the way. He ked to tie the tag himself.

Newcomers to the factory would ind Sam interesting and amusing hey would wonder sometimes at his bsorption in a world of wrenches nd cable drums. If they wanted o razz him, they would quote the emark of an office clerk who once aid that Sam's coming was herald- d half an hour in advance. He did ossess rather a full nose. It was road and pugnacious. It was the ose of a private who had drunk beer in the army canteen for twen- ty-one years.

His eyes were pale blue and watery—the eyes of the city, dull, lifeless, seeing nothing but cable drums, wrenches and time sheets. His misshapen teeth were stained a dull brown from chewing many plugs of tobacco. Two front teeth were missing, which accounted for a slight lisp in his bellowing voice. The few strands of colorless hair on his head were brushed into a military quiff. The "quiff" would show beneath the peak of the old cap thrown on the back of his head.

For fifteen years Sam had obeyed orders, tightened bolts and organized vacuum tank gangs till he performed his job as naturally and mechanically as he shined officers shoes and cleaned latrines in the army.

THEN the job changed. Jolson and Killicks had made handsome profits for several years. Engineers were reorganizing the shop machinery. New equipment did better work with less men. On the latest model paper cable lapping machines electric clocks were installed. They stopped when the machine stopped. On a slip of paper attached to the clock the driver wrote down the reason for the stoppage. Four speed men were fired—they were no longer necessary.

Huge vacuum tanks were built in place of the old, and in the great work of re-organization Sam was called upon to fit in. He had to empty the oil from the tanks just as before. When cable was ready for soaking he signalled Jack the crane driver. While Jack was coming he swung open the doors of the new tanks. Two men slung the cable drum to the crane hooks. They helped guide it into position as the crane lifted the drum into the tank. Then they would go, and leave the rest to Sam.

The wrench was still Sam's crucifix. He closed the doors and tightened up every bolt from the bottom to the top of the tank religiously He would kneel on the concrete floor to tighten the lower bolts. To get to those at the top he would use a ladder.

THE taste of noon-day beer was still in Sam's mouth as he climbed the ladder on Monday afternoon. He drew his hand across his mouth reminiscently before he started working with the wrench The bolts were good and and tight Up one step. Tighten. Another step. Turn. His head was nearly level with the crane rail.

Jack the craneman was busy. The foreman had bawled him out for punching in after second siren after lunch. Everyone wanted him. He slammed the controller of the crane to high as the lead press man signalled.

Sam was at the second bolt from the top. They had good beer at the Brown Bear. Turn wrench. Try the Bear again tomorrow. "Look out Sam!" someone yelled.

Jack was too slow with the brakes The iron girder of the crane smashed into Sam's face as he turned around. The edge of the girder sliced off the tip of his nose like a razor blade as the crane was slowing down. The blood gushed from his forehead and eyes and nose and he felt the crunch of breaking teeth. The wrench hit the concrete floor with a little clang. He dropped, shrieking in agony. But he got up, pointing a trembling finger to Jack, while the blood soaked into his shirt, "Oh, you b——!" he shrieked. "You done it!" You done it! You mad b——!" Then he fainted.

A machine driver brought an old sack for him to lie on. It was greasy and stank of oil and resin. Then the ambulance came.

SAM was off work six months before he swung the wrench again The surgeon had left some of his nose. There was a big scar on his forehead which showed up white against the yellow skin. His eyes watered a lot, and he had to bathe them with boracic every night. And once, when he was working night shift, he found Ted the wire-winder pouring tea in his cup. "Don't use that cup, Ted," he said. "I just washed me eye in it." "Oh Christ," Ted said, and vomited.

The suggestion of the lisp was gone—he had no teeth. And he was no longer the loud mouthed old b——Sam. He became old Sam. His voice was thin and piping, like the voice of an old man selling shoelaces on the market square.

The machine driver who put the sack under him would tell the story to every new man told off to help him.

"What compensation did he get?" he was asked one night.

"Ah, he got compensation while he was out. When he came back the firm offered him a lump sum or a job for life. He took the job for life. Sam always wanted a steady job."

STEEL WORKERS CALL OFF 7 YEAR STRIKE

NEWPORT, Ky., July 12 (FP).—The steel strike of Newport, begun July 7, 1921, is over. It was called off after exactly 7 years of struggle, ending in defeat for Locals 5, 15, 16 and 17 of the Amalgamated Assn. of Iron, Steel & Tin Workers. The fight was waged for union recognition. The Andrews Steel Co. and the Newport Rolling Mill Co. were ready to recognize Local 5 of the skilled steel workers but would not recognize the semi-skilled and unskilled in the other locals of the union. All the 1900 workers struck together.

Governor Sends Tanks.

It was a winning strike until Gov. Morrow of Kentucky sent armored tanks and machine gun companies to Newport. Homes of strikers were riddled with bullets, tanks rode down pickets. Federal Judge Cochran granted injunctions that set a new record for judicial oppression though they have been surpassed since by many other state and federal judges. Gunmen ran wild.

"Our" Government.

Morrow's political career in Kentucky did not last long after that but the Harding-Coolidge national administration rewarded his services to the steel trust by putting him on the rail labor board. When the railroad unions succeeded in having the board abolished Coolidge put Morrow on the rail mediation board under the Watson-Parker act

The steel workers, out for 7 years, will try to regain their old jobs. The companies are said to be willing to rehire a considerable proportion.

Workers of Two Trains Escape Death

SHELBURNE FALLS, Mass., July 13 (UP). — Members of two train crews escaped injury here today when a locomotive and eight cars were derailed at the Shelburne Falls station of the Boston and Maine Railroad.

A Troy-Deerfield freight train was standing near the station when a Mechanicsville-Ayer freight train crashed into it. Several cars were demolished and their contents thrown against, the station, one end of which was considerably damaged.

U. S. POLICY TOWARD THE USSR

THE history of the Soviet-American relations, from the October Revolution to the recent refusal of the U. S. Treasury to accept a shipment of Soviet gold, is contained in a volume published by International Publishers, New York, "American Policy Toward Russia Since 1917," by Frederick Lewis Schuman, an instructor in Political Science in the University of Chicago.

The author traces the gradual development of American policy from blockade and armed intervention in 1917-1918 to the pretended policy of "Trade Without Recognition" in 1928. In conclusion, the policy of the United States toward the Soviet Union is summarized as follows:

"The United States, alone of the world powers, has refused recognition and has acted upon the assumption of the impossibility of peaceable intercourse and the inevitability of conflict. . . . Few would contend that the American government has handled the Russian problem since 1917 in a manner to contribute to international peace and understanding. Its past behavior, though intelligible to the American student as a natural manifestation of the fear and aversion with which the dominant class of one social order views another which casts its sacred idols in the mire and threatens it with destruction, can appear to Russians only as an incomprehensible combination of muddle-headed stupidity and scheming malevolence. Its present policy, like that of the Baldwin cabinet in Great Britain since May, 1927, rejects all hope of peace and reconciliation and proclaims implacable war between capitalism and Communism until one has destroyed the other or both have destroyed civilization between them."

THE recent attempts of Secretary of State Kellogg and Under-Secretary of the Treasury Mills (Hoover's lieutenant) to assert that the policy of non-recognition is no obstacle to commerce are refuted by the actions of the state department and the treasury department, respectively, in opposing Soviet credits and refusing to accept Soviet gold. The author points out that the recent gold rejection, "like the ban on long term loans, constitutes an important qualification to the official policy of 'trade without recognition.'" "The official position maintained at Washington, that non-recognition does not constitute an obstacle to commerce, is therefore not in accordance with the facts."

The Story of Sacco and Vanzetti in Literature

By WALT CARMON

THOUGH the monstrous murder of Sacco and Vanzetti occurred only one year ago, there is already a substantial and growing literature to remind us of the facts of their innocence, their courage, their loyalty to the working class and the great movement of world labor in their behalf. Workers will find in this literature much interest and much inspiration for their activity in the struggle.

"The Life and Death of Sacco and Vanzetti," by Eugene Lyons, is dramatic reading. It is the complete story of the two workers who came from Italy to the "land of opportunity," their struggle for a livelihood, their activity in the labor movement and finally their judicial murder.

"Sacco and Vanzetti—Labor's Martyrs," by Max Shachtman, presents just as dramatic reading, with a sharper working class viewpoint.

John Dos Passos, noted poet and playwright, wrote of the frame-up more briefly in a pamphlet, "Facing the Chair."

"The case of Sacco and Vanzetti," by Felix Frankfurter, is a lawyer's analysis of the evidence and facts.

All of these have much of interest for the worker. Here is the history, the evidence, the drama and the lessons of the great crime. But poetry and art were also effected. Stirred by the fierce struggle between the oligarchy and the workers for the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti, Fred Ellis, noted staff artist of The DAILY WORKER, for a full month preceding the execution, contributed a series of powerful cartoons that attracted attention not only throughout the country, but in Europe and Latin America as well. These drawings are issued in the collection, "The Case of Sacco and Vanzetti in Cartoons."

"An Anthology of Poetry on Sacco and Vanzetti" contains but little of value. Editing and most of the poetry coming from writers far removed from the labor movement, their horror is expressed in purely humanitarian approach. It does, however, include some good verse which appeared in the radical press, particularly "Murder at Midnight," by A. B. Magil.

Motion pictures of those stirring days have been ordered destroyed. The ruling class wants no visible evidence of their black deed. The daily press accounts and magazine articles must be found in the files of libraries. This literature, meager as yet, but growing, will serve as labor history to remind us ever of the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti—two martyrs of our class.

FASCIST POLICE TORTURE WOMAN

KISHINEFF, Rumania, July 13 —After being submitted to cruel tortures for three days by the Rumanian police to extract "information," Mme. Kollantay, aunt of the Soviet ambassador to Norway, was declared insane and taken to an insane asylum in a straitjacket.

She was arrested in connection with the murder of an editor of a monarchist newspaper, and the Rumanian police took this as an opportunity to attempt to make her "talk." The information extracting torture was so severe, that either she really became insane, or was declared so by the police in order to get rid of her after their false charges.

She was charged with lodging a Soviet spy in her house, and was therefore considered by the police as a person who had much desirable information.

McGarry Forces Mine Strikers Back to Work

WILKES-BARRE, July 13—Frank McGarry, so-called insurgent president of district No. 1, forced miners of the Florence Colliery working under the Lehigh & Wilkes-Barre Valley Coal Mining Co., at Dupont to go back to work, stating that grievances would be taken up by him with the representatives of the same company.

"Everyone in Moscow Now Buys Books"

By CLARINA MICHELSON

ALL Moscow is buying books. The annual two weeks' "Book Market" is on. On a long boulevard stretching from the statue of Pushkin to the statue of Timiriasev are over 100 gaily decorated booths where books are being sold—scientific books, children's books, works by Lenin, French magazines, books on economics, books on the theatre, books of poems, books of cartoons, English Tauschnitz editions, books on the radio, the new Soviet Encyclopedia, old books, new books, books on every conceivable subject.

An orchestra is playing. Some children are dancing. Others are digging in a large sand pile. Red streamers stretched across the boulevard read: "Books are needed as much as bread." "Without books man is blind." "Without books workers are slaves." Up and down the workers, men and women, looking, buying, reading.

Theremin, Volpe, Roxy Ballet to Feature Big Concert Tonight

THE program of the massive concert and entertainment, to be given tonight at the Coney Island Stadium, will be divided into three parts. Arnold Volpe and a symphony orchestra of fifty musicians from the major orchestras of the city; the Roxy Ballet, directed by I. Nelle, and Prof. Leon Theremin, the noted and brilliant Russian inventor.

Arnold Volpe will lead his orchestra in the following program: the Coronation March from Meyerbeer's opera, "The Prophet"; the famous Rienzi Overture of Wagner, "Caucasian Sketches" by Ippolitow-Ivanov, Fantasy from Bizet's opera, "Carmen," and the popular "Marche Slave" by Tschaikovsky.

The orchestral numbers will be followed by the Roxy Ballet under the direction of I. Nelle. The numbers include popular Gypsy dances and the Mazourka from Delibes' ballet, "Coppelia" and a group of dances from Gounod's opera "Faust." Other numbers will follow later in the evening.

Prof. Leon Theremin, the world-famous scientist and inventor, called the Russian Edison, will be reserved for the climax of the evening's entertainment. Theremin will again demonstrate his remarkable invention by which he draws music out of the air, and will play both solos and with orchestra accompaniment. In the solos he will be accompanied on the piano by Arie Abileah.

His solo numbers will be "Night" by Rubinstein and Etude by Scriabine. With orchestra accompaniment he will play Golterman's Concerto in A Minor and Saint-Saens' famous composition, "The Swan."

"STARK LOVE" AND "MOANA" AT CAME OTODAY

Beginning today the Film Arts Guild is presenting at the Cameo Theatre for its revival showing "Stark Love," the motion picture of life among the southern mountaineers, which is actually portrayed by the natives. This film which was directed by Karl Brown, is being shown coincidentally with its release in Europe where it received an excellent reception in all the continental capitals.

The companion film to "Stark Love" is Robert J. Flaherty's cinema of the South Sea Islands, "Moana." On the same program the Film Arts Guild has exhumed from private vaults some unique examples of the earliest films ever taken including what is reputed to be the very first motion picture ever "shot," that called "The Charge of the French Brigade." This selection is particularly notable because it contains the very first screen test ever submitted to by Charlie Chaplin. In the short space of about fifty feet we see Charlie exhibiting his famous waddle-walk and shoulder-shrug, which was later to convulse the nations and to give him the first universal niche in the motion picture hall of fame.

League Worries CMTC Officers

FORT EUSTIS, Va., July 13. — The first lecture given to the Citizens' Military Training Camp recruits here was devoted to denunciation of letters sent to those going to the camps by the Young Workers (Communist) League in Philadelphia.

C. M. T. C. recruits were warned of the danger of reading radical literature, and all who believe in the rule of Morgan were called upon to defend "their" institutions against the "Reds."

The letters, which worry the military authorities so much, pointed out to young workers going to the camps the role of the CMTC and the nature of the preparations for new imperialist wars.

Labor Fakers Brew Votes for Wall St.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, July 13 (U P).. — The executive board of the International Union of Brewery, Flour, Cereal and Soft Drinks Workers has endorsed Gov. Smith for president.

The board denounced the present republican administration because it is committed to destruction to local government through attempted enforcement of the Volstead act, unwarranted invasion of personal rights, destruction of the principles of personal liberty and destruction of home life and child welfare.

I. Nelle, noted and talented dancer will appear with the famous Roxy Ballet in the special concert at the Coney Island Stadium this evening.

4 British Airplane Workers are Killed

LONDON, July 13 (UP). — Four persons were killed today when a small, single engined Imperial Airways plane crashed at Purley, the Imperial Airways announced.

All of those killed were employes of the Croydon airdrome.

Early reports said that the plane, generally used to carry baggage on the London-to-Continent air route, had been taken out by several members of the Croydon staff. Those in the plane included two women, and three men besides the pilot.

Signs of Coming Storm

The crash of the stock market for a record drop since the declaration of the World War in 1914 following upon an almost equal drop a month ago undoubtedly points to certain significant forces at work both in the financial and industrial structure of American capitalism. These are not yet basic, but they cut both deep and wide.

Primarily the present developments are connected with gold movements and with credit operations. But these in turn are directly related if not entirely determined by the increasing surplus of goods which the American market is unable to absorb and the continued disparity betwen agricultural and industrial wages.

Under the theory that "easy money," that is easy credit, would by facilitating borrowing for commercial purposes, increase business and maintain "prosperity," the Federal Reserve System has since the war adhered to a policy of a low rediscount rate. Whether or not the ruling finance capitalists who operate through the Federal Reserve Bank and through it control practically the world economic structure, really believed that they could by this means solve the fundamental contradiction of capitalism, the inability of the masses under a money economy to buy back the product which they create, is not important. The program of encouraging business by tremendous credit extensions, installment buying, low discount rates, nevertheless, met with the inevitable wall of the surplus value which the working masses do not, of course, receive and which the capitalists cannot consume.

Rising unemployment, an increasing disparity between agricultural and industrial prices, forced a change in policy about the middle of last year. A qualified restriction of credit effected by an increase in the rediscount rate was adopted. At the same time the Federal Reserve Bank dumped hundreds of millions of government securities on the market with the object of absorbing free funds in use for either speculation or excessive business operations. The heavy export of gold used to stabilize European currencies, particularly that of France, has acted similarly to restrict the basis of credit operations in this country.

None of these have suffered to solve the inevitable contradictions of capitalist economy. The stock market not now as indicative of basic conditions as in the past, nevertheless, in its record crash reflects the play of fundamental processes. Referring to the sudden spurt in call money which rose to 10 per cent on the stock market on Monday July 2, Emerson Wirt Axe, writing in the "Annalist" of July 6th declared:

> "Under normal conditions money does not go to 10 per cent even temporarily. It is high time that the public realized that we are faced today with a credit situation nearly as dangerous as that of 1906 or 1920."

Finance capital in the United States still believes there is a way out of the growing disparity between agricultural and industrial prices: depression in wages of labor. American policy in recent weeks has been devised specifically to increase the value of gold with the ultimate aim of depressing the wage scale and thus restoring parity between the farmer and the wage slave.

It is an elementary proposition in Marxian economics that this device will only add to the existing contradictions by creating larger surpluses which the "market" cannot consume.

American capitalism is not yet facing a major crisis but it will have its hands full with the growing youngster.

Those Bolsheviks —

Seven men, given up as lost in the ice-deserts of the north, have been rescued by the Soviet ice-breaker, Krassin. After weeks of heart-breaking effort, of petty rivalry among various "humanitarian" capitalist countries, it remained for an aviator of the Soviet Union, Chukhnovsky, and a Soviet ship to effect the rescue of the fascist Nobile party.

The policy and tactics of the Soviet Union thruout this rescue work have been in striking contrast to the behavior of the capitalist nations. The expedition of Gen. Umberto Nobile into the north was hardly actuated by scientific motives. It was primarily an inflated publicity stunt for the greater glory of Italian fascism and Gen. Nobile himself. Yet when it became definitely known that the Nobile party had met with disaster and was in danger, the Soviet Union immediately offered the resources at its command in the rescue work. The original aims of the expedition had failed miserably. Only the practical task of saving 16 human beings now remained.

What co-operation did it receive from the rescue parties of other countries? None at all. The Soviet government proposed that a central commission be formed to direct the rescue work in an organized fashion. The fascist Italian government and the governments of the countries that had sent out rescue parties refused. It would have been too great a concession for the capitalist nations for them to accept the plan of their hated enemy, the first workers' and peasants' republic.

And when Lieut. Lundborg, the Swedish aviator, finally succeeded in locating one group of the lost expedition, whom did he rescue? The fascist Gen. Nobile, leaving the others to shift for themselves.

Now even the capitalist press is forced to praise the Soviet ice-breaker Krassin and the heroic aviator, Chukhnovsky, who has himself been temporarily stranded with his companions. It is a bitter pill for the capitalist countries to swallow. The Krassin is proceeding with the rescue work. Seven men have been saved and another party is reported to have been sighted.

Meanwhile the toll of this grandiose fascist expedition thus far is two known dead, with 15 others, including the Amundsen rescue party, still lost—perhaps forever.

Marine Life in Nicaragua

Capitalism has little gratitude for those who do its dirty work. Soldiers may be "heroes" when there is a shortage of cannon fodder, but after the bosses' profits are safe the brave are but rubbish cast aside.

The life of servicemen in Nicaragua, revealed by a letter from a marine, published a few days ago in The DAILY WORKER, illustrates the gratitude of Wall Street to those who defend its investments.

Visions are presented to the young workers of the delights to be enjoyed in Nicaragua. When on arrival he finds himself actually a prisoner with no prospect of release, the glitter of abstract soldiering turns into the dross of reality, when the recruit finds himself forced to carry ninety-four pounds of equipment thirty miles daily thru mud knee deep, to replace oxen in pulling supply wagons the enchantment borne of distance and the lying tongue of a recruiting officer soon fades.

These marines learn to know the facts of their actual conditions, but few realize that when they are fighting against the freedom of Nicaragua they are continuing their own enslavement.

The two marines who deserted the imperialist forces of intervention to join the army of Sandino pointed out the only road to their freedom and followed the true interests of the servicemen who have been sent to Nicaragua by Wall Street.

TORTURE USED IN INDIAN PRISONS

LONDON, July 12.—Writing in the Communist newspaper, Workers Life, George Allison, who recently was released from prison in India, tells of prison conditions there.

Allison, an English miner, went to India to help trade union organization. To prevent his activities among the Indian workers, Allison was imprisoned 18 months on a technical charge of violating passport regulations. He served his sentence in the Yeravda prison, near Poona.

Breakfast of "Kunji."

Even the conditions of the "white" prisoners are much better than those of the natives, they were subjected to extremely harsh treatment and brutal tortures.

They rose at 6 every morning were given thirty minutes' drill and then breakfeast of "Kunji." During the rest of the day, until 4 o'clock, they worked in their cells. The work, for the most part, consisted of grinding meal between two small millstones, making envelopes and making quinine tablets. At night, during most of the period Allison was confined, there were no lights in the cells.

Use Salted Rod.

For the slightest excuse, the prisoners were punished by flogging, being forced to wear clothing next to the skin made of coarse sacking, and to work with iron bars fastened to the legs from ankles to the waist. On some occasions, as many as 30 prisoners were flogged in one day. The victims were tied to a triangular wooden frame, their arms stretched upwards, and flogged with a salted rod. Among the "crimes" for which such punishments are given is that of having a pencil.

Lawmakers as Lawbreakers and Why They Are Out of Jail

(EDITORIAL NOTE: The following letter written to The DAILY WORKER by Charles Bright, an engineer and former builder, who has fought crooked judges, officials and politicians and "money power" their master, big business and other servants of big business for many years, is timely in connection with the arrests of our comrades for their participation in the July 4 demonstration in Wall Street.)

Editor, DAILY WORKER:
Sir:

From the daily press and The DAILY WORKER I gather that Robert Minor, editor of The DAILY WORKER and Workers (Communist) Party candidate for the United States senate, was assaulted by the police and dragged by the heels from an automobile when making an address near the corner of Broad and Wall Sts., New York City, against the imperialist acts of our president in waging an illegal and unauthorized war carried on at the behest of interested American capitalists, schemers, and their political tools against that part of the patriotic people of a weak and almost defenseless nation, Nicaragua who object to and resist such invasions of their sovereignty—people who refuse to acknowledge the authority of Diaz, a former clerk of these foreign capitalists, to act as president of Nicaragua.

Acts of Terrorism.

This man Diaz, they declare, has been unconstitutionally seated there by the money and armed forces of foreigners, and is now sustained in power by the military forces of the United States and principally by their acts of terrorism in dropping bombs from their places of vantage and safety in the American military planes above, upon the homes of these patriots and their non-combatant women and children, and upon their heads in the brush where they rush for shelter and safety should they unfortunately make any move...ent that would indicate the presence of an animal or human being to the American military aviators above.

The daily press further stated that the candidate for the U. S senate was charged at the police station with the offense of speaking without a permit. From the same sources I learned that when Minor attempted to exercise his legal rights to address the court after Magistrate Maurice H. Gottlieb had pronounced the sentence of $25 fine or five days in jail, he was manhandled and forced into prison.

Misconduct of Police.

Upon these two points, "Arrests for speaking without a permit," and "misconduct of police magistrates of the city of New York in denying accused parties their legal and constitutional rights and fair hearing." I happen to be a qualified expert and perhaps New York's most successful expert judging by results For I have won out in the end in every case, either at the station house, or in a dozen cases tried out at the police courts, and in one case of alleged criminal libel tried out before a jury for nine days in the Court of General Sessions, all ending with "not guilty."

In each case I traced the false arrest or interference back to its source. In the beginning I always found the arrest was due to the agents of the crooked judges, officials and lawyers whom I am exposing for conniving with the Rockefeller group in putting through the courts a series of frauds.

These criminal acts are now the subject matter of an action pending and brought by me in the supreme court of Queens county against the Rockefellers, certain judges, and others for damages for their guilty participation in said frauds.

Improper Influences.

Of late I have found that I was interfered with and molested and even arrested but the charges not accepted at the precinct station, not only because of the above mentioned improper influences, but because I was interfering unwittingly with certain "Racketeers of Justice," or what might be described in short as the "graft" of certain magistrates, police court clerks, prosecuting attorneys and officials and a few police officers and the politicians or district leaders, or their captains, lieutenants and aides, and other accomplices involved.

In the Bronx I have just completed gathering the necessary legal evidence against a magistrate, a prosecuting attorney, a clerk of the court, a police sergeant, detectives and others who utilize the West Farms Police Court as a base from which they work this racket.

"Absent" Officials.

I am forced to go slow because the district attorney of the Bronx is absent on vacation, likewise his assistant Mr. Ryan. Then the Commissioner of Police Warren is hard to see on such matters. The acting mayor objects to go into such matters while the mayor is absent and the mayor is not expected before August. So we are now preparing to lay it before Governor Smith who has the power of removing the district attorney for negligently failing to act after being advised of these violations of the criminal law and who likewise can act should Mayor Walker fail to compel the police commissioner to do his duty.

Since I have unwittingly interfered with and spoiled the graft of these Racketeers of Justice, I am suffering a new form of molestation as a result of a conspiracy in violation of Section 19 of the U. S Criminal Code to feloniously prevent me, among other things, from exercising my legal rights under the first and fourteenth amendments of the constitution to circulate and obtain signatures to a petition to congress of the Equality League, Inc. for investigation and impeachment of certain federal judges.

This new hostile spirit was manifested as soon as a late copy of my magazines "Vigilante" and "The Vigilant American" disclosed the fact that the sheriff of New York was involved and that some of the big "higher-ups" in Tammany had been influenced by George Gordon Battle, the "liason officer" employed by the Rockefeller group in procuring certain democratic magistrates, judges, and district attorneys and officials of justice to misconduct matters officially before them. I am sending you several issues of my magazines that contain these charges as well as part of the incriminating documentary evidence to sustain and prove my charges.

While police headquarters admit that I have the legal right to do what I am doing, and the manner in which I am proceeding, it is obvious that the police department heads are woefully inefficient and incompetent, or that they are not acting in good faith.

At any rate, they are not able to stop the unlawful acts, illegal molestations and uncalled for interferences of their patrolmen, sergeants and officials, and with the evidence our Vigilantes have now collected, I can not resist the conclusion that it is but the carrying out of a criminal conspiracy to injure, threaten, coerce and intimidate me and others associated with me in the exercise of our legal rights in violation of section 19 of the Criminal Code which makes such offenses punishable with 10 years imprisonment and $5,000 fine.

Distort Law.

This law was originally passed to suppress the activities of the Ku Klux Klan, but now covers all conspiracies against the legal rights of citizens. I note that while Police Commissioner Warren is quick to take action against assemblage and processions of the K. K. K., he is practically inaccessable when a citizen wishes to end the criminal practices of certain members of his force when operating in collusion with certain "Racketeers of Justice."

(Signed) CHARLES BRIGHT.

Told You So

The Workers (Communist) Party will regard the Communist vote cast in the next elections as a barometer of the revolutionary temperature of the masses, but campaigning for votes for the sake of votes is not on its agenda. A glance at The DAILY WORKER or any other Communist organ proves this. The Party concerns itself with the miners' strike, with the textile workers' strike, with the fight to release class war prisoners, with the organization of the unorganized, and with the many other burning issues that face the American workers today.

The Communist Party participates in the elections in order to mobilize the masses for struggle, to expose capitalist democracy, and to teach them that only thru a revolutionary struggle can capitalism be abolished. Nevertheless, when it nominates its candidates for the various legislative bodies, it intends to strive to the utmost to have them elected, in order that these legislative bodies may be used as a forum from which to advocate the overthrow of the capitalist system.

The socialist "New Leader" boasts that Herr Hermann Mueller, the German socialist leader, has succeeded in organizing a cabinet tho this cabinet includes only four socialists out of a total of eleven. What a victory! Is it not surprising that the old monarchist worshipper, Von Hindenburg, should approve this selection?

The British labor party, headed by the socialist MacDonald, has issued its platform, which declares its approval of American imperialism by endorsing the fake Kellogg peace treaty. It should not be forgotten that it was during the premiership of MacDonald that the Dawes Plan was fastened on Germany with the valuable assistance of MacDonald. International socialism is all things to all imperialisms.

Every dollar contributed to the Communist Election Campaign Fund will help to bring the workers a step nearer to a Workers' and Farmers' Government, which means the rule of the workers and farmers with the capitalists having the choice of going to work or quietly starving. There can be no solution of the class struggle short of this. Leaders may sell out to the enemy, but the great mass of the workers and farmers cannot be bribed by the capitalist class. There are too many of them.

In this campaign the Workers (Communist) Party will mobilize the workers in the industries and the exploited farmers in agriculture for a fight against the capitalist system. The $100,000 Communist Party Election Campaign Fund will be used for this purpose. The treasure chests of the other parties will be used to put officials in office who will serve the master class and who will profit by the system they live on and defend. The raising of this Communist campaign fund is a first charge on the duty of the Party membership.

Andrew Mellon, secretary of the treasury, is able to show a treasury surplus of $398,000,000. This is offered as evidence by the supporters of the republican administration that prosperity is still with us. Unfortunately for this contention however approximately 4,000,000 unemployed and the low wages received by those employed does not bear out the boasts of the G. O. P. boosters.

The Textile Strikers and the Election

New Bedford Mill Workers Rally Behind the Workers (Communist) Party

By OLGA GOLD

The process of "rationalizing" the textile industry has affected it to a greater extent than most other industries. Not only has the installation of new machinery left thousands of experienced workers jobless, but the shifting of textile mills' cotton to the southern states, silk to the coal regions, have contributed greatly to this process.

The capitalists have discovered that the south is an extremely good place for the slave driving textile industry. In the first place, it is close to the raw material; in the second place, there is, as yet, no sign of organization among the workers. In the south, where all the evils of chattel slavery exist in practice, the workers are consequently more submissive.

Must Sign Contract

In many instances a worker cannot obtain employment in the south unless he signs a contract that his whole family will work for the same slave driver. The following table, from the "Monthly Labor Review," shows average wages and hours of labor in cotton goods manufacturing for 1926; since then several wage cuts have been forced upon the workers:

State	Hours	Wages
Georgia	57	$11.39
Alabama	54.8	10.51
Maine	53.9	16.67
Massachusetts	48.5	18.78
North Carolina	55.8	13.63
South Carolina	55.1	13.42
Virginia	55.2	10.33

The mills in the coal regions are of no less value to the bosses. There, too, they can get cheap coal, cheap rent and cheaper labor. Workers are paid as low as 15 to 20 cents an hour. They are on a different economic plane from the workers in the textile centers, because there men and women find their only means of earning a living, whereas in the mining region, except for a few mechanics, the workers are all women and children, who use their work as a side job to help out the meager earnings received by the miners. The bosses here, therefore, pay a much lower wage than even the very low average paid in the textile centers.

The general outcome of this situation for the workers is the unprecedented growth of unemployment, wage cuts, etc. Official government statistics show that in March 1928, only 38 per cent of cotton workers were working full time. While in April, 1928, cotton goods workers only 32 per cent, silk goods workers 48 per cent, woolen and worsted workers 28 per cent worked full time.

There are thousands of skilled workers in the New England textile centers who have lost hope of ever securing employment. Hundreds of families who have resided in the textile area for years are compelled daily to leave the communities. In New England men depend economically on the women, who, because their labor power is much cheaper, obtain work more easily than the men. A specific instance is that of a Polish woman of my acquaintance who made $16.00 weekly and had to support her husband and little ones. And such cases are extremely common.

Some Factors

Some of the important factors of the present cotton workers' strike in New Bedford are as follows: First, it indicates the awakening of the most exploited section of the American working class; that the sufferings of these workers have reached such a degree that they can no longer endure it. They are beginning to awaken to the need of calling strikes, protesting and demanding their rights. They are determined to build a new union to include not only a few loomfixers and a few other skilled workers, but to embrace the entire mass of textile workers. Another important factor of utmost significance is that the strike is taking place during an election year at the time when the capitalist class is most energetically and effectively carrying on a campaign to poison the minds of the workers with various injurious illusions about its government. These workers are learning daily on the picket lines and at mass meetings about the nature and structure of this government. The knowledge which the workers are obtaining about the functioning of the capitalist state during strikes is of far greater value than that gained through academic education.

Become Disillusioned

Here the workers, directly through the harsh, tyrannical measures of the police, are slowly becoming disillusioned about the impartiality of our governmental apparatus. It is thus shown to the workers that against the efforts of the working class to improve its standard of living, to demand a little more of the values which we, the workers, have produced, the capitalists are fighting with all the weapons in their possession, press, court, church, etc.

During election they will challenge the bosses; that they will do this is shown by the fact that they sent representative Eulalie Mendes to greet the National Nominating Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party, which was held in New York City May 25, 26 and 27. In her greetings on behalf of the 26,000 workers she told us of the role of the police, of the discovery of who is their enemy and who their friend, and that they see that those leaders who are labelled as Communists are always in the forefront of the struggle, unafraid of the terrors the bosses use against them.

Our Own Candidates

She told us, too, that she was instructed to ask the Workers Party to put up Albert Weisbord, national secretary of the Textile Mills Committees, in opposition to Butler, who is chief adviser to Coolidge and himself a manufacturer.

We are sure that the workers of New Bedford will not only register their vote for labor candidates, but the most class-conscious of them will follow in the steps of the 500 fighting miners who recently joined the Workers Party and together with the thousands of militant men and women fight the battles of the working class, to its victory.

FASCISTS DESERTED MALMGREM TO DIE OF HUNGER, COLD

Zappi and Mariano Abandoned Swedish Scientist to Death In Arctic Ice

Saved Own Lives with Dying Companion's Food and Compass

KINGS BAY, Spitzbergen, July 15.—The fascist fliers, Captains Adalberto Mariano and Filippo Zappi now claim that Prof. Finn Malgren, Swedish scientist, died June 15 beside a grave in the ice which he had directed them to prepare for him as death approached.

Mariano and Zappi were rescued by the Russian icebreaker Krassin after they had been wandering for 43 days over the shifting Arctic ice.

The statement issued by the two fascist officers, who admittedly deserted the Swedish scientist, declared Malmgren became exhausted June 15 and was unable to proceed. They claim that he insisted that his companions continue toward land and safety.

Admit Desertion

Malmgren, according to Mariano and Zappi, directed that a grave be excavated for him in which he could place himself as death approached. They left him dying on the ice as they sought safety for themselves.

The Italians took with them Malmgren's compass. Their latest conflicting story is that although they left him, injured and freezing, after they had gone a short distance they looked back and saw Malmgren lift his head. They say they returned to him and found him dead.

The statement of Mariano and Zappi, the first definite announcement that Malmgren actually was dead, was issued tonight by the two fascists in an attempt to put at rest the storm of rage aroused by their earlier admission that they had simply deserted the Swedish scientist in a dying condition on the ice, wounded and freezing. They had previously indicated that their only attention to their dying companion was to take his food supply for themselves, but the new version is that after deserting him in a feeble condition they sam him raise his head, returned and saw him dead.

A New Version

Mariano and Zappi, whose physical condition is surprisingly good after so prolonged a stay on the ice without sufficient food or clothing, related the alleged circumstances surrounding Malmgren's death with great reluctance. Previously the ugly rumors of their treachery to Malmgren and the silence of the two men fitted together. But it is pointed out here that the only changes in their present story are two—that they say that Malmgren "insisted" that they leave him to die, and, second, that after deserting him they returned long enough to see the body after death.

They had, at first, been reported as having remained with Malmgren's body for a month.

The report of the Soviet aviator, Chukhnovsky, who first sighted Mariano and Zappi was that a third man was with them, that two waved to him and one remained motionless on the ice.

Swedish airplanes will search the ice for the body of Malmgren, to bring it back to Sweden for burial.

Fascists Angry

ROME, July 15 (UP).—The Italian government tonight issued an official denial of "slanderous" reports published in foreign newspapers regarding the disaster of the trans-polar dirigible Italia.

"Many foreign newspapers have specialized in slanderous campaigns against Italy and affirmed that the polar disaster was due to an order to General Nobile to reach the North Pole May 24, the anniversary of Italy's intervention in the world war," the official statement said.

"Such an order never was imparted, and, therefore, the story is another lie."

VIRGO BAY, Spitzbergen, July 15 (UP).—The reported rescue of Roald Amundsen and his five companions by the Russian icebreaker Maligin was without confirmation tonight.

Messages received here tonight indicated the Maligin still was searching the ice barrier in the vicinity of King Carls Land.

Amundsen, with Major Rene Guilbaud of the French Navy, and four other men, left Tromsoe, Norway, June 18, to search for General Umberto Nobile and his companions. He has not been heard from since.

Army Officers Won't Permit News of Porter

FORT ADAMS, R. I., July 15.—The military authorities here refuse to permit any communication with John Porter, imprisoned here for his activities in the New Bedford textile strike, while subject to military law.

The officers are keeping Porter strictly incommunicado and even refuse to permit his physical condition to be reported to friends. The last message from Porter reported that he had become ill following the brutal treatment to which he has been subjected, and stated that the authorities are trying to weaken his militant attitude and prevent him from exposing the role of the army before a public court-martial. At that time he had been thrown into solitary confinement.

Efforts to learn about Porter's present condition have been unsuccessful. A message was sent through the Western Union by the National Office of the Young Workers (Communist) League asking for information as to Porter's condition and developments of the case. The military authorities here informed the Western Union that there is a "military censorship on all communication with this man."

Efforts are to be made tomorrow or Tuesday to establish contact with Porter again by a visit from an attorney, and unless he is brought before a court-martial at once legal action will be started in the civil courts.

Kansas City Protest Resolution

KANSAS CITY, July 15.—At the huge Porter protest meeting held in Shawnee Park Wednesday the following resolution was adopted unanimously:

"We, the citizens of Armourdale, Kansas City, Kansas, assembled in a meeting at Shawnee Park, Armourdale, on July 11, having heard a report on the arrest and detention of John Porter, hereby resolve:

"That the imprisonment of John Porter is caused by his activity on behalf of the New Bedford Textile Workers. He was imprisoned after warnings by the police that if he does not leave his work in the strike he would be "fixed up proper";

"That we recognize that the cause of the New Bedford Textile Workers is the cause of the workers of Kansas City and that the cause of John Porter is our cause likewise;

"That we therefore demand that John Porter be released by the military authorities;

"That a copy of this resolution be sent to the Secretary of War, to the President of the United States, to the Governor of Massachusetts and to the local and labor press."

Josephine Wilson was the English working girl who paid her tribute to American capital. It was her last tribute, for she paid it with her life. She poisoned herself because life did not seem worth while on the 24 shillings ($5.80) a week she received from Woolworth's.

BERLIN AMNESTY PROVES FRAUD; FEW RELEASED

Poland, Too, Makes Empty Gesture

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

BERLIN, July 15.— Nationwide resentment has followed the passage by the Reichstag of an "amnesty act" by which a relative handful of class war prisoners has been released from jail while thousands are to remain for varying terms in their cells. Characterized as treason and betrayal by militant labor leaders thruout the country, the "amnesty act" is arousing increasing protest from the German working class.

Altho the government organs are triumphant in proclaiming the "amnesty," official distinction is being made between political prisoners and "political murderers." In the latter category the government is including all the leading militant workers who are now in German jails.

The two hundred class war prisoners who have been released in answer to the tremendous mass protest for an amnesty are but a fraction of the thousands who are vainly asking when they will be liberated. The authorities are frankly admitting that a large number will never leave their cells under the new edict.

Thousands of the prisoners who expected that they would receive full liberty within the next few days now learn that trivial reductions in their terms of imprisonment are the best they can hope for from the government's action.

CONCERT PUT OFF UNTIL SATURDAY

Theremin Volpe and Ballet to Perform

Since the weather on Saturday took such a counter-revolutionary turn, the great DAILY WORKER concert at Coney Island Stadium has been postponed until next Saturday evening. This postponement is expected to prove an advantage in several ways. The participating artists will have an opportunity to perfect their programs in greater detail during the coming week, while many workers who were for some reason unable to purchase tickets will be able to do so for next Saturday.

The committee in charge announces that all tickets bought for the concert will be good next Saturday. The concert will be the same as previously announced, that is, the greatest proletarian musical event ever held in the United States. The entire program will be put on without change. Arnold Volpe and his orchestra will present a program of symphonic favorites; the famous Roxy Ballet, under the direction of A. Nelle, former dance partner of Pavlova, will perform their unique dances; and Prof. Leon Theremin, the great Soviet scientist, who is the "star" of the concert, will draw his remarkable new ether-music out of the air in a program of unusual distinction.

Tickets for this great concert can still be secured, but they are not likely to last much longer. All those who want to make sure of being at Coney Island Stadium next Saturday should buy these tickets immediately at the office of The DAILY WORKER, 26-28 Union Square.

Republican Politician Dies At Chicago

CHICAGO, July 15 (UP).—The death of Henry R. Rathbone, 57, republican congressman - at - large from Illinois, and nominee for reelection, at the presbyterian hospital here today, will leave a vacancy on the republican ticket which will be filled by the party's state central committee. Richard Yates stands out prominently among possibilities for the nomination.

ISSUE CALL FOR NEW TEXTILE UNION

Matthew Woll's New Boss Racket in Drive on Labor

UNION OFFICIALS HELP OPEN SHOP MILITARY SCHEME

Employers Lay Plans For Soldier Law

CHICAGO, Ill., July 15.—A newfangled class collaboration scheme by which Matthew Woll, reactionary vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, and several other labor skates sought to creep a bit closer to the bosom of the bosses met with a tragic end here when the employers sprung the trap a bit too soon and forced the labor officials to claim "immunity."

The Illinois Association For Criminal Justice has issued a recommendation for the establishment of a state constabulary to fight labor.

Respectable Strikebreakers

The association is one of the numerous alleged reform organizations that put a respectable front on the legislative and judicial conspiracies of big business.

Part of the front is a window dressing of liberals and labor officials, behind whom the anti-union financiers and employers operate In this case Vice-President Matthew Woll, President John H. Walker of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, President Agnes Nestor of the Women's Trade Union League and ex-President George W. Perkins of the cigarmakers international provided the labor screen on the board.

The association suddenly released to the press a strong recommendation for a state cossack system. At the same time it branded a number of Chicago labor men as sluggers, murderers, bombers, gunmen and extortionists. The survey committee of the association assumed responsibility for these astonishing actions and Woll is a member of that committee.

Sit With Open-Shoppers

Some of Chicago's most notorious open-shoppers, like Jim Patten of the Landis committee and Tom Donnelley of the scab printshops, sit on the board of the Illinois Association for Criminal Justice with Woll and Walker and the other fakers.

TRACTION PLAN IS MADE PUBLIC

Untermeyer Has New Bridge to 7c Fare

Plans for the acquisition of the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit Corporation at a price still to be determined, for the organization of a so-called quasi-public corporation which will finance the newly reorganized subway lines, and for the possible recapture of the Interborough in the event that road does not "concede" to the plan was made public yesterday by Samuel Untermyer, special counsel to the Transit Commission who for the past nine months has been working on the scheme.

No 5 Cent Fare.

The five cent fare, according to Untermyer, will be retained. This is the same announcement made by him last year on first making public his proposal which the present one resembles in practically every respect. It is known, however, that Untermyer insists that the subways must be "self-supporting." The

G.O.P. OFFICIALS ARE INDICTED

BILOXI, Miss., July 15 (UP).—A federal grand jury investigation of alleged patronage in federal appointments in Mississippi will go into its second week Monday, with results already showing.

Four indictments were returned by the grand jury Saturday, and two of the men arrested. They were released later on bonds of $10,000 each. A. P. Cook, former postmaster at Leakesville, Miss., was arrested Friday night, charged with falsifying records in his office.

New Bedford Strikers Stage Great All-Night Picket Demonstration

The most dramatic event of the New Bedford strike took place recently when a rumor that eight scabs had started the looms in the Kilburn mill brought out 18,000 strikers who continued to picket thruout the night. Pickets in fishermen's boots kept guard at the mill gates on the waterfront in this tremendous demonstration of the strikers' solidarity. Photo shows a group of pickets outside the Kilburn mill.

JUDGE REFUSES NEW TRIAL FOR STEVE MENDOLA

Upholds Frame-up of Militant Miner

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., July 15.—The reactionary Judge McLean has refused a new trial for Steve Mendola, one of the fighting Pittsburgh miners framed up by the Cappellini machine because of their struggle against the contractors' system which has led to the murder of several Pittsburgh miners.

This same judge has also sentenced Sam Bonita, a rank and file leader to six to 12 years. Judge McLean, in refusing to give a new trial to Mendola, was very much aroused over the fact that the jury did not bring the verdict of second degree murder.

Judge McLean is a coal operator and is acting in behalf of Cappellini and the Lewis Machine. He is also a colonel in the state militia of Pennsylvania and has done his bit during the world war in directing the slaughter of the workers. It is a well-known fact that in the regiment under his command during the world war forty soldiers were court-martialed for minor offenses and some of them sentenced to death.

Adam Moleski, the third victim of the frame-up, will probably come up for trial in the September term of the criminal court. He is now out on bail.

BOSSES SLASH TAILORS' WAGES

A.C.W. Heads Help In Pay Reduction

Announcement by J. Freedman, one of the largest manufacturers in the men's clothing industry of the resumption of the week work system of manufacture came as an astonishing occurrence to the workers in the trade. Their surprise soon faded, however, when they saw their employer demand and receive from tho union officials of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union permission to make a wage cut.

Following the merciless slashing of wages, workers explain, the boss immediately announced that the shop would go back to the piece-work system with the lower week work rate as a measure. By this method, the workers declare, the employer can nullify at will the piece-work rates originally agreed on when piece-work as a system went into effect.

The firm of Cohen and Lang, another large employer, adopted the same method to put over a wage reduction, it was learned.

Unemployed Open Forum

The second weekly open forum of unemployed tailors will be held this morning at 11 o'clock in the Workers Center, 28 Union Square, according to a circular distributed in the men's clothing workers market recently. The meeting is being sponsored by the Progressive Tailors League. Sam Lipsin, Nelson and other active members of the Amalgamated will participate in the discussion on the present status of the members of the union.

Another angle of the complete chaos existing in the ranks of the Amalgamated Union, which com-

CONVENTION CALL FOR A NEW TEXTILE UNION

The following is the official call for a convention of textile workers organiations and mill committees for the formation of a national industrial union of all textile workers. Due to its tremendous importance since it affects the workers in one of the country's major industries, the call is presented in full. Albert Weisbord, national secretary of the Textile Mills Committee, signs the document.

"To All Textile Workers' Organizations, Textile Workers' Mill Committees, Tetile Workers Clubs and Associations, Textile Unions.

"Greetings:

"The textile industry is in the throes of reorganization. Intense speeding up, mass unemployment, longer hours, and wage cuts are the order of the day. Not satisfied with their tremendous profits, the textile manufacturers are doing everything possible to squeeze the workers harder than ever before.

"At the present time the textile employers are planning a new drive. The drive has formally begun against the cotton workers in New England and over one hundred thousand workers have already received a ten per cent wage cut.

New Bedford Struggle.

"But just as the Passaic workers in 1926 did not take a cut lying down, but under our leadership put up a great and memorable struggle, so today, again under our leadership, the textile workers are in battle against this new ten per cent wage cut.

"In New Bedford, Massachusetts, now for over three months, 28,000 textile workers have been on strike against the ten per cent wage cut, for better conditions, and for the right to have their own union. Mass picket lines have closed the mills down tight in spite of the terror of the police and the militia which had been called in, and in spite of the treachery of the bureaucrats of the A. F. of L.

This brave fight in New Bedford shows that everywhere the textile workers are ready to move. In Fall River, Massachusetts, already the workers are mobilizing for struggle. Elsewhere too, the textile workers are demonstrating that the time is now amply ripe for struggle.

No Union.

What has prevented the textile workers from carrying on an active fight is the fact that there was no militant leadership and no union to lead them. Outside of a few tiny independent groups, the only union in the field is the small union of the American Federation of Labor, the United Textile Workers.

"The officials of this United Textile Workers are of the most reactionary character, with a long series of betrayals to their credit. They have done their utmost to divide the workers and to defeat them. After many years of existence the United Textile Workers stands a small handful of skilled workers, pitifully helpess to resist the attack of the bosses.

Must Build Textile Union.

"This situation means that especialy now, the textile workers must take things in their own hands and build a national textile union, that will be a real workers' union, organizing the over one million textile workers in this country and actually resisting the wage cuts and worsened conditions imposed by the employers. This is the immediate task at the present time, the building up of a national textile union that will mobilize the workers for effective struggles.

"To accomplish this end, the National Textile Mill Committees hereby calls all textile workers' organizations to a national convention to be held in New York City Saturday and Sunday, September 22nd and 23rd, 1928. The convention will be opened at 2 p. m. September 22nd at Irving Plaza, Irving Place and 15th St., New York City.

"All bona fide textile workers' organizations are urgently requested to elect two or more delegates to attend this convention.

"ALBERT WEISBORD.
"National Secretary,
"Textile Mill Committees."

CAP UNION MEET RAPS ZARITSKY

Chicago Joint Board Defies International

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

CHICAGO, July 15.—Delegates of the Chicago Joint Board of the Cloth Hat, Cap and Millinery Workers International Union, at a meeting held here July 11, defeated the motion forced upon them by the general executive board's emissary J. Roberts, that the union wrecking policies of President Zaritsky and Co. be endorsed, it was learned today.

Roberts insisted on a vote for this motion in a speech to the Joint Board made on the eve of his departure from Chicago, in which he openly threatened to cut off financial assistance from the International for the Chicago union's organizational work, and demanded that Zaritsky's policies and tactics be endorsed.

The Joint Board members, re-

"DAILY" WANTS PHOTOS

Workers Are Asked to Send in Pictures

Workingclass photographs are wanted by The DAILY WORKER. Workers who own cameras are asked to co-operate in improving their "Daily" by taking pictures of workingclass activities and sending them in. The summer season offers a particularly good opportunity for worker-photographers to develop their talents.

The type of photographs that are most desirable are those showing people in action, taken close up. Pictures of picket-lines, or working class demonstrations and of other vivid incidents of the class struggle are especially valuable. Glossy finish photographs are most suitable for reproduction. Every picture that is printed will carry the name of the worker who took it.

CONVENTION TO BE HELD HERE SEPT. 22 - '3

Mill Groups, Clubs, Unions Called

A call for the formation of a countrywide textile workers industrial union was issued yesterday from the headquarters of the National Textile Mill Committees, 96 Fifth Ave., this city.

The convention is to be held here on Saturday and Sunday, September 22nd and 23rd at the Irving Plaza Hall, Irving Place and 15th St. and is scheduled to be opened at 2 p. m Saturday.

All textile workers' organizations mill committees, clubs, asociations and textile workers' unions are called upon to send delegates to the convention.

Thousands Unorganized

The call is issued over the signature of Albert Weisbord, National Secretary of the National Textile Mill Committee. Weisbord was the leader of the great strike of Passaic textile workers in 1926.

The amazing growth of the mill committees in all sections of the country and particularly in the New England textile manufacturing district shows that the delegates from the committees alone will represent tens of thousands of mill workers.

Despite the concentration of most of the forces of the National Textile Mill Committee in the New Bedford strike area, where 28,000 workers are entering the 14th week of the struggle against a wage cut under the leadership of the New Bedford Textile Workers Union of the Textile Mill Committee, recruiting work in other fields show that hundreds of new members are forming mill committees.

STRIKERS FORCE PARADE PERMIT

Mill Workers March July 28

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., July 15.—forced to yield by the tremendous public indignation that followed the breaking up of the textile strikers parade held recently by the New Bedford Textile Workers' Union of the Textile Mill Committee, Mayor Ashley has granted a parade permit to the organization for Saturday, July 28.

The permit was granted after a committee, especially chosen by the T. W. U. strike committee for that purpose, had approached the mayor. The permit, however, stipulates that the final issuance of the permit depends upon the strike developments until the 28th.

May Revoke Permit.

Despite the fact that the mayor still has ample opportunity to revoke the permit, the granting of official sanction to the Textile Workers' Union is considered a reluctant tribute to the tremendous mass following of the Textile Mill Committee.

Leaders of the Textile Workers' Union later signified their satisfaction over the outcome of the test strength between the textile workers and the mill boss controlled city officials. "Now the New Bedford Workers' Union intends to go full speed ahead with plans for staging the biggest parade ever held in this city," union spokesmen declared, adding, 'The workers of the entire country will then see a tremendous demonstration of the union's strength."

Successful Meeting.

Albert Weisbord, Eli Keller and other Textile Mill Committee leaders addressed a meeting especially called for the members of the Textile Workers of the A. F. of L. The meeting, which was held at the request of a committee of 25 U. T. W. members resulted in many enrollings in the T. M. C. The attendance consisted mainly of French and Brtish workers, occupied in the skilled crafts. A lengthy discussion followed the speeches of the union leaders.

r Committee of the All-Union Communist Party Discusses Draft Progr

OSCOW, U. S. S. R., July 15.— Plenum of the Central Com- and the Enlarged Central mittee of the All-Union Com- Party continued its sessions yesterday.

agenda included questions be- the Communist International, Comintern program, the grain chase policy and the general eco- situation in the U. S. S. R., organization of new state organi- for grain purchase and im- proved training for new specialists.

Approve Draft Program.

The Plenum accepted the infor- contained in the report and approved the essentials of the Com- ided to leave any alterations in the draft program. It was de- program to the World Congress.

The Plenum pointed out, in its decision concerning the grain pur- chase policy, that the low level of agriculture, especially of grain pro- duction, together with the swift de- velopment of Socialist industry car- ries with it the danger of a breach between the Socialist town and the petty bourgeois village.

In order to solve this problem, the production of individual, small and middle farms must be furthered along the lines laid down by Lenin in his co-operative plan. The neces- sity of extending the collective farms upon a modern technical basis was also pointed out.

After describing the conditions under which the recent grain pur- chase campaign was made, the de- cision points out that the Central Committee of the All-Union Com- munist Party has absolutely stated that the extraordinary measures employed in that campaign are only temporary and are not the organic result of the decision of the Fif- teenth Party Congress to increase the offensive against the capitalist elements in the villages.

The Plenum also denounced the accusation that the NEP, New Eco- nomic Policy, is being abandoned and reiterates the policy of the Fifteenth Congress in maintaining the offensive against the kulaks. It declared that the NEP remains the basis of the proletarian state policy.

In the coming grain purchase campaign, it is indicated that the Party must systematically liquidate the errors in leadership which have been made.

The decision of the plenum condemns the recrudescence of former methods and declared itself in favor of elasticity in regulating trade, for a slight increase in grain prices and for a correct distribution of indus- systematic struggle against secret trial products in the country, for a distilleries and for the formation of a state grain reserve.

In conclusion the Plenum decision declares that support of the poor resulted in a considerable extension and middle peasants with seed corn of the land under seed and that this fact, together with the favorable harvest outlook, should ensure a normal tempo in the grain purchase campaign until the autumn.

Flight of Mexican Aviator, Carranza, Ends In Catastrophe

On the first leg of his journey from New York to Mexico City, Capt. Emilio Carranza, Mexican flyer, met death when his plane was hit by lightning in New Jersey. The Carranza flight was an exchange of courtesy in recognition of Lindbergh's trip, as part of the general program of the Mexican government of furthering American imperialist ambitions. Photo shows Carranza's plane being fueled just before he hopped off.

Fascists Take Diploma from Labor Lawyer

GENEVA, July 15.—Because Bruno Casinelli, who was not even sympathetic to the Communists, defended the 16 workers at the trial before the Special Tribunal in Rome on June 22, his diploma as a lawyer has been taken away from him.

The sentence of the court, which sent five of the defendants to serve terms of 21 years of hard labor each and the others to two to nine years of hard labor each, concludes with the following sentence:

"The Special Tribunal examined the conclusion of the lawyer Bruno Cassinelli, who 'requested the exclusion of Paragraph 3, Article 1, as in his opinion the continuity and the accumulation of a number of penal defenses from the same action is absurd.' The Special Tribunal considers this conclusion in the form, in which it has been expressed as insulting to the dignity and the reputation of the court, orders that the objectionable expression be erased from the court records and decides to hand the matter over to the royal commission of the Lawyers' Chamber for such disciplinary action as the case demands."

Appeal Issued to Aid Chinese Trade Unions

An appeal to devote the last 2 weeks of July to meetings in aid of Chinese trade unions is issued by the Trade Union Educational League. The league states that the weekly wage of the best paid Chinese building worker is only $3 while common labor gets $1 to $1.50 a week, usually working 11 to 12 hours a day. Child labor is universal. Labor laws are unheard of. Both native and foreign imperialists are torturing and executing active labor men and women.

The American agitation is to be part of a world-wide labor protest.

Philadelphia Plans Relief Collections

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 15.—House to house collections will be held here on two Saturdays, July 21 and July 28, for the benefit of the striking mners throughout the country, in connection with National Miners' Relief Week. The volunteers will meet at 1 A. M. on these days at 4035 Girard Ave.; 2926 Gordon St.; 1331 North Franklin St.; the Kensington Labor Lyceum, 2nd and Cambria Sts. (entrance from rear); the Northwest corner of 8th and Ritter Sts., and at 1208 Tasker St.

Every worker in Philadelphia has been urged to do his bit in collecting funds for relief work among the striking miners.

scattered throughout the United States. The Woolworth chain extends to England where it employs girls at about $5.80 a week to pile up part of its enormous profits. Last year's profits of $35,350,473 represented a return of more than 1000% on the original investment of the owners.

Room rent absorbed more than half of Josephine's earnings. In fact after paying for the room and a morning cup of tea she had less than $2.70 a week left for food, clothing, carfare and the other necessaries of life. And her workplace is surrounded by gorgeous hotels, restaurants and shops purveying the most costly luxuries to the rich. The Daily Herald comments:

"Presumably Woolworth's will not miss her very much. There are so many other girls available. But is this firm, which is owned and controlled by an American millionaire, proud of the payment it made to Josephine?"

Worker's Widow Lauds U. R. S. R.

The tribute to Russia is from the pen of Mrs. James Morton, widow of an English worker who accepted Lady Astor's offer to pay the traveling expenses of any worker who would go to live in Russia. Mrs. Morton writes that she is receiving a pension from the Soviet Union of about $58 a month and continues:

"When you stop to think of what would have happened if we had remained in England during Jim's long illness, then I think I am fortunate in spite of all our misfortune. By this time in England we would all have been in the poorhouse. I can never tell you how kind they have been to us all the time during his illness. We had the best physicians, professors, hospital treatment and nurses. Nothing was spared to make it better for him and for the rest of us as well."

Holds Up Store As Manager Refuses Food

MILWAUKEE, July 15—A man in dirty overalls and minus a shave for many days realized that cash is necessary to live in the "land of the free," and that those unable to find work are "free" to starve.

Going into the Atlantic and Pacific store at 21 Wells street, a typical looking victim of American "prosperity" asked for something to eat. He was reminded that food is for sale, not to give away. The man left, but returned the following day and again asked for food The refusal was repeated more energetically than before. Finding pleas of no value, the man drew a revolver and forced the manager O. S. Wallace, into a corner, and then took $24 from the cash register

The reactionary officials are trying to discriminate against Christion because they claim that he attended the National Save the Union Conference held recently in Pittsburgh. This is only an excuse, it is known, because Christian was put up and defeated John Kmetz, the reactionary board member who is part of the Cappellini machine and who is president of Local 900.

NATIONAL CALL ISSUED FOR NEW TEXTILE UNION

Convention Here In September

opening the eyes of the mill workers to the need of a real national union that will try to organize the industry and its more than one million workers, it is pointed out.

Very few thousands of the 1,100,000 textile workers are organized at all, investigation shows. Even the organized workers are being led by a set of bureaucrats who act as the mill barons' effiicency aides, experiences of mill workers thruout the country reveals.

Reports from all over New England show that this is the opportune moment for the launching of a new union in the industry. The hundreds of new members obtained each week by the Fall River unit of the T. M. C. shows that the workers there are prepared to enter a struggle to win back the wage cut recently enforced by the bosses and the officialdom of the reactionary independent union there, the American Federation of Textile Operatives.

Mill Committees Popular.

Not only has the firmly intrenched prestige of the T. M. C. in the New Bedford strike been one of the major causes for the growing popularity of the mill committees, but the very form of the organization has captured the imagination of the masses of mill workers. The idea of an industrial union that sets as its task the organization of the entire industry and not only the comparatively few skilled workers, is one of the chief factors explaining its rapid growth everywhere.

The official call, sent out to all the enumerated bodies of textile workers, is printed in full in another column of this issue.

Credentials sent along with the call are to be filled out and sent in to the Textile Mill Committee national offices here. The credentials officially state that its subject is a delegate to a convention whose purpose is the building of a new national union of textile workers.

NEW DRAFT PROGRAM OF THE COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL

VI. The Strategy and Tactics of the Communist International. (The Road to the Dictatorship of the Proletariat.)

DOCUMENT ANALYZES VARIOUS COUNTER REVOLUTIONARY FORCES OPERATING IN LABOR MOVEMENT

Emphasizes the Need of Struggle Against Imperialist War

Reaffirms That Communism Can Be Achieved Only By Revolution

The Programme Commission of the Executive Committee of the Communist International is publishing a DRAFT PROGRAM.

The Commission thinks it its duty to declare that while the text of this draft is of course based on the same fundamental principles as those upon which the draft programme provisionally passed by the Fifth Congress of the Communist International was based, nevertheless, it differs very considerably from that draft. The Program Commission felt that in view of the great changes that have taken place in many important spheres of international life and particularly in the revolutionary movement since the Fifth Congress, it could not confine itself to making merely editorial changes in the original draft. A change has taken place in the form of the general crisis of capitalism; a change has taken place in the relationships between various groups of powers. Great events have taken place, like the great revolution in China, which once again emphasized the significance of the agrarian-peasant question. Great progress has been made in building up socialism in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. The struggle between the aggressive capitalist world and the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics is becoming acute. Fascism is growing and becoming transformed into the terrorist dictatorship of big capital. Social democracy has degenerated into Chauvinist imperialism. The lessons that have been learned by the Communist International in the fight against opposition tendencies and finally the growth of Communism, the fact that the movement has really become internationalized, the new tasks that confront the Communist International as a single organization—all this has inevitably made it necessary considerably to alter and enlarge the former draft.

The general tendency of the changes that have been made is towards more concreteness and greater emphasis upon THE INTERNATIONAL aspects both in the theoretical section as well as in the sections dealing immediately with the struggles of the Communist Parties.

Acting on the decision of the Executive Committee of the Communist International, the Programme Commission, in publishing this draft program, calls upon all comrades to express their opinion and criticism of it in articles, remarks and concrete suggestions. The work done on the program has revealed how difficult it is to embrace in a single document all the problems of the present-day world Communist movement. The question of the program will be one of the central questions at the Sixth Congress. It is essential that sufficient material be collected by the time the discussion of the question takes place at the Congress. The Commission therefore invites all comrades to join in the fruitful discussion of the program.

THE PROGRAMME COMMISSION OF THE
EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE
COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL

Communism is a revolutionary tendency in the labor movement and the only representative of revolutionary Marxism-Leninism; as such it is opposed to all other tendencies within the labor movement.

Anarchism, whose most prominent representatives (Kropotkin, Jean Grave, Kornelissen and others) treacherously deserted to the side of the imperialist bourgeoisie during the war of 1914-18, repudiates the necessity for broad, centralized and disciplined proletarian organizations and by that leaves the proletariat helpless in the face of the powerful organizations of capital. By advocating individual terror it diverts the proletariat from methods of mass organization and mass struggle. By repudiating the dictatorship of the proletariat for the sake of abstract "liberty," anarchism deprives the proletariat of the most important and sharpest weapon against the bourgeoisie—against its armies and against all its organs of repression. It is remote from any kind of mass movement in the important centers of the proletarian struggle and, is therefore tending to become a sect, which, by its tactics and its attitude, including its hostility to the dictatorship of the working class in the U. S. S. R., is objectively joining the united front of the anti-revolutionary forces.

"Revolutionary" syndicalism, many of whose leaders (Arturo Labriola, Jouhaux and others) deserted to the camp of the "anti-parliamentary" counter-revolutionaries of the fascist type, also repudiates the political struggle (and particularly the parliamentary struggle) and the revolutionary dictatorship of the proletariat. It advocates craft decentralization in the labor movement generally and in the trade union movement in particular. It repudiates the party of the proletariat, and fails to understand the necessity for rebellion and exaggerates the importance of the general strike ("the fold arms tactics"). As a result, whenever it has any influence it hinders the masses from becoming revolutionary. Its attacks on the U. S. S. R., which spring from its repudiation of proletarian dictatorship, place it in this respect in the same category as the social democrats.

"Constructive socialism" (MacDonald & Co.) continues the liberal-philanthropic, anti-revolutionary and bourgeois traditions of Fabianism (the Webbs, Bernard Shaw and others) and repudiates on principle the dictatorship of the proletariat and "violent methods" generally. It stands for "capturing power" through parliament and declares the class struggle to be a "pre-scientific" concept. "Constructive socialism" advocates a moderate program of nationalization with compensation, taxation of land values, death duties and the super-tax as means for the abolition of capitalism. It is utterly hostile to the dictatorship of the proletariat in the U. S. S. R., and, therefore, in complete alliance with the bourgeoisie, is an active enemy of the proletarian Communist movement and of colonial revolutions.

So-called guild socialism (Penty Orage, Hobson, Cole) starts out with the demand for the abolition of the "wage system" as an "immoral" institution. The majority of the guild socialists are strong opponents of revolution. While ignoring the extremely important question of power, the majority of guild socialists strive to combine the workers on the basis of federated trade "guilds" and to convert this organization by peaceful means into an organization for the control and management of industry within the framework of the bourgeois state. Notwithstanding the imperialist nature of the bourgeois state, in their scheme, it occupies a place above classes as the representative of the interests of the "consumer." By simultaneously repudiating parliamentarian and direct action guild socialism reduces the working class to complete inaction and passivity. Thus, it represents a peculiar form of trade unionist, utopian, opportunism and as such cannot but play an anti-revolutionary role.

The British Fabians (Mr. and Mrs. Webb, Bernard Shaw and others) base their "socialism" on liberal philanthropic grounds. They are deliberately hostile to revolution and on principle are advocates of gradualness.

All these tendencies agree with social democracy—the principal enemy of proletarian revolution—on the fundamental question of policy—the question of the dictatorship of the proletariat. Hence, all of them more or less definitely fall in line with social democracy in their attacks upon the U. S. S. R. On the other hand, having utterly and completely betrayed Marxism, social democracy is coming more and more to rely upon the ideology of the Fabians and constructive and guild socialists. These tendencies are becoming converted to the official, liberal, reformist ideology of the bourgeois "socialism" of the Second International.

In the labor movement in colonial countries Communism encounters the influence of peculiar tendencies which, in certain phases of development, played a useful role, but which in the new stage of development are becoming a conservative force.

Sun Yat-Senism, as the ideology of petty bourgeois socialism, played a very great positive role in the first stage of the Chinese revolution. As a result of the class differentiation that has taken place in the country and the further development of the Chinese revolution, and because of its obscuring of the class struggle and its "democratic" and "above class" interpretation of socialism, Sun Yat-Senism has become transformed into a conservative force which retards the development of the revolution.

Tendencies like Ghandhism in India which are thoroughly saturated with religious notions, advocate passivity, repudiate the class struggle and in the process of development of the revolution is becoming transformed into an openly reactionary force, must be resolutely combated by Communism.

Communism differs from all these tendencies, and particularly from social democracy, in that, in complete harmony with the doctrines of Marx and Engels, it carries on a theoretical and practical struggle for the dictatorship of the proletariat.

The success of the struggle of the Communist International for the dictatorship of the proletariat presupposes the existence in every country of a compact, disciplined, centralized, Communist Party, hardened in the struggle and having close contacts with the masses.

The party is the vanguard of the working class and consists of the best, most class-conscious, active and courageous members of the working class. It is the embodiment of the combined experience of the whole proletarian struggle. Based on the revolutionary theory of Marxism and representing the general and lasting interests of the working class as a whole, the party personifies the unity of proletarian principles, of proletarian will and of proletarian revolutionary action. It is a revolutionary party, bound by iron discipline and a strict revolutionary system of democratic centralism, this is achieved as a result of the class-consciousness of the proletarian vanguard, its loyalty to the revolution, its ability to maintain inseparable contact with the masses of the proletariat and of correct political leadership, which is tested and clarified by the experience of the masses themselves.

Before it can fulfil the historical task of establishing the dictatorship of the proletariat, the Communist Party must first of all set itself and carry out the following strategical aims:

Spread its influence over the majority of the members of its own class, including working women and young workers; spread its influence over wide circles of the masses of the toilers generally (urban and rural poor, the lower strata of the intelligentsia and the so-called "small men," i. e., the petty bourgeois strata) and in this way establish the political hegemony of the proletariat, guided by the Communist Party. It must discredit, expose and destroy the political influence of social democracy and of the yellow trade union bureaucracy, who are the most reliable bulwark of capitalism. It must spread its influence over the broad mass proletarian organizations (trade unions, co-operative societies, factory councils, etc.).

Of special importance is the work—which must be carried on day in and day out, with the view to capturing the trade unions, which are the broadest mass proletarian organizations. Work must be carried on with ability even in the reactionary trade unions with the view to capturing them, and to secure a "change in the reformist leadership," for this, too, is one of the most important tasks of the preparatory period.

Of enormous significance also is the winning over of the broad strata of the poorest peasants and the neutralization of the middle strata of the peasantry. In the preparation of the class forces for the decisive clash, the fight between the proletariat and the bourgeoisie for the broad strata of the peasantry occupies an extremely important place. For that reason to work among the peasantry, to win over its most prominent (proletarian and semi-proletarian) strata as well as the small allotment holders and small peasants, to subordinate these to the political and intellectual hegemony of the proletariat and in this way convert the proletariat into the guardian of the interests of the whole people and the leader of the broad masses of the people in their struggle against the oppression of finance capital—is a necessary prerequisite for victorious Communist tactics on the road to power.

In determining its tactical line, the party must take into account the concrete internal and external situation, the relation of class forces, the degree of strength of capitalism, the degree of preparation of the proletariat, the attitude of the intermediary classes, etc. The party formulates its slogans and determines its methods of work in accordance with circumstances. In the growing revolutionary situation the party must advance transitional slogans and partial demands as determined by the concrete circumstances, but it must subordinate these demands and slogans to its revolutionary aim of seizing power and overthrowing bourgeois capitalist society. Isolation from the every-day needs and the every-day struggles of the working class and restricting the activities of the party to these every-day needs and struggles are alike impermissible. The task of the party is—starting out from these needs, to lead the working class into the revolutionary struggle for power.

When the revolutionary tide is flowing, when the dominant classes are disorganized, the masses are in a state of revolutionary ferment, the intermediary strata are inclining towards the proletariat and the masses are prepared for action and for sacrifice, the task of the party of the proletariat is to lead the masses into the direct attack upon the bourgeois state. This is to be achieved by propaganda in favor of all transitional slogans (Soviets, workers' control of industry, the slogan of peasant committees for the seizure of the landlords' land, etc.), and the organization of mass actions, to which all other branches of party work, agitation and propaganda, including parliamentary work, must be subordinated. This includes strikes, strikes combined with demonstrations, the combination of armed demonstrations and strikes and finally the general strike conjointly with the armed uprising against the political power of the bourgeoisie. This struggle must be subjected to the rules of military art; it must be conducted according to a plan of war and in the form of a military offensive. It calls for the devoted loyalty and heroism of the proletariat. Such actions must be preceded by the organization of the broad masses in military units, which, by their very form attract and set into action the maximum number of toilers (councils of workers' and peasants' deputies, soldiers' councils, etc.), and by intensified work in the army and the navy.

In fulfilling these tasks and in taking up new and more acute slogans, the party must be guided by the fundamental rule of the political tactics of Leninism which calls for the ability to lead the masses to the revolutionary positions in such a manner that the masses may be convinced by their own experience of the correctness of the Party's line.

Failure to observe this rule will inevitably result in the party becoming isolated from the masses, in putschism and the ideological degeneration of Communism into doctrinaire "Leftism" and petty bourgeois "ultra-Left" adventurism, adventurism, which must be combated no less strenuously than the right social democratic deviations in the Communist movement.

If the revolutionary tide is not flowing, the Communist Party, in accordance with the every-day needs of the toilers, must advance partial slogans and demands, develop them and link them up with the fundamental tasks of the Communist International. Refusal to advance partial demands and transitional slogans is incompatible with the tactical principles of Communism, for this dooms the party to inactivity and cuts it off from the masses. In this connection the tactics of the united front represent an important part of the tactics of the Communist Party throughout the pre-revolutionary period.

These partial demands and slogans include:

In the sphere of the labor problem in the narrow sense of the word,—the economic struggle (resistance to the offensive of trustified capital; wages; the working day; compulsory arbitration courts; unemployment) growing into problems of the general political struggle (big industrial conflicts; rights to strike; the political rights of the trade unions).

Then follow questions of an immediate political character (taxes; high cost of living; fascism; persecution of revolutionary parties, white terror; the policy of the government in power, etc.).

Finally, these problems must be linked up with problems of world politics: attitude towards the U. S. S. R.; Chinese revolution; fight for the unity of the international trade union movement; resistance to imperialism; combating the danger of war and systematic preparation for combating imperialist war.

The partial questions in the sphere of the peasant problem are questions connected with taxation policy, indebtedness of the peasants through mortgages, combating usurer capital, the provision of land to poor peasants, questions of rent and the metayer-system, etc., etc. Starting out from these partial needs, the Communist Party must accentuate the various slogans and generalize them into the slogan for the confiscation of the land of the big landowners, the slogan of the workers' and peasants' government, etc.

It is equally necessary to carry on systematic work among the proletarian and peasant youth and among the working women and peasant women. This work must start out from the special conditions of their life and labor, and their demands must be linked up with the general demands and fighting slogans of the proletariat.

In the colonies and semi-colonies where the working class plays a trial conflicts; right to strike; the where the bourgeoisie has already crossed over to the camp of the avowed counter-revolution, or is crossing over because of the development of the mass proletarian and peasant movements, the Communist Party must steer a course for the hegemony of the proletariat, and for the dictatorship of the proletariat and peasantry, which will ultimately grow into the dictatorship of the working class. In such countries, the Communist Party must concentrate their efforts mainly upon creating broad mass proletarian organizations (trade unions) and revolutionary peasant unions, and upon drawing up demands and slogans directly affecting the working class. It must propagate the idea of the independence of the proletariat as a class which on principle is hostile to the bourgeoisie, a hostility which is not removed by the possibility of temporary agreements with it. It must imbue the masses with and develop among them the idea of the hegemony of the working class; advance and at the proper moment apply the slogan of Soviets of Workers' and Peasants' Deputies.

On the basis of the community of interest between the proletarian revolution and the struggle against imperialism in the colonies, the sections of the Communist International must be guided by the following postulates:

The Communist parties in the imperialist countries must render systematic aid to the revolutionary movements for liberation in the colonies. The obligation to render the most active support rests principally upon the workers in those countries upon which the oppressed nations are colonially or financially dependent (campaigns for the withdrawal of imperialist troops from the colonies; propaganda among the troops in favor of the oppressed countries fighting for their liberation, refusal to transport troops or war material; strike and other forms of mass protest). Propaganda must be carried on for the recognition of the right of colonies to separation and for such separation, i. e. to carry on propaganda for the independence of colonies from the imperialist states. Propaganda must be carried on for the recognition of the right of colonies to take up arms in defense against imperialism (i. e. the right to rebellion and revolutionary war), and propaganda must be carried on for active support to this defense by all possible means.

In the Colonial and Semi-Colonial Countries the Communist Parties must conduct a bold and consistent struggle against foreign imperialism and unfailingly carry on propaganda in favor of friendship and alliance with the proletariat in the imperialist countries. They must advance, carry on propaganda for and supply the slogan of agrarian revolution, rouse the broad masses of the peasantry to the fight for the overthrow of the oppression of the landlords and lead the struggle against the reactionary and medieval influences of the priests, missionaries and similar elements. At the same time, the workers and the peasants must be organized in independent organizations and liberated from the influence of the national bourgeoisie. Temporary agreements with the latter may be made only insofar as they will not hamper the revolutionary organization of the workers and peasants and are genuinely fighting against imperialism.

While organizing revolution against imperialism under the banner of proletarian dictatorship in so-called "civilized states," the Communist International supports every movement against imperialist violence, not only in the colonies but also in formally independent countries (for example in Latin America). It conducts propaganda against all forms of chauvinism and imperialist ill-treatment of great and small and enslaved races (attitude towards Negroes, "yellow labor," etc.) and supports the latter's struggle against the bourgeoisie in the oppressing nation. The Communist International conducts a particularly strenuous struggle against chauvinism in the imperialist countries having national minorities, a chauvinism which is preached both by the imperialist bourgeoisie as well as by its social democratic agency, the Second International. It contrasts the conduct of the imperialist bourgeoisie with the conduct of the Soviet Union, which has created fraternal relationships between various nationalities.

The Communist International must devote special attention to systematic preparation for the struggle against the danger of imperialist war. The Communist Parties must ruthlessly expose social chauvinism, social imperialism and pacifist phrasemongering, which serve to screen the imperialist plans of the bourgeoisie. They must carry on propaganda in favor of the principal slogans of the Communist International, and carry on every-day organizational work in this direction, unfailingly combining legal and illegal methods of work. The following should be the principal slogans of the Communist International: Convert the imperialist war into civil war; defeat of the "home" imperialist government; defense of the U. S. S. R. and colonial countries in the event of an imperialist war against them by all possible means. To carry on propaganda in favor of these slogans, to expose "socialist" sophisms and the "socialistic" screening of the League of Nations, and to constantly recall the experience of the war of 1914 is the unfailing duty of all the sections and of every member of the Communist International.

In order that revolutionary work and action may be properly led and coordinated the international proletariat must maintain international class discipline which must be preserved above all in the ranks of the Communist Party. This international Communist discipline must be expressed in the subordination of the partial and local interests of the movement to its general and lasting interests and the unfailing execution of all the decisions of the leading organs of the Communist International.

Unlike the social democratic parties affiliated to the second international which accept the discipline of "their own" national bourgeoisie and their "fatherland," the sections of the Communist International recognize only one discipline—international proletarian discipline, which guarantees victory in the struggle of the workers of all countries for world proletarian dictatorship.

Communists do not think it necessary to conceal their views and intentions. They openly declare that their goal can be achieved only by the violent overthrow of the whole of the present social system.

Let the dominant classes tremble before the Communist Revolution! The proletariat has nothing to lose but its chains! It has the whole world to gain! Workers of all countries unite!

PRISON TERROR IN BULGARIA

Militant Editor Put In Jail

SOFIA, July 15.—The situation in the Bulgarian prisons grows worse every day.

The unfortunate ones who have been put in chains in the central prison of Sofia, because they decorated their button-holes with red ribbon on the first of May, are in a lamentable situation.

One of them, Nicolas Ilief, is dead. Another, Theodore Petkof, had to be transferred to the hospital.

The journalist, Draganof, editor-in-chief of "Novini" has been put in chains because he placed two red roses on the walls of his cell. The journalist, D. Andonof, mistreated by the wardens, is now on a hunger strike.

The food is abominable. The situation in other prisons is still worse.

HORTHY FASCISTS SERVE AS SCABS

VIENNA, July 15. — Organized strikebreaking is part of the reactionary tactics of Hungarian fascists, according to the Committee Against the White Terror in the Balkans.

In Budapest during a recent wood workers' strike for higher wages, organized fascist bands served as scabs, and conducted provocative street demonstrations against the strikers, the committee asserts. Although all public demonstrations are strictly forbidden by the reactionary Horthy government, the fascists were supported by the police when, unprovoked, they attacked and severely beat strikers in the streets. Later the victimized laborites were prosecuted for "rioting," and their assailants were allowed to appear as witnesses against them.

BOSTON, (FP).—Employers here have given in to demands of 1,600 union bricklayers for a 10-cent advance to $1.50.

Increase Australian Lumber Mens' Hours

MELBOURNE, July 15.—At a largely-attended meeting of members of the Victorian Branch of the Australian Timber Workers' Union held at Melbourne, it was stated that serious industrial trouble was threatening owing to Judge Lukin in the Federal Arbitration Court, interpreting the Timber Workers' Award as meaning to provide a 48-hour working week in the industry.

Various speakers pointed out that members of the Union had been working a 44-hour week since 1921 when the original award was made. In some mills the employees had been informed they must work 48 hours weekly, and there was a grave danger that this would lead to a stoppage of work.

HELD FOR WHITE-SLAVERY.

CHICAGO, Ill., July 15.—Walter Cherry, alias Charles Brown, 29 who declares he is a Baltimore tailor was under arrest here today on white-slavery charges preferred by one of the three women he brought to Chicago for alleged immoral purposes.

Radical Periodicals Wanted for Research By Lenin Institute

The Lenin Institute in Moscow having for one of its tasks the research into the history of the radical labor movement in America, is collecting the literature of the Communist, Socialist and I. W. W. labor movements issued during the last imperialist world war, as well as after the organization of the Communist International and further up to date.

All comrades possessing complete sets of newspapers, magazines, and other periodicals as well as books pamphlets and leaflets relating to the above period are requested to get in touch with Dr. M. Mislig 37-43 West 93rd St.

26 NOW DEAD OF POISONED MILK

4 More Die in Lee of Disease; 200 Ill

LEE, Mass., July 15.—Four more were added yesterday to the list of those who have died here from septic sore throat poisoning, brought on by a poisoned milk supply. This brings the total number of deaths here since the epidemic started to 26. Among those who died today was George Palmer, 16, one of the few young persons who has been a victim of the disease. Most of those who have been fatally stricken have been over 60 years of age.

Health authorities today estimated that the number of cases still existent was 200. Altogether there have been approximately 700 cases since the epidemic started two weeks ago.

The city board of health met today and decided upon a two week's quarantine for all those still suffering from the disease. Other quarantine measures were still in effect

English Power Trust To Dominate Country

LONDON, July 15.—A program for tremendous trustification of electric supplying power is being planned for Great Britain and Ireland. The plan intends to harness all available water power, demolish unnecessary plants, and concentrate the whole industry into a circle of 100 power producing plants.

This state-owned industry is expected to bring in tremendous profits and save millions for the British government.

HUNGER STRIKE IN POLISH JAIL

Political Prisoners In Protest

WARSAW, July 15.—Since June 16th the political prisoners detained at the jail of Low have been on a hunger strike to protest against the new rules of the prison administration, which aggravate the already unbearable conditions.

The protestants make the following demands:

1.—Hastening of their trial.
2.—Papers every day.
3.—A bath once a week.
4.—A walk of two hours every day. (At present they are permitted a half hour.)
5.—Proper blankets. (Without vermin.)

The demands of the political prisoners bear witness to the lot that hundreds of political prisoners in Poland must suffer.

CHILDREN MUST BOW TO FASCISM

GENEVA, July 15.—According to dispatches from Rovigo, Italy, the school board has ordered the children to wear the sign of fascism, the lictor bundles, on the breast or on the arm. Children of the primary schools have already for some time had to wear the black shirt, and at the beginning and the end of sessions were forced to pledge allegiance to Mussolini.

A demonstration in Roviga, participated in by the school children and their parents, protested the new order but with the result that Piola, a worker, was arrested and deported for three years.

Political Prisoners In Rumanian Hell-Holes

GENEVA, July 15.—From Jilava, Rumania, come new reports of the unbearable position of political prisoners. Boris Stefanov is held in solitary confinement.

All prisoners are kept in underground single cells and are only allowed one hour in the open air. They can hold no communications with the outside. Every request is forbidden. All newspapers are denied them. The lawyer of Stefanov could only come to Jilava after he had protested strongly to the cabinet.

The pretty girl shown above is none other than Mrs. Leah Cobb Marion whose slender fingers weave about the money bags of the Women's Christian Temperance Union. She has helped spread the belief that the reason the millionaire is rich is because he is industrious, and the reason the worker is poor is because he stops once in a while for a drink of beer. As a matter of fact, the average American millionaire can consume more liquor in a year than a locomotive can water. How can a worker get rich if a thief enters his room every night and takes everything he has? This is what the capitalist does, only he robs the worker before he pays him. The prohibition issue is drummed up in the capitalist press to keep workers' minds off the main issue: they produce everything and have nothing.

They Spend For Us

This is a view of a large gathering of cripples at the Belmont race track. They are society folk, crippled in the brain. Their minds work like a one lung motor that hasn't been used for fifty years. You don't have to be very smart to say, "Mother, dear, are you sure Dandelion will win?" and then throw away $50 of money stolen from workers in a fixed race on a horse you don't know ever ran all way around a race track. What society people exercise is not their brains. Its what they eat with and sit on. When a worker wonders why he works so long and gets so little he should look at this picture and remember that this is only part of the crowd he has to support. Where society folks look best is where they have to think least, for instance, dealing out sugar wafers at a tea party. In any organized society they would be dealing out fertilizer in the farming sections.

MASS PICKETING NOT ALLOWED BY PRESENT LEADER

Refuse to Call Out All Non-Equl Men

(By a Worker Correspondent)

READING, Pa., (By Mail).—A strike of twenty full-fashioned knitters is taking place in the plant of the Non-Equl Textile Mills, Inc. here.

It is significant that Earl White of the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers, disclaims responsibility for "provoking" the walkout. This is very likely correct, since his organization has failed to organize any appreciable number of the many full-fashioned knitters employed in Reading plants to say nothing of the other hosiery workers, such as seamless knitters loopers, toppers, etc. The latter classifications of workers are wholly unorganized and there are thousands of them in Reading and vicinity, most of whom are young workers. Nothing is said about calling out and organizing the Non-Equl workers other than full-fashioned knitters.

"Socialists" Betray.

Furthermore, Earl White, in common with the Reading "socialist" trade union officialdom and reactionary misleaders of labor generally, is opposed to struggle with the bosses, advocating instead boss worker cooperation and appealing to employers to favor unionism as a step profitable to themselves. It is very unlikely, in view of these facts that he would like to "embarrass" the employers by initiating a strike However, when unorganized knitters "walk out" spontaneously in protest against the two-machine system, White's union is quick to take charge—in order to control the strike, limit its extent and prevent "rough stuff" which the "socialist" mayor, J. Henry Stump, in the case of a recent carpenters' strike, said he would not tolerate.

Must Be Militant.

Reading workers may be sure, that in conformity with the policies of the present strike leadership, the workers in the Non-Equl plant other than full-fashioned knitters, will not be called out on strike nor will they be invited to join the knitters' union. All day mass picketing will not be had. Unless militant policies are put into effect, and it is certain that White and his fellow class-collaborationist "leaders" will not adopt them, the strike of the twenty knitters will surely result in a crushing defeat. Non-Equl and other hosiery workers as well, if they hope to win their fight, must put forward their own rank and file leadership, organize all the workers in the plant solidly, allow no one to remain in the shops to scab and to make the strike effective by all day mass picketing. —A KNITTER.

WOLL, HOOVER STAGE POWOW

WASHINGTON, July 15 (FP).—Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor and acting president of the National Civic Federation, called on the republican presidential nominee just before Hoover started West. Woll is known as the member of the executive council of the A. F. of L., who is nearest to sympathy with Hoover. He is supposed to have carried a message from William Green.

W. N. Doak, legislative representative of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, and a close friend of Bascom Slemp, former secretary to Coolidge, and non-union coal operator, has likewise had a talk with the G. O. P. nominee. Doak is looked up as Hoover's adviser on "labor" strategy.

RED AID SCORES GREEK FASCISM

BERLIN, July 15.—The Red Aid of Germany has sent the following telegram on the situation in Greece to the embassy in Berlin:

"In the name of 500,000 members we protest strongly against the murder and imprisonment of striking workers by the Greek government. We demand a general strike and condemn in the sharpest manner the treatment of the masses by the police and courts.

Protest Treatment of Palestine Prisoners

BEIROUT, July 15.—Because of barbaric treatment of political prisoners and of the decision by the government that ten of these political prisoners be deported from the country, numerous mass meetings were held all over the country where protest resolutions were adopted against whipping of political prisoners. Palestine labor is determined to erase such outrages from Palestinian judicial and criminal procedure.

Huge Sums Spent for "Amateur" Sports Meet

The Olympic sports meet, which will be held in Amsterdam this year, will involve the expenditure of thousands of dollars, all in the name of "amateur" sports. Hundreds of athletes, who are professionals in everything but name, from every European country except the Soviet Union, will vie for honors at this huge sports spectacle. WORKERS SCORE FASCIST TERROR

N. Y. Police Break Up Demonstration

Police Saturday broke up a demonstration of 300 workers before the Italian Consulate, 20 E. 22nd St., who protested against the fascist terror and demanded the release of all class-war prisoners in Italy. The demonstrated was arranged by the New York Section of the International Labor Defense, 799 Broadway.

Gathering in front of the consulate shortly after 1 o'clock, the workers marched up and down holding high their placards. Some of the slogans read: "Wall St. Supports Fascism—Fascism Murders Workers—Fight Fascism"; "We Demand Freedom for 6,000 Workers in Fascist Jails"; "Mussolini, Mass Murderer!" "Down with Fascism! Long Live Workers' Solidarity!" "We Demand the Right of Legalized Existence for All Political Parties"; and "To Fight Fascism in America Join the International Labor Defense."

Police Threaten Workers.

The demonstration had been in progress for about 10 minutes when a policeman appeared on the scene and began threatening the workers. He took Leon Litwin, who was leading the demonstration, out of line and tried to disperse the others. Finding that the workers were not intimidated by his threats and abuse, the policeman went into the consulate and phoned for reserves. A sergeant, five patrolmen and five detectives soon arrived on the scene and began tearing up and confiscating the placards. Workers were pushed around and threatened, but the majority, defying the police, continued to walk in front of the consulate.

While the demonstration was in progress, Rose Baron, secretary of the New York Section of the International Labor Defense, and Joseph Magliacano, one of the demonstrators, went up into the consulate, and in the absence of Consul General Grazzi, delivered to one of his attaches a letter voicing the protest of the workers of America against the fascist terror and demanding that this protest be forwarded to Mussolini.

45-Minute Demonstration

The demonstration lasted for about 45 minutes, the police continuing to threaten and manhandle workers. Having accomplished all that they could, the demonstrators finally dispersed.

One of the policemen turned to the attache of the Italian consulate. "Are you satisfied?" he asked. The attache smiled contentedly.

SPORTS COLUMN FOR THE 'DAILY'

Will Start Tomorrow; to Appear Daily

Tomorrow the new sports department of The DAILY WORKER begins. It will be published daily thereafter. By means of a special international news service it will be possible to print the latest news of both labor and capitalist sports in every part of the world, including the Soviet Union.

This new department is being started in response to many requests from workers in various parts of the country. It is only one of the many news features that are contemplated in the bigger and better DAILY WORKER. Labor sports, which are still in their infancy in this country, will of course be given as much space as possible. For this the cooperation of all labor sports organizations is necessary. Organizations located in New York or vicinity should phone in the results of games as soon as they are over. Communications telling of sports activities are welcome and should be addressed to the Sports Editor, DAILY WORKER, 26-28 Union Square.

Tell your friends and shop-mates of this new department. Sports fans have now no reason to read the capitalist press which ignores labor sports entirely. Keep in touch with the world of sports by reading The DAILY WORKER every day.

Circus Performer Hurt, Not Expected to Live

CHICAGO, July 15 (UP).—Two of her front teeth pulled out as Mrs. Bessie B. Gunn, circus performer, swung high above a crowd at a circus here, and Mrs. Gunn plunged to the ground. She is not expected to live.

Mrs. Gunn, advertised by the Robinson Circus as "the woman with the iron jaw," was spinning her body as she swung above the crowd, clinging solely by her teeth.

Two teeth suddenly loosened and broke off and she plunged to the ground. At the St. Joseph's Hospital in Elgin it was found she suffered four fractures of the spine, her right arm fractured and four ribs broken.

CARPENTERS IN PENNSYLVANIA GET 90 CENTS

Corrupt Officials Are Ruining Union

(By a Worker Correspondent)

CHESTER, Pa., (By Mail).—The carpenters of Delaware and Montgomery counties are entering a stage nearing a crisis.

According to a report rendered by the secretary-treasurer of Delaware county, conditions are reaching a stage which will be worse than 1881.

Fake Unionists.

The business agent reports the loss of a very prominent contractor. Five jobs have been called and one of the jobs is already manned by non-union men. He went to the contractor and tried to persuade him to hire union men but he refused to have anything to do with them as he could get all the men he wanted at 90c to $1.00 per hour. The present rate in this district is $1.25 per hour.

The jobs were called after several men were fired and disclosed the fact that the union men had been scabbing for some time, working at 90 cents an hour.

My God! where are we drifting to? We can't trust our own men.

The officials charge the men as being responsible for the conditions here. If they would only stick out and not work.

The men say the officials have played favorites and have sat still and have not tried to keep the union contractor in line.

Must Picket.

A single picket was placed on the job in Sharon Hill and was paid $35.00 for his services. The picket reports that there is no use to stay any longer as he came very near being arrested. No one has talked of a mass picket as no one seems to think enough of the job.

Several of these jobs are public school jobs and the business agent thinks the same ruling should apply to "boroughs as applies to cities," for example—contracts of this kind should be and must be awarded to union men at the prevailing rate of wage. —S.

Swedish Paper Men Demand Cut

STOCKHOLM, July 15. — The cellulose and paper industry employers have denounced the wage agreement and demanded a reduction of the maximum wages, which will affect about 3,000 of the 12,000 workers of the industry. It was found impossible to reach an agreement, the employers, therefore, proclaimed a lockout, which came into operation on January 2 and was later extended to the sawmills and further into the paper industry, so that it now comprises about 12,000 members of the Sawmill-Workers' Union and some 27,000 members of the Paper Industry Workers' Union. Besides wage cuts, the employers are trying to make changes for the worse in the general conditions, such as the holiday pay, medical attendance, over time allowances, payment of repairs and the right of the Union to safeguard the interests of workers under age and older workers.

Australia Miners to Fight Wage Reduction

SYDNEY, July 15.—Aggregate meetings of mining employees were held at various centres throughout the Newcastle and Maitland coal fields on Sunday to protest against wage reductions and alterations in working conditions proposed by the mine owners.

Various speakers pointed out that a reduction in wages or any increase in working hours would not remedy the present slackness in the industry. The demand for coal had eased because of the increasing use of oil as fuel, mass production of electricity, and the development of coal resources in other countries Even if the miners worked for nothing there would be no greater demand for coal.

Musicians Raise Million Dollar Fund to Fight Foes' Attacks

ONE of the foremost and most strongly organized unions, the American Federation of Musicians, has decided to raise no less than a million dollars for a defense fund.

The defense fund will be raised by assessment which was voted at the union's recent convention at Louisville. The amount may even run over $1,000,000 and perhaps reach $1,500,000.

According to an interview with Joseph A. Weber, president of the federation, the fund will be set aside and used only to "fight any attempts of employers to lower the present standard of wages or working conditions."

Also, it applies only to the members of the union who are employed in theatres, since it is from the big theatre chains that the only real danger of an onslaught on union conditions exists. The theatre musicians, who form about one-sixth of the federation's membership, will pay the assessment of 2 per cent of their wages, the other members not being assessed. Similarly, the fund is to be used only in theatre strikes or lockouts.

The defense fund was voted upon and approved unanimously at the convention. A circular letter, sent out to the membership of some 15,000, explained the purpose of the defense fund and reads as follows:

"The theatrical field is now controlled to the tune of at least 80 per cent by corporations, and such control grows by leaps and bounds, so that it can be easily seen that same will soon reach 100 per cent. Several of these corporations now control hundreds of theatres in as many cities. A corporation is in a position to stage an indefinite fight or prolonged controversy with a local or several of them, accepting the loss caused as a matter of course, having same carried by all the other numerous theatres under its control.

Union Must Be Prepared

"Local or locals involved in such a prolonged controversy is or are not in such a favorable position, and as there is the possibility that the Federation may be forced to involve additional locals, the danger always exists that many hundreds of thousands of members may be called on strike. Therefore, it is imperative that the federation find itself able to pay indefinite strike benefits and to assume the same position as does the corporation by simply considering the strike benefits paid as a loss borne by the local unions.

"In connection with this matter, I call your attention to the fact that the open shop organizations appear to be paying particular attention to the musicians and stage hands. They advise our employers that we are arbitrary organizations and invite them to cut loose from our domination and despotism and are ready to assist theatrical managers financially or otherwise without stint if these managers will prolong a controversy with either our locals or those of the stage hands to such extent as to practically destroy the further value of same to their members."

Miner's Wife Goes On Hunger Strike

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

POTTSVILLE, Pa., July 15.—Mrs. Chas. Burilla, wife of one of the three miners entombed in the Lyttle colliery at Lyttle near Pottsville, has gone on a hunger strike and has not eaten since the accident occurred. The rescue workers have about 400 tons of debris to clear away before it is possible to reach the miners who have been under the pile of rock and coal. Hope has been abandoned for them. A second fall of rock and coal has prevented finding the unfortunate miners who are the victims of the greed of the coal operators.

KELLOGG STAGES "PEACE" FARCE

Peru, Chile Dictators Lend Hand

WASHINGTON, July 15 (FP).—Press photographers took flashlight pictures of Secretary Kellogg, seated between the Peruvian and Chilean ambassadors, in the state department reception room, July 13, after Kellogg made public the formal letters whereby they announced that their governments had decided to resume diplomatic relations with each other. Chile and Peru have had no drect diplomatic relations in the past 17 years.

Back of this stage-setting is the fact that the Peruvian dictator Leguia, and the Chilean dictator, Ibanez, began informal discussions through their diplomats at the Havana conference last January When these talks had reached the point where it was clear that they would resume formal relations Kellogg came in with a formal letter to both, urging them to make up their quarrel. And as each dictator wanted to reduce the interest rate on his future borrowings in Wall Street, and as Kellogg wanted to slip out of his bad position as arbitrator in their Tacna-Arica boundary dispute, they decided to let him play peace-maker

One consequence of this stage-play is that Chile will be able to suppress the report on the Chileans' violent interference with his proposed plebiscite in Tacna-Arica. Chile remains in possession of that region.

150,000 EXTRA BALLOTS SHOW CORRUPTION

Those Vare Majorities Not Surprising Now

(By a Worker Correspondent)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., (By Mail)—The "election" methods in vogue in this great citadel of 100 per cent Americanism were brought out vividly at the investigation being conducted before U. S. Senator Chas. A. Waterman, of Colorado who is here taking testimony for the senate committee on privilege and elections in the Wilson-Vare senate contest.

Wilson, who ran on the democratic ticket, charges that the election was stolen by the Vare republican organization for their leader, Wm. S. Vare.

Huge Ballot Steal.

It was admitted by County Commissioner Harry Kuenzel, and by Maurice A. Roesch, superintendent of the commission's bureau of elections, that after official ballots are printed to cover every name on the assessment lists, an extra 150,000 copies of the official ballots are run off on the presses.

What becomes of this huge number of extra ballots? The county commissioners attempted to prove that they were finally destroyed However, the investigators, the investigators' attorney and the audience were not convinced.

One thing is certain, nevertheless Unusually huge majorities are rolled up by the Vare machine on every election day. Majorities, so huge, the thinking public wonders at it. And now comes the revelation that 150,000 extra ballots are printed.

"Corrupt and Contented."

Of course they may not be used. But then, oh! well, this is a democracy and democratic practises prevail and even that great sage of the republican party, Elihu Root, characterized Philadelphia as "corrupt and contented." So the bright boy at the head of the class will please come forward and explain why 150,000 extra ballots are printed and what is done with them each election day. —C. RABIN.

YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE HOLDS BIG CONFERENCE

100 Delegates Present From Many Shops

More than 100 delegates from all of the units of the Communist Youth League were present at an organizational conference that was held yesterday in the Workers Center.

The question of organization of shop nuclei was the main point on the order of business and many were present from large shops and from New Jersey.

Yusem, representative of the National Executive Committee, the first reporter, spoke on the letter sent by the Young Communist International to the American League. He analyzed the reasons for the league's failure to establish more shop nuclei in the large factories and pointed out that the shop nucleus was the basis of organization of every Communist Youth League.

Frankfeld, acting district organizer, reported for the District Executive Committee on the general situation in New York and New Jersey. The workers, and especially the young workers, show greater willingness to struggle, he said.

After a detailed report on the social composition of the New York membership, the various leaflets and bulletins issued in the past six months, he reported a dues paying membership of over 600 in the New York League.

Jack Perrila, reporting on the Working Youth Conference to be held in September, pointed out that the two so-called Brookwood youth conferences had succeeded in exposing the inability of the progressives in organizing the young workers and showed that in this period of greater fighting powers on the part of the workers the youth will and must play an important role.

The league set a minimum of 10 shop nuclei as the aim of its present factory work.

One active worker in the Perth Amboy strike reported on the developments in the shop, the spirit of the workers and the militancy of the shirt makers. It is the aim of the strikers, she said, to spread the strike to all 2,000 shirt makers in Perth Amboy.

A general discussion lasting several hours followed. Representatives from the International Handkerchief Company, from Klein's Department Store, from Wasserman Clothing Company, shoe factories, fur pointing shops, millinery shops, a radio factory and many other factories reported. All pledged themselves to work for the organization of shop nuclei and of the masses of young workers in the factories into unions.

The conference, it was declared, marked a great step forward in the work of the New York League and will serve to mobilize the entire league membership in the campaign to organize the working youth of the city and to build the Communist Youth movement on the basis of shop nuclei.

BOSSES SLASH TAILORS' WAGES

pletely negates the contention of the Hillman administration that things are "harmonious" among the officials themselves, is the recent demonstration of "Shipping Clerks' Local 158 of the A. C. W." before the offices of the Amalgamated Bank on Union Square.

More than a score of members of this organiation, led by no less a person than the former chief of the "education squad," and one of Beckerman's closest "pals," marched before the bank with large signs until dispersed by the police. The "educational squad" is a Beckerman creation used to terrorize the union members courageous enough to protest against the betrayals of the Amalgamated leadership.

The reason for the demonstration was explained by the slogans on the signs, which demanded that Hillman recognize the Shipping Clerks' local. This local also recently held a protest meeting against the statement of Hillman that no such local is in existence, and that the so-called officials are imposters. It was definitely ascertained at that time that the "leaders" of the local are in possession of an A. C. W. charter, which was revoked several years ago when Hillman signed a pact with the bosses agreeing to abolish the local. The "educational squad" chief is said to be trying to resurrect the shipping clerks' local.

Young Workers League Membership Meet Fri.

The membership meeting of the Young Workers (Communist) League which was originally scheduled to be held on Friday, July 13, was called off last week because it conflicted with the mass meeting held the same night on the Red International of Labor Unions report.

It will be held Friday, July 20. All Young Workers (Communist) League members should be present, with their dues books.

CIGAR WORKERS GET $12 WEEKLY

Workers Face Loss of Hands in Machines

PHILADELPHIA (FP).—Listening to discussion of Pres. Coolidge's latest prosperity talk, a girl cigarmaker termed it all humbug, at least to cigar factory workers.

She works for Bobrow Bros., Inc. 220 S. Fifth St., with several hundred other employes, mostly girls They work on a piece rate basis—95c a thousand. At the rate of 3 to 4 thousand cigars a day, they earn $15 to $20 a week, if there are no deductions for bad cigars. The deductions sometimes runs as high as 900 out of 3,600 cigars a day.

When cigars are bad the whole crew of 4 working on a machine suffer deductions; thus 900 bad cigars cause a cut in pay on 3,600 It makes no difference whether the part of work handled by the first or last girl on the machine is bad, the cigars are finished, broken up and the work not paid for.

Face Loss of Hands.

Operators can't repair machinery out of order when work starts going, because there is danger of getting hands caught in the machine and losing a finger or worse. The onl yway to set things straight is to stop the machine, but it must be kept running.

When a girl wants to go to a washroom she can't leave the machine until an extra girl on the floor comes to take her place. Sometimes she must wait as long as 45 minutes.

Poor Ventilation.

If one of a crew isn't well and fails to come in for the day, the other 3 girls lose that day's work The same happens when one gets injured on faints during the day Fainting is common, caused by lack of ventilation. Open windows would cause the tobacco to dry, so all windows are kept shut and hundreds of employes forced to work in rank tobacco odors. Many modern cigar factories have good ventilation systems—but greed keeps the others from making improvements.

TRACTION PLAN IS MADE PUBLIC

Untermeyer Has New Bridge to 7c Fare

newly constructed lines are in fact compelled by law to pay their way out of fare charges, which under the enormously overcapitalized valuations of the lines can never be accomplished. It is believed therefore that the Untermyer plan is merely a "bridge" leading to a fare increase and the eventual turning over of the old lines together with the billion dollar new ones, normally to be under public control, to the operation and profit of a private company.

Another provision contemplated by the plan is the allowance to the present lines of enormous sums in the event of "recapture" for lines which have been allowed to depreciate and are now worth only a fraction of their recapture cost.

Tammany Deal.

It is believed that the present willingness of B.-M. T. to do business is the confirmation of the charge that the Tammany Hall city administration and the state republican organization have fully reconciled whatever differences they may have previously had.

The time for the fare increase and for the billion dollar traction steal is said to be set for after election.

GREEK WORKERS, SAILORS IN JAIL

ATHENS, July 15.—After the bloody suppression of workers at Kawalla, the workers Zaurelis, Eucharis, Katos, Alfondis, Kluaris and many others, whose names are not known, have been thrown into jail.

At the Naval Court in the Piraus six sailors are being tried who are charged with distributing Communist leaflets among the sailors. Biblia was sentenced to 5 years hard labor and 10,000 drachma fine, Papulias to 2 years prison and 5,000 drachma fine, Zacharias to 1 year prison, and the rent to 3 months prison.

Palestine Apprentices Labor Without Wages

BEIROUT, Palestine, July 15.—The status of the youthful worker in Palestine today is far from what could be desired. About half of them work more than 8 hours a day Young apprentices must work for a long time, frequently without pay. in order to learn a trade. Past experience has shown that the privately owned trades are no fit places for learning a trade.

Recently the workingclass youth has succeeded in arranging an exhibition of the work of some of these young workers. Some fine specimens of work were shown.

HEAT PREVENTS SEAMENS' MEET

Committees Forming to Build Union

A mass meeting, scheduled for Monday, July 9th, at the International Seamen's Club, 28 South St., was called off on account of the extreme heat, it was learned yesterday.

The thermometer registered 96 throughout the dav. The meeting, which was called for the purpose of forming a Marine Workers Port Committee for New York, will be held within two months, it was announced. Committees are being formed in all the principal ports throughout the United States for the purpose of organizing a new Transport Workers Union, which will honestly fight for a higher standard of living for the American transport workers.

MINERS JEER AT STRIKE COWARDS

PITTSBURGH, July 15 (FP).—Avella barracks were in uproar as operators' agents came for two deserting miners. Dish pans, pots and tin pails were banged with spoons in derision; the children cried out scornfully, "You're scabbing on our dads!" All the women were shouting at the same time in half a dozen languages.

Company agents are combing the mining towns, spreading defeatism and looking for men to return to the open-shop mines. Exorbitant wages are promised to strikers who will betray their brothers. Moonshine is dispensed liberally until the victim becomes maudlin. As a "good American citizen and a decent father," it is his duty to scab against his fellow workers, he is told. As soon as a "yes" is drilled out of him, a company truck calls at the barracks and carries his family to the scab patch.

Dr. Finn Malgren, noted Swedish scientist, and their companion in the dash for land," to die alone in the polar ice.

In spite of official denials by the Italian government, the information received from the Krassin is authenticated and without any question relates the true facts.

Brutality unparalleled among men facing a common danger characterizes the action of the two Italians in abandoning their wounded companion after they had taken his food and his compass.

The true facts of the "heroism" of the two Italians whose fidelity to their companion has been lauded for days in the European and American press were ascertained by officers of the icebreaker after the ship had been guided to them by the Soviet flier Chukhnovsky. Chukhnovsky was wrecked in the attempt.

The later reports of the fascist captains so contradicted their first story that the suspicions of the Krassin's officers were aroused and they closely questioned the Italians.

According to their latest confession, the men dug a grave in the ice for Malgren when he could go no further and left him there to die of hunger and cold after having appropriated his compass and provisions.

In the meantime the Soviet icebreaker Krassin has been ordered to seek further for Amundsen and his companions, in spite of heavy fog and icefloes. The Malignin, another Soviet vessel, has also been ordered by the Soviet Rescue Mission to continue with the search.

REFUSE AID TO SHIRT STRIKERS

Amalgamated Officials Keep Scab Cutter

(Special To DAILY WORKER.)

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., July 15.—"Obligations" on the part of Amalgamated Clothing Workers' representatives who have been sent here from New York to lead the strike of the young shirt workers "prevented" them from offering any aid to the strikers, it was stated yesterday.

The young strikers continue their struggle against the wage-cut and speed-up with the same spirit and enthusiasm which marked the inception of the strike, last Tuesday. Members of the Young Workers (Communist) League picketed with the strikers yesterday as they have each day of the strike.

Workers Aroused.

Workers expressed their indignation at a conference between the bosses and an Amalgamated official not sanctioned by the Strike Committee.

The Amalgamated officials have refused to call out a cutter who is scabbing and is a member of the Amalgamated. Since they are not "responsible" for the strike they will allow this scabbing to go on, they say.

Because the Amalgamated officials refused to call out the other shirt factories on strike and because they stated that the bosses would sooner settle the strike with them than with the Strike Committee, the strikers have insisted that before they affiliate with the Amalgamated that the officials must call out the scabbing cutter, that the Amalgamated lend financial support to the strike and that the Strike Committee itself must retain the leadership of the strike even when the shirt workers affiliate with them. The young strikers received the foregoing in a report given by Veronica Kovacs, militant strike leader, with great enthusiasm.

Pledges Support.

P. Frankfeld of the Young Workers (Communist) League, who pledged the support of his organization yesterday and donated $10 to help carry on the strike was met with great enthusiasm. He told them that in Monday's picketing they would be helped by 15 members of the organiation he represented. Lottie Marks, member of the Young Workers (Communist) League, who has aided the strikers since the beginning of the strike and has picketed with them each day, was also greeted with applause by the strikers. She urged the strikers to continue with their militant work and praised them for having kept their ranks intact.

Police halted a distribution of leaflets Friday at the Raritan Shirt Factory because it called on the workers to go on strike against an imminent wage-cut. This persecution made the Jaco Co. strikers more determined to spread the struggle throughout Perth Amboy. Leaflets will be distributed to the shirt factories here tomorrow, it was said.

CAP UNION MEET RAPS ZARITSKY

Chicago Joint Board Defies International

fusing to aid Zaritsky in his campaign to introduce piece-work, the 44-hour week and expulsion of progressives, voted down this proposal.

Roberts, it was learned threatened the expulsion of Millinery Workers Local 52, because of its own stand in support of the recently expelled Millinery Workers Local 43 of New York, and theatened further retribution against the Joint Board if it too supports the New York local.

Walks Out.

When local 52 representatives proposed to reorganize the Joint Board organization committee, which had atrophied during Roberts stay as Joint Board manager, the proposal was carried despite Roberts strenuous opposition. After failing in an attempt to break up the meeting, Roberts left, followed by a few of his henchmen.

Before leaving Roberts announced the imminent arrival of another Zaritsky appointee called Gerther a Chicago manager. The Joint Board declared that he would meet the same fate as Roberts.

BARBERS OUT ON GENERAL STRIKE IN PHILADELPHIA

Plan to Organize All Progressives

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 15.—Journeymen barbers all over the city here have gone on strike against an attempt on the part of the bosses to cut their wages and reduce their working conditions to the pre-war level.

Many of the patrons at the various barber shops, upon learning of the strike, left the barber chairs with lather on their faces, partly shaved. Girls refused to permit scabs to bob their hair. Today many pickets are patrolling in front of hundreds of shops throughout the city.

Workers Present Demands.

Some of the demands presented by the striking workers are that all barbers should be hired through the union: that journeymen barbers be paid $35 per week and 50 per cent commission for over $50 taken in in five days; that one day off a week be allowed them. In the center of the city, where the shops are busiest, the workers demand $32 per week and 50 per cent commission for over $47; $6 per day and 50 per cent commission for over $8 Evening helpers, working between 5 and 8 p. m. shall be paid $3 and 50 per cent for $5. Other demands are that Saturday's pay shall be $12 and 50 per cent for $16, and that barber shops shall be opened at 8 a. m. and closed at 8 p. m. In the center of the city ten hours shall constitute a day's work.

At a conference held here with the bosses, the latter refused to recognize the demands of the workers, and were willing to "concede" conditions and pay much lower than those demanded by the striking workers.

Officials Betray Workers.

According to latest reports, the strikers are showing fine spirit and are confident that their power will force the bosses to grant their demands. Active rank and file members of the union, however, are dissatisfied with the actions of the officials of the union. It is pointed out that union officials, in negotiating with the employers, gave up the demands for increases in wages thereby placing the union in a defensive position. The employers took advantage of this and imposed a wage-cut on the workers.

The militants among the rank and file are preparing to organize the progressive workers with the purpose of preventing further compromise of their demands.

Green's No-Strike Philosophy

When social parasites and labor betrayers, as the case may be, find it necessary to continue nefarious practices against the masses whose "god-appointed" leaders they claim to be, their common recourse is to invent a philosophy to justify their treachery.

William Green, writing in the current issue of the American Federationist, affords another such horrible example.

The day when labor had to resort to the use of the strike is past, says this voluble sounding-board of the bosses. At the moment when United Mine Workers of America, of which he is himself a member, has been practically destroyed through his own and John L. Lewis' treachery in sabotaging the only method by which the organizaton could have been saved, a really vigorous prosecution of the strike and the calling out of both the anthracite and the unorganized fields, this union-wrecker has the affrontery to declare himself against strikes. Says he:

> "In the early union days the main argument of the union was one of force—the strike. Force was necessary to establish the fundamental right of status. Employers would heed no other argument."

But now, according to this flunky of the open-shop coal operators, it's all different. Because:

> "Fundamental changes have taken place in industry. . . . Instead of relying wholly on refusal to work, unions must be ready to point out mistakes in policy or method by argument and facts to convince management, and then outline a substitute policy."

The justification for the early use of the strike, we are told, was the necessity of fighting the legal status of the trade union.

Nothing can more clearly illustrate the utter hypocrisy and contemptible sophistry of these words than the fact that in its report to the last convention of the American Federation of Labor, the executive council was forced to admit that organized labor has not yet attained legal status in the United States. What is the whole pretended fight against the "yellow dog" contract which the labor officials have time and again declared is a threat to the legal existence of organized labor, if not a denial of the so-called legal status of the trade unon? And how will that status, if ever under capitalist government, be attained if not by the strike?

The full meaning of Green's proposals becomes clear when we read his further suggestions in connection with certain developments which have recently taken place in Colorado. "Unions must be ready to point out mistakes in policy to convince management and to outline a substitute policy for the strike."

When the Rocky Mountain Fuel Company, which, after years of struggle against even the bankrupt A. F. of L. officials, became convinced, through the costly Colorado strike of last year, that it would be more profitable to utilize the labor fakers than its own company union, and when it made arrangements to prevent real unionization by the device of conspiring with labor fakers to put through a fake "unionization" of its mines, it gave as its reasons for the change in policy:

> "To prevent another strike, to insure constant and sufficient supply of coal at reasonable prices . . . to stabilize production costs . . . in short to protect . . . business and labor from a recurrence of this past year's lost and waste . . ."

Green confirms this understanding. "It is an advantage to employ miners who belong to the union," he says, "for the union could prevent the recurrence of most strikes from which Colorado has suffered."

It is necessary only to add that the company unions, which Green is seeking to put over, will not succeed any more than the company unions organized by the bosses themselves, in the effort to prevent the workers from utilizing the only weapon which directly or indirectly is responsible for whatever gains they may secure under capitalism.

Was there ever a more disgusting sight than this traitor Green, as he expounds to the working class his now open philosophy of treason?

That New York Fare

The silence which is hanging heavily over the developments now taking place in the seven cent fare issue and in the so-called rapid transit unification plan is undoubtedly part of the generally agreed upon plan among the politicians and traction companies to let the matter rest until after the November elections. This can only mean that the traction ring which operates within both old parties is quite sure of its ground, otherwise there would now be a continuation of the public clamor and wailing on the part of the poverty-stricken Morgan and Chase National Bank interests that they are unable to make ends meet on the lowly nickel.

The announcement by Samuel Untermeyer that he has practically reached an agreement with the B.-M. T. group under which the company will consent to recapture by the city, a trifling arrangement which will involve several hundred millions of dollars, received only casual mention in the capitalist press. The Interborough recently ordered a supply of 7c fare tokens which were manufactured by a New England concern. It is known that the surface lines are preparing to follow the example of the Third Avenue subsidiary by making application for fare increases. But all is still among the servants of the public.

Within a few months an issue involving the virtual turning over of the new city built subways, the estimated construction cost of which is a billion dollars, will be decided by Tammany Hall and republican city and state officials who own traction stock, represent the transit companies as attorneys, and have entered into secret agreements to put over the greatest steal in the country, with the possible exception of the power grab.

Here is an issue which is burning and immediate, one on which approach may be made to hitherto untouched masses of workers. No political speech in the present campaign, no propaganda which is sent out should fail to emphasize this question.

BOSTON, Mass., July 15.—Two right wing emissaries from the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, sent here by Sigman as "supervisors" of the elections in the Boston locals, presided over the meeting of the election committee Friday and rejected all candidates for office who refused to sign the right wing yellow dog contract, which stipulates "that the undersigned is not a Communist nor a Communist follower or sympathizer."

Four Members Signed

Even one of the right wing members of the election committee which was elected at membership meetings of Locals 46 and 56 declared that he would reject any one that does sign the document.

As a result of this action the reactionary clique in control of the International found that but four members were willing to sign and run for the Local 46 executive board and that only two signed the yellow dog document as candidates to the Joint Board from that local. Only one man could be gotten to run for the Joint Board from Local 56.

A joint meeting of the Boston local executive boards with the Joint Board was held here July 10 to hear the instructions handed them by the Sigman supervision committee, Halpern and Gingold.

Several right wing members pleaded with "Little Czar" Sigman's ambassadors to give permission to abandon the yellow dog contract, but to no avail. They finally approved the action of the Sigman clique despite express instructions to the contrary from the membership.

At the membership meetings of these locals, held recently, even some right wing followers had declared that no organization work could be done as long as the left wing was not allowed to participate in the union leadership.

Election Laws in United States

Framed By Capitalists to Keep Working Class Parties Off the Ballot

By JULIUS CODKIND.

The United States of America is perhaps the only country in the world where the elections are governed under a law which makes it possible for the ruling class to so confuse the technical qualifications to be overcome by new or small parties seeking a place on the ballot as from the very outset to practically prohibit all effective opposition in any election campaign to the two "old" parties dominated by Wall Street.

Only in America is it possible for a regular presidential candidate of a political party to run or to be on the ballot only in spots. For example, the Workers (Communist) Party candidates will surely not be on the ballot in a large number of the forty-eight states. Of equal interest is the fact that under the law of some states, a candidate for president may be on the ballot in spots in those states. A party seeking to place its candidates officially in nomination on the ballot is confronted with the problem of solving forty-eight separate and distinct sets of laws.

Congressional Election.

To understand this, a few words of explanation are necessary.

In theory, the country is supposed to be a federation of sovereign states. The Federal Constitution provides that the power of each state in the Central Government shall be relative to the percentage of population as a whole. Thus each state elects a given percentage of the total number of congressmen but this is modified by a section of the constitution which provides that there shall be a senate consisting of two senators from each state. The constitution also provides that each state shall elect as many electors as it has congressmen plus senators, and that the day of election of congressmen and senators must be the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November.

The president is not elected by direct vote. Under the constitution he is chosen by the electors. The direct object therefore of the old parties is not to gain a maximum number of voters throughout the country but to win a maximum number of the electors, and under the constitution it is possible for a candidate for the presidency who has secured the greatest total of direct votes to be defeated in the electoral college. Thus in 1916 it was at first reported that Wilson had been defeated for re-election, although his vote proved to be 600,000 greater than that of his opponent. Later reports from California, however showed that Wilson had won the state by a plurality of about 3,800 which gave him the entire electoral votes of the state and with it a small majority in the electoral college.

A few illustrations will make this process even clearer. Taking the elections in 1916 as an example, we find that in California there were 466,200 votes for Wilson and 462,394 for Hughes. This gave Wilson the entire 13 electoral votes of the state. In New York the vote for Wilson was 759,426 and for Hughes 869,115. Hughes got the entire 45 electoral votes of the state.

In Minnesota, Hughes received 179,544 while Wilson got 179,152 Although Hughes had only 392 more than Wilson, he received the entire 12 electoral votes of the state. It is also interesting to note that actually, Hughes received 27,910 votes less than his three leading opponents combined in this state.

These are not exceptional occurrences. The constitution has deliberately provided for just this. The result is that in states where the democratic or republican party is preponderant there are practically no presidential election campaigns at all, both parties confining themselves largely to such states as New York, Missouri, New Jersey, Oklahoma, Ohio, Maryland, California and Massachusetts, where the control swings from one party to the other. These states, with a few others, known as the doubtful states decide the issue of the presidency. Presidential candidates as a general rule are politicians whose home states must be New York, Ohio Massachusetts or California as the issue of "Favorite Son" is often quite enough to swing enough votes to carry one of these states.

It is already clear from all this that the makers of the constitution had in mind the objective of retaining within their own hands the entire political power and all the patronage going with it, in their respective home states.

As noted, the constitution provides that each state shall elect its electors, congressmen and other officials in its own way, with the result that in every state there is a different set of laws governing the elections. Of far greater consequence is the fact that under the constitution each state prescribes its own conditions as to the procedure to be followed by parties or independent groups who seek to place their candidates on the ballot or officially in nomination.

It is worthy of note that as a general rule the states in which the republican and democratic parties conflict most, impose the most severe restrictions against new or weaker parties seeking a place on the ballot for their candidates while those states which are safely republican or democratic have little or no legislation on the question, and in several instances nominations are legally made by state conventions of any group or party. This procedure is not actually statute law. It is merely a mode legalized by custom.

The obvious reason for the severe restrictions against new or weaker parties imposed by law in the doubtful states is the fact that through this means the politicians of the two dominant parties protect themselves against the rise of minority groups capable of wielding a balance of power and thus dominating the political situation within the state.

New York furnishes an excellent illustration of this condition. The restrictions against the nomination of candidates by new or weaker parties for state-wide office are most severe. From "new" parties the law requires a minimum of 12,000 signatures on petitions, including at least 50 from each of the sixty-one counties in the state, but a new party seeking to place a candidate for the state assembly in nomination in every assembly district in the state would require no less than 120,000 signatures or five per cent of the total vote. Provided the numerous technicalities of the law are correctly complied with this number of signatures, if none are invalidated by the officials, would be sufficient to place in nomination a candidate for every elective office within the state from presidential electors, governor and United States senator down to dog-catcher.

It is obvious that the laws were framed generally with the object of excluding minority, and, of course working class parties from the elections, by making it very costly and difficult for independent, new or weak parties to place candidates officially in nomination, and this automatically entails the greatest sacrifices on the part of working class parties seeking to enter the field It happens very often that tremendous efforts, together with heavy financial sacrifices, are made by workers to place candidates in nomination, only to meet with failure either because they have failed to comply with some technicality or because they were unable to gather sufficient signatures within the time allotted, and very often failure may be traced to the mere caprice of some petty official.

While in Denver, Comrade Saul incidentally helped organize the dairy clerks and led them in a successful strike. During his spare time Saul helped the local comrades arrange for the Colorado State ratification convention, to be held at Denver on Saturday, July 28.

Arthur Starr, agricultural district organizer, reports from Bismachk North Dakota, that he is preparing to go into South Dakota to help the local comrades put the party on the ballot.

The Iowa State Nominating Convention to put the party on the ballot will be held at Des Moines on Sunday, July 15.

The Foster-Gitlow three-color "Vote Communist" campaign buttons are now ready. Everybody will want one at 10 cents each.

Prices in quantity are: Four cents in lots of 100; 3 cents in lots of 1,000, and 2 cents in lots of 5,000 or over.

Roy Stephens, party field organizer, reports from Omaha that the comrades are commencing to circulate petitions to put the party on the ballot in the State of Nebraska.

Hugo Oehler, District No. 10 organizer, is having a hard tussel with the Oklahomo State officials, who are fighting the Communist electors from going on the primary ballot of the Oklahoma farmer-labor party.

Word received from Oehler is that the Oklahoma fight is in good shape and that he is now on his way to Little Rock to see what can be done to put the party on the ballot in Arkansas.

Willis L. Wright reports from Montana that there is no question about the party going on the ballot in that State. The possibilities of securing the endorsement by the Montana farmer-labor party of the candidacies of Foster and Gitlow are good.

Have you sent in your dollar for a book of 80 Vote Communist stamps? You need them to post on envelopes, letters, programs, factory papers, bulletins, and all other printed matter and stationery.

Militant Mine Family Blacklisted Since 1919

By VERA BUCH.

BLACKLISTED since 1919. Unable to work in the mines for nine years because of unusual militancy in the 1919 strike. And just as active now, one of the best of the best fighters among all the militant miners. This is the record of Thomas Ray of McDonald, Pa.

But on Tom Ray's household, on his wife and seven children, the bosses' discrimination has fallen very heavily. They live in one of those black, tumble-down, mean looking houses which you sometimes see bordering the railroad tracks in little towns, and wonder when you see them, "Does anyone live in that?" In such a house lives or rather exists, Tom Ray's family.

You ask Mrs. Ray, "How have you managed to get along all these years?" She smiles quietly and sadly. "I don't know. We have one boy sixteen years old. He gets a job in a mill, sometimes."

It seems hard for her to talk, as though she never saw anyone, as though she had lived alone for a long time among worries and dreariness. Rarely does Mrs. Ray leave the house. She is ashamed to go out in her worn woolen dress, the only dress she has. These nine years have crushed Mrs. Ray, have drained her vitality. Yet she is still a young woman.

From all the corners of that dingy home, Tom Ray's bright active children peer at you with lively brown eyes. They are not crushed—they are eager to hear about the strike and the union. Tom Ray is bringing up seven young fighters to carry on the fight in the future. He has been in New York City raising money thru the National Miners' Relief Committee for the hungry strikers and he tells the eager children about the strikes he's heard about there.

JOHN J. RASKOB, chairman of the finance committee of the General Motors Corporation is now the chairman of the Democratic National Committee by unanimous vote. There is no doubt that Al Smith is one of the two darlings of big business. The House of Morgan is behind General Motors, so in case Al gets licked the House of Morgan will have Hoover. Heads, Wall Street wins; tails, the working class loses.

THE fiction prevailed for a long time among the workers that the G. O. P. was the party of big business and that the jackass party was the party of the working-class. Without doubt the G. O. P. was the favorite party of big business until the world war chop-sueyed lots of things. The south was the virgin base of the democratic party but the exigencies of the great conflict opened up the south to industry. Now the pope-hating southern democrat and the pope-hating northern democrat can sit over the loving cup together and drink a toast to four years of looting under the auspices of the Tammany Tiger.

How lightly party badges sit on the chests of capitalist leaders is proven by the election of Raskob as chairman of the Democratic National Committee. Raskob used to be a republican. Four years ago he voted for Calvin Coolidge. But he also voted for president Wilson. He is quite impartial. The workers who vote the democratic ticket because their grandfathers voted for it should take a lesson from Raskob.

Apparently Tammany is sure of the support of the trade union bureaucrats so it is using all its energies to convince big business that it will do the right thing by it. Tammany leader George W. Olvany said in comment on the election of Raskob: "I think it was a very good selection. It will show the people throughout the country that Big Business need not be afraid of the Democratic Party when the party is willing to leave its affairs in the hands of a man conspicuously identified with one of the biggest business corporations in the world."

RASKOB is the responsible representative of the Du Pont powder interests in General Motors. The manufacturers of munitions of war cannot be expected to visualize a state of society where the dove of peace will take the place of the war eagle. Should war be "outlawed" as the sappy liberals would have it, Du pont would have to scrap his war making machinery and turn to the manufacture of ginger ale. Al Smith as president, will order the battleships to Latin America to collect interest on Morgan's loans and many Smith boosters will leave their bones to pulverize on South American battlefields for the profit of the Du Pont powder interests and the glory and profit of Tammany Hall.

WITH Raskob as its national chairman the democratic party should have no difficulty raising an effective campaign fund. The manipulation of the stock market by an insider should prove an easy way out of financial difficulties. The average 100 per cent American is willing to sell his vote for anything from a ten dollar bill to a thousand. The price depends on what he is able to deliver. Already Tammany touts are canvassing the city for willing young men who are ready to park their scruples in return for a promise of a job should Smith win.

THOSE of you who are weary and heavy laden with financial worries should take heart from the experience of John J. Raskob, General Motors official. His first job paid him $7.50 a week. See where he is today. He worked as a stenographer in public works to support his mother, two sisters and a brother. Virtue is supposed to be rewarded. Raskob was blessed by the pope last April. What more could a man ask for?

* * *

WILL Rogers the imperialist clown, comes out against political conventions. One would have expected something better from a professional humorist. There is more material for the kind of nonsense that brings home the bacon for capitalist columnists in capitalist conventions than even at dance marathons. Will should not kill the goose that lays the golden eggs.

While the two capitalist parties are insisting that they do not intend to buy all the votes that are necessary to elect their candidates the Workers (Communist) Party i busily engaged raising a Communis Campaign Fund of $100,000. W are doing this quite shamelessly an ostentatiously. $100,000 would pu chase half a dozen capitalist war heelers. But it will pay for th printing of tons of Communist lite ature and it will help to pay th expenses of hundreds of Communi speakers. Don't forget to send your contribution to the Nation Campaign Headquarters, 43 Ea 125th Street, New York City Alexander Trachtenberg, treasur Trachtenberg is not a powder ma nate, but your contribution will h blast the capitalist system i smithereens.

Saved Own Lives with Dying Companion's Food and Compass

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., July 15.—A gruesome tale of virtual murder by cold and starvation inflicted on a wounded man was revealed here today when dispatches from the Soviet icebreaker Krassin gave the world the true story of how Zappi and Mariano, officers from the wrecked fascist airship Italia, left Dr. Finn Malgren, noted Swedish scientist and their companion in the dash for land, to die alone in the polar ice.

In spite of official denials by the Italian government, the information received from the Krassin is authenticated and without any question relates the true facts.

Brutality unparalleled among men facing a common danger characterizes the action of the two Italians in abandoning their wounded companion after they had taken his food and his compass.

The true facts of the "heroism" of the two Italians whose fidelity to their companion has been lauded for days in the European and American press were ascertained by officers of the icebreaker after the ship had been guided to them by the Soviet flier Chukhnovsky. Chukhnovsky was wrecked in the attempt.

The later reports of the fascist captains so contradicted their first story that the suspicions of the Krassin's officers were aroused and they closely questioned the Italians.

According to their latest confession, the men dug a grave in the ice for Malgren when he could go no further and left him there to die of hunger and cold after having appropriated his compass and provisions.

Nobile, the commander of the Italia and the first to b rescued, evidently feeling the need of an explanation, has issued a statement saying that there had been no misunderstanding between himself and Malgren and that there was no enmity between any members of the party.

A telegram received from the Citta de Milano, the Italia baseship, read: "Malgren died of expesure on June 15. Nobile is better. His dog, Titina, feels fine."

In the meantime the Soviet icebreaker Krassin has been ordered to seek further for Amundsen and his companions, in spite of heavy fog and icefloes. The Malignin, another Soviet vessel, has also been ordered by the Soviet Rescue Mission to continue with the search.

FORD TAKES JOB IN HOOVER DRIVE

Named Official of Engineers' Group

WASHINGTON, July 15.—As the first gun in its campaign to match millionaire for millionaire, the republican national committee announced yesterday, through Chairman Work, that Henry Ford has been chosen as a vice-president of the Hoover-for-President-Engineers' National Committee.

The "selection" of the famous Detroit exploiter, who is one of the richest man in the world, is loowed upon as a move to counteract the naming of John J. Raskob, chairman of the finance committee of the General Motors Corp., as chairman of the democratic national committee.

Among the others who will act as vice-presidents of the Hoover-for-President Engineers' National Committee are Thomas A. Edison and Michael I. Pupin, inventor and professor at Columbia University.

1,500 MORE OUT IN ANTHRACITE

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

SCRANTON, Pa., July 15.—Fifteen hundred mine workers have struck at the Tripp Drift of the Diamond Colliery, Glen Alden Coal Company, at West Scranton, because the company has refused to give the miners back pay on a grievance which was settled favorably to them and the coal company was to pay them some back wages. The striking miners are members of Local Union 113.

Army Officers Won't Permit News of Porter

FORT ADAMS, R. I., July 15.—The military authorities here refuse to permit any communication with John Porter, imprisoned here for his activities in the New Bedford textile strike, while subject to military law.

The officers are keeping Porter strictly incommunicado and even refuse to permit his physical condition to be reported to friends. The last message from Porter reported that he had become ill following the brutal treatment to which he has been subjected, and stated that the authorities are trying to weaken his militant attitude and prevent him from exposing the role of the army before a public court-martial. At that time he had been thrown into solitary confinement.

Efforts to learn about Porter's present condition have been unsuccessful. A message was sent through the Western Union by the National Office of the Young Workers (Communist) League asking for information as to Porter's condition and developments of the case. The military authorities here informed the Western Union that there is a "military censorship on all communication with this man."

Efforts are to be made tomorrow or Tuesday to establish contact with Porter again by a visit from an attorney, and unless he is brought before a court-martial at once legal action will be started in the civil courts.

Kansas City Protest Resolution

KANSAS CITY, July 15.—At the huge Porter protest meeting held in Shawnee Park Wednesday the following resolution was adopted unanimously:

"We, the citizens of Armourdale, Kansas City, Kansas, assembled in a meeting at Shawnee Park, Armourdale, on July 11, having heard a report on the arrest and detention of John Porter, hereby resolve:

"That the imprisonment of John Porter is caused by his activity on behalf of the New Bedford Textile Workers. He was imprisoned after warnings by the police that if he does not leave his work in the strike he would be "fixed up proper";

"That we recognize that the cause of the New Bedford Textile Workers is the cause of the workers of Kansas City and that the cause of John Porter is our cause likewise;

"That we therefore demand that John Porter be released by the military authorities;

"That a copy of this resolution be sent to the Secretary of War, to the President of the United States, to the Governor of Massachusetts and to the local and labor press."

Canadian Unions Show Effect of Young Blood

MONTREAL (FP).—Revolts of unorganized workers and growing militancy of union workers have been featuring the Canadian industrial scene. A younger generation with larger ideas and appetites is entering the ranks of labor. Aggressive spirits crossing the border in search of better jobs in the United States are disappointed. Thus the Canadian labor movement is strengthened.

Heavily subsidized immigration increases the difficulties of the labor movement and recent court decisions have been designed to cripple unions. But most trades moved forward last year, and most of the reactionary efforts of employers this spring have been defeated by stubborn resistance.

Unusual and of more than passing significance is the role women and girls have played in recent strikes.

BERLIN AMNESTY PROVES FRAUD; FEW RELEASED

Poland, Too, Makes Empty Gesture

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

BERLIN, July 15.— Nationwide resentment has followed the passage by the Reichstag of an "amnesty act" by which a relative handful of class war prisoners has been released from jail while thousands are to remain for varying terms in their cells. Characterized as treason and betrayal by militant labor leaders thruout the country, the "amnesty act" is arousing increasing protest from the German working class.

Altho the government organs are triumphant in proclaiming the "amnesty," official distinction is being made between political prisoners and "political murderers." In the latter category the government is including all the leading militant workers who are now in German jails.

The two hundred class war prisoners who have been released in answer to the tremendous mass protest for an amnesty are but a fraction of the thousands who are vainly asking when they will be liberated. The authorities are frankly admitting that a large number will never leave their cells under the new edict.

Thousands of the prisoners who expected that they would receive full liberty within the next few days now learn that trivial reductions in their terms of imprisonment are the best they can hope for from the government's action.

Leaders Remain in Jail.

WARSAW, Poland, July 15.—Disappointment is widespread here today as the government's "amnesty act," rushed thru parliament recently in response to mass pressure, has resulted in the liberation of relatively few of the thousands of class war prisoners held in the Polish jails.

Five thousand workers, most of them jailed merely on suspicion of participation of Communist activity, have been set free to date, but it is believed that the government has no intention of making further releases.

The Polish militant leaders are without exception still in prison.

POLE-LITHUANIA PARLEY WRECKED

Pilsudski to Address Fascists in Vilna

KOENIGSBERG, East Prussia, July 15.—Announcement that Marshall Pilsudski will go to Vilna to inspect the frontier and to celebrate the anniversary of the formation of his military legion, followed immediately after the collapse of the economic conference between the Polish and Lithuanian delegates at Warsaw, according to dispatches from that city.

The conference went to pieces on the question of the Kovno railroad, accozrding to the Polish dispatches. Other issues are believed to have played a crucial part in the outcome, however. The coming secret military conference of the Little Entente called by the French at Bucharest is reported to be one of these.

Whether or not Marshall Pilsudski will make any overt threats during his harrangue to the legion at Vilna is not known yet, but it is anticipated that the relations of Poland and the Soviet Union will form a feature of his speech.

Pilsudski will also make public at that time his plans for the revisio nof the constitution. The suppression of the Polish parliament may depend upon the reception of this Vilna speech, it is intimated.

After his Vilna trip, Pilsudski will go to Bucharest for participation in a secret conference under the direction of a member of the French general staff.

Workers Are Privileged Class in USSR

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press)

Two items in the same issue of the London Daily Herald suggest a remarkable contrast. Both deal with tribute, one the tribute paid by an English working girl to the multi-millionaire oligarchy in America, the other the tribute of an English worker's wife to Russia. But paid in very different coin.

Josephine Wilson was the English working girl who paid her tribute to American capital. It was her last tribute, for she paid it with her life. She poisoned herself because life did not seem worth while on the 24 shillings ($5.80) a week she received from Woolworth's.

UNION OFFICIALS HELP OPEN SHOP MILITARY SCHEME

Employers Lay Plans For Soldier Law

CHICAGO, Ill., July 15.—A newfangled class collaboration scheme by which Matthew Woll, reactionary vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, and several other labor skates sought to creep a bit closer to the bosom of the bosses met with a tragic end here when the employers sprung the trap a bit too soon and forced the labor officials to claim "immunity."

The Illinois Association For Criminal Justice has issued a recommendation for the establishment of a state constabulary to fight labor.

Respectable Strikebreakers

The association is one of the numerous alleged reform organizations that put a respectable front on the legislative and judicial conspiracies of big business.

Part of the front is a window dressing of liberals and labor officials, behind whom the anti-union financiers and employers operate. In this case Vice-President Matthew Woll, President John H. Walker of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, President Agnes Nestor of the Women's Trade Union League and ex-President George W. Perkins of the cigarmakers international provided the labor screen on the board.

The association suddenly released to the press a strong recommendation for a state cossack system. At the same time it branded a number of Chicago labor men as sluggers, murderers, bombers, gunmen and extortionists. The survey committee of the association assumed responsibility for these astonishing actions and Woll is a member of that committee.

Sit With Open-Shoppers

Some of Chicago's most notorious open-shoppers, like Jim Patten of the Landis committee and Tom Donnelley of the scab printshops, sit on the board of the Illinois Association for Criminal Justice with Woll and Walker and the other fakers.

FASCIST TERROR SWEEPS SPAIN

Blame "Disturbances" For Arrests

BORDEAUX, France, July 15.—Arrests of thousands of workers, liberals and Catalan nationalists are being continued by the Spanish police as part of a wave of terrorism which they began following announcement by the authorities of a widespread attempt to overthrow the present regime, alleged to have been discovered by the government's secret agents.

Nation-wide arrests of workers are reported from cities as far apart as Saragossa, Madrid and Barcelona Scores of workers engaged in constructing the Theatre Royal near the royal palace in Madrid have been detained, while many trade union organizations have been raided and others are being watched by the police.

Absolute censorship of all newspapers has prevented a word of the government's actions from appearing in the news in Spain, but, in spite of official efforts to close the frontiers to information, reports of events are leaking through.

Passengers on international trains are being subjected to the most thorough-going search by the border guards at the French and Portuguese frontiers. Many have been closely questioned and an effort is being made to prevent all persons suspected of labor activities from entering the country.

Unconfirmed reports reaching here from travellers who are hastily leaving Spain allege considerable unrest in the interior. Especially from Barcelona there are reports of disturbances among the textile and harbor workers, and a number of Catalan nationalists are said to have been detained by the police.

New Bedford Strikers Stage Great All-Night Picket Demonstration

The most dramatic event of the New Bedford strike took place recently when a rumor that eight scabs had started the looms in the Kilburn mill brought out 18,000 strikers who continued to picket thruout the night. Pickets in fishermen's boats kept guard at the mill gates on the waterfront in this tremendous demonstration of the strikers' solidarity. Photo shows a group of pickets outside the Kilburn mill.

JUDGE REFUSES NEW TRIAL FOR STEVE MENDOLA

Upholds Frame-up of Militant Miner

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., July 15.—The reactionary Judge McLean has refused a new trial for Steve Mendola, one of the fighting Pittsburgh miners framed up by the Cappellini machine because of their struggle against the contractors' system which has led to the murder of several Pittsburgh miners.

This same judge has also sentenced Sam Bonita, a rank and file leader to six to 12 years. Judge McLean, in refusing to give a new trial to Mendola, was very much aroused over the fact that the jury did not bring the verdict of second degree murder.

Judge McLean is a coal operator and is acting in behalf of Cappellini and the Lewis Machine. He is also a colonel in the state militia of Pennsylvania and has done his bit during the world war in directing the slaughter of the workers. It is a well-known fact that in the regiment under his command during the world war forty soldiers were court-martialed for minor offenses and some of them sentenced to death.

Adam Moleski, the third victim of the frame-up, will probably come up for trial in the September term of the criminal court. He is now out on bail.

U. S. TROOPS IN HAWAII 'ILLEGAL'

HONOLULU, July 15. — The United States administration of Hawaii has recently found it necessary to "create and establish" a Hawaii National Guard. Although the guard was actually in existence since 1893, when Hawaii fell under the domination of U. S. imperialism it was discovered that the regiments never had a legal existence.

When first instituted the Guard consisted of but one company, but due to the necessity for "protection" it soon grew into five companies composed of men of thirty races.

The armed forces grew steadily until figures today shows an enlisted strength of 1,560 men and 101 commissioned officers. The Hawaiian National Guard has more men and officers than the guard of any other state or territory with an equal population, having one guardsman to every 157 persons.

By a new order of the War Department the forces are to be increased even more. They are to have a force of 3,068 men and officers.

Workers Lose Out In New Law

WASHINGTON, July 15 (FP).—Private insurance companies have a profitable monopoly of the business, and workers have to safeguard their own chance of compensation for accident, under the new workmen's compensation law in the District of Columbia, which became effective on July 1. The worker whose employer has violated the law by failing to take out insurance cannot collect if he is injured. It is small satisfaction to him to know that his boss may be fined or jailed.

CONVENTION CALL FOR A NEW TEXTILE UNION

The following is the official call for a convention of textile workers organiations and mill committees for the formation of a national industrial union of all textile workers. Due to its tremendous importance since it affects the workers in one of the country's major industries, the call is presented in full. Albert Weisbord, national secretary of the Textile Mills Committee, signs the document.

"To All Textile Workers' Organizations, Textile Workers' Mill Committees, Tetile Workers Clubs and Associations, Textile Unions.

"Greetings:

"The textile industry is in the throes of reorganization. Intense speeding up, mass unemployment, longer-hours, and wage cuts are the order of the day. Not satisfied with their tremendous profits, the textile manufacturers are doing everything possible to squeeze the workers harder than ever before.

"At the present time the textile employers are planning a new drive. The drive has formally begun against the cotton workers in New England and over one hundred thousand workers have already received a ten per cent wage cut.

New Bedford Struggle.

"But just as the Passaic workers in 1926 did not take a cut lying down, but under our leadership put up a great and memorable struggle, so today, again under our leadership, the textile workers are in battle against this new ten per cent wage cut.

"In New Bedford, Massachusetts, now for over three months, 28,000 textile workers have been on strike against the ten per cent wage cut, for better conditions, and for the right to have their own union. Mass picket lines have closed the mills down tight in spite of the terror of the police and the militia which had been called in, and in spite of the treachery of the bureaucrats of the A. F. of L.

This brave fight in New Bedford shows that everywhere the textile workers are ready to move. In Fall River, Massachusetts, already the workers are mobilizing for struggle. Elsewhere too, the textile workers are demonstrating that the time is now amply ripe for struggle.

No Union.

What has prevented the textile workers from carrying on an active fight is the fact that there was no militant leadership and no union to lead them. Outside of a few tiny independent groups, the only union in the field is the small union of the American Federation of Labor, the United Textile Workers.

"The officials of this United Textile Workers are of the most reactionary character, with a long series of betrayals to their credit. They have done their utmost to divide the workers and to defeat them. After many years of existence the United Textile Workers stands a small handful of skilled workers, pitifully helpess to resist the attack of the bosses.

Must Build Textile Union.

"This situation means that especialy now, the textile workers must take things in their own hands and build a national textile union, that will be a real workers' union, organizing the over one million textile workers in this country and actually resisting the wage cuts and worsened conditions imposed by the employers. This is the immediate task at the present time, the building up of a national textile union that will mobilize the workers for effective struggles.

"To accomplish this end, the National Textile Mill Committees hereby calls all textile workers' organizations to a national convention to be held in New York City Saturday and Sunday, September 22nd and 23rd, 1928. The convention will be opened at 2 p. m. September 22nd at Irving Plaza, Irving Place and 15th St., New York City.

"All bona fide textile workers' organizations are urgently requested to elect two or more delegates to attend this convention.

"ALBERT WEISBORD.
"National Secretary,
"Textile Mill Committees."

HUNGER STRIKE IN SOFIA JAIL

SOFIA, July 15.—The prisoners in the central jail at Sofia who were punished by one month of hard labor for wearing red ribbons on May Day, are forced to suffer an additional 10 days of punishment. This was announced to them shortly before the term of their original punishment came to an end.

This additional punishment of hard labor, which has already resulted in the death of one, Nikola Iliew, and has led the political prisoners to declare a hunger strike as a protest against the terrorism of the wardens. All except M. T. Atanasoff, who is seriously ill, have already been on strike for ten days.

Palestine Apprentices Labor Without Wages

BEIROUT, Palestine, July 15.—The status of the youthful worker in Palestine today is far from what could be desired. About half of them work more than 8 hours a day Young apprentices must work for a long time, frequently without pay, in order to learn a trade. Past experience has shown that the privately owned trades are no fit places for learning a trade.

Recently the workingclass youth has succeeded in arranging an exhibition of the work of some of these young workers. Some fine specimens of work were shown.

"DAILY" WANTS PHOTOS

Workers Are Asked to Send in Pictures

Workingclass photographs are wanted by The DAILY WORKER. Workers who own cameras are asked to co-operate in improving their "Daily" by taking pictures of workingclass activities and sending them in. The summer season offers a particularly good opportunity for worker-photographers to develop their talents.

The type of photographs that are most desirable are those showing people in action, taken close up. Pictures of picket-lines, or working class demonstrations and of other vivid incidents of the class struggle are especially valuable. Glossy finish photographs are most suitable for reproduction. Every picture that is printed will carry the name of the worker who took it.

[illegible] Committee of the All-Union Communist Party Discusses Draft Progr

PREPARE GRAIN PURCHASE PLAN; URGE RESERVE

Present Collection Measures Temporary

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., July 15.—The Plenum of the Central Committee and the Enlarged Central Committee of the All-Union Communist Party continued its sessions here yesterday.

The agenda included questions before the Communist International, the Comintern program, the grain purchase policy and the general economic situation in the U. S. S. R., the organization of new state organizations for grain purchase and improved training for new specialists.

Approve Draft Program.

The Plenum accepted the information contained in the report and approved the essentials of the Com- cided to leave any alterations in the intern draft program. It was de- program to the World Congress.

The Plenum pointed out, in its decision concerning the grain purchase policy, that the low level of agriculture, especially of grain production, together with the swift development of Socialist industry carries with it the danger of a breach between the Socialist town and the petty bourgeois village.

In order to solve this problem, the production of individual, small and middle farms must be furthered along the lines laid down by Lenin in his co-operative plan. The necessity of extending the collective farms upon a modern technical basis was also pointed out.

After describing the conditions under which the recent grain purchase campaign was made, the decision points out that the Central Committee of the All-Union Communist Party has absolutely stated that the extraordinary measures employed in that campaign are only temporary and are not the organic result of the decision of the Fifteenth Party Congress to increase the offensive against the capitalist elements in the villages.

The Plenum also denounced the accusation that the NEP, New Economic Policy, is being abandoned and reiterates the policy of the Fifteenth Congress in maintaining the offensive against the kulaks. It declared that the NEP remains the basis of the proletarian state policy.

In the coming grain purchase campaign, it is indicated that the Party must systematically liquidate the errors in leadership which have been made.

The decision of the plenum condemns the recrudescence of former methods and declared itself in favor of elasticity in regulating trade, for a slight increase in grain prices and for a correct distribution of indus- systematic struggle against secret trial products in the country, for a distilleries and for the formation of a state grain reserve.

In conclusion the Plenum decision declares that support of the poor resulted in a considerable extension and middle peasants with seed corn of the land under seed and that this fact, together with the favorable harvest outlook, should ensure a normal tempo in the grain purchase campaign until the autumn.

Flight of Mexican Aviator, Carranza, Ends In Catastrophe

On the first leg of his journey from New York to Mexico City, Capt. Emilio Carranza, Mexican flyer, met death when his plane was hit by lightning in New Jersey. The Carranza flight was an exchange of courtesy in recognition of Lindbergh's trip, as part of the general program of the Mexican government of furthering American imperialist ambitions. Photo shows Carranza's plane being fueled just before he hopped off.

Fascists Take Diploma from Labor Lawyer

GENEVA, July 15.—Because Bruno Casinelli, who was not even sympathetic to the Communists, defended the 16 workers at the trial before the Special Tribunal in Rome on June 22, his diploma as a lawyer has been taken away from him.

The sentence of the court, which sent five of the defendants to serve terms of 21 years of hard labor each and the others to two to nine years of hard labor each, concludes with the following sentence:

"The Special Tribunal examined the conclusion of the lawyer Bruno Cassinelli, who 'requested the exclusion of Paragraph 3, Article 1, as in his opinion the continuity and the accumulation of a number of penal defenses from the same action is absurd.' The Special Tribunal considers this conclusion in the form in which it has been expressed as insulting to the dignity and the reputation of the court, orders that the objectionable expression be erased from the court records and decides to hand the matter over to the royal commission of the Lawyers' Chamber for such disciplinary action as the case demands."

Appeal Issued to Aid Chinese Trade Unions

An appeal to devote the last 2 weeks of July to meetings in aid of Chinese trade unions is issued by the Trade Union Educational League. The league states that the weekly wage of the best paid Chinese building worker is only $3 while common labor gets $1 to $1.50 a week, usually working 11 to 12 hours a day. Child labor is universal. Labor laws are unheard of. Both native and foreign imperialists are torturing and executing active labor men and women.

The American agitation is to be part of a world-wide labor protest.

scattered throughout the United States. The Woolworth chain extends to England where it employs girls at about $5.80 a week to pile up part of its enormous profits. Last year's profits of $35,350,473 represented a return of more than 1000% on the original investment of the owners.

Room rent absorbed more than half of Josephine's earnings. In fact after paying for the room and a morning cup of tea she had less than $2.70 a week left for food, clothing, carfare and the other necessaries of life. And her workplace is surrounded by gorgeous hotels, restaurants and shops purveying the most costly luxuries to the rich. The Daily Herald comments:

"Presumably Woolworth's will not miss her very much. There are so many other girls available. But is this firm, which is owned and controlled by an American millionaire, proud of the payment it made to Josephine?"

Worker's Widow Lauds U. R. S. R.

The tribute to Russia is from the pen of Mrs. James Morton, widow of an English worker who accepted Lady Astor's offer to pay the traveling expenses of any worker who would go to live in Russia. Mrs. Morton writes that she is receiving a pension from the Soviet Union of about $58 a month and continues:

"When you stop to think of what would have happened if we had remained in England during Jim's long illness, then I think I am fortunate in spite of all our misfortune. By this time in England we would all have been in the poorhouse. I can never tell you how kind they have been to us all the time during his illness. We had the best physicians, professors, hospital treatment and nurses. Nothing was spared to make it better for him and for the rest of us as well."

Holds Up Store As Manager Refuses Food

MILWAUKEE, July 15—A man in dirty overalls and minus a shave for many days realized that cash is necessary to live in the "land of the free," and that those unable to find work are "free" to starve.

Going into the Atlantic and Pacific store at 21 Wells street, a typical looking victim of American "prosperity" asked for something to eat. He was reminded that food is for sale, not to give away. The man left, but returned the following day and again asked for food The refusal was repeated more energetically than before. Finding pleas of no value, the man drew a revolver and forced the manager O. S. Wallace, into a corner, and then took $24 from the cash register

NANTICOKE, Pa., July 15.—Reports have been circulated that Local Union 900 of the Bliss colliery of the Glen Alden Coal Co., where a progressive leader won out in election against the reactionary officials headed by board member, John Kmetz, are protesting the recent elections because Joe Christian a well known fighting progressive, was elected as secretary of Local Union 900.

The reactionary officials are trying to discriminate against Christion because they claim that he attended the National Save the Union Conference held recently in Pittsburgh. This is only an excuse, it is known, because Christian was put up and defeated John Kmetz, the reactionary board member who is part of the Cappellini machine and who is president of Local 900.

opening the eyes of the mill workers to the need of a real national union that will try to organize the industry and its more than one million workers, it is pointed out.

Very few thousands of the 1,100,000 textile workers are organized at all, investigation shows. Even the organized workers are being led by a set of bureaucrats who act as the mill barons' effiicency aides, experiences of mill workers thruout the country reveals.

Reports from all over New England show that this is the opportune moment for the launching of a new union in the industry. The hundreds of new members obtained each week by the Fall River unit of the T. M. C. shows that the workers there are prepared to enter a struggle to win back the wage cut recently enforced by the bosses and the officialdom of the reactionary independent union there, the American Federation of Textile Operatives

Mill Committees Popular.

Not only has the firmly intrenched prestige of the T. M. C. in the New Bedford strike been one of the major causes for the growing popularity of the mill committees, but the very form of the organization has captured the imagination of the masses of mill workers. The idea of an industrial union that sets as its task the organization of the entire industry and not only the comparatively few skilled workers, is one of the chief factors explaining its rapid growth everywhere.

The official call, sent out to all the enumerated bodies of textile workers, is printed in full in another column of this issue.

Credentials sent along with the call are to be filled out and sent in to the Textile Mill Committee national offices here. The credentials officially state that its subject is a delegate to a convention whose purpose is the building of a new national union of textile workers.

EW DRAFT PROGRAM OF THE COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL

VI. The Strategy and Tactics of the Communist International. (The Road to the Dictatorship of the Proletariat.)

OCUMENT ANALYZES VARIOUS OUNTER REVOLUTIONARY FORCES OPERATING IN LABOR MOVEMENT

mphasizes the Need of Struggle Against Imperialist War

eaffirms That Communism Can Be Achieved Only By Revolution

The Programme Commission of the Executive Committee of the ommunist International is publishing a DRAFT PROGRAM.

The Commission thinks it its duty to declare that while the text f this draft is of course based on the same fundamental principles s those upon which the draft programme provisionally passed by he Fifth Congress of the Communist International was based, never- heless, it differs very considerably from that draft. The Program ommission felt that in view of the great changes that have taken lace in many important spheres of international life and particularly n the revolutionary movement since the Fifth Congress, it could ot confine itself to making merely editorial changes in the original raft. A change has taken place in the form of the general crisis of apitalism; a change has taken place in the relationships between arious groups of powers. Great events have taken place, like the reat revolution in China, which once again emphasized the signifi- ance of the agrarian-peasant question. Great progress has been ade in building up socialism in the Union of Socialist Soviet Re- ublics. The struggle between the aggressive capitalist world and he Union of Socialist Soviet Republics is becoming acute. Fascism growing and becoming transformed into the terrorist dictatorship f big capital. Social democracy has degenerated into Chauvinist mperialism. The lessons that have been learned by the Communist nternational in the fight against opposition tendencies and finally he growth of Communism, the fact that the movement has really ecome internationalized, the new tasks that confront the Communist nternational as a single organization—all this has inevitably made necessary considerably to alter and enlarge the former draft.

The general tendency of the changes that have been made is wards more concreteness and greater emphasis upon THE INTER- ATIONAL aspects both in the theoretical section as well as in the ctions dealing immediately with the struggles of the Communist arties.

Acting on the decision of the Executive Committee of the Com- unist International, the Programme Commission, in publishing this raft program, calls upon all comrades to express their opinion and riticism of it in articles, remarks and concrete suggestions. The ork done on the program has revealed how difficult it is to embrace a single document all the problems of the present-day world Com- unist movement. The question of the program will be one of the ntral questions at the Sixth Congress. It is essential that sufficient aterial be collected by the time the discussion of the question takes ace at the Congress. The Commission therefore invites all comrades join in the fruitful discussion of the program.

THE PROGRAMME COMMISSION OF THE
EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE
COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL

ommunism is a revolutionary ency in the labor movement and only representative of revolu- ary Marxism-Leninism; as such opposed to all other tenden- within the labor movement.

narchism, whose most prom- t representatives (Kropotkin, Grave, Kornelissen and others) cherously deserted to the side he imperialist bourgeoisie dur- the war of 1914-18, repudiates necessity for broad, centralized disciplined proletarian organiza- and by that leaves the prole- t helpless in the face of the rful organizations of capital. dvocating individual terror it ts the proletariat from meth- of mass organization and mass gle. By repudiating the dic- ship of the proletariat for the of abstract "liberty," an- ism deprives the proletariat of most important and sharpest on against the bourgeoisie— st its armies and against all rgans of repression. It is re- from any kind of mass move- in the important centers of the tarian struggle and is there- tending to become a sect, which, s tactics and its attitude, in- g its hostility to the dictator- of the working class in the U. R., is objectively joining the d front of the anti-revolution- forces.

As a re- whenever it has any influence ders the masses from becom- volutionary. Its attacks on J. S. S. R., which spring from pudiation of proletarian dicta- ip, place it in this respect in e category as the social dem-nstructive socialism" (Mac- d & Co.) continues the liberal- thropic, anti-revolutionary and ois traditions of Fabianism Webbs, Bernard Shaw and oth- nd repudiates on principle the rship of the proletariat and methods" generally. It for "capturing power" parliament and declares the truggle to be a "pre-scien- oncept. "Constructive social- ocates a moderate program nalization with compensa- zation of land values, death nd the super-tax as means abolition of capitalism. It y hostile to the dictatorship of the proletariat in the U. S. S. R., and, therefore, in complete alliance with the bourgeoisie, is an active enemy of the proletarian Communist movement and of colonial revolutions.

So-called guild socialism (Penty Orage, Hobson, Cole) starts out with the demand for the abolition of the "wage system" as an "immoral" institution. The majority of the guild socialists are strong opponents of revolution. While ignoring the extremely important question of power, the majority of guild socialists strive to combine the workers on the basis of federated trade "guilds" and to convert this organization by peaceful means into an organization for the control and management of industry within the framework of the bourgeois state. Notwithstanding the imperialist nature of the bourgeois state, in their scheme, it occupies a place above classes as the representative of the interests of the "consumer." By simultaneously repudiating parliamentarian and direct action guild socialism reduces the working class to complete inaction and passvity. Thus, it represents a peculiar form of trade unionist, utopian, opportunism and as such cannot but play an anti-revolutionary role.

The British Fabians (Mr. and Mrs. Webb, Bernard Shaw and others) base their "socialism" on liberal philanthropic grounds. They are deliberately hostile to revolution and on principle are advocates of gradualness.

All these tendencies agree with social democracy—the principal enemy of proletarian revolution—on the fundamental question of policy—the question of the dictatorship of the proletariat. Hence, all of them more or less definitely fall in line with social democracy in their attacks upon the U. S. S. R. On the other hand, having utterly and completely betrayed Marxism, social democracy is coming more and more to rely upon the ideology of the Fabians and constructive and guild socialists. These tendencies are becoming converted to the official, liberal, reformist ideology of the bourgeois "socialism" of the Second International.

In the labor movement in colonial countries Communism encounters the influence of peculiar tendencies which, in certain phases of development, played a useful role, but which in the new stage of development are becoming a conservative force.

Sun Yat-Senism, as the ideology of petty bourgeois socialism, played a very great positive role in the first stage of the Chinese revolution. As a result of the class differentiation that has taken place in the country and the further development of the Chinese revolution, and because of its obscuring of the class struggle and its "democratic" and "above class" interpretation of socialism, Sun Yat-Senism has become transformed into a conservative force which retards the development of the revolution.

Tendencies like Ghandhism in India which are thoroughly saturated with religious notions, advocate passivity, repudiate the class struggle and in the process of development of the revolution is becoming transformed into an openly reactionary force, must be resolutely combated by Communism.

Communism differs from all these tendencies, and particularly from social democracy, in that, in complete harmony with the doctrines of Marx and Engels, it carries on a theoretical and practical struggle for the dictatorship of the proletariat.

The success of the struggle of the Communist International for the dictatorship of the proletariat presupposes the existence in every country of a compact, disciplined, centralized, Communist Party, hardened in the struggle and having close contacts with the masses.

The party is the vanguard of the working class and consists of the best, most class-conscious, active and courageous members of the working class. It is the embodiment of the combined experience of the whole proletarian struggle. Based on the revolutionary theory of Marxism and representing the general and lasting interests of the working class as a whole, the party personifies the unity of proletarian principles, of proletarian will and of proletarian revolutionary action. It is a revolutionary party, bound by iron discipline and a strict revolutionary system of democratic centralism, this is achieved as a result of the class-consciousness of the proletarian vanguard, its loyalty to the revolution, its ability to maintain inseparable contact with the masses of the proletariat and of correct political leadership, which is tested and clarified by the experience of the masses themselves.

Before it can fulfil the historical task of establishing the dictatorship of the proletariat, the Communist Party must first of all set itself and carry out the following strategical aims:

Spread its influence over the majority of the members of its own class, including working women and young workers; spread its influence over wide circles of the masses of the toilers generally (urban and rural poor, the lower strata of the intelligentsia and the so-called "small men," i. e., the petty bourgeois strata) and in this way establish the political hegemony of the proletariat, guided by the Communist Party. It must discredit, expose and destroy the political influence of social democracy and of the yellow trade union bureaucracy, who are the most reliable bulwark of capitalism. It must spread its influence over the broad mass proletarian organizations (trade unions, co-operative societies, factory councils, etc.).

Of special importance is the work —which must be carried on day in and day out, with the view to capturing the trade unions, which are the broadest mass proletarian organizations. Work must be carried on with ability even in the reactionary trade unions with the view to capturing them, and to secure a "change in the reformist leadership," for this, too, is one of the most important tasks of the preparatory period.

Of enormous significance also is the winning over of the broad strata of the poorest peasants and the neutralization of the middle strata of the peasantry. In the preparation of the class forces for the decisive clash, the fight between the proletariat and the bourgeoisie for the broad strata of the peasantry occupies an extremely important place. For that reason to work among the peasantry, to win over its most prominent (proletarian and semi-proletarian) strata as well as the small allotment holders and small peasants, to subordinate these to the political and intellectual hegemony of the proletariat and in this way convert the proletariat into the guardian of the interests of the whole people and the leader of the broad masses of the people in their struggle against the oppression of finance capital—is a necessary prerequisite for victorious Communist tactics on the road to power.

In determining its tactical line, the party must take into account the concrete internal and external situation, the relation of class forces, the degree of strength of capitalism, the degree of preparation of the proletariat, the attitude of the intermediary classes, etc. The party formulates its slogans and determines its methods of work in accordance with circumstances. In the growing revolutionary situation the party must advance transitional slogans and partial demands as determined by the concrete circumstances, but it must subordinate these demands and slogans to its revolutionary aim of seizing power and overthrowing bourgeois capitalist society. Isolation from the every-day needs and the every-day struggles of the working class and restricting the activities of the party to these every-day needs and struggles are alike impermissible. The task of the party is—starting out from these needs, to lead the working class into the revolutionary struggle for power.

When the revolutionary tide is flowing, when the dominant classes are disorganized, the masses are in a state of revolutionary ferment, the intermediary strata are inclining towards the proletariat and the masses are prepared for action and for sacrifice, the task of the party of the proletariat is to lead the masses into the direct attack upon the bourgeois state. This is to be achieved by propaganda in favor of all transitional slogans (Soviets, workers' control of industry, the slogan of peasant committees for the seizure of the landlords' land, etc.), and the organization of mass actions, to which all other branches of party work, agitation and propaganda, including parliamentary work, must be subordinated. This includes strikes, strikes combined with demonstrations, the combination of armed demonstrations and strikes and finally the general strike conjointly with the armed uprising against the political power of the bourgeoisie. This struggle must be subjected to the rules of military art; it must be conducted according to a plan of war and in the form of a military offensive. It calls for the devoted loyalty and heroism of the proletariat. Such actions must be preceded by the organization of the broad masses in military units, which, by their very form attract and set into action the maximum number of toilers (councils of workers' and peasants' deputies, soldiers' councils, etc.), and by intensified work in the army and the navy.

In fulfilling these tasks and in taking up new and more acute slogans, the party must be guided by the fundamental rule of the political tactics of Leninism which calls for the ability to lead the masses to the revolutionary positions in such a manner that the masses may be convinced by their own experience of the correctness of the Party's line.

Failure to observe this rule will inevitably result in the party becoming isolated from the masses, in putschism and the ideological degeneration of Communism into doctrinaire "Leftism" and petty bourgeois "ultra-Left" adventurism, adventurism, which must be combated no less strenuously than the right social democratic deviations in the Communist movement.

If the revolutionary tide is not flowing, the Communist Party, in accordance with the every-day needs of the toilers, must advance partial slogans and demands, develop them and link them up with the fundamental tasks of the Communist International. Refusal to advance partial demands and transitional slogans is incompatible with the tactical principles of Communism, for this dooms the party to inactivity and cuts it off from the masses. In this connection the tactics of the united front represent an important part of the tactics of the Communist Party throughout the pre-revolutionary period.

These partial demands and slogans include:

In the sphere of the labor problem in the narrow sense of the word,—the economic struggle (resistance to the offensive of trustified capital; wages; the working day; compulsory arbitration courts; unemployment) growing into problems of the general political struggle (big industrial conflicts; rights to strike; the political rights of the trade unions).

Then follow questions of an immediate political character (taxes; high cost of living; fascism; persecution of revolutionary parties, white terror; the policy of the government in power, etc.).

Finally, these problems must be linked up with problems of world politics: attitude towards the U. S. S. R.; Chinese revolution; fight for the unity of the international trade union movement; resistance to imperialism; combating the danger of war and systematic preparation for combating imperialist war.

The partial questions in the sphere of the peasant problem are questions connected with taxation policy, indebtedness of the peasants through mortgages, combating usurer capital, the provision of land to poor peasants, questions of rent and the metayer system, etc., etc. Starting out from these partial needs, the Communist Party must accentuate the various slogans and generalize them into the slogan for the confiscation of the land of the big landowners, the slogan of the workers' and peasants' government, etc.

It is equally necessary to carry on systematic work among the proletarian and peasant youth and among the working women and peasant women. This work must start out from the special conditions of their life and labor, and their demands must be linked up with the general demands and fighting slogans of the proletariat.

In the colonies and semi-colonies where the working class plays a trial conflicts; right to strike; the where the bourgeoisie has already crossed over to the camp of the avowed counter-revolution, or is crossing over because of the development of the mass proletarian and peasant movements, the Communist Party must steer a course for the hegemony of the proletariat, and for the dictatorship of the proletariat and peasantry, which will ultimately grow into the dictatorship of the working class. In such countries, the Communist Party must concentrate their efforts mainly upon creating broad mass proletarian organizations (trade unions) and revolutionary peasant unions, and upon drawing up demands and slogans directly affecting the working class. It must propagate the idea of the independence of the proletariat as a class which on principle is hostile to the bourgeoisie, a hostility which is not removed by the possibility of temporary agreements with it. It must imbue the masses with and develop among them the idea of the hegemony of the working class; advance and at the proper moment apply the slogan of Soviets of Workers' and Peasants' Deputies.

On the basis of the community of interest between the proletarian revolution and the struggle against imperialism in the colonies, the sections of the Communist International must be guided by the following postulates:

The Communist parties in the imperialist countries must render systematic aid to the revolutionary movements for liberation in the colonies. The obligation to render the most active support rests principally upon the workers in those countries upon which the oppressed nations are colonially or financially dependent (campaigns for the withdrawal of imperialist troops from the colonies; propaganda among the troops in favor of the oppressed countries fighting for their liberation, refusal to transport troops or war material; strike and other forms of mass protest). Propaganda must be carried on for the recognition of the right of colonies to separation and for such separation, i. e. to carry on propaganda for the independence of colonies from the imperialist states. Propaganda must be carried on for the recognition of the right of colonies to take up arms in defense against imperialism (i. e. the right to rebellion and revolutionary war), and propaganda must be carried on for active support to this defense by all possible means.

In the Colonial and Semi-Colonial Countries the Communist Parties must conduct a bold and consistent struggle against foreign imperialism and unfailingly carry on propaganda in favor of friendship and alliance with the proletariat in the imperialist countries. They must advance, carry on propaganda for and supply the slogan of agrarian revolution, rouse the broad masses of the peasantry to the fight for the overthrow of the oppression of the landlords and lead the struggle against the reactionary and medieval influences of the priests, missionaries and similar elements. At the same time, the workers and the peasants must be organized in independent organizations and liberated from the influence of the national bourgeoisie. Temporary agreements with the latter may be made only insofar as they will not hamper the revolutionary organization of the workers and peasants and are genuinely fighting against imperialism.

While organizing revolution against imperialism under the banner of proletarian dictatorship in so-called "civilized states," the Communist International supports every movement against imperialist violence, not only in the colonies but also in formally independent countries (for example in Latin America). It conducts propaganda against all forms of chauvinism and imperialist ill-treatment of great and small and enslaved races (attitude towards Negroes, "yellow labor," etc.) and supports the latter's struggle against the bourgeoisie in the oppressing nation. The Communist International conducts a particularly strenuous struggle against chauvinism in the imperialist countries having national minorities, a chauvinism which is preached both by the imperialist bourgeoisie as well as by its social democratic agency, the Second International. It contrasts the conduct of the imperialist bourgeoisie with the conduct of the Soviet Union, which has created fraternal relationships between various nationalities.

The Communist International must devote special attention to systematic preparation for the struggle against the danger of imperialist war. The Communist Parties must ruthlessly expose social chauvinism, social imperialism and pacifist phrasemongering, which serve to screen the imperialist plans of the bourgeoisie. They must carry on propaganda in favor of the principal slogans of the Communist International, and carry on every-day organizational work in this direction, unfailingly combining legal and illegal methods of work. The following should be the principal slogans of the Communist International: Convert the imperialist war into civil war; defeat of the "home" imperialist government; defense of the U. S. S. R. and colonial countries in the event of an imperialist war against them by all possible means. To carry on propaganda in favor of these slogans, to expose "socialist" sophisms and the "socialistic" screening of the League of Nations, and to constantly recall the experience of the war of 1914 is the unfailing duty of all the sections and of every member of the Communist International.

In order that revolutionary work and action may be properly led and coordinated the international proletariat must maintain international class discipline which must be preserved above all in the ranks of the Communist Party. This international Communist discipline must be expressed in the subordination of the partial and local interests of the movement to its general and lasting interests and the unfailing execution of all the decisions of the leading organs of the Communist International.

Unlike the social democratic parties affiliated to the second international which accept the discipline of "their own" national bourgeoisie and their "fatherland," the sections of the Communist International recognize only one discipline—international proletarian discipline, which guarantees victory in the struggle of the workers of all countries for world proletarian dictatorship.

Communists do not think it necessary to conceal their views and intentions. They openly declare that their goal can be achieved only by the violent overthrow of the whole of the present social system.

Let the dominant classes tremble before the Communist Revolution! The proletariat has nothing to lose but its chains! It has the whole world to gain! Workers of all countries unite!

PRISON TERROR IN BULGARIA

Militant Editor Put In Jail

SOFIA, July 15.—The situation in the Bulgarian prisons grows worse every day.

The unfortunate ones who have been put in chains in the central prison of Sofia, because they decorated their button-holes with red ribbon on the first of May, are in a lamentable situation.

One of them, Nicolas Ilief, is dead. Another, Theodore Petkof, had to be transferred to the hospital.

The journalist, Draganof, editor-in-chief of "Novini" has been put in chains because he placed two red roses on the walls of his cell. The journalist, D. Andonof, mistreated by the wardens, is now on a hunger strike.

The food is abominable. The situation in other prisons is still worse.

HORTHY FASCISTS SERVE AS SCABS

VIENNA, July 15. — Organized strikebreaking is part of the reactionary tactics of Hungarian fascists, according to the Committee Against the White Terror in the Balkans.

In Budapest during a recent wood workers' strike for higher wages, organized fascist bands served as scabs, and conducted provocative street demonstrations against the strikers, the committee asserts. Although all public demonstrations are strictly forbidden by the reactionary Horthy government, the fascists were supported by the police when, unprovoked, they attacked and severely beat strikers in the streets. Later the victimized laborites were prosecuted for "rioting," and their assailants were allowed to appear as witnesses against them.

BOSTON, (FP).—Employers here have given in to demands of 1,600 union bricklayers for a 10-cent advance to $1.50.

Increase Australian Lumber Mens' Hours

MELBOURNE, July 15.—At a largely-attended meeting of members of the Victorian Branch of the Australian Timber Workers' Union held at Melbourne, it was stated that serious industrial trouble was threatening owing to Judge Lukin in the Federal Arbitration Court, interpreting the Timber Workers' Award as meaning to provide a 48-hour working week in the industry.

Various speakers pointed out that members of the Union had been working a 44-hour week since 1921 when the original award was made. In some mills the employees had been informed they must work 48 hours weekly, and there was a grave danger that this would lead to a stoppage of work.

HELD FOR WHITE-SLAVERY.

CHICAGO, Ill., July 15.—Walter Cherry, alias Charles Brown, 29 who declares he is a Baltimore tailor was under arrest here today on white-slavery charges preferred by one of the three women he brought to Chicago for alleged immoral purposes.

Radical Periodicals Wanted for Research By Lenin Institute

The Lenin Institute in Moscow having for one of its tasks the research into the history of the radical labor movement in America, is collecting the literature of the Communist, Socialist and I. W. W. labor movements issued during the last imperialist world war, as well as after the organization of the Communist International and further up to date.

All comrades possessing complete sets of newspapers, magazines, and other periodicals as well as books pamphlets and leaflets relating to the above period are requested to get in touch with Dr. M. Mislig 37-43 West 93rd St.

26 NOW DEAD OF POISONED MILK

4 More Die in Lee of Disease; 200 Ill

LEE, Mass., July 15.—Four more were added yesterday to the list of those who have died here from septic sore throat poisoning, brought on by a poisoned milk supply. This brings the total number of deaths here since the epidemic started to 26. Among those who died today was George Palmer, 16, one of the few young persons who has been a victim of the disease. Most of those who have been fatally stricken have been over 60 years of age.

Health authorities today estimated that the number of cases still existent was 200. Altogether there have been approximately 700 cases since the epidemic started two weeks ago.

The city board of health met today and decided upon a two week's quarantine for all those still suffering from the disease. Other quarantine measures were still in effect

English Power Trust To Dominate Country

LONDON, July 15.—A program for tremendous trustification of electric supplying power is being planned for Great Britain and Ireland. The plan intends to harness all available water power, demolish unnecessary plants, and concentrate the whole industry into a circle of 100 power producing plants.

This state-owned industry is expected to bring in tremendous profits and save millions for the British government.

HUNGER STRIKE IN POLISH JAIL

Political Prisoners In Protest

WARSAW, July 15.—Since June 16th the political prisoners detained at the jail of Low have been on a hunger strike to protest against the new rules of the prison administration, which aggravate the already unbearable conditions.

The protestants make the following demands:

1.—Hastening of their trial.
2.—Papers every day.
3.—A bath once a week.
4.—A walk of two hours every day. (At present they are permitted a half hour.)
5.—Proper blankets. (Without vermin.)

The demands of the political prisoners bear witness to the lot that hundreds of political prisoners in Poland must suffer.

CHILDREN MUST BOW TO FASCISM

GENEVA, July 15.—According to dispatches from Rovigo, Italy, the school board has ordered the children to wear the sign of fascism, the lictor bundles, on the breast or on the arm. Children of the primary schools have already for some time had to wear the black shirt, and at the beginning and the end of sessions were forced to pledge allegiance to Mussolini.

A demonstration in Roviga, participated in by the school children and their parents, protested the new order but with the result that Piola, a worker, was arrested and deported for three years.

Political Prisoners In Rumanian Hell-Holes

GENEVA, July 15.—From Jilava, Rumania, come new reports of the unbearable position of political prisoners. Boris Stefanov is held in solitary confinement.

All prisoners are kept in underground single cells and are only allowed one hour in the open air. They can hold no communications with the outside. Every request is forbidden. All newspapers are denied them. The lawyer of Stefanov could only come to Jilava after he had protested strongly to the cabinet.

"Socialist" Denies He Provoked Reading Knitters' Strike, Mill Correspondent Say

HANdOuTS

Bob Minor, editor of The DAILY WORKER was dragged from the top of an automobile and slugged by half dozen Tammany cops. This was because he wasn't selling five pairs of socks for a dollar, demonstrating a bamboo fountain pen or boosting Al Smith for president.

"No! No!" She Cries

The pretty girl shown above is none other than Mrs. Leah Cobb Marion whose slender fingers weave about the money bags of the Women's Christian Temperance Union. She has helped spread the belief that the reason the millionaire is rich is because he is industrious, and the reason the worker is poor is because he stops once in a while for a drink of beer. As a matter of fact, the average American millionaire can consume more liquor in a year than a locomotive can water. How can a worker get rich if a thief enters his room every night and takes everything he has? This is what the capitalist does, only he robs the worker before he pays him. The prohibition issue is drummed up in the capitalist press to keep workers' minds off the main issue: they produce everything and have nothing.

They Spend For Us

This is a view of a large gathering of cripples at the Belmont race track. They are society folk, crippled in the brain. Their minds work like a one lung motor that hasn't been used for fifty years. You don't have to be very smart to say, "Mother, dear, are you sure Dandelion will win?" and then throw away $50 of money stolen from workers in a fixed race on a horse you don't know ever ran all way around a race track. What society people exercise is not their brains. Its what they eat with and sit on. When a worker wonders why he works so long and gets so little he should look at this picture and remember that this is only part of the crowd he has to support. Where society folks look best is where they have to think least, for instance, dealing out sugar wafers at a tea party. In any organized society they would be dealing out fertilizer in the farming sections.

MASS PICKETING NOT ALLOWED BY PRESENT LEADER

Refuse to Call Out All Non-Equl Men

(By a Worker Correspondent)

READING, Pa., (By Mail).—A strike of twenty full-fashioned knitters is taking place in the plant of the Non-Equl Textile Mills, Inc. here.

It is significant that Earl White of the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers, disclaims responsibility for "provoking" the walkout. This is very likely correct, since his organization has failed to organize any appreciable number of the many full-fashioned knitters employed in Reading plants to say nothing of the other hosiery workers, such as seamless knitters loopers, toppers, etc. The latter classifications of workers are wholly unorganized and there are thousands of them in Reading and vicinity, most of whom are young workers. Nothing is said about calling out and organizing the Non-Equl workers other than full-fashioned knitters.

"Socialists" Betray.

Furthermore, Earl White, in common with the Reading "socialist" trade union officialdom and reactionary misleaders of labor generally, is opposed to struggle with the bosses, advocating instead boss-worker cooperation and appealing to employers to favor unionism as a step profitable to themselves. It is very unlikely, in view of these facts that he would like to "embarrass" the employers by initiating a strike However, when unorganized knitters "walk out" spontaneously in protest against the two-machine system, White's union is quick to take charge—in order to control the strike, limit its extent and prevent "rough stuff" which the "socialist" mayor, J. Henry Stump, in the case of a recent carpenters' strike, said he would not tolerate.

Must Be Militant.

Reading workers may be sure that in conformity with the policies of the present strike leadership, the workers in the Non-Equl plant other than full-fashioned knitters, will not be called out on strike nor will they be invited to join the knitters' union. All day mass picketing will not be had. Unless militant policies are put into effect, and it is certain that White and his fellow class-collaborationist "leaders" will not adopt them, the strike of the twenty knitters will surely result in a crushing defeat. Non-Equl and other hosiery workers as well, if they hope to win their fight, must put forward their own rank and file leadership, organize all the workers in the plant solidly, allow no one to remain in the shops to scab and to make the strike effective by all day mass picketing. —A KNITTER.

WOLL, HOOVER STAGE POWOW

WASHINGTON, July 15 (FP).—Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor and acting president of the National Civic Federation, called on the republican presidential nominee just before Hoover started West. Woll is known as the member of the executive council of the A. F. of L. who is nearest to sympathy with Hoover. He is supposed to have carried a message from William Green.

W. N. Doak, legislative representative of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, and a close friend of Bascom Slemp, former secretary to Coolidge, and non-union coal operator, has likewise had a talk with the G. O. P. nominee. Doak is looked up as Hoover's adviser on "labor" strategy.

RED AID SCORES GREEK FASCISM

BERLIN, July 15.—The Red Aid of Germany has sent the following telegram on the situation in Greece to the embassy in Berlin:

"In the name of 500,000 members we protest strongly against the murder and imprisonment of striking workers by the Greek government. We demand a general strike and condemn in the sharpest manner the treatment of the masses by the police and courts.

"THE RED AID OF GERMANY."

Protest Treatment of Palestine Prisoners

BEIROUT, July 15.—Because of barbaric treatment of political prisoners and of the decision by the government that ten of these political prisoners be deported from the country, numerous mass meetings were held all over the country where protest resolutions were adopted against whipping of political prisoners. Palestine labor is determined to erase such outrages from Palestinian judicial and criminal procedure.

Huge Sums Spent for "Amateur" Sports Meet

The Olympic sports meet, which will be held in Amsterdam this year, will involve the expenditure of thousands of dollars, all in the name of "amateur" sports. Hundreds of athletes, who are professionals in everything but name, from every European country except the Soviet Union, will vie for honors at this huge sports spectacle. Photo shows a group of American athletes just before sailing for Europe.

WORKERS SCORE FASCIST TERROR

N. Y. Police Break Up Demonstration

Police Saturday broke up a demonstration of 300 workers before the Italian Consulate, 20 E. 22nd St., who protested against the fascist terror and demanded the release of all class-war prisoners in Italy. The demonstrated was arranged by the New York Section of the International Labor Defense, 799 Broadway.

Gathering in front of the consulate shortly after 1 o'clock, the workers marched up and down holding high their placards. Some of the slogans read: "Wall St. Supports Fascism—Fascism Murders Workers—Fight Fascism"; "We Demand Freedom for 6,000 Workers in Fascist Jails"; "Mussolini, Mass Murderer!" "Down with Fascism! Long Live Workers' Solidarity!" "We Demand the Right of Legalized Existence for All Political Parties"; and "To Fight Fascism in America Join the International Labor Defense."

Police Threaten Workers.

The demonstration had been in progress for about 10 minutes when a policeman appeared on the scene and began threatening the workers. He took Leon Litwin, who was leading the demonstration, out of line and tried to disperse the others. Finding that the workers were not intimidated by his threats and abuse, the policeman went into the consulate and phoned for reserves. A sergeant, five patrolmen and five detectives soon arrived on the scene and began tearing up and confiscating the placards. Workers were pushed around and threatened, but the majority, defying the police, continued to walk in front of the consulate.

While the demonstration was in progress, Rose Baron, secretary of the New York Section of the International Labor Defense, and Joseph Magliacano, one of the demonstrators, went up into the consulate, and in the absence of Consul General Grazzi, delivered to one of his attaches a letter voicing the protest of the workers of America against the fascist terror and demanding that this protest be forwarded to Mussolini.

45-Minute Demonstration

The demonstration lasted for about 45 minutes, the police continuing to threaten and manhandle workers. Having accomplished all that they could, the demonstrators finally dispersed.

One of the policemen turned to the attache of the Italian consulate. "Are you satisfied?" he asked. The attache smiled contentedly.

SPORTS COLUMN FOR THE 'DAILY'

Will Start Tomorrow; to Appear Daily

Tomorrow the new sports department of The DAILY WORKER begins. It will be published daily thereafter. By means of a special international news service it will be possible to print the latest news of both labor and capitalist sports in every part of the world, including the Soviet Union.

This new department is being started in response to many requests from workers in various parts of the country. It is only one of the many news features that are contemplated in the bigger and better DAILY WORKER. Labor sports, which are still in their infancy in this country, will of course be given as much space as possible. For this the cooperation of all labor sports organizations is necessary. Organizations located in New York or vicinity should phone in the results of games as soon as they are over. Communications telling of sports activities are welcome and should be addressed to the Sports Editor, DAILY WORKER, 26-28 Union Square.

Tell your friends and shop-mates of this new department. Sports fans have now no reason to read the capitalist press which ignores labor sports entirely. Keep in touch with the world of sports by reading The DAILY WORKER every day.

Circus Performer Hurt, Not Expected to Live

CHICAGO, July 15 (UP).—Two of her front teeth pulled out as Mrs. Bessie B. Gunn, circus performer, swung high above a crowd at a circus here, and Mrs. Gunn plunged to the ground. She is not expected to live.

Mrs. Gunn, advertised by the Robinson Circus as "the woman with the iron jaw," was spinning her body as she swung above the crowd clinging solely by her teeth.

Two teeth suddenly loosened and broke off and she plunged to the ground. At the St. Joseph's Hospital in Elgin it was found she suffered four fractures of the spine, her right arm fractured and four ribs broken.

CARPENTERS IN PENNSYLVANIA GET 90 CENTS

Corrupt Officials Are Ruining Union

(By a Worker Correspondent)

CHESTER, Pa., (By Mail).—The carpenters of Delaware and Montgomery counties are entering a stage nearing a crisis.

According to a report rendered by the secretary-treasurer of Delaware county, conditions are reaching a stage which will be worse than 1881.

Fake Unionists.

The business agent reports the loss of a very prominent contractor Five jobs have been called and one of the jobs is already manned by non-union men. He went to the contractor and tried to persuade him to hire union men but he refused to have anything to do with them as he could get all the men he wanted at 90c to $1.00 per hour The present rate in this district is $1.25 per hour.

The jobs were called after several men were fired and disclosed the fact that the union men had been scabbing for some time, working at 90 cents an hour.

My God! where are we drifting to? We can't trust our own men.

The officials charge the men as being responsible for the conditions here. If they would only stick out and not work.

The men say the officials have played favorites and have sat still and have not tried to keep the union contractor in line.

Must Picket.

A single picket was placed on the job in Sharon Hill and was paid $35.00 for his services. The picket reports that there is no use to stay any longer as he came very near being arrested. No one has talked of a mass picket as no one seems to think enough of the job.

Several of these jobs are public school jobs and the business agent thinks the same ruling should apply to "boroughs as applies to cities," for example—contracts of this kind should be and must be awarded to union men at the prevailing rate of wage. —S.

Swedish Paper Men Demand Cut

STOCKHOLM, July 15. — The cellulose and paper industry employers have denounced the wage agreement and demanded a reduction of the maximum wages, which will affect about 3,000 of the 12,000 workers of the industry. It was found impossible to reach an agreement, the employers, therefore, proclaimed a lockout, which came into operation on January 2 and was later extended to the saw-mills and further into the paper industry, so that it now comprises about 12,000 members of the Saw-mill-Workers' Union and some 27,000 members of the Paper Industry Workers' Union. Besides wage cuts, the employers are trying to make changes for the worse in the general conditions, such as the holiday pay, medical attendance, overtime allowances, payment of repairs and the right of the Union to safeguard the interests of workers under age and older workers.

Australia Miners to Fight Wage Reduction

SYDNEY, July 15.—Aggregate meetings of mining employees were held at various centres throughout the Newcastle and Maitland coal fields on Sunday to protest against wage reductions and alterations in working conditions proposed by the mine owners.

Various speakers pointed out that a reduction in wages or any increase in working hours would not remedy the present slackness in the industry. The demand for coal had eased because of the increasing use of oil as fuel, mass production of electricity, and the development of coal resources in other countries Even if the miners worked for nothing there would be no greater demand for coal.

Musicians Raise Million Dollar Fund to Fight Foes' Attacks

ONE of the foremost and most strongly organized unions, the American Federation of Musicians, has decided to raise no less than a million dollars for a defense fund.

The defense fund will be raised by assessment which was voted at the union's recent convention at Louisville. The amount may even run over $1,000,000 and perhaps reach $1,500,000.

According to an interview with Joseph A. Weber, president of the federation, the fund will be set aside and used only to "fight any attempts of employers to lower the present standard of wages or working conditions."

Also, it applies only to the members of the union who are employed in theatres, since it is from the big theatre chains that the only real danger of an onslaught on union conditions exists. The theatre musicians, who form about one-sixth of the federation's membership, will pay the assessment of 2 per cent of their wages, the other members not being assessed. Similarly, the fund is to be used only in theatre strikes or lockouts.

The defense fund was voted upon and approved unanimously at the convention. A circular letter, sent out to the membership of some 15,000, explained the purpose of the defense fund and reads as follows:

"The theatrical field is now controlled to the tune of at least 80 per cent by corporations, and such control grows by leaps and bounds, so that it can be easily seen that same will soon reach 100 per cent. Several of these corporations now control hundreds of theatres in as many cities. A corporation is in a position to stage an indefinite fight or prolonged controversy with a local or several of them, accepting the loss caused as a matter of course, having same carried by all the other numerous theatres under its control.

Union Must Be Prepared

"Local or locals involved in such a prolonged controversy is or are not in such a favorable position, and as there is the possibility that the Federation may be forced to involve additional locals, the danger always exists that many hundreds of thousands of members may be called on strike. Therefore, it is imperative that the federation find itself able to pay indefinite strike benefits and to assume the same position as does the corporation by simply considering the strike benefits paid as a loss borne by the local unions.

"In connection with this matter, I call your attention to the fact that the open shop organizations appear to be paying particular attention to the musicians and stage hands. They advise our employers that we are arbitrary organizations and invite them to cut loose from our domination and despotism and are ready to assist theatrical managers financially or otherwise without stint if these managers will prolong a controversy with either our locals or those of the stage hands to such extent as to practically destroy the further value of same to their members."

Miner's Wife Goes On Hunger Strike

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

POTTSVILLE, Pa., July 15.—Mrs. Chas. Burilla, wife of one of the three miners entombed in the Lyttle colliery at Lyttle near Pottsville, has gone on a hunger strike and has not eaten since the accident occurred. The rescue workers have about 400 tons of debris to clear away before it is possible to reach the miners who have been under the pile of rock and coal. Hope has been abandoned for them. A second fall of rock and coal has prevented finding the unfortunate miners who are the victims of the greed of the coal operators.

KELLOGG STAGES "PEACE" FARCE

Peru, Chile Dictators Lend Hand

WASHINGTON, July 15 (FP).—Press photographers took flashlight pictures of Secretary Kellogg, seated between the Peruvian and Chilean ambassadors, in the state department reception room, July 13, after Kellogg made public the formal letters whereby they announced that their governments had decided to resume diplomatic relations with each other. Chile and Peru have had no direct diplomatic relations in the past 17 years.

Back of this stage-setting is the fact that the Peruvian dictator Leguia, and the Chilean dictator Ibanez, began informal discussions through their diplomats at the Havana conference last January When these talks had reached the point where it was clear that they would resume formal relations Kellogg came in with a formal letter to both, urging them to make up their quarrel. And as each dictator wanted to reduce the interest rate on his future borrowings in Wall Street, and as Kellogg wanted to slip out of his bad position as arbitrator in their Tacna-Arica boundary dispute, they decided to let him play peace-maker

One consequence of this stage-play is that Chile will be able to suppress the report on the Chileans' violent interference with his proposed plebiscite in Tacna-Arica Chile remains in possession of that region.

Officials Betray Workers.

According to latest reports, the ikers are showing fine spirit and confident that their power will rce the bosses to grant their de- ands. Active rank and file mem rs of the union, however, are dis- tisfied with the actions of the of- ials of the union. It is pointed t that union officials, in nego- ating with the employers, gave up e demands for increases in wages ereby placing the union in a de- nsive position. The employers took vantage of this and imposed a ge-cut on the workers.

The militants among the rank and e are preparing to organize the ogressive workers with the pur- se of preventing further compro- ise of their demands.

FREED WORKERS WELCOMED AT DEMONSTRATION

Hundreds Gather at Union Square

A demonstration in which hundreds of workers braved the rain late yesterday afternoon was held at Union Square to welcome the four workers released from the Tombs and the Workhouse, where they had served a sentence of five days for participation in an anti-imperial demonstration in front of the office of J. P. Morgan on July 3.

Robert Minor, editor of The DAILY WORKER and Workers (Communist) candidate for U. S. Senator, and Robert Wolf, novelist and poet, were freed from the Tombs; Rebecca Grecht, New York state campaign manager of the Workers Party, and Harriet Silverman, secretary of the local branch of the Anti-Imperialist League, which arranged both the July 3 demonstration and yesterday's meeting, were released from the Workhouse.

Speakers at the meeting included Minor, Grecht, Shachtman, editor of "The Labor Defender"; D. Benjamin, asistant director of the Workers School, and Arthur Stein of the Young Workers League and Jessie Taft of the Young Pioneers.

The speakers denounced the brutal attack on the demonstration and called for continued agitation against the imperialistic aggression of American capitalists.

"Jail sentences do not frighten us Communists," Minor declared. "That is what we expect as long as we continue our fight on the ruling class of the United States and in the interests of the workers.

"We were not thrown into the Tombs because we violated any so-called statute. Beside us in the street a minister speaking on a subject which did not menace the ruling class was, of course, unmolested.

"But such acts of intimidation and terrorism will not prevent the Communists from bringing their message to the working class. It will only heighten our agitation and spur us to greater activity."

MINERS JEER AT STRIKE COWARDS

PITTSBURGH, July 15 (FP).—Avella barracks were in uproar as operators' agents came for two deserting miners. Dish pans, pots and tin pails were banged with spoons in derision; the children cried out scornfully, "You're scabbing on our dads!" All the women were shouting at the same time in half a dozen languages.

Company agents are combing the mining towns, spreading defeatism and looking for men to return to the open-shop mines. Exorbitant wages are promised to strikers who will betray their brothers. Moonshine is dispensed liberally until the victim becomes maudlin. As a "good American citizen and a decent father," it is his duty to scab against his fellow workers, he is told. As soon as a "yes" is drilled out of him, a company truck calls at the barracks and carries his family to the scab patch.

DEMOCRAT P. O. GRAFT REVEALED

WASHINGTON, July 15 (UP).—Postmaster General New told the Brookhart senate committee yesterday that democrats through the national committee, solicited campaign contributions from postmasters when the democrats were in power.

He submitted a file of letters sent out by W. D. Jameson, director of finance of the democratic national committee from 1917 to 1920, asking contributions of postmasters throughout the country.

1,000,000 English Children Are 'Unfit'

LONDON, July 15.—There are over 1,000,000 "unfit" children in the schools of Great Birtain, says a recent deport. Half a million of these children are dull and backward and the other half need medical attention. Poverty and bad housing conditions have much to do with malnutrition, the report says.

ARCTIC VETERANS ON SOVIET ICE-BREAKERS

TAXI INSPECTORS IN NEW RACKET

Drivers Complain of Lost Cards

Charges that hack inspectors, acting under orders from the Hack License Bureau, were stealing criminal identification cards from taxicabs as drivers were inside of restaurants, attending to other business, have been made during the past two weeks by taxi drivers and officials of taxi associations.

Hugo Werber, business manager of the Broad Street Taxi Owners Association, has been quoted as saying that "thousands of taxi drivers have had their cards taken in this way."

Inspectors have had orders, it was learned, from Commissioner Ruttenberg, in charge of the hack bureau, to pick up cards in cabs that are left vacant. According to hack regulations, cards must be displayed conspicuously in the driver's cab.

Garages Raided

The Tammany hack inspectors, drivers state, are not satisfied with picking up these identification cards on the streets. These inspectors are known to go to garages and pick up cards left in the cabs by their owners.

Drivers going to work in the morning, on examining their cabs, are known to have found their card missing. The driver then must report the loss to his precinct station house. Here he is usually told that his card is on the way downtown. If the driver lives in the far end of the Bronx or Queens, this means a trip down to the hack license bureau on Grenwich St. By the time he arrives there half his day is usually gone. There he must stand in line and wait his chance to inquire from one of the clerks about the card. The chances are ten to one, drivers report, that the mailman has not delivered the mail with his card and he is then told to come back the next day.

Wilful Delay

Hundreds of drivers complain that hack inspectors have held up their cards two and three days before mailing them downtown. One driver, who had left his cab in front of an office building on Park Row, had his card picked up. He had merely gone into the building to wash his hands. When he came out he noticed that his card was missing. A private chauffeur told him that a hack inspector had "lifted" the card. The taxi driver went to the Ook St. police station, where he was told by the captain in charge to go to the hack license bureau. It took this driver three days to get his credentials back. This case is typical.

Hack inspectors who take cards in this way are guilty of larceny and are liable to civil or criminal prosecution. Many taxi drivers, it is said, have paid graft to inspectors for the return of their cards.

Same Story

Another driver stated that his card had been taken from his cab while he was inside a coffee pot on Seventh Ave., Harlem, and declared that it was "just another scheme to mulct graft from us drivers. If a meter seal should break on my clock, and they break quite often, it costs me just one 'buck.' But to get my card back is more expensive. If I only had a 'pound' ($5) I could get my card back from that louse (pointing to an inspector walking in the next block) in thirty minutes. It's just a case of graft, graft, graft."

Television Progresses

The practicability of television was demonstrated Wednesday at the Bell Telephone Co. laboratories. The television camera, attached to a radio, showed clear pictures of a man playing tennis on the roof for the sake of the experiment.

It was proven that the sun was sufficient to "paint" the vision on the lense. Formerly powerful electric lights were used for this. The camera will be able to operate on hazy days, but clouds that shut off sunlight weaken the camera's vision.

Experimenters stated that the television camera is yet in its experimental stage since only experts are able to operate it, especially as attached with the radio.

CO. RENEWS AGREEMENT.

WOODLAND, Me., (FP) July 15.—The St. Croix Paper Co. has renewed its union agreement effective to May 1, 1929.

In order to effectively organize the rescue expedition for Nobile and his companions the Soviet government appointed a special commission. Each of the two ice-breakers, the "Krassin," the most powerful in the world, and the "Malygin" included in their parties scientists and aviators with long experience in Artic exploration. Professor Samoilovich, the leader of the "Krassin" party, is director of the Institute of the North and has made extensive researches in the region of Spitzbergen. Aviators Chukhnovsky and Babushkin are considered among the foremost of Soviet aviators, having made many notable flights in the Arctic regions.

Veteran Explorer.

Professor Wise, the chief explorer of the "Malygin," spent considerable time in making a reconnoissance of the regions of Novaya Zembla and Franz Joseph Land with the Saydov expedition in 1912 and 1914. The foggy weather which so greatly hampered the work of rescue was predicted in the reports of Professor Multanovsky, director of the meteorological section of the Central Geophysical Laboratory, on the basis of observations made by Nansen in 1893-96, by the Saydov expedition and by others. According to these studies, as many as 25 foggy days have been observed during the month of June in this region.

Powerful Ice Cutter.

The "Krassin," which is of 10,000 indicated horse power, is commanded by Captain Egge who is assisted by four special sub-commanders from other steamers added to the party on account of their wide experience in the Arctic regions. The "Krassin" left Leningrad for Kings Bay on June 15. It is capable of cutting through ice from 3 to 4 meters in thickness. The "Krassin" radio works on wave lengths of 450, 600 and 800 meters The short wave station operates on a length of from 30 to 40 meters.

The ice-breaker "Malygin," commanded by Capt. Chertkov, was completely overhauled last winter at Since 1923 it has been used each Hamburg and is perfectly equipped. summer to accompany the commercial fleet carrying freight from the mouth of the Yenisei River in Siberia through the Kara Sea to european ports. It carries coal sufficient for twenty days cruising in the open sea. When used in the ice, however, with only one boiler working in order to furnish light and heat, the supply of fuel is sufficient for 80 days.

The expedition is organized under the direction of J. Unschlicht, assistant commissar of war, with the cooperation of the All-Union Society for Aviation and Chemistry. M. Groza, chairman of the rescue committee, stated that the ice-breakers and aeroplanes of the Soviet expedition carried supplies sufficient for three months.

The following radio message was sent yesterday to the Soviet ice-breaker Krassin by M. G. Gurevitch, vice-chairman of the board of directors of the Amtorg Trading Corporation, and other Soviet citizens in the United States:

To crew, aviator Chukhnovsky and his assistants, Prof. Samoilovich and captain icebreaker Krassin:

Soviet citizens in the United States hail the skill and courage which have made possible the rescuing of the marooned Italia explorers. Public opinion is deeply moved by the supreme heroism of your aviators and crew. Your act is another illustration of the spirit of sympathy and self-sacrifice which manifests itself in times of great human need and reveals the strong bonds of international good will underlying the stress and strain of everyday life.

English Police Protect Mussolini in Liverpool

LONDON, July 15.—Many protests by various workers organizations against the terror justice in Italy are taking place all over England, under the auspices of the International Red Aid. In many parts of the country such demonstrations take place regularly. In Liverpool, for example, in the week of June 23, there was on the average of three mass meetings per night in various parts of the city.

The workers of Liverpool, at a huge mass meeting in the largest square of the city, was to demonstrate the fascist terror by a tableau. The British Police forbid the showing at the last minute.

GIRL WORKERS IN CIGAR FACTORIES EARN $12 A WEEK

Woorkers Face Loss of Hands in Machines

PHILADELPHIA (FP).—Listening to discussion of Pres. Coolidge's latest prosperity talk, a girl cigarmaker termed it all humbug, at least to cigar factory workers.

She works for Bobrow Bros., Inc. 220 S. Fifth St., with several hundred other employes, mostly girls They work on a piece rate basis 95c a thousand. At the rate of 3 to 4 thousand cigars a day, they earn $15 to $20 a week, if there are no deductions for bad cigars. The deductions sometimes runs as high as 900 out of 3,600 cigars a day.

When cigars are bad the whole crew of 4 working on a machine suffer deductions; thus 900 bad cigars cause a cut in pay on 3,600 It makes no difference whether the part of work handled by the first or last girl on the machine is bad, the cigars are finished, broken up and the work not paid for.

Face Loss of Hands.

Operators can't repair machinery out of order when work starts going, because there is danger of getting hands caught in the machine and losing a finger or worse. The onl yway to set things straight is to stop the machine, but it must be kept running.

When a girl wants to go to a washroom she can't leave the machine until an extra girl on the floor comes to take her place. Sometimes she must wait as long as 45 minutes.

Poor Ventilation.

If one of a crew isn't well and fails to come in for the day, the other 3 girls lose that day's work The same happens when one gets injured on faints during the day Fainting is common, caused by lack of ventilation. Open windows would cause the tobacco to dry, so all windows are kept shut and hundreds of employes forced to work in rank tobacco odors. Many modern cigar factories have good ventilation systems—but greed keeps the others from making improvements.

Working 49 hours a week under such conditions, girls make $12—and if lucky as high as $20 a week This accounts for the high labor turnover which makes it necessary for cigar factories to hire new workers every day—even in this period of unemployment.

3 CHICAGO SEWER WORKERS DEAD

CHICAGO, July 15.—The bodies of three workers were removed this afternoon from the district sewers along 125th St. here, where rescue workers had labored for 12 hours in an attempt to save their fellow workers. The workers, more than 30 of them, engaged in construction work in the sewer, were placed in danger when an official order, announced without regard for the lives of the workers trapped in the sewer pipes, that the entire sewer system be flooded.

After the bodies had been recovered from the pipes, the officials of the construction company announced that the water had been turned on by "mistake."

One of the bodies was identified as that of Carl Chiaro, hero of the disaster, who had seven times gone down into the tunnel, diving into the swirling water at the risk of his life, each time bringing up a comrade. He failed to return after his eighth attempt. The other two bodies were those of Negro workers who have not yet been identified.

During the rescue work, Edward M. Lamie, another worker, was electrocuted while repairing a cable of 20,000 voltage that had been broken by the sewer flood.

The company tried to keep the disaster secret at first, but after the arrest of one of the officials, they admitted that their negligence had caused the deaths.

CLOAK CHAIRMEN PLAN BIG DRIVE

Despite a torrential downpour of rain that continued from the time the workers quit their shops and lasted far into the evening, hundreds of cloakmakers came to the first monthly shop delegates conference yesterday, called by the local committee of the National Organization Committee and occupied every available seat in Webster Hall, 11th St. and Third Ave.

The meeting of workers' representatives enthusiastically discussed and carried thru a series of measures that will further the fight for the reestablishment of union conditions in the ladies' garment making industry.

Hyman Discusses Situation.

After the meeting was opened by J. Cohen, chairman, Louis Hyman leader of the National Organization Committee, gave a brief survey of the present status of the cloakmakers in the struggle with the bosses and Sigman.

He ridiculed the new blare of trumpets with which the right wing was heralding a second fake organization drive.

A report by the committee secretary on the work of the Organization Committee of 500, which was organized since the original shop delegates' conference, was then delivered.

Plan for Future Work.

The meeting then adopted a plan for future work, the six major points of which are:

1.—Shop chairmen must join the work undertaken by bringing in complaints to the Joint Board and by reporting information about the open shops in the trade.

2.—An intensive campaign is to be launched to bring workers into the organization with the payment of a fee of $3.30.

3.—The organization campaign shall begin with a mass meeting, in the Bronx Stadium, which has a seating capacity of between 15,000 and 18,000.

The union workers were brought to Scranton with the promise they would have long-time jobs there. Now they are considering sending a group to Stroudsburg to see if the fleeing boss can't be forced by organization work among the new employes, to sign up with the union.

8,000 PORTERS DEMAND STRIKE

Over 8,000 members of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters are due to strike shortly unless the officials of the organization, working together with President Green of the American Federation of Labor, again forestall the move as they did several weeks ago.

Secret strike directions are said to have been issued in concealed envelopes, it became known yesterday. According to A. Philip Randolph, general organizer of the union, who was instrumental in calling off the previous order for a walkout, these envelopes are not to be opened until orders are received from a two-man strike committee composed of Randolph and M. P. Webster, division organizer of Chicago.

WORKERS PARTY ELECTION MEET AT BISCUIT PLANT

For the first time the Election Campaign Committee of Section 2 of the Workers (Communist) Party conducted an open-air noonday meeting at 15th Street and Tenth Avenue, alongside the four huge plants of the National Biscuit Company yesterday.

The workers of the Nabisco plants, usually idle during their lunch hour, gathered around Bert Miller and listened attentively to his talk on the Workers (Communist) Party and what it means to workers. Besides speaking on the election campaign, Miller emphasized the fact that the poor conditions in the Nabisco factories were due to lack of organization among the workers, and urged his eager listeners to organize into a union.

Despite the spy system used by the Nabisco bosses, the workers listening to the speaker evinced great interest, interjecting occasional words of approval. Copies of "The Coolidge Program" and "The Workers (Communist) Party And What It Stands For" were distributed.

Green's No-Strike Philosophy

When social parasites and labor betrayers, as the case may be, find it necessary to continue nefarious practices against the masses whose "god-appointed" leaders they claim to be, their common recourse is to invent a philosophy to justify their treachery.

William Green, writing in the current issue of the American Federationist, affords another such horrible example.

The day when labor had to resort to the use of the strike is past, says this voluble sounding-board of the bosses. At the moment when United Mine Workers of America, of which he is himself a member, has been practically destroyed through his own and John L. Lewis' treachery in sabotaging the only method by which the organizaton could have been saved, a really vigorous prosecution of the strike and the calling out of both the anthracite and the unorganized fields, this union-wrecker has the affrontery to declare himself against strikes. Says he:

> "In the early union days the main argument of the union was one of force—the strike. Force was necessary to establish the fundamental right of status. Employers would heed no other argument."

But now, according to this flunky of the open-shop coal operators, it's all different. Because:

> "Fundamental changes have taken place in industry. . . . Instead of relying wholly on refusal to work, unions must be ready to point out mistakes in policy or method by argument and facts to convince management, and then outline a substitute policy."

The justification for the early use of the strike, we are told, was the necessity of fighting the legal status of the trade union.

Nothing can more clearly illustrate the utter hypocrisy and contemptible sophistry of these words than the fact that in its report to the last convention of the American Federation of Labor, the executive council was forced to admit that organized labor has not yet attained legal status in the United States. What is the whole pretended fight against the "yellow dog" contract which the labor officials have time and again declared is a threat to the legal existence of organized labor, if not a denial of the so-called legal status of the trade unon? And how will that status, if ever under capitalist government, be attained if not by the strike?

The full meaning of Green's proposals becomes clear when we read his further suggestions in connection with certain developments which have recently taken place in Colorado. "Unions must be ready to point out mistakes in policy to convince management and to outline a substitute policy for the strike."

When the Rocky Mountain Fuel Company, which, after years of struggle against even the bankrupt A. F. of L. officials, became convinced, through the costly Colorado strike of last year, that it would be more profitable to to utilize the labor fakers than its own company union, and when it made arrangements to prevent real unionization by the device of conspiring with labor fakers to put through a fake "unionization" of its mines, it gave as its reasons for the change in policy:

> "To prevent another strike, to insure constant and sufficient supply of coal at reasonable prices . . . to stabilize production costs . . . in short to protect . . . business and labor from a recurrence of this past year's lost and waste . . ."

Green confirms this understanding. "It is an advantage to employ miners who belong to the union," he says, "for the union could prevent the recurrence of most strikes from which Colorado has suffered."

It is necessary only to add that the company unions, which Green is seeking to put over, will not succeed any more than the company unions organized by the bosses themselves, in the effort to prevent the workers from utilizing the only weapon which directly or indirectly is responsible for whatever gains they may secure under capitalism.

Was there ever a more disgusting sight than this traitor Green, as he expounds to the working class his now open philosophy of treason?

That New York Fare

The silence which is hanging heavily over the developments now taking place in the seven cent fare issue and in the so-called rapid transit unification plan is undoubtedly part of the generally agreed upon plan among the politicians and traction companies to let the matter rest until after the November elections. This can only mean that the traction ring which operates within both old parties is quite sure of its ground, otherwise there would now be a continuation of the public clamor and wailing on the part of the poverty-stricken Morgan and Chase National Bank interests that they are unable to make ends meet on the lowly nickel.

The announcement by Samuel Untermeyer that he has practically reached an agreement with the B.-M. T. group under which the company will consent to recapture by the city, a trifling arrangement which will involve several hundred millions of dollars, received only casual mention in the capitalist press. The Interborough recently ordered a supply of 7c fare tokens which were manufactured by a New England concern. It is known that the surface lines are preparing to follow the example of the Third Avenue subsidiary by making application for fare increases. But all is still among the servants of the public.

Within a few months an issue involving the virtual turning over of the new city built subways, the estimated construction cost of which is a billion dollars, will be decided by Tammany Hall and republican city and state officials who own traction stock, represent the transit companies as attorneys, and have entered into secret agreements to put over the greatest steal in the country, with the possible exception of the power grab.

Here is an issue which is burning and immediate, one on which approach may be made to hitherto untouched masses of workers. No political speech in the present campaign, no propaganda which is sent out should fail to emphasize this question.

BOSTON, Mass., July 15.—Two right wing emissaries from the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, sent here by Sigman as "supervisors" of the elections in the Boston locals, presided over the meeting of the election committee here Friday and rejected all candidates for office who refused to sign the right wing yellow dog contract, which stipulates "that the undersigned is not a Communist nor a Communist follower or sympathizer."

Four Members Signed

Even one of the right wing members of the election committee which was elected at membership meetings of Locals 46 and 56 declared that he would reject any one that does sign the document.

As a result of this action the reactionary clique in control of the International found that but four members were willing to sign and run for the Local 46 executive board and that only two signed the yellow dog document as candidates to the Joint Board from that local. Only one man could be gotten to run for the Joint Board from Local 56.

A joint meeting of the Boston local executive boards with the Joint Board was held here July 10 to hear the instructions handed them by the Sigman supervision committee, Halpern and Gingold.

Several right wing members pleaded with "Little Czar" Sigman's ambassadors to give permission to abandon the yellow dog contract, but to no avail. They finally approved the action of the Sigman clique despite express instructions to the contrary from the membership.

At the membership meetings of these locals, held recently, even some right wing followers had declared that no organization work could be done as long as the left wing was not allowed to participate in the union leadership.

Election Laws in United States

Framed By Capitalists to Keep Working Class Parties Off the Ballot

By JULIUS CODKIND.

The United States of America is perhaps the only country in the world where the elections are governed under a law which makes it possible for the ruling class to so confuse the technical qualifications to be overcome by new or small parties seeking a place on the ballot as from the very outset to practically prohibit all effective opposition in any election campaign to the two "old" parties dominated by Wall Street.

Only in America is it possible for a regular presidential candidate of a political party to run or to be on the ballot only in spots. For example, the Workers (Communist) Party candidates will surely not be on the ballot in a large number of the forty-eight states. Of equal interest is the fact that under the law of some states, a candidate for president may be on the ballot in spots in those states. A party seeking to place its candidates officially in nomination on the ballot is confronted with the problem of solving forty-eight separate and distinct sets of laws.

Congressional Election.

To understand this, a few words of explanation are necessary.

In theory, the country is supposed to be a federation of sovereign states. The Federal Constitution provides that the power of each state in the Central Government shall be relative to the percentage of population as a whole. Thus each state elects a given percentage of the total number of congressmen but this is modified by a section of the constitution which provides that there shall be a senate consisting of two senators from each state. The constitution also provides that each state shall elect as many electors as it has congressmen plus senators, and that the day of election of congressmen and senators must be the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November.

The president is not elected by direct vote. Under the constitution, he is chosen by the electors. The direct object therefore of the old parties is not to gain a maximum number of voters throughout the country but to win a maximum number of the electors, and under the constitution it is possible for a candidate for the presidency who has secured the greatest total of direct votes to be defeated in the electoral college. Thus in 1916 it was at first reported that Wilson had been defeated for re-election, although his vote proved to be 600,000 greater than that of his opponent. Later reports from California, however showed that Wilson had won the state by a plurality of about 3,800 which gave him the entire electoral votes of the state and with it a small majority in the electoral college.

A few illustrations will make this process even clearer. Taking the elections in 1916 as an example, we find that in California there were 466,200 votes for Wilson and 462,394 for Hughes. This gave Wilson the entire 13 electoral votes of the state. In New York the vote for Wilson was 759,426 and for Hughes 869,115. Hughes got the entire 45 electoral votes of the state.

In Minnesota, Hughes received 179,544 while Wilson got 179,152 Although Hughes had only 392 more than Wilson, he received the entire 12 electoral votes of the state. It is also interesting to note that actually, Hughes received 27,910 votes less than his three leading opponents combined in this state.

These are not exceptional occurrences. The constitution has deliberately provided for just this. The result is that in states where the democratic or republican party is preponderant there are practically no presidential election campaigns at all, both parties confining themselves largely to such states as New York, Missouri, New Jersey, Oklahoma, Ohio, Maryland, California and Massachusetts, where the control swings from one party to the other. These states, with a few others, known as the doubtful states decide the issue of the presidency Presidential candidates as a general rule are politicians whose home states must be New York, Ohio Massachusetts or California as the issue of "Favorite Son" is often quite enough to swing enough votes to carry one of these states.

It is already clear from all this that the makers of the constitution had in mind the objective of retaining within their own hands the entire political power and all the patronage going with it, in their respective home states.

As noted, the constitution provides that each state shall elect its electors, congressmen and other officials in its own way, with the result that in every state there is a different set of laws governing the elections. Of far greater consequence is the fact that under the constitution each state prescribes its own conditions as to the procedure to be followed by parties or independent groups who seek to place their candidates on the ballot or officially in nomination.

It is worthy of note that as a general rule the states in which the republican and democratic parties conflict most, impose the most severe restrictions against new or weaker parties seeking a place on the ballot for their candidates while those states which are safely republican or democratic have little or no legislation on the question, and in several instances nominations are legally made by state conventions of any group or party. This procedure is not actually statute law. It is merely a mode legalized by custom

The obvious reason for the severe restrictions against new or weaker parties imposed by law in the doubtful states is the fact that through this means the politicians of the two dominant parties protect themselves against the rise of minority groups capable of wielding a balance of power and thus dominating the political situation within the state.

New York furnishes an excellent illustration of this condition. The restrictions against the nomination of candidates by new or weaker parties for state-wide office are most severe. From "new" parties the law requires a minimum of 12,000 signatures on petitions, including at least 50 from each of the sixty-one counties in the state, but a new party seeking to place a candidate for the state assembly in nomination in every assembly district in the state would require no less than 120,000 signatures or five per cent of the total vote. Provided the numerous technicalities of the law are correctly complied with this number of signatures, if none are invalidated by the officials would be sufficient to place in nomination a candidate for every elective office within the state from presidential electors, governor and United States senator down to dog-catcher.

It is obvious that the laws were framed generally with the object of excluding minority, and, of course working class parties from the elections, by making it very costly and difficult for independent, new or weak parties to place candidates officially in nomination, and this automatically entails the greatest sacrifices on the part of working class parties seeking to enter the field It happens very often that tremendous efforts, together with heavy financial sacrifices, are made by workers to place candidates in nomination, only to meet with failure either because they have failed to comply with some technicality or because they were unable to gather sufficient signatures within the time allotted, and very often failure may be traced to the mere caprice of some petty official.

Militant Mine Family Blacklisted Since 1919

By VERA BUCH.

BLACKLISTED since 1919. Unable to work in the mines for nine years because of unusual militancy in the 1919 strike. And just as active now, one of the best of the best fighters among all the militant miners. This is the record of Thomas Ray of McDonald, Pa.

But on Tom Ray's household, on his wife and seven children, the bosses' discrimination has fallen very heavily. They live in one of those black, tumble-down, mean looking houses which you sometimes see bordering the railroad tracks in little towns, and wonder when you see them, "Does anyone live in that?" In such a house lives or rather exists, Tom Ray's family.

You ask Mrs. Ray, "How have you managed to get along all these years?" She smiles quietly and sadly. "I don't know. We have one boy sixteen years old. He gets a job in a mill, sometimes."

It seems hard for her to talk, as though she never saw anyone, as though she had lived alone for a long time among worries and dreariness. Rarely does Mrs. Ray leave the house. She is ashamed to go out in her worn woolen dress, the only dress she has. These nine years have crushed Mrs. Ray, have drained her vitality. Yet she is still a young woman.

From all the corners of that dingy home, Tom Ray's bright active children peer at you with lively brown eyes. They are not crushed—they are eager to hear about the strike and the union. Tom Ray is bringing up seven young fighters to carry on the fight in the future. He has been in New York City raising money thru the National Miners' Relief Committee for the hungry strikers and he tells the eager children about the strikes he's heard about there.

JOHN J. RASKOB, chairman of the finance committee of the General Motors Corporation is now the chairman of the Democratic National Committee by unanimous vote. There is no doubt that Al Smith is one of the two darlings of big business. The House of Morgan is behind General Motors, so in case Al gets licked the House of Morgan will have Hoover. Heads, Wall Street wins; tails, the working class loses.

THE fiction prevailed for a long time among the workers that the G. O. P. was the party of big business and that the jackass party was the party of the working-class. Without doubt the G. O. The south was the virgin base of the democratic party but the exigencies of the great conflict opened up the south to industry. Now the pope-hating southern democrat and the pope-hating northern democrat can sit over the loving cup together and drink a toast to four years of looting under the auspices of the Tammany Tiger.

FISHER BODY WORKERS JOIN BIG WALK-OUT

Movement Spreads As Men Organize

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)
FLINT, Mich., July 16.—The Fisher Body plant of the General Motors Corporation in Flint, Mich., was seething with strike sentiment yesterday when five hundred more men joined the walk-out of auto workers in protest against the policy of wage slashing the company is instituting throughout the industry.

The striking men have proclaimed their intention of standing behind the strike committee, which is composed of representatives from the different departments, who are making every effort to spread the walk-out movement to other plants of the General Motors Corporation in Flint.

Plan Union

The shop committee of the Buick plant have already organized their strike committee, together with the organizers of the Auto Workers Union.

Philip Raymond, Arnold Zeigler and others, who are active in the strike, are organizing plans for raising immediate relief and to establish the Auto Workers Union as the instrument of the workers in the Flint automobile industries.

A huge mass meeting, to which it is expected that thousands of workers will rally, is being arranged and militant speakers will address the strikers.

TAXICABS RAIDED IN CONEY ISLAND

Tammany Police Keep Up Racket

Raids by the Tammany controlled police force against taxicab drivers have continued with special severity over the week end, it was learned yesterday from drivers who charged that the move is part of the plan to eliminate 20,000 drivers from the industry and to permit the large fleeters, such as the Yellow Taxicab Corporation, to dominate the industry.

Raids were especially vicious, it was learned, in Coney Island where scores of drivers were driven from the main thoroughfares such as Surf Avenue, Mermaid and Neptune Avenues.

Companies Get Protection.

The ground for thus preventing the drivers from making a living is usually that of "congestion of traffic" although it is pointed out by drivers that bus lines operated by large companies on friendly terms with the Tammany Hall city administration virtually crowd out all traffic from these streets.

These bus lines are the Luna Sightseeing, the Greeley Sightseeing, and the Knickerbocker Sightseeing Company all of which operate lines between Manhattan and Coney Island.

Violate Regulations.

Drivers charge that these companies constantly violate regulations with complete immunity and that there is an understanding among the police officers that their buses are not to be molested. A squad of fifty police, it was learned, were sent to Coney Island from headquarters to carry out the raids.

WOMAN'S LEGION AIDS SANDINO

Heroic in Battle, Says General

BARANQUILLA, Colombia, July 16 (UP).—General Sandino, Nicaraguan revolutionist leader, has organized a women's battalion to aid him in his struggle against the government and United States marines, General Jose Cesar Rivas said in an interview in the newspaper La Nacion today.

The women, General Rivas said, already had done "heroic service" in battle. They were quartered at Campo Bonanzo, he said.

Forty Colombians, including a general, are fighting with Sandino, General Rivas said, and these are referred to in the Sandino camp as the "Colombian Battalion."

SMITH FAVORS OPEN SHOPPER AS GOVERNOR

ALBANY, July 16.—The name of Owen D. Young, open-shop chairman of the General Electric Company, whom Al Smith has suggested for governor of New York State, on the democratic ticket, has been sent out as a trial balloon, it became known today. If the response appears favorable then the Morgan-allied, multi-millionaire will be placed on the Tammany ticket which is already being led by John J. Raskob, another Morgan official and biggest anti-labor boss in the country. Young's record is perhaps second only to that of Raskob as a bitter enemy of the workers.

Al's Master

Like Raskob, Young has been one of the strong supporters of Al Smith and Al Smith has in turn been a faithful and obedient servant to the power magnate. Smith has previously supported Young for the officer of state water power "dictator," under a plan which the Tammany governor advocated in 1926 by which the billion dollar power resources of the state would have been turned over to the private operation of the Morgans.

In December, 1926, through the sell-out of the republican controlled State Power Commission, these re-

MORE MARINES TO NICARAGUA

Anti-Imperialists Will Hold Protest Meet

MANAGUA, July 16.—Two fresh battalions of United States marines, 666 men, reached Nicaragua yesterday. The men, who were transported aboard the supply ship Meduas, arrived at the west coast port of Corinto.

One of the battalions proceeded immediately to Managua, where it is expected that the men will be used in the coming elections.

The arrival of these reinforcements raises the number of marines in Nicaragua to nearly 6,000.

A meeting to protest against American imperialism in the Caribbean area will be held at the Community Church, Park Ave. and 34th St., at 8 p. m. Friday, under the auspices of the New York branch of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League.

Among the speakers who will address the meeting are Robert Minor, Editor of The DAILY WORKER; Robert Dunn, Richard B. Harriet Silverman, secretary of the New York branch of the All-American Anti-Imperialist League, will be chairman of the meeting.

GRAFTERS GET MINOR SENTENCE

Tammany Higher-Ups Still at Large

Five minor Tammany officials convicted in Special Sessions of grafting were sentenced yesterday in one of the major developments of the Department of Street Cleaning graft investigations Eight men now have been jailed as a result of the inquiry and another is awaiting sentence.

Albert J. Courtney, thirty-eight, of No. 2331 Linden Avenue, Brooklyn, employed as a foreman, and Walter McClutchy, forty, of No. 299 Mount Eden Avenue, the Bronx, an assistant foreman, each received an indeterminate sentence of six months to three years in the penitentiary.

Workhouse sentences of three months each were imposed on the others. Those "higher up" are still free.

CLOAK PICKETS ARRESTED, FINED

Active Members Meet Thursday

Ten cloak and dress workers, among whom were several leaders of the Joint Board of the Cloak and Dressmakers' Union, were arrested yesterday morning during a picket demonstration before the struck dressmaking shop of Rosenberg and Hershkin, 39th St. and Seventh Ave. Fines of $5 and $10 each, mechanically imposed upon the pickets, workers declare, are an indication that Magistrate Farrel before whom they appeared is working with the employers.

OWN BRAINS OF SLAVES

Dictaphone Firm Grabbing Inventions

By HAROLD Z. BROWN,
(Federated Press).

A tricky new kind of yellow-dog contract gaining popularity with American employers is typified by an agreement which must be signed by every worker entering the employ of the Dictaphone Sales Corp., largest distributors of office dictating and transcribing machines. Framed by legal master minds trained to think of everything, it signs away not only the employe's right to organize, but his right to the products of his future ingenuity—if any.

Even the humblest stenographer or porter must execute this agreement, making over to the company "any and every invention, improvement, or modification" made while in their employ and relating to dictating machines, their parts, appliances, supplies, production or sale "or in any way to the dictating machine industry." This covers everything from a mechanic's plan for a better electric gadget to a cub salesman's newest bright idea for putting sales resistance to sleep.

"Valuable considerations" for which Dictaphone Corp's. hired hands and rented brains must do this are duly recited: One dollar "in hand paid"; a weekly pay check generously given after it has been worked for; a job where the compliant robot "may be" in a position to learn something about dictating machines and to work with the company's "tool and appliances and

CONCERT PLANS MAKE PROGRESS

Trousands to Be At Big Coney Affair

The rain which last Saturday caused the postponement of the DAILY WORKER concert at Coney Island has resulted in no dampening of ardor among the thousands who had planned to attend this great proletarian musical festival, according to all indications. Several additional thousands, in fact, are expected.

Prof. Leon Theremin, the great Soviet scientist, promises that his new ether-music will be even more beautiful this Saturday because of the week's extra practice that he now has had. All the other artists—Arnold Volpe and his symphony orchestra of 50 picked musicians, the Roxy ballet—are continuing to rehearse in an effort to make their performances as perfect as possible.

All tickets purchased for the concert last Saturday will be good this Saturday. In the sale of the tickets that remain the rule will be: first come, first served. Workers who wish to make more of their seats should buy their tickets at once, at the office of The DAILY WORKER, 26-28 Union Square.

PROTEST BRINGS HOELZ RELEASE

Thousands to Celebrate Return to Berlin

BERLIN, July 16.—Due to the nation-wide protest of German workers, expressed by mass meetings and demonstrations, the Reichstag has been forced to release Max Hoelz, the Communist leader of the Revolution in Saxon in 1921. Convicted on a trumped-up charge of killing a real estate man, Max Hoelz was in prison for seven years.

The workers here are dissatisfied with the Amnesty Bill, just passed and are arranging for huge mass meetings all over the country to demand the unconditional and full release of class war prisoners.

The women have fought side by side with the men and one of them, Senora Adriana Florez, died on the field of battle, according to Rivas.

The general said his wife and the wife of Sandino are in command of the women and both have been through a number of battles. Margarita Aroaz, Sandino's wife, replaced Senora Florez as a leader of the women when the latter was killed.

"These women have distinguished themselves in the fighting side by side with the men whose dangers they share without shirking," Rivas said.

Rivas asserted Sandino has a following of 2,000 men, always short of food and half naked, but well equipped with guns and ammunition. Scores of old women and children have attached themselves to the revolutionary leader and follow him about through the hills. Entire villages, in the districts where the Americans dropped shells from airplanes, have left their homes and joined the army of independence, Rivas continued.

A great number of dynamite grenades, wrapped in hides, have been manufactured by Sandino's troops, who are able to use them with deadly effect.

British Troops Massacre Indian Strikers

FIRE INTO LARGE JUTE WORKERS' DEMONSTRATION

May Call Troops As Mass Feeling Rises

CALCUTTA, India, July 16.—Firing into a procession of several hundred jute mill workers, who were demonstrating for a number of their fellow employes who had been discharged, British police yesterday killed and wounded twenty-three of the demonstrators.

Instantly the news of the outrage spread thru all working class sections of Calcutta and thousands of workers were waiting sullenly yesterday for the next move which the British might make to suppress the strike by violence.

Following the revolt of the peasants in the Gijerat, who have driven the tax collectors from the northern section of the Bombay presidency and, under the instructions of a peasant revolutionary administration, have harvested the crops in the fields declared forfeit by the government, the British are prepared to take any measures against the Indians, and the calling of troops to Calcutta is foreseen as a consequence of yesterday's massacre.

Whether the workers on the Indian National Railways will man the British troop trains is being eagerly awaited by both the workers and the government tonight.

Bombay Workers Aroused.

BOMBAY, India, July 16.—Mass movement against the British authorities was forecast here today as news of the massacre of twenty-three Indian jute strikers by British police in Calcutta yesterday reached this city.

Headquarters of the textile strikers, fifty thousand of whom are on strike in Bombay alone, were besieged with crowds of workers demanding news of the atrocity in Calcutta.

The huge textile strike which has involved over one hundred thousand workers for months, threatened to assume even more militant proportions as the news of the murder of the jute strikers fell like a thunderbolt among the textile workers today.

WORKER INVENTS WIRELESS DEVICE

Every Receiver Can Be Transmitter

NEW YORK, July 16 (UP).—The genius of Earl W. Davidson, a Reading Railroad telegraph operator who likes to tinker around with radio sets in his off hours, has made it possible for the long-suffering radio fan to shout his sentiments right into his loud speaker with the sweet assurance that people for miles around will hear his protest.

Davidson has invented a dingus that can change all of that and make radio a man-to-man sport, like baseball and politics.

The workings of the gadget invented by the genius, Davidson, are very simple, according to him. The effect is to transform any loud speaker into a broadcasting microphone that will ride out into the air on the wave-length of the station into which you are tuned. Davidson's "phantom radio" really steals a ride on somebody else's waves.

Forest Fires Cause Damage On Coast

SAN FRANCISCO, July 16 (UP). Widespread property damage and curtailment of water supplies were threatened today by a series of forest and brush fires in various sections of Pacific Coast states.

Three dangerous fires were burning in Southern California, the hills bordering the San Joaquin Valley were being swept by flames and hundreds of men toiled in blistering heat to halt other fires in Northern California and in the Grays Harbor region of Washington.

Cincinnati Contributes $4,000 to Miners

Above is a group of miners who have been visiting various organizations in Cincinnati in behalf of the starving coal diggers. Cincinnati has contributed about $4,000, which has been distributed through the National Miners' Relief Committee, 611 Penn Ave., Pittsburgh.

The three miners are, left to right, Oliver Rigot, Harry Logsdon, and James White of Eastern Ohio. Next to the miners is W. A. Weeks, a carpenter who has been active in the relief work. Standing (left to right) are Hobart Scott, William Foster and Wallner, who have likewise been active in the work.

PHILA. TEXTILE MEN JOIN MILL COMMITTEE

PHILADELPHIA, July 15.—The heroic performance of the Textile Mill Committees in its leadership of the big New Bedford textile strike, is giving tremendous impetus to the growth of the National T. M. C., reports from this as well as all other textile centers indicate. Philadelphia mill workers are called to another mass meeting of that organization, to be held Thursday, evening July 19, at 8 o'clock at Kennington Labor Lyceum, 2nd and Cambria Sts.

In a call to the textile workers of that district the Philadelphia T. M. C. hails the coming convention called by the National Textile Mill Committees, to be held September 22 and 23 in New York. The official call was made public yesterday.

The Philadelphia unit also declares that the workers in all cloth weaving sections are recruiting in amazing numbers into the T. M. C because they are disgusted with the craven leadership of the United Textile Workers Union of the A. F. of L., who have laid down before general wage cut onslaught of the mill barons all over the country.

The call then cites the need of a national textile workers union which will replace the reactionary U. T. W.

FULLER SPURNED AS "ARBITRATOR"

New Bedford Strikers Resent Insult

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., July 16.—Confronted with the impassible barrier presented by the unyielding ranks of the 28,000 textile strikers here, agents of the mill owners, in the role of "mediators," are again beginning to suggest that the wage-cut question be arbitrated. This time the mediators have gone so far as to suggest as "arbitrator" the murderer of Sacco and Vanzetti Massachusetts Governor Fuller.

In a searching denunciation of those who dare to put forward the name of Fuller as a participant in any kind of labor parley, Eli Keller issued a statement for the New Bedford Textile Workers' Union of the Textile Mills Committee which declares that the mere suggestion of his name immediately brands the whole move as the preparation for a betrayal of the strike.

"To suggest the instrument for the government's murder of Sacco-Vanzetti, who died because they fought for the workingclass as the union is now fighting against the mill bosses, shows how much the strikers can expect from that sort of 'mediation,'" the union statement declares.

The strike committee of the T. W. U. is now devoting much of its

HUGE FUR MASS MEET TOMORROW

Scab Council Fights July Raises

A huge mass meeting of fur workers, called for the purpose of discussing the question of the July wage increases and other important problems, is to be held tomorrow evening in Cooper Union, 8th St. and Fourth Ave., immediately after work.

The meeting tomorrow will be the climax of the "July raise drive" carried on by the Joint Board Furriers Union in the past few weeks. It is nevertheless to be the starting point of a triply intensified campaign for wage raises, which the Joint Board intends to prosecute, according to statements by its officers yesterday.

In addition to a full report on the results of the drive to date, which will be given by the union manager, Ben Gold, plans will be presented on the method to be adopted to secure July increases for every worker in the industry.

A report will also be delivered, it became known, on some "one union" negotiations that were carried on with the officials of the American Federation of Labor. A thoro analysis of the "Progressive Bloc" in the Joint Council, and the role they play in the workers fight for one union in the fur industry, is also to be made, union spokesmen say.

Each day finds the Joint Board able to report the successful furthering of the wage raise drive. The Joint Boards' activity in getting raises for the workers in their shops and the intense propaganda they

The sickness was first noticed at 2 o'clock when several workmen collapsed. For an hour workmen dropped in all parts of the shop.

The city ambulances were called and motorists passing the plant were pressed into service as the sick were taken to two hospitals. All available doctors were called.

Forty persons were taken to the Central Hospital while several others were taken to Medford.

Federal Government Plans Imprisonment of Workers for Anti-Military Activities

[illegible]E JAILED IN WAUKEGAN FOR OPEN AIR TALK

Fight Against Militarism Worries Officer

WAUKEGAN, Ill., July 16.—The authorities here have announced that [illegible] A. Herman, active anti-militarist leader of the Young Workers (Communist) League, probably will be tried by federal authorities for his activities against the military preparations of the government. At present, Herman is held under bail on the charge of "inciting to riot." He has been active in the textile strike in Kenosha. Also, the authorities say he is "guilty" of leading the anti-militarist activities at the Waukegan high school.

Secret service agents make no secret of the fact that every effort is being made to railroad Herman to prison on any pretext. Their fury knows no limit, following the challenge by Herman to Howard P. Savage, past national commander of the American Legion to a debate on the R. O. T. C., and the distribution of anti-militarist leaflets at the high school.

Herman was arrested for speaking at a street meeting and "advocating Communism." Others arrested on the same charge are Gertrude Gran[illegible], Ray Ahola, Joe Plotkin and Sulo Karjala.

Chorus, Cabaret Girls Organize In Chicago

CHICAGO, July 16 (FP).—Organization of chorus and cabaret girls is under way in Chicago. Minimum wages to $35 a week in Chicago and $45 on the road are among the demands of the embryo union. A 5-hour shift on the cabaret floor is another demand. Organizer [illegible] Clevenger says: "In the cabarets the girls are often required to sit with bald old birds and kid them along because they are good spenders. This should not be expected of the girls."

No worker with the right attitude it seems, can look at this show-window of benefits and remain unwilling to "assign promptly to the said Dictaphone Sales Corp. upon demand" anything of value he has thought of, is thinking of, or might think of. He is also bound at the company's pleasure to apply for patents on his inventions in all countries and to turn such patents over to the company without further thought of worldly gain.

Some of the signers, at least, never see the dollar "in hand paid" which they receipted for, the boss remarking in an off-hand way when the contract was signed that he didn't have any change handy. Any real American, of course, would blush to bring the matter up again; the boss might think he was a cheap skate.

Such thrift and foresight, practised throughout 1927, enabled the company to net a profit of $656,000 to pay extra dividends each quarter since last December, and to declare a 10 per cent stock dividend in June.

$3,000,000 SEWER FUND BOX FOUND

Locate Phillips Bank Deposits in Canada

MONTREAL, (UP) July 16.—Ernest Bertrand, K. C., Krown prosecutor, who is acting locally for the people of the State of New York in the Queens sewer scandal case, told the United Press today that the safety deposit box purporting to contain the missing $3,000,000 which is alleged to have been obtained illegally from the city of New York had been located in the Montreal Safe Deposit Company under the name of Francis Phillips. Francis is a son of the late indicted contractor. Bertrand said he and his colleagues would seek a writ from the superior court to compel the bank in question to divulge the contents of the box.

The money is alleged to have been deposited in this city at the instigation of the late John Phillips wealthy Brooklyn sewer pipe contractor, against whose estate the three million dollar suit is being pressed by Albert Ottiner in his capacity as attorney General of New York State.

NAVY WILL STAGE AIR MANEUVERS ON WEST COAST

Demonstration Part of War Preparations

WASHINGTON, July 16.—The navy department has announced that for more than one month, beginning July 26, there will be war maneuvers of the largest number of naval planes ever assembled in the United States. The demonstration, which will be held at San Diego, Calif., is intended to show the power of American imperialism and to feed the jingo spirit in this country.

A total of 204 airplanes will take part in the maneuvers, including 54 pursuit craft, 36 light bombing, 30 scouting, 36 torpedo planes, 36 observation and 12 utility machines.

In its war preparations, the navy department is speeding up the development of the air force. Even the higher officers have been instructed to study aviation. Promotions are being given to the officers who are acquainted with air warfare.

From September 14 to 15, the air force will join the Pacific Coast fleet for operations "against an imaginary enemy."

British Dollars vs. American in Brazil

LONDON, July 16.—The application for a British loan by Brazil of 3,000,000 pounds is to be granted tomorrow. Brazil has been borrowing heavily from both British and United States capitalists, and this latest loan will greatly increase the British imperialist power in Brazil.

To counteract this Wall Street is granting Brazil a loan of $15,000,000, which will also add greatly to the amount of American capital invested in South America.

That the A. F. of L. officials have no intention of interfering with the General Motors Corporation, which is one of the biggest open-shop concerns in the country, was clearly shown by the incident of the Flint Labor Temple.

A. F. L. Refuses Hall

After the Flint Labor Temple had been promised to the workers, the American Federation of Labor officials closed the hall and put up a notice that the auto workers would not be permitted to hold their meeting in the building.

Fifty Thousand Austrian Workers Commemorate Death of Martyrs of July Revolt

POLICE DO NOT DARE TO HALT BIG PROCESSION

Pledge Continuance of Struggle at Graves

VIENNA, July 16.—In spite of the decree of the Vienna police authorities prohibiting all demonstrations during the present month, fifty thousand Austrian workers yesterday participated in the commemoration services for the workers who fell during the July revolt of last year.

Forming a long procession, thousands of workers marched from the capital to the cemetary where the class war dead are buried and placed wreathes upon the graves of the victims.

In spite of the police called out by the government to intimidate the marchers, scores of labor and fraternal organizations took part in the huge anniversary commemoration.

The police did not venture to break up the procession and there was no disorder of any kind on the part of the participants.

Hundreds of onlookers along the route taken by the marchers greeted the procession as it wound thru the city.

Speeches were made at the cemetary pledging the Austrian workers to continue the struggle in which the victims of the July revolt in Vienna had died courageously. After the addresses the demonstrators sang the International.

Little Done for Child Workers by Legislation

"Bad" child labor states improved little or not at all in their legislation in 1928 while some of the better states handed out meager crumbs of assistance, says the National Child Labor Committee. Neither Louisiana nor Mississippi legislators cared to improve their deficient laws.

South Carolina, with the weakest law in the country, reduced from 12 to 10 years the age limit for children of poor parents to be hired out on farms and other non-factory jobs. Compulsory attendance period was strengthened, but the governor vetoed appropriations to enforce the law.

TELEPHONE TRUST TRIPLES RAKEOFF

By LELAND OLDS (Federated Press).

The $185,000,000 additional stock offered to shareholders in the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. calls attention to the extraordinary growth of this corporation's annual contribution to the investing class. Within the last decade the annual cash dividends disbursed by the A. T. & T. have just about tripled, reflecting profits multiplied 3 times over since 1918.

The cash dividends to the owners of this great communications trust amounted in 1927 to $97,379,934. This year they will run to more than $100,000,000 while within a year they will exceed $166,000,000. Ten years ago the annual dividends amounted to $35,229,699.

Stock Dividend.

The telephone trust's regular method of expanding its capital is to offer stockholders the right to subscribe to a certain number of shares at par. As the shares always have a market value considerably over par such an offering really includes what amounts to a stock dividend..

This year's offering gave the right to subscribe to 1 new share for each 6 shares held. The present market value of a share of American T. & T. stock is about $178 which makes the right to subscribe worth something more than $12 a share. Altogether the transaction may be reckoned as a gift of more than $125,000,000 to the stockholders.

The growth of telephone profits and dividends since 1918 is shown in the table:

Super Profits.

A. T. & T. Profits	Bal. for dividends	Dividends Paid
1918	$43,901,322	$35,229,699
1919	44,395,791	35,356,334
1920	51,821,216	35,376,793
1921	54,002,704	42,674,403
1922	66,170,428	52,971,252
1923	81,692,181	63,274,388
1924	91,046,321	70,918,227
1925	107,405,046	81,044,426
1926	116,990,400	86,496,345
1927	128,614,910	97,379,934

Much publicity is being given the elaborate machinery to make sure that every one of the 430,000 stockholders hears of the opportunity to subscribe to new shares of stock. The object of all this noise is to convince the public that the ownership of the telephone trust is widely distributed among small investors.

The stockholders average about 26 shares apiece. This average at par means an investment of $2600 in a single block of stock, which puts it considerably above the average wage earner or salaried worker. And there is some heavy concentration of ownership in the stockholder list

Concentrated Holdings.

The Sun Life Assurance Co. has a block of 76,711 shares. It is only 1 of 20 holding from 9000 shares up. The most interesting figure in the stockholder list is George F. Baker chairman of J. P. Morgan's First National Bank of N. Y. Baker holds personally 53,322 shares. Holdings of 31,391 shares by D. T Waters and 21,000 shares by F. H. Pierson, both of Baker's bank, are generally assumed part of his interest. This would give Baker 105,923 shares with a par value of more than $10,000,000 and rights in the new stock issue worth at least $1,200,000. Morgan henchmen like Baker are skimming the cream in the remarkable expansion of the telephone industry.

STIMSON URGES U. S. CAPITAL

Filipino Freedom Not Mentioned in Speech

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 16.—American capital must be invited to the Philippine Islands if the economic development of the island and the future prosperity of the Filipinos are to be assured, Governor-General Stimson, declared today in his annual address before the Manila legislature. The address was made public here.

The necessity of encouraging the introduction of American capital, he asserted, "probably is the fundamental problem of the Philippine Islands today, underlying nearly all other problems."

The governor-general said nothing about independence in the course of his address.

Grano then caused the conference hall to be surrounded and arrested everyone in it. French Fascists Ban Workers Newspaper

PARIS, July 16.—Two working class newspapers, one Spanish and the other Polish, have been banned by the French Government. The newspapers are printed in Paris for the Spanish and Polish workers who live there. They criticized sharply the fascist dictators Primos de Riveras and Pilsudski.

Those are no exception since the French Government has already banned a number of foreign papers, printed in France. Those that have already been forbidden are the Italian "Unity," the Polish paper "Robotnik" and the Trybuna Robotnitza." Little Entente.

TWO COMMUNIST PAPERS STOPPED IN COLUMBIA

See Dictatorship Looming

BOGOTA, Columbia, July 16.—Whether the law "against Communism" submitted by the Colombian government is accepted by the two chambers of parliament or not, the Colombian government will pursue its relentless suppression of any labor movement, according to its own declaration.

There is considerable opposition in both chambers against the "law against Communism," which would not only attempt to suppress any labor movement, organizations, strikes or labor press, but would even put in danger any bourgeois liberal publication and facilitate the establishment of an uncontrolled conservative dictatorship, which is now in the making. For these reasons the liberal deputies of the chamber and even a few conservative senators oppose this bill.

Though its ultimate acceptance is possible, several liberal and conservative deputies and senators have attempted to remove the worst and most "elastic" sections and to delay its acceptance by obstruction.

In answer to the speeches of a deputy who asserted that this law would make any public activity impossible, the minister of finance, as spokesman of the government said: "The government will defend society when that law is passed, but it is also prepared to defend it, even if the law is not passed."

In the meantime the official organ of the Colombian section of the Communist Party, "La Humanidad," of Cali, and other labor paper, partly edited by Communists, the "Vox Populi," of Medellin, have been suppressed.

MILK DEATHS IN LEE NUMBER 30

No Action Taken Yet Against Company

LEE, Mass, July 16.—Another death, resulting from the septic sore throat epidemic in Lee brought about by a poisoned milk supply, occurred today. This increased the number of persons dead so far of the disease to 30.

The latest victim is Benjamin W. Aires, who contracted the disease here, but whose death occurred in Springfield after the malady had developed into pneumonia.

More cases of the disease were discovered after health authorities made a round of the city to discover new aspects of the epidemic The authorities, however, did not disclose how many new cases had been found. It is thought that these number almost a hundred, which, added to the 700 now known to be in existence, indicates a sick population of about 800.

No concrete action has been taken so far against the milk company whose supply has caused 30 deaths and almost 1,000 illnesses.

MUSSOLINI FOR KELLOGG PACT

Press Ridicules New Scrap of Paper

ROME, July 16.—In a note addressed to the American state department, the Italian government yesterday announced its willingness to sign the Kellogg multilateral peace treaty. The note was signed by Premier Mussolini and briefly stated the satisfaction of the fascist government with the American proposals.

The Italian press, however, is ridiculing the treaty as another scrap of paper bound to be violated at the first serious international crisis..

The press is also pointing out the discrepancy between Kellogg's peace proposals and the war that American marines are waging in Nicaragua.

attention to work out plans for the coming parade of the textile strikers, it was learned. The elaborate preparations now under way and the extreme interests being manifested by the masses of strikers in the parade, gives evidence that this will be one of the mightiest labor demonstrations in recent times.

The Textile Workers Union was granted a permit to hold a strikers' parade several days ago by Mayor Ashley. The overwhelming indignation of the people here at the police attack on the parade several weeks ago forced a change of front by the city politicians.

Signs are rapidly multiplying which support the belief that a mill owners' offensive through a police terror is imminent. This is seen in the recent statement of Police Chief McLeod, who threatened drastic measures if the mass picketing of tens of thousands is continued. The manufacturers also gave a hint to what is being prepared by saying that some strikers would go to work if police action was "stricter."

Picketing Increasing

Picketing at the mills still assumes the character of huge turnouts of thousands of strikers. Even the few tens of scabs the mill owners have been able to muster are rapidly dwindling as each day finds some walking out of a plant to join the picket line.

Another ominous sign is the steps the police are taking to keep the thousands of spectators at each mill moving and not permitting them to congregate as heretofore.

Two Trials In Rome Every Week

GENEVA, July 16.—A new trial of 21 anti-fascists began last week in Rome before the Special Tribunal. They are charged, as usual, with "plotting to overthrow the state power."

The chief defendant is Luigi Scarmigan, who is charged with reorganizing the Communist Party of Italy. To be tried with him are: Ardiccio Donegani, Christino Rossini, Alcide Bertelli, Umberto Tangetti, Pietro Tosani, Carlo Tofarelli, Italo Nicoletti, Marcelle Verdina, Luigi Bardelloni, Luigi Vivaldini Luigi Gatta, Dante Mozzo, Allesandro Valzelli, Giuseppe Mazzanini, Tomasco Imperadori, Antonio Gheno Cesare Bagni and Primo Ghidinelli

Judging from the verdicts that have been handed down regularly twice a week against groups of anti-fascists and Communists, frightful punishments are to be expected.

Young workers for these camps have been recruited from New York, New Jersey and Delaware. The majority, 354, have been assigned to Fort Hancock, and 216 will be sent to Fort Monmouth.

False Promises.

These young workers have been recruited by promises of a free vacation from the long hours of labor in the factories, and in many cases the bosses even continue pay on condition that they attend the camps. Some, especially the students, have been attracted by the appeal of "adventure."

During the month at the camps, those in the C. M. T. C. will receive military instruction to make them more efficient tools for use against workers of this country.

"Citizenship" Bunk.

But even this is regarded by the capitalists and the authorities as a relatively minor matter in comparison with the courses in "citizenship," and the nationalistic propaganda at the camps.

During the month of August, the 570 young men at Fort Hancock and Fort Monmouth will be taught absolute submission to the will of the bosses.

FUNDS NEEDED IN PORTER CASE

The International Labor Defense is answering the challenge of the war department in its effort to railroad John Porter to prison, according to an announcement made by the organization today. Isaac Shorr, the attorney retained by the I. L. D. in the case, is to defend Porter at the trial beginning today. Not only will every possible effort be made in the courts, but the masses must be mobilized in this important struggle with the military authorities, it was stated.

The Porter case will be very expensive, and the I. L. D. will be called upon to face all the forces at the disposal of the government. It is necessary for the workers to aid in this fight. Funds for the defense are urgently needed, it was pointed out. All contributions should be sent to International Labor Defense, 80 East 11th St., New York.

Printers In Merger

Vanguard Press, publishers of 50c labor books, has merged with Macy-Masius to enable it to publish more expensive books on a basis to reward labor authors through royalty payments. Vanguard has published 75 titles in the 50c series and distributed 250,000 volumes.

PALESTINE PRISONERS CALL HUNGER STRIKE

BEIROUT, Palestine, (By Mail).—When the political prisoners in the Jerusalem jail were just about to set out on their allotted walk, they were ordered to return to their cells, because the time had not quite come for their airing. When the prisoners resisted slightly, they were brutally taken in hand by the police and beaten. Prisoner Kaniewski's nose was broken. They were all forcibly dragged to their cells. The feeling of the prisoners was aroused at this injustice and they declared a hunger and thirst strike.

Tortured.

When the wardens discovered the determination of the prisoners three of the hunger strikers, Kaniewski, Seidmann and Langmann, were dragged into a cell, strongly bound and each one was given twelve strokes of a hide whip on their naked bodies. When the commander saw that the strokes were too "weak" he grabbed the whip and beat them himself. The cries of pain of the beaten prisoners and the calls of protest from the other prisoners filled the jail for hours. The three strikers were then taken into separate dark cells and put in chains. Following this the numerous other political prisoners decided to go on a hunger strike. They decided to begin the strike on June 6, since they were assurred that the workers would take up the struggle for the rights of class war prisoners.

Defends Terrorists.

The report of this incident, with many serious omissions, was given to the English representative in Palestine, who telegraphed it to England, where it led to some discussion in the House of Commons. The labor member of parliament Kenworthy, asked the secretary of state for the colonies, Mr. Amery whether he knew of this incident and whether it were possible for the House to make a decision on it. The secretary defended the terrorists of the Jerusalem jail and added: "Beating is a customary punishment for misdemeanors in prison and His Honor the English Minister has declared that this punishment was just."

On the question whether it was a crime to be a member of the Communist Party in Palestine, Mr Amery declared that he was not in the position to answer this question.

The Red Aid of Palestine has decided not to allow this crime against the political prisoners to go unanswered. All over the country protest meetings are being held and the workers demand special rights for political prisoners.

LABOR OFFICALS FINED BY COURT

Defy Injunction and Picket Shop

CHICAGO, (FP) July 16.—Fines of $75 and $50 were levied on business agent John Werlik and Louis Kanule of the metal polishers union for violation of an injunction obtained by the Chicago Flexible Shaft Co. forbidding picketing and other union activities. Werlik and Kenule paraded with placards before the plant against which the union has been conducting a strike for over 15 months. It was the only union shop that refused to raise the scale from $1 an hour to $1.10 a year ago last spring. It is now operating openshop. The company has refused to arbitrate the dispute though the union is willing to accept any Chicago judges the company may select as arbitrators.

FUR WORKERS TO MEET TOMORROW

Will Further Drive For Wage Raises

have carried on have caused many right wing shops to revolt against their "socialist" scab union officialdom and go out on "outlaw" strikes when their bosses refused a raise. The right wing officials met this by sending the industrial squad to beat up and arrest their mutinous members, as was done at the shop of Bloom and Gerber.

Circulars, issued by the Joint Board, which draw a parallel between the raises secured for the workers when the left wing was in control and the miserable pay given now, has aroused the thousands of furriers to a high pitch of indignation.

Meanwhile, the Progressive Bloc in the Joint Council has also launched a damaging barrage of leaflets against the McGrady-Stetsky machine. Those leaflets enumerate facts of deliberate betrayals of the registered fur workers when they attempted to gain wage raises.

The most significant part of the bloc leaflets is the call they issue to the furriers to stop paying dues to the McGrady gang. The bloc leaders, who were until a week or so ago officials of the right wing union, charge that this money is being used to pay graft to the police industrial squad, which now acts openly as the official organizers for the right wing union.

MILITANCY OF ROSARIO LABOR ALARMSBOSSES

Argentine City Is Rid Of Strikebreakers

ROSARIO, Argentine, July 16.—Continuing their attempts to break the organizations of the harbor and other workers, whose increase in strength and militancy during the last few months has been alarming the merchants and authorities of this and other cities thruout the Argentine, a number of large business houses here have announced that they will not open their doors until the future attitude of the strikers warrants. This is understood to mean until the strikers discontinue driving strikebreakers out of Rosario.

The commercial firms shut their doors in protest against the success of the workers and their organizations in ridding the city of scabs.

Traffic in Rosario harbor continues to be impeded as the ship owners and exporters have failed to come to satisfactory terms with the men.

The efforts of the ship owners to import an army of strikebreakers has failed, hundreds of those brought into the city having been run out again by the unions.

Frantic appeals of the owners to the municipal authorities have failed to bring other results than a number of arrests which have in no way materially altered the situation.

Indictment Returned Against Howard

20 GIRLS KEPT FROM SCABBING

Bureaucrats Hamper Shirt Strike

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., July 16.—Members of the Young Workers (Comunist) League considerably aided the young shirt strikers here in gaining a victory over the bosses today. Many League members participated in this morning's picket work, as was promised by a representative of the League to the strikers on Saturday.

There were 60 pickets on this morning's line.

Twenty girls were about to apply for jobs at the Jaco Company, at which the strike is taking place, but were persuaded by the pickets not to weaken their fight against the wage-cut by scabbing on their sister workers. None of the girls went inside the factory to apply.

A meeting between the strike committee and the officials of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, which was to have taken place this morning, was not held, due to the failure of the Amalgamated officials to show up. These officials refused to call out the cutters at the Jaco shop to strike with the others, because they were not given control of the strike. At another time one of the officials conferred with the bosses without the agreement of the strike committee.

I. W. W. "KING'S" SPEECH SHOWS SEAMEN WHY WOBBLIES PLAY NO REAL PART ON WATERFRONT

(By a Seaman Correspondent)

James P. Thompson, the recognized king of the I. W. W., spoke to a small gathering of about seventy-five people recently at the corner of Whitehall and South Sts. After listening to about one hour and a half of his tirade against the Workers (Communist) Party, we can readily understand why the I. W. W. is playing such an insignificant part in the American Labor movement today. Thompson's efforts to confuse the minds of the audience, showing the Workers (Communist) Party in the role of the old bourgeois political parties, and in many cases referring to the Workers Party as labor politicians, was laughed at by the audience, many of whom understood the role it is playing in the struggle for the liberation of the workers and farmers from the yoke of capitalist slavery.

Referring to Communist activities against imperialism in China and Nicaragua, Thompson says that they should let foreign imperialists exploit the masses in those countries until they become industrial proletariats, before organizing them on a revolutionary basis, thus showing that the I. W. W. can be placed in the same category as the "socialist" party, evolutionary, instead of revolutionary.

The save-the-union movement is a failure, Thompson maintains, not mentioning the fact that this movement has drawn thousands of organized miners, as well as unorganized, from the reactionary Lewis machine, and is organizing them in a new miners' union with a militant program and leadership.

The Passaic strike was led to the slaughter by the A. F. of L. reactionary officialdom, says Thompson, but little does he know that the militant rank and file workers who led that strike went into the A. F. of L. with it, or that in this present strike of the New Bedford textile mills we see something big appearing on the horizon as a result of the activities of the Communists in these two fields.

He also referred to the International Seamen's Club program for forming marine workers' progressive committees as a failure and as a dual organization, but "King" Thompson might bear in mind that the marine transport workers of the I. W. W. has been in the field for seven years and today we can estimate its membership on all coasts at not more than two hundred and fifty, in this respect being surpassed by the International Seamen's Union of America, affiliated to the A. F. of L., who at least have a membership of 6,500, out of about 125,000,000 workers actually engaged in the marine industry.

Neither did Thompson mention why the M. T. W. of the I. W. W. lost a membership of 45,000, which it had in the years of 1923 and 1924; not a word was said as to why the I. W. W. refused to affiliate with the Red International of Labor Unions in 1921, and we can readily see that today it is only a national organization without any support from militant labor in other parts of the world.

The I. W. W. is a rank and file organization, he declared, but we must remind Thompson that the only time the I. W. W. amounted to anything was when the late Bill Haywood was dictating the policies of the organization and when Haywood went to the Soviet Union the I. W. W. started to go haywire. The emergency split also helped its downfall to a great extent.

The I. W. W. today is not the I. W. W. of yesterday, and our reply to Thompson is to step aside and let something big take its place in the freeing of the American workers from capitalist exploitation, and that is the Workers (Communist) Party of America.

Philadelphia Barbers' Demands Sold Out by Officialdom, Correspondent Reports

HANdOuTS

This is a free country but in it some are little freer than others. Among those who got a big slice when liberty was passed around are the public utility corporations. They have the privilege of appearing in the schools and telling Johnny and Mary that the workers never could operate the utilities successfully and that the American system is O.K. even if papa is too poor to give them a dime on Saturday night to go to the movies.

The methods by which the corporations obtain these results are clearly shown in a letter from R. R. McGregor, assistant director of the Illinois committee on Public Utility Information, to J. B. Sheridan, director of the Missouri committee:

"More recently we have adopted the plan of having a third party organization make the arrangement with the schools. In strict confidence the Illinois Chamber of Commerce handled it for us during the last summer. We, of course, paid the bill. We try to keep away from announcing the talks to have anything to do with public utilities, our last talks being on the government of business.

"In placing speakers before schools the job is most complete when you make arrangements with the speaker who should be an educator of the highest standing, well known and accepted throughout the state."

This is freedom of speech under capitalism. O course if a poor worker wanted to deny the statements of the public utility hireling he has the freedom to go out into the woods and explain his position to a crowd of poison ivy and locust leaves. But unless he has the backing of the Chamber of Commerce and the spare change to bribe the states' leading educator he wouldn't make connections with the public school audience.

Police Can Do Nothing In Hobo "Jungle"

BURLINGTON, Ia. (FP).—The Rock Island jungle in Burlington is controlled by an ex-hobo who rented a small piece of land adjacent to the tracks. He uses part for his shack and garden. The balance he devotes to a jungle, equipped with tables, frying pans and others things dear to a traveling 'bo. Since it is private property, neither the railroad nor the city police can drive the guests out.

AGREE TO TERMS OF MASTERS AT $32.50 PER WEEK

Urge Rank and File War On Treason

(By a Worker Correspondent)

PHILADELPHIA, July 14. (By Mail).—At the last meeting of the Philadelphia Central Labor Union, on Sunday, July 8, Brother Doughtery of the Hosiery Workers Union disclosed the fact that Brother Allison, business agent of the District Council of the Building Trades, had buttered his bread on both sides at the expense of the union, and had proceeded to eat it. Brother Allison was sent as a delegate to the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor convention with the understanding that the Central Labor Union would have to bear no expense, since Allison is a paid official of the Building Trades. But lo! and behold! at the meeting in June Allison and his friends had pushed through a bill of expenses of $50 for the 4 days of convention!

Criticism Suppressed

Doughtery was then steamrollered in beautiful style, being ruled out of order in several different ways. All the cronies in the C. L. U. rushed to the defense of the fat boy who, as representative of the Building Trades machine, plays a substantial role in controlling the reactionary C. L. U. One of these rescuing knights was Brother McKew, international vice-president of Major Berry's Printing Pressmen, who, among other things, notified Philadelphia labor that he had just returned from the Democratic convention at Houston.

Allison's $50 are safe. Doughtery will be carefully straightened out and will "forget" about bringing the matter up at the next meeting, to which it was referred. Unsophisticated workers who did not understand previously why Allison weighs about 350 pounds, are now beginning to see the light.

Meeting Reactionary

The rest of the meeting went off in true reactionary fashion. A report of the strike situation developing among the Philadelphia Journeymen Barbers was made. The journeymen barbers are demanding an increase in wages from $32.50 a week to $35.00, and a decrease in hours from 57 to 53 a week. The master barbers insist on a cut in wages to $28.00, and the old 57-hour week. In the negotiations of the union officials with the master barbers the officialdom agreed to the old rate of $32.50 a week, selling out the demands of the rank and file in order to avoid a struggle against their "friends."

However, the master barbers were not satisfied with this sell-out. They knew that the limit of betrayal of these labor fakers had not yet been reached. They insisted on the cut to $28.00. A strike will ensue, and the Central Labor Union decided to "co-operate and support the journeymen barbers." With the misleaders that they do have, being assisted by the labor fakers in the C. L. U., the rank and file workers will have to take things into their own hands, and, behind the leadership of the T. U. E. L., put up a fight against the betrayal by these false leaders.

More Anti-Labor Policies

The great, noisy campaign of the Elevator Constructors and Operators to organize the handful of operators in the Snellenberg store, and against the anti-union policy of that concern, was again inflicted on the C. L. U. after everybody thought it had died. The organization methods of Frank Feeney's outfit are certainly interesting, if not particularly novel. There is no strike. Of course not! There is no picketing. That is unthinkable with Injunction-Judge McDevitt just around the corner. No, tens of thousands of letters and postcards are being signed by trade unionists in Philadelphia, and have been sent to the Snellenberg store, declaring that no business would be done with that firm until they recognized the Elevator Constructors and Operators.

Thus far, the Snellenberg store hasn't budged, although the Elevator Constructors claim to have sent 40,000 letters. They intend fighting along this line, even if it takes all summer. With a fighting, competent leadership, not only the elevator operators, who are only a handful, but the thousands of girls and young men who sweat in the department stores of Philadelphia for $10, $12 and $15 for 50 hours a week could be organized with half the money expended. But the Feeneys do not want to fight. They think that it is easier, and it is, to convince the firms that it pays to have a handful of union men, and then advertise itself as a union concern, "friendly" to labor, while grinding out greater profits by constantly speeding up the workers and paring down their pay envelopes.

POLICE BREAK UP CHICAGO MEETING

5 Speakers Arrested; Brutally Handled

WAUKEGAN, Ill., July 16.—Five members of the Young Workers (Communist) League were arrested here yesterday when police broke up an open air meeting that was being held by the Leauge.

The meeting had been progressing peacefully until a well-dressed spectator began to interrupt the speaker and ask questions. The speaker answered all the questions he asked, but the man continued to disturb the meeting. The crowd of workers, who had been listening to the speakers, asked him to keep quiet and listen. He refused to do so, and notified the police that "some Reds are starting a riot." The police came, and without ever questioning the speaker, Sam Herman, or requesting him to stop speaking, pulled him from the stand and placed him under arrest.

Immediately after this, Ray Ahola mounted the stand to protest. He was also arrested. Three others who started to protest against the police tactics and continue the meeting were pulled down and placed under arrest in quick succession. The police handled all of the speakers brutally, and tore the clothes off one.

Until the interruption, over two hundred workers had cheered continually the speaker's explanation of the role of the United States government in working hand in hand with the exploiters of the working class.

After being in jail for several hours, all were released on bail except Sam Herman. The police kept him in jail with the statement that he was "under investigation."

The Young Workers (Communist) League, however, will continue to hold these open-air meetings regularly every week at the same corner

Man Drowns as Many Are Saved in Flood

PHILADELPHIA, July 16.—One man was drowned when the Perkiomen Creek, swollen by heavy rains during the last few days, overflowed its banks yesterday into the Perkiomen Valley, north of here. Scores of summer campers were rescued from tents and bungalows, many of which were carried away by the floods.

The man who was drowned was William Bloomer, 21 years old, who lost his life when he set out with two friends in a canoe to explore the flooded area.

PRISONERS SLAVE IN GEORGIA STATE FARM

(By a Worker Correspondent.)

I have had a fifteen thousand mile adventure in the U. S. A. of which I am now writing to you. I will tell you about America as I found it in my travels in the highways of the land.

I found in the great, free America as I traveled over it, institutions that are called work-houses and reform schools, penitentiaries, poor houses and orphans' homes. Here you find what America really is. Is it free? It certainly is not.

State Farm.

If you should venture down south to Georgia state you would see a state farm controlled by your government. On this farm there are 5,000 prisoners. It is known as a turpentine farm.

The inmates work 12 hours a day and gather sap from the trees. This is made into turpentine and then they extract a higher oil known as oil of juniper and from the products come tar and rausam.

The inmates are men caught by railroad "bull" or are picked up by regular police for vagrancy and are fined $90 or sentenced to 11 months and 29 days to jail. They most often do not have the money and are, therefore, sentenced to the "farm." They are shackled, at this farm, to a ball and chain on their ankles. With this on their feet they are unable to run away.

If the inmates do anything wrong they are tied to a whipping stump, bound hand and foot to it and are beaten by one white and one Negro inmate who are threatened with beatings themselves if they do not beat their fellow inmates and severely at that. The punished man is beaten by a long leather trace to which a bar of lead is attached. The two men used in inflicting the punishment are always the strongest.

"Working Out" Clothes.

Many serve as much as three years before they are granted their freedom. Here are some of the reasons. Shoes and clothing are necessary, to last the 11 months and 29 days since it is hot as hell there. If money can be had then everything is O K. But no one has any money and so in order to get the clothes ordered in a commissary they allow time to be added to their original sentences for them. This is known as working out their clothes. Ninety days are added for a pair of shoes, which are not at all good.

If a man takes sick he gets the "black bottle."

The majority of the men here are northerners and easterners. They travel down south for a job and land in the farm for 11 months and 29 days and often more than that.

Does dear old Al Smith know about this? I'm sure he does. Do Hoover and Coolidge and all the priests and salvation armyists know this? They do. Why don't they do anything about it? It's because this is a capitalist country and because religious institutions are for poisoning the minds of the workers and not for helping them.

These capitalist birds sing "Where is My Wandering Boy Tonight." Yes, he's to be found in such institutions as the Georgia farm, for lack of a job, or else he's 6 feet under from drinking the black bottle given him while he was sick.

No Aid To Workers.

None of these guys will help any workers. They'll only fool them with ideas about becoming president some day. Repeat the constitution to any judge in Georgia today and he will tell you politely to forget it since it was dead and buried when Jefferson and Tom Paine died. The declaration of independence also died with these men, the learned judge says.

But there are many scissorbills, lickspittles of the capitalists. They say they are getting by when they don't even always get mission flops and hardly ever can beg enough for coffee an'. They expect pie in the sky, but I for one would prefer it on earth.

Well, this is only a very little bit of what I have seen and experienced. But you can bet I'll write more about this glorious United States that beats up workers when they want to do something for themselves.

JOHN WM. FITZGERALD.

SUB WORKERS ARE VICTIMS OF EXPLOITATION

Union Man Forced to Earn Boy's Wages

(By a Worker Correspondent)

The foundation and subway contractors of this city have an organization for mutual protection. The executives had a meeting recently to devise some means for preventing the night-watchman from selling their gasoline and oils to the taxi drivers and other auto owners. They have also been selling other materials to the small contractors.

It was suggested by an outsider that if these companies paid their workers a living wage they would not have to become thieves in order to secure an existence. If these contractors paid a living wage they would have all their men be reliable and honest and would not be engaging illiterates, drunkards and ex-convicts, which types have never been union men and never will be.

The A. F. of L. needs this kind of men so that they may shake the bosses down, as Brindell did. I'd like it explained to me why the A. F. of L. union man turns his work over to a man who is widely known as a strict non-union man and works with non-union help on a union job. You will find a man working on 17th St. as a night watchman, who claims to be a "socialist" and a union coal miner from Pennsylvania. How can this man be working 14 hours a day and seven days a week for a boy's wages and yet call himself a union man? He is a good sample of the A. F. of L.'s method of bettering the conditions of the workers.

Two French Workers Trapped in Cave-In

PARIS, July 16.—Two Italian workers, trapped alive when the walls of a tunnel near Bramans Savoie caved in Friday night, were fed milk through a 20-foot rubber tube late today when rescue workers had established communication with them.

The men are Joseph Massiglio 25, and Joseph Peccos, 26. The French women who were trapped in the cave-in died of injuries.

The two survivors complained of cold and hunger when the rescue party first established communication with them.

The bodies of the victims of the collapse had not been recovered late tonight because of the great danger to workers who were attempting to reach them.

ARNOLD VOLPE is universally recognized as one of the few conductors of the foremost rank. His many activities in the cause of musical art, both here and abroad, have made him pre-eminent in the musical realm. They stamp him as an outstanding figure in the musical life of the nation.

Coincident with his activities in the orchestral field of conducting, he is prominent as a violinist, chamber music performer, teacher and composer. His greatest achievements are as founder and conductor of organizations that have proven important factors in the education and musical growth of America. They have made musical history.

Arnold Volpe's criticisms attest his genius as a conductor of extraordinary ability. He is in sympathy with all schools of compositions, from Bach and the early masters of classical literature, through the romanticists, including Caesar Franck, the modernists Richard Strauss and Debussy, as well as the ultra-modern Stravinsky. There is a well balanced mixture of power and poetry in his interpretations. Virility and delicacy contrasted to an infinite degree. Elasticity of tempo consonant with the mood reflected, all resting upon a solid foundation of masterly municianship, potent personality, impartial sincerity and well balanced poise. He has a very retentive memory and, therefore, conducts without a score.

He has the power to sway an audience, and the performers are enthusiastic over his interpretations. That he makes composition pulsate with a life-like spirit by his inspired fervor, poetic warmth and sympathetic understanding is manifested by the numerous testimonials in the form of criticisms which have appeared in the press throughout the country. Such is the art of Arnold Volpe.

Born in Russia, Arnold Volpe began to study the violin at the Warsaw Institute of Music. Later he became a pupil of the noted Leopold Auer at the Imperial Conservatory of St. Petersburg (Leningrad). He graduated with highest honors. He concertized for two years, then again re-entered the same institution for the purpose of mastering theory and composition. He received his second diploma, after completing his studies with Nikolai Soloview.

In 1898, Arnold Volpe came to the United States. Among his numerous activities some of the outstanding achievements are as follows:

In 1918, Arnold Volpe founded and conducted the Lewishon Stadium concerts. It was the first attempt to democratize symphonic music. Also the first successful symphony concerts given at popular prices under the stars, a pioneer achievement, which is being imitated throughout the musical world.

In 1904, Arnold Volpe became founder and conductor of the Volpe Symphony Orchestra.

Its programs featured the works of native composers, attracting wide-spread attention. The performances won national recognition for its leader.

In 1902, Arnold Volpe founded the Young Men's Symphony Orchestra of this city. Hundreds of young students have became professional musicians under the expert guidance of this remarkable leader. In the symphony orchestras throughout the country these same young men are becoming famous as concert masters and leaders of their respective choirs.

Volpe will conduct a symphony orchestra of fifty musicians at the postponed concert, which is scheduled for next Saturday night at the Coney Island Stadium.

TRUFOOD BOSS' BROTHER JOINS PICKET LINE

Waiters, Waitresses on 3 Weeks' Strike

(By a Worker Correspondent)

A large crowd was witnessing the latest developments of the waiters' strike of the Trufood Restaurants.

Henry Saser, the brother of one of the owners, was arrested for picketing. Previously he made a statement for the labor press in which he said that his sympathy is with the strikers and if his brother would refuse to sign a settlement he himself would join the picket line of the strikers.

On Wednesday, July 11, he appeared on the picket line with a large placard. It read as follows: "The Demands of the Strikers are Justified." The other side read: "The proprietor of the Trufood is my brother. My Sympathy is with the Strikers."

The strike of the waitresses and waiters is entering its third week. The bosses still refuse the just demands which are nine instead of thirteen hours work per day for the waiters, eight hours per day for the waitresses, ten and fifteen dollars per week for the waitresses instead of seven dollars per week and twelve dollars per week for the waiters instead of twelve dollars.

HUKHNOVSKY, 4 COMPANIONS ARE RESCUED

Krassin Searches On For Amundsen

im the ice camp off Foyn Island. The Italia survivors are under hysicians' care, but they, who had iven themselves up as sure to die, re even more jubilant than the Krassin's complement, and there is onstant rejoicing aboard the ship.

To Hunt for Others

The Krassin, with Chukhnovsky's damaged plane in tow, will make for Advent Bay to recoal and proceed o search for the six men carried way with the dirigible's gasbag and or Roald Amundsen, discoverer of he South Pole, and the five men who disappeared with him in a French seaplane.

The story of how Dr. Malmgren was left alone on the icefloe while his two companions, Mariano and Zappi, who were saved last week, truck out on an expedition for aid, became known today.

Was Malmgren Alive?

There was every belief, reports here indicated, that Malmgren had died June 15 as his companions marched onward towards where they believed land could be found.

Direct reports here from the steamer Krassin, however, would indicate that Malmgren had been abandoned while he was still alive. Government advices indicated that the two Italians, wearily cold and facing what seemed inevitable death, had left the Swedish explorer alone.

Amundsen Rescue Rumored

JERSEY MAYOR PUT ON STAND

Democratic Graft Is Exposed

Amid a staged demonstration of his political henchmen Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, vice chairman of the democratic national committee, whose Hudson County organization is credited with being one of the most efficient political graft machines in the country, strode into the presence of the Case Legislative Committee investigating Hudson County affairs late yesterday afternoon.

Mayor Hague was questioned only on the acquisition by Jersey City six years ago of Split Rock Pond in Morris County for water supply purposes. He demanded to be cross-examined on the charges of voting frauds and political corruption and his pleas were seconded by Assemblyman Morris Barison, democratic member of the committee.

It was disclosed that this pond which was originally bought for $15,000 cash, has cost the city over $323,000.

SMITH FAVORS OPEN SHOPPERS

sources were about to be turned over to the American Pioneer Power Company, a corporation controlled by Mellon, Young and the dePont interests.

Changes Tactics

Al Smith had at first agreed, but later objected because of the fear that it would have an adverse effect on his presidential aspirations. Accordingly he sent Samuel Untermeyer to adjust the matter with Young. A deal was worked out by Untermeyer, under which the original investment in the project instead of being made by the private companies by means of their own funds, would be furnished by the state. Young's corporation "voluntarily" withdrew its bid and a sort of "quasi-public corporation," such as now advocated by Untermeyer for the traction situation, was recommended by Smith in his next message to the legislature. And to head the concern Smith recommended his master, Owen Young. "I am in full agreement with Young's views on power development," said Smith at the time.

Young is credited with being the real author of the Dawes Plan, under which Germany is tied to the chariot of the American bankers.

ORGANIZE WORKERS' SOCCER LEAGUES

(Labor Sports Press Service)

Spurred on by the success of the Metropolitan Workers Soccer Ltague of New York, members of the latter organization are proceeding with the work of organizing similar leagues in Brooklyn and New Jersey. Conferences for this purpose have been called in those localities and a basis for two more soccer leagues will be laid. For information concerning the Brooklyn league write S. Friedman, 1042 DeKalb Ave., Brooklyn.

The Metropolitan Workers Soccer League entered the field last winter with only a few teams, but by the time the curtain had rung down on the season it had three divisions with more than 32 teams.

Chicago and Detroit are also busily engaged in the organization of workers soccer leagues. Conferences are being called in both cities to set these leagues going. Detroit last season had a league in the field, composed of six teams. As a result of the plans which are now being carried through it is expected that at least six new teams will be brought into the league. In Chicago five teams are backing the call for the conference, which is expected to lay the basis of a strong workers' soccer league for the coming season.

itself. Porter has been held incommunicado for some time and the authorities have been trying to weaken his spirit.

Violated Law.

According to military regulations, a week's advance notice of court-martial is necessary to enable the defense to study the case and call witnesses. However, notice was not sent to Isaac Shorr, International Labor Defense attorney retained for Porter's defense, until today, so he can arrive only in time for the beginning of the trial.

Details Secret.

No details of the charges are known. There is every indication of a determined effort to railroad Porter to prison.

A statement issued by Theresa Valente, secretary of the Porter Defense Committee of the International Labor Defense, calls on the workers to prevent the war department from giving Porter a life sentence.

CHIANG IN NEW BLOW AT FENG

Call Army Reduction Move Against Rival

PEKING, July 16.—Following the dictates of the financiers in Shanghai and this city, Chiang Kai-shek and other warlords assembled in conference at Peking have agreed to reduce the Kuomintang armies for purposes of economy.

Reduction in the size of armies is also seen as a blow to the forces of various individual warlords who threaten the domination of Chiang Kai-shek.

The reduction in armed forces does not, of course, contemplate the abolition of the Kuomintang armies who are being held in readiness for a campaign in Manchuria if the heirs of Chang Tso-lin refuse to accede to Nanking's terms.

Chiang Kai-shek has not yet settled accounts with Feng Yu-hsiang and his troops are being distributed with a careful regard to sudden advances into the territory controlled by Feng should the opportunity arrive.

Immediate settlement of the Chinese Eastern Railroad which is partially controlled by the Soviet government is also under consideration by the warlords at the Peking conference.

SURPLUS MONEY EMBARRASSING TO CAPITALISTS

But Increased Wages Isn't Considered

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press)

Don't be fooled by all this talk about stock speculation being due to excessive brokers' loans and the cure being achieved by manipulation of the federal reserve rediscount rate on loans. It all deals with symptoms, instead of with the fundamental illness of the present economic order. The present fever of stock market gambling, which has been boosting the prices of stocks and bonds to unwarranted levels, is nothing more than a symptom of the unjust distribution of the country's income. The country's circulatory system is out of order.

Surplus Capital.

Too much money is pouring into the treasuries of the investing class and too little is available for consumers. That is the real trouble.

The business bulletin of the La-Salle Extension University blurts out the truth about this big capitalist humbug. Probably it would have been more circumspect if written for any but business eyes. According to LaSalle the stock market inflation is due to the fact "that new capital flotations are not nearly large enough to absorb the surplus of investment capital that is available."

"In the past 5½ years," says La-Salle, "new capital flotations have shown steady increases, from $4,300,000,000 in 1923 to $7,700,000,000 in 1927, but even with this annual expansion of $700,000,000 during that five-year period new capital flotations have not been nearly large enough to absorb the new investment funds coming into the market. Our production and distribution facilities have been increased enormously during the last 5½ years—both as to quantity and as to efficiency—and we have reached the point where it is becoming more and more difficult to make new capital assets return adequate profits. That is why such large proportions of available capital have been going into securities which represent the ownership of, or a claim against, existing assets.

"The large increase in the proportion of total capital financing represented by refusing issues and the unprecedented rise in the prices of so many stocks have the same origin. It is merely the case of a country having more capital than it has available uses for that capital."

Artificial Expedients.

There you have it. The country has too much capital and still every possible means is adopted to assure that it will continue to produce an ever-increasing supply of capital. Instead of cutting down the share going to profits and increasing the share going to wages, the captains of credit manipulate rediscount rates and talk learnedly about the probable effect of the sale of government securities by the federal reserve banks. In the eyes of La-Salle economists these are artificial means.

"The great wave of stock speculation," says the LaSalle bulletin, "offers a real problem for American business, but not the problem that it is usually represented to be. And the solution lies in artificial measures to curb speculation.

Manhattan Transit Corporation and that the company is ready to "do business" with the city at a price which while nominally said to be still in the stage of discussion is actually already agreed upon. This figure is said to be far in excess of the actual value of the lines and for this reason, the five cent fare which is claimed as a desirable feature of the plan will not be possible after the plan is put into operation.

Staged Effect.

It is further charged that the apparent hesitancy of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company in accepting the plan is merely staged for effect so that it may be later "forced" to accept and the public be led to believe that it has secured a bargain.

PHILA. MEN JOIN MILL COMMITTEE

Hail Convention For New Textile Union

and the other innumerable small independent craft unions now in existence.

In discussing the particular condition of the industry in the Philadelphia district, the T. M. C. call declares:

Wage Cuts, Speed-Up.

"At the present time the textile workers here are faced with wage-cuts, speed-up systems, unemployment and a vicious open shop offensive of the employers. The tapestry carpet weavers in Philadelphia received a 15 per cent cut in wages. A few months ago the Wilton carpet workers were handed a 10 per cent wage cut. The hosiery workers have seen similar reductions in the pay envelope. Workers are receiving a starvation wage, working two, three and four days a week. Nine-tenths of the textile workers are unorganized; and the one-tenth organized are led by trade union officials that have no intention of carrying on the struggle against the bosses.

Not only have the A. F. of L. misleaders failed to organize the workers for a fight against the bosses' attack, the statement says, but they have now become the official speed-up and efficiency agents of the mill barons.

"On April 28 and 29 the United Textile Workers officials had a conference in Knitters' Hall to discuss a remedy for the textile industry. At this conference the officials received with great enthusiasm Mayor Mackey, who helped smash the strike of the Fetterolf carpet workers. The remedy arrived at by the labor misleaders was to elect a committee to 'co-operate' with the bosses in securing a higher tariff on upholstery fabrics.

Condemnation of the betrayal and mismanagement of the strike of the Wilton carpet workers, which could have been won with an honest and militant leadership, is registered in the statement.

Betrayals

These organized betrayals of the mill workers extends to every section where the A. F. of L. or similarly reactionary bodies have a foothold. Thousands of textile workers are joining the Mill Committee in Fall River, Rhode Island, New Hampshire and other New England states, giving rise to the popular demand for the organization of a national industrial textile workers organization.

Fascists Explore the Arctic

The wild story of the Arctic also has to do with Bolshevism.

All big nations of Europe taxed their prowess to find the lost aviators of the Italia. In the severe test of human skill, scientific knowledge and courage, one nation consistently and systematically outdid all others. This was the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. It was a feat in the struggle with the forces of nature.

There is deep satisfaction in this. Man's struggle with nature antecedes the struggle between men and will reach its greatest triumphs only after the struggle between classes has ended. That a collectivist society is better fitted to conquer nature's forces than the diseased individualist society of capitalism is a truth of Communism.

One reason the capitalist wise men cannot conceive of the strength and resourcefulness of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics is their inability to understand that a collectivist society is better fit for such struggles.

The collectivist spirit, the Communist spirit, dominates the whole of the actions of society in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

The individualist spirit, the spirit of capitalist acquisition dominates all social acts of other nations.

In the details of the Arctic epic connected with the Italia expedition, the two spirits are shown time and again in sharp contrast. A braggart tone pervaded all preparations for the expedition of Italian fascist officers seeking prestige for Mussolini's dictatorship—the dictatorship which becomes more and more the ideal of capitalism. Capitalism lives and breathes of the rights of individual, private property. The arrogant Nobile is a glorified ambitious clerk of the capitalism of Italy—ambitious for superior acquisition of wealth, if not in gold then in the personal glory that is later peddled for gold. Fascism in politics finds its level in orgies of corruption for the individual enrichment of fascist politicians, for the ideal of fascism is the private property system, the exploitation of the masses to make a wealthy few. What, then, was more natural than for the exalted commander of the expedition to save his own hide, when it came to disaster, and to leave "his men" to death? Nobile, the cowardly commander, is no more than the reflection of a hundred million cowardly bourgeois—the traditional cowards of the market place. Nobile, the coward blustering as the bravest of them all, is only the reflection of the blustering coward Mussolini.

When Zappi and Mariano, fascist officers under Nobile, after their leader had run away to leave them to die, in turn with a heartsickening cravenness stole the food supply of their companion, the Swedish scientist Malmgren, and left him to die on the ice, they too were acting quite naturally as fascist officers, as smaller Nobiles, as little Mussolinis, as uniformed mirrors of the bourgeoisie in the imperialist period.

Then there are Chukhnovsky and his comrades, flyers for the Socialist Soviet Republic.

"Never mind us, save the others." The Soviet airmen willingly remained in the icy wilderness with their wrecked plane so that Mariano and Zappi, their bodies kept warm with the food filched from their crippled and dying comrade, could be saved.

Once in a while a sea captain goes down with his ship rather than save himself while those under his command must drown. But this is out of the individualist spirit of the capitalist society in which we live. Such things attract attention when they happen, because they are an anomally in capitalist society.

Nobile and Zappi and Mariano are more in the spirit of capitalist society. "We left him on the ice; we took his food and compass and left him to die." Mussolini's breed. The kind that obtained financial assistance through the American ambassador to organize an army of cutthroats with which to do battle against the working class for the rights of private property. This is in the spirit of capitalism.

The working class of the world gets a fine glimpse of the latest prototype of present capitalists heroes in the sneaking, lying, deserting cowards, Zappi, Mariano and Nobile.

And we are proud that in the struggle with the wild forces of Nature in the Arctic, the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, fatherland of the world's working class, shows that science and human courage are thriving there.

There is Bolshevism.

BILL HAYWOOD'S LAST DAYS

By SAM DARCY.

IS is being written about a week after Bill Haywood died. Looking on the last moments that J. s Engdahl, Haywood's wife, and writer spent with him we must our admiration for him, a revolutionist, who even on his bed thought only in terms of the proletariat along cor- revolutionary struggle.

r those who know him, it is cessary to characterize Hay- It was fitting that the most tant section of the working class ld have produced him. At nine s of age he joined his father e mines. At thirty he led his strike (a miners' strike in). It is not exaggerating to that during the period 1891 to he left the states, workers ed him more trustingly and more militantly under his ship than they did under that other leader.

His Last Hours.

powerful man was lying on -sheeted bed as we came in. g full well that his hours counted. Three or four times the previous two weeks we told that he would be gone in hours. But he held on. Now, r, he lay calmly, awaiting . Part of him was paralyzed speak only with great ef- he could digest no food. answered our first few ques- very briefly. He felt no pain however, very tired. He ceived everything he wanted coming home soon? He a tear that forced its way did not answer. He heard the Central Committee of the Communist Party had bled asking after his health. pleased him immensely. Finally he wanted news.

We told him of the latest developments in the strike of the coal miners, and of the textile strike in New England. Occasionally he interrupted and asked questions.

We told him that Lewis had issued an expulsion order. He looked scorn and hate.

"Now the miners can get somewhere. They've got to kick Lewis out. The Save-the-Union movement has big mass support. It must use it and not be afraid to go forward. It will have difficulty getting enough good organizers. We always have that difficulty. But they can do it if they stick together. The Party is doing good work. In this respect the miners are better off than they have ever been. In the old days we never had any Communist Party to help us."

He was by this time panting for breath. His nurse looked angrily at us. A clumsy silence ensued. He turned his head towards the window.

"It's summer-time, eh?"

We nodded. Another silence.

A Big Job.

"Too bad the New England strikers didn't go out while Passaic was tied up. They weakened their chances by separating. They got to get the unorganized out. This is the biggest job they face, and it won't be easy. But it's the only way they can win."

Again silence. We showed him a Pittsburgh paper with his picture next to a story on the coal struggles.

"That picture is from Kuzbas."

We said we knew it. We showed the picture to his nurse and his wife who had just come in. Also a batch of other newspapers containing stories of his illness.

Soon our visiting time was at an ehd and we had to leave.

Much of the discussion we have not set down here. But the above gives a glimpse of the man and somewhat explains why the workers always trusted him. His mind and heart were always completely occupied with the class struggle. There are few miners, lumber-jacks, or textile workers who do not know of his work. The South, which even up to the present, has hardly been penetrated by labor organiations, has felt his hand. He was one of the few who succeeded in bringing white and black workers together. Who that knows the South does not appreciate the struggle that this alone must have involved?

Many Stories to Tell.

We knew stories of his work that we picked up among the workers in various parts of the country, But once in a discussion with him we asked him to tell us about them. He embarrassedly laughed, "there is nothing to tell—you simply fight and let your proletarian conscience be your guide."

But there are many stories to tell. He went through the stormy days of the Western Federation of Miners, of which he was secretary-treasurer, and of the early militant I. W. W. of which he was one of the founders. He went through the Cripple Creek struggle, the famous Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone trials, the Lawrence, Lowell, Paterson and many other textile strikes. He went through the anti-war agitation and was one of the few who did not compromise with the bourgeoisie. He was the leader and organizer of dozens of small strikes. The story of the most militant struggles 1890-1919 is the story of the location of his activity.

He represents the best traditions of the American class struggle of his time. It is a sign of strength of our Party that a working class leader of his mettle, experience, and ability should himself come and bring many of his best followers to the banner of the Communist International.

Reveal Big Drop In Textile Employment

BOSTON, July 16 (FP).—But 46 per cent of the number of workers employed in Massachusetts cotton mills in 1919-23 are at work in that industry now. Although the New Bedford strike of 27,000 workers accounts for part of the drop, only 64 per cent of the 1919-23 number was employed before the big strike.

Mine Disasters Take Big Toll

373 Coal Diggers Killed In May; Bosses' Negligence to Blame

By B. K. GEBERT.

Wyoming Valley in Pennsylvania is celebrating the 150th anniversary of the massacre of soldiers and the white settlers in this region in 1778. All patriotic societies, city boards and villages in the mining region from Pittston to Kingston and in the surrounding territories are going wild with partiotism. The old struggles between the whites and Indians of this region are retold, and the old fable repeated that the Indians were murderers while the whites were the victims.

But while they go back 150 years to eulogize struggles, we shall not go so far. We shall mention a few outstanding facts in the present day industrial history of the anthracite region:

Miners Hanged.

About 52 years ago in the city of Pottsville, 19 miners were hanged for organizing workers in this region. In 1897 in Lattimore, 13 miners were massacred by the state troopers under the sheriff Martin. Of these pioneers and martyrs in the cause of labor in the anthracite, not only the "public," but even the bureaucracy of the union have "forgotten." These officials of the union "remember" their connections only with the American legion, the chambers of commerce, the coal operators, and the government. In celebrating the battle of Wyoming not a word naturally, is said of those who lost their lives in fighting and building a union of the coal diggers in this region.

It will also be interesting to know that in the month of May according to the U. S. Bureau of Mines, 373 men lost their lives in the mines, but miners are not worthy of consideration to the greedy coal operators and officials of the union. Out of these 373 miners 50 of them came from the anthracite.

Death Rate Doubles.

The death rate per million tons of coal mined during the month was 8.34 based on a production of 44,748,000 tons as compared with 4.29 for May 1927, based on an output of 43,397,000 tons and 186 deaths.

The unusually high rate for the month of May was due to 230 deaths caused by four explosions. Without these deaths the rate per million tons of coal produced would have been 3.20 which is a normal figure and comparable with other months and years. The fatality rate for May, 1928 for bituminous coal alone based on a production of 36,624,000 tons and 323 fatalities, was 8.82 per million tons, which is also much above normal.

Excluding 220 deaths which occured in three major disasters in bituminous mines, the rate would have been 2.81. The rate for anthracite mines, with a production of 8,124,009 tons and 50 fatalities was 6.15 per million tons. In May, 1927 the fatality rate for bituminous mines was 3.76 that for anthracite was 6.62 and for the industry as a whole it was 4.29. The rates for May, 1928, compared on a normal basis with April of the present year are lower for bituminous mines and slightly higher for anthracite mines.

The bureau of mines records show that during the first five months of 1928 accidents in coal mines caused the loss of 998 lives. The production of coal for this period was 230,128,000 tons, showing a death rate of 4.29 per million tons as against 3.85 for the same five months of 1927, based on 1,053 deaths and 273,642,000 tons of coal. The record for bituminous coal alone from January to May, 1928, was 979 fatalities and 198,326,000 tons, with a fatality rate of 4.02; while that for anthracite showed 191 deaths, 31,802,000 tons and a death rate of 6.01. The same period for 1927 showed 829 deaths in bituminous mines and 240,002,000 tons produced, wth a rate per million tons of 3.45, for anthracite, 224 deaths and 33,640,000 tons produced, with a death rate of 6.666; while for both bituminous and anthracite 1,053 deaths were reported, wth a production of 273,643,000 tons and a fatality rate of 3.85.

Four Major Disasters.

Four major disasters, that is disasters in which five or more lives are lost, occurred during the month of May, 1928. All of these disasters were explosions. One at Mather, Pa., on May 19, killed 195 men. On May 22, an explosion at Harlan, Ky., caused the death of eight men and another at Yukon, W. Va., on May 22, killed 17 men. An explosion at an anthracite mine at Parsons, Pa., on May 25, killed 10 men. These four accidents bring the total number of such disasters to eight, with a resulting loss of 284 lives during the first five months of the present year, as compared with seven for the same period of 1927, with a loss of 140 lives. Fatality rates based exclusiyely on these figures for major disasters were 1.25 and 0.51 per million tons for 1928 and 1927, respectively.

Comparing the record as to causes of accidents from January to May of the present year with that for the same period of 1927, a reduction is noted for haulage, explosives and electricity. No material change occurred in the rates for falls of roof and coal. Because of the unusual number of deaths caused by explosions, that rate was much higher for the 1928 period than for 1927.

Miners' Lives Cheap.

This report of the government office shows that the miners' lives are cheap. In no instance have the coal operators, who are responsible for these deaths been brought under charges of murder. Every coal digger knows that accidents in the mines can be reduced to a minimum, but this would cost money; so the operators let the miners die. They let miners cover the black coal with their blood; and out fo this coal and blood the gold is produced for the capitalists.

Only the miners themselves can stop this butchery; the miners must take control of the union, they must unite with other workers and farmers, to form a labor party and challenge the capitalist government, which at present puts the rubber stamp of "O. K." on the massacres of the coal diggers.

Fake "Farmer-Labor" Convention Ends

Politicians, Lawyers, Bankers, In Aimless Talkfest

By THURBER LEWIS.
(Special To DAILY WORKER.)

CHICAGO, Ill., July 15 (By Mail).—Norman Thomas, nominee of the socialist party, came within one vote of being the pominee of the farmer-labor party for president of the United States. He was beaten by Senator Norris of Nebraska who had already declined the honor.

Thirty delegates, with almost as many different ideas about what the party should do, wrangled for three days over a platform that will probably never be presented to the electorate and then nominated for president a man who may not run.

If Thomas had gone over, Maurer would have been chosen running mate. But with the nomination of Norris, Will Vereene, a wealthy garment factory and cotton mill owner of Moultrie, Georgia, was elected for vice presidential nominee. He is an old Watson supporter in the south, a dry (although the Georgia delegate confided he liked his corn liquor) and is said to be willing to finance his own campaign with a bigger fund than the socialists have.

Futile Convention.

Futility marked the convention throughout. While there were delegates from 11 states and the District of Columbia, it is certain they represented practically no one. Illinois had the strongest delegation, eight, representing a paper organization. The next largest delegation, Colorado with five, came by car as a sort of family group and were probably mandated by not many more than their own number. One or two each came from Minnesota, South Dakota, Oklahoma, Missouri, Iowa, Georgia and Nebraska. The ubiquitous William V. Mahoney, realtor of Washington, D. C., was there. And a former resident of New Mexico, Karl Jursek, side-kick of Murray King of the socialist party, represented that state.

The party, if such it may be called, almost split on the nomination of Norris. Thomas' support was strong. The slate makers for Thomas and Maurer were led by David McVey of the plasterers, a delegate to the Chicago Federation of Labor. He placed Thomas in nomination. William V. Mahoney, representing the Lincoln-Jefferson League of Washington, D. C., is given credit for unwittingly wrecking the hopes of the socialist candidates. He made the mistake of rising to second the nomination of Thomas. This peeved the Colorado delegates.

Petty Bickering.

William Penh Collins, a lawyer of that state, rose to begin a speech with, "We will refuse to be a tail to the Hoover kite," making reference to a speech Mahoney had made to his league earlier in the week about the chances of defeating Smith in a number of southern states with a strong third party ticket.

Collins accused Mahoney of wanting a combination of socialists and farmer-laborites to go south and take democratic votes from Al Smith. He thereupon threw Colorado's five votes to a farmer delegate, Plageman of Iowa, on the first ballot. This made a majority impossible. On the second ballot, a Thomas supporter, evidently thinking the vote to be on vice president, threw a marker for Maurer into the hat and left Thomas with fifteen votes against Norris' like number. That ballot would have made Thomas the candidate. The third ballot stood, Thomas 14, Norris 16.

But the issue is still unsettled. Norris won't run although many delegates think Vereene's thousands will be an inducement. The newly elected executive is, at this writing, still trying to find a successor to Norris in the probable event of his flat refusal. The fighting in committee went on all day and continued into the next. Rumor has it that the big scrap was over whether to have a candidate or not. What few level heads there are realize the whole business has been for nothing.

CAMPAIGN CORNER

PAT DEVINE, Minnesota district organizer, ventures to predict that after this election we will be a legal political party in Minnesota. All that is necessary is to get eleven thousand votes counted for us in the entire state. So say we. It seems that Pat is not very venturesome.

* * *

One book of the beautiful new Vote Communist Stamps or twenty Vote Communist buttons will be sent free of charge to anyone who can write a political fairy tale as good as the story about Al Smith and the poor little crippled boy's spotted fawn. We believe that this story will prove a far better vote catcher than the best yet produced by Norman Thomas. This contest closes Thursday, July 19, at noon. The Campaign Corner Editor will judge all contributions and publish the best.

The Election Program is now on sale by the Workers Library Publishers. Price 10 cents, 30 per cent discount in quantity lots.

Our Ohio comrades have already gathered 4,000 signatures to put the party on the ballot in that state. They need 20,000. Watch their total grow!

* * *

THE Lithuanian Working Women's Alliance is the first women's organization heard from with a donation of five dollars to the $100,000 Communist Campaign Fund.

On being asked how many votes the Communists expect to get, a certain young Pioneer replied: "Too busy to count now: The more we count now, the less we'll count on election day." We must put the party on the ballot. Buy a book of Vote Communist stamps and help boost the campaign.

Who will be the first to make a House Party collection for the $100,000 Communist Campaign Fund and send it in to Alexander Trachtenberg, Treasurer, 43 East 125th St., New York City?

We have a question.

Campaign Corner Editor: Dear Comrade: Do you think our party will be on the ballot in thirty states this year? A. H., Hartford, Conn.

Answer: Yes, if we work very hard and more if we work harder. It depends on the comrades in each state.

Philadelphia has issued a special card for use at open-air meetings. This card is used to register sympathizers.

We note that Albert Gerling of Madrid, Iowa, has bettered an earlier contribution of $5 to the $100,000 Communist Campaign Fund. This time he sends $10.

August 19 to 26 will be National Tag Day Week to help build the $100,000 Communist Campaign Fund.

Barbusse Edits New French Weekly 'Monde'

THE appearance of the first two numbers of "Le Monde," a new weekly in Paris under the direction of Henri Barbusse, noted Communist author and editor, has attracted universal attention.

Writers contributing to the first two numbers include Panait Istrati, young Rumanian writer who tells of the last days of Christian Rakovsky, former Soviet ambassador to France and his friend for years; Rene Marau, Negro author of "Batouala," who begins a new novel; an article by Tagore, Hindu writer, and poems by Luc Durtain, outstanding literary figure in France. Prof. Einstein and Maxim Gorki are collaborators. Miguel de Unamuno, exiled Spanish philosopher, is on the directory which includes Upton Sinclair.

In the first two issues Henri Barbusse himself begins a serial of his trip to Soviet Russia. His most recent contribution to the American press was an article on the fascist terror in one of the last issues of the "Labor Defender."

Philadelphia Barbers Picketing All Shops

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 16.—The journeymen barbers who went on strike here recently are today picketing the hundreds of barber shops in the city and holding meetings for the purpose of further organization among the barbers of the city and vicinity.

The spirit of the strikers is reported to be as strong as ever. The unanimous decision is that no one will return to work until the new hour and wage scale is granted by the bosses.

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., (UP) July 17.—The World Congress of the Communist International opened today with 20 United States delegates, including several Negroes, participating. Six hundred Communist leaders from all over the world were present.

The congress will review the accomplishments of International Communism since the last session and will study the problems of the international working class.

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., July 17.—A meeting of officials of the All-Union Communist Party yesterday heard the report of Rykov, president of the Council of Peoples' Commissars, on the results of the plenary session of the Central Committee of the All-Union Party, and adopted a resolution completely approving the report.

Approve Results.

The resolution of the Leningrad officials approved the results of the plenary session after hearing the report of Stalin, general secretary of the All-Union Party.

The draft program of the Communist International was also approved.

The plenary session of the All-Union Communist Party elected Kaganovitch, the former secretary of the Ukrainian Communist Party as vice president of the All-Union Party.

Stalin addressed the Leningrad officials concerning the tasks of the Sixth Congress of the Communist International. He pointed out that the main difference in the imperialist camp since the Fifth Congress is that Anglo-American antagonism has now become the dominant feature in the world situation.

Antagonisms Remain.

The antagonisms between the United States and Japan, Britain and France, France and Italy, Germany and France, etc., still exist, however.

The main imperialist problems, the speaker pointed out, oil markets, capital exportation, set routes,

WATT URGES AID TO COAL MINERS

Seeks Support for Big Convention

(Special to The DAILY WORKER).

PITTSBURGH, July 17.—Emphasizing the importance of the coming national convention of the Mine Workers, John Watt, chairman of the Convention Arrangements Committee and leading millitant of the new union, yesterday issued an appeal to all friends of the movement to aid in the important tasks before the coal diggers. Watt stressed the need of funds to pay for the necessary expenses of the meeting such as payment for the hall, printing, etc. In addition there will be the problem of paying the fare of scores of delegates who otherwise would be unable to come to the September convention. The address of the arrangements committee is 119 Federal St., N. S., Pittsburgh.

Watt's statement follows:

"Once more conditions in the mining industry compel us to turn to our friends in our moment of need. The struggle has now reached a stage where, with a hearty helping hand on the part of all workers, we can strike a knockout blow to all enemies of the miners.

Decisive Action Needed.

"It has now become clear that decisive and prompt action is necessary to save the hundreds of thousands of miners from dire poverty and misery, which is the aim of the coal operators. All efforts of the Save the Union Committee to save the once powerful miners' union has met with the most stubborn resistance on the part of John L. Lewis. It is plain that Lewis intends to

This campaign banner, bearing the names of Al Smith and Joseph T. Robinson, has been stretched across Wall St., where the real campaign headquarters of the democratic party are located. GERMAN POLICE FIRE ON CROWD; HURT 5 WORKERS

Many Demonstrate When Hoeltz Is Held

BERLIN, July 17.—Five workers were wounded tonight when police fired on a crowd of demonstrators protesting after learning that prisoners to be released under the recent amnesty law will be held until the middle of the week.

Thousands of workers had gathered at the railroad station expecting to receive the prisoners with an ovation and when it was learned they would not arrive a demonstration began. The crowd refused to disperse on orders from them and the officers fired among the crowd.

A large number of political prisoners, including Max Hoelz, German Communist leader, are among those who were not released at this time.

NICARAGUA WAR COSTS MILLIONS

Coming Elections to Require More

WASHINGTON, July 17.—With 302 commissioned officers and 5,318 enlisted men of the marine corps now on duty in Nicaragua, the forthcoming presidential elections will require additional funds from the United States treasury to maintain the hold of American imperialism on the "colony," it was learned here today.

The base cost—pay and subsistence of the enlisted men—would run something over $8,000 a day. General expenses on top of this would add many thousand dollars more to the daily outlay. Even taken at a minimm of $10,000 a day, the cost would be $30,000 a month or at the rate of $360,000 a year.

MOSCOW, July 17.—With the Krassin temporarily out of the rescue field, because of the necessity of refueling, the Soviet icebreaker Maligin has set out to hunt for the Amundsen party. The Maligin reported its position today as 40 miles east of King Karl Island, south of North East Land. It is fighting its way through a heavy storm, which has been making progress difficult since early morning. The aviator, Babushkin, is attached to the Maligin.

FOOD BOSS GETS BIG "WELCOME"

Strikers Visit Him At Vacation Haunt

Alec Bohm, striking member of the Waiters Local 1, was arrested while picketing the open-shop Trufood Restaurant, 44th St. and 6th Ave., yesterday afternoon. The strike here is now more than 4 weeks' old and is effective against the 3 stores owned by the same partners, Sazer and Tofolofsky. The striker later received a suspended sentence when brought before the magistrates court.

Boss Gets Welcome

A demonstration against conditions in the three restaurants of the Trufood Co., employes of which are now on strike, took place Sunday afternoon at the Naturalist Colony, near Plainfield, N. J.

One of the restaurant corporation, Benjamin Sazer, a member of the colony with reputation as a "liberal," had his reputation badly shattered at the meeting when nearly a dozen restaurant workers appeared with their picketing signs and told the assembled colonists, Sazor's neighbors, of the bad conditions on their job and of the refusal of the firm to recognize their union, Local 1, Waiters and Waitresses, A. F. of L.

"Mediators"

A volunteer committee, composed of acquaintances and friends of Sazor, as well as of Tofolosky and Tyre, also firm members, went to interview the three bosses in behalf of the strikers. This committee was composed of A. Bloom, former manager of the Volkzeitung, German newspaper; Chaitt, member of the International Brotherhood of Painters and Paperhangers, and Goldstein, former official of the Dressmakers Local, I. L. G. W. U.

On the grounds that he is "not doing business on Sunday," Sazer

WOULD KILL FOR PROFIT

Remove Ban on Milk that Killed 30

BOSTON, July 17.—New York City's ban against milk originating in the Berkshire district of Massachusetts, centering around Lee, where thirty deaths have occurred in a septic sore throat poisoning epidemic brought on by the poisoned milk supply, was pronounced "no longer necessary" by Dr. George H. Bigelow, State Health Commissioner.

This was the advice given to Dr. Louis I. Harris, Commissioner of Health of New York, in a note stating that the menace was "definitely over."

Meanwhile, at the same time that notice of the epidemic's decline was being broadcasted by the company-hired physicians and state lackeys, over two hundred people were still sick of the disease in Lee. In an attempt to save the milk company

Strike Sentiment Spreads at General Motors Plant

AUTO WORKERS UNION PLANNING MASS RALLIES

A. F. of L. Faker Stays At Company's Hotel

FLINT, Mich., July 17.—Rapid spread of the strike to other departments of the General Motor corporation here was forecast today, following the walk-out of over five hundred men in the Fisher body plant of the big automobile company.

Establishment of the strike committee in the Buick plant of the same corporation has broadcast strike sentiment among thousands of the auto workers, that is crystalizing in the extent of swiftness with which strike and relief organization has already been prepared by the Auto Workers Union. The Auto workers union is playing an increasingly active part in leading the men against the wage slashes the bosses have attempted to introduce.

Arrange Mass Meets.

The strikers under the leadership of Philip Raymond, and Arnold Zeigler, organizers of the Auto Workers Union, are arranging for a series of mass meetings where plans for bringing out on strike the rest of the General Motors departments in Flint and for mass picketing of the struck plant will be discussed.

Following the initial action of the American Federation of Labor officials in ignoring the strike in the Fisher body department, the statement of A. F. of L. organizer Duffy that the workers, if they want to be organized, must come to him at the Hotel Durant, has incensed the men.

Strikers Aroused.

The Hotel Durant is known to be controlled by the General Motors Corporation and the backwardness of the A. F. of L. officials in organizing the men, and this open manifestation of their understanding with the General Motors Corporation is having a profound effect in arousing the strikers.

The strike committee has already stated that it will stand behind the Auto Workers Union in the present struggle since they alone are organizing the men, while the American Federation of Labor officials remains inactive in the Hotel Durant

BISCUIT COMPANY PAYS LOW WAGES

Miserable Conditions Revealed by Worker

(By a Worker Correspondent)

The workers in the National Biscuit Company listened with a great deal of interest to the meeting held last Friday at 15th Street and 10th Avenue by the Workers (Communist) Party. I know, because I was one of them, and all afternoon we workers talked about it. I wish that these meetings are kept up. We all like them and we learn a lot from them. It will be a better way of spending our lunch hour than playing ball on the open lot.

I noticed that when the speakers' stand was first set up in the open lot, a cop came over and said the company won't allow it on their property and made the speaker move the stand over to the corner. That doesn't surprise me, because our bosses don't want us to learn about organizing so that we can demand better pay and better working conditions. In fact, it wouldn't surprise me to have the company soon take some steps against allowing us to listen at all. There are a lot of spies around, and I'm sure that the whole meeting was reported to the bosses.

Receive Low Wages.

We workers in the National Biscuit Company get the most terrible wages, especially in the department where I work, the packing department. In the 10th Avenue to 9th Avenue factories. This department is under the charge of two managers, Mr. Kloper and Mrs. Delure. Mr. Kloper is an old man with a bitter smile, and the other never smiles. They keep our wages lower even than those of the workers in other departments. It is the fault of these two managers that we get as low as

MOBILIZE FORCES FOR 'PARTY DAYS'

Anti-War Demonstration Is Planned

Throughout District 2, members of the Workers (Communist) Party from the lowest functionary to the highest, are preparing for the Party Days, which have been called for July 23, 24, 25, 26, 30, 31 and August 1. It is expected that these Party Days will result in a tightening-up of the entire election campaign machinery of the district, and also in elaborate preparation for a huge turnout at the anti-war demonstration on August 4.

The letter sent to the members of the Workers (Communist) Party reads in part as follows:

"Every party in the Communist International has specially designated days which are called Party Days. The American party has not availed itself of this opportunity in the past. We now propose to do so.

Documents presented by representatives of the prisoners to the members of the Parole Board of the State Penitentiary of Washington, who are considering the requested release of the eight Centralia I. REPORT MURDERER IS A REACTIONARY OFFICER OF ARMY

Five Shots Are Fired Into Body of President-Elect; Death Reported Instantaneous

Was to Have Assumed Office December 1st; Alleged Killer Is Caught

MEXICO CITY, July 17 (United Press).—General Alvaro Obregon, president-elect of Mexico, was assassinated shortly after 2 p. m. today near the town of San Angel, close to the capital.

A man believed to be a captain in the army by the name of Juan Escapulario entered the restaurant and fired five shots into Obregon's body at close range. The president-elect was reported to have died almost instantly.

President Calles went immediately to San Angel to investigate the murder. Police in the town stopped all traffic except for official business and invested the assassination with such mystery that details were unavailable for hours.

It was reported late this afternoon that Luis M. Morones, minister of industry, commerce and labor, has been shot and killed by infuriated Obregonistas. This report is without confirmation.

Morones has been considered as a presidential candidate against Obregon and was one of the faction opposed to the general.

Obregon was the fourth president of Mexico to be murdered within a space of little more than ten years.

The body was reported to have been taken to the center of San Angel but all traffic entering the city, including the automobiles of newspaper correspondents, were halted on the outskirts of the town.

Several of Obregon's friends in San Angel attempted to kill the assassin but police and others prevented. The man was reported to be Juan Escapulario but late today details regarding him still were lacking.

According to reports from San Angel Escapulario reached Obregon's side by posing as an artist

Fines In Liquor

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Prohibition Commissioner Doran announced today that more than $1,000,000 was collected in civil penalties from liquor law violators during the fiscal year ended June 30.

Automobiles worth $5,000,000 were seized last year and more than 50 per cent of the 80,000 cars captured had been sold under liens by dealers, he said.

Harry Anslinger, Chief of the Foreign Control Section of Prohibition Bureau said that in the last twelve months, 5,000,000 gallons of liquor was shipped from foreign countries presumably for entrance in the United States.

INDIA WORKERS STRUGGLE GROWS

Authorities Fire On Strikers

CALCUTTA, India, July 17.—A wave of unrest threatens to engulf all leading industries of India.

The strength of the recently organized unions is increasing and their growth appears to be on a permanent basis.

Strikes and lockouts have affected virtually every important industry in the country, and for nearly four months there has been a series of disturbances with which employers, police, civil and military authorities have found it difficult to deal.

Jamshedpur now is the seat of the movement. The Tata Iron and Steel Company's works there—lovingly fostered by the legislature because it is the only Indian industrial concern of any magnitude, although it is largely managed by Europeans—has been convulsed by strikes which have become a lockout.

Industry Tied Up

The East Indian railway shops at Lillooah, Calcutta, are idle; the Bombay cotton industry is paralyzed, and the jute industry here has ceased functioning, due to the strike of 10,000 workers.

The wave of unrest culminated in an open struggle at Bamangachi. Ghurka troops fired on the strikers by order of Captain Christie. A Bombay jury completely approved the action of the city superintendent of police in firing on strikers under almost identical circumstances.

creased Fare Drive Sweeps Over Country

CAGO TO PAY [illegible] CENTS; ISSUE [illegible] IN NEW YORK

Baltimore On 10c Fare, Others Pending

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

CHICAGO, Ill., July 17.—The granting of a 10-cent fare to the Chicago elevated lines yesterday and the filing in New York City of a petition for an increased fare by the Eighth and Ninth Ave. lines, the third group in New York to apply for the increase, bring into bold relief the country-wide drive of traction and public utility corporations to increase fares, raise rates and pick the pockets of the workers generally.

Work With Politicians

In all cases the hold-ups are being accomplished under the eyes and with the obvious sanction of public service commissions, city officials and the federal courts, whose supposed reason for existence is to prevent the very things which they are now seen to be furthering. Baltimore lines recently put through a [illegible]-cent fare. Practically every upstate corporation in New York has been granted increases. Many applications throughout the country are pending.

Three federal judges, sitting yesterday, granted a temporary injunction to the Chicago lines for the [illegible]-cent fare. After announcing their decision the judges referred the whole matter to a master in chancery, the usual method of putting through fare and rate increases.

Old Plea

The injunction was granted on the company's plea that the present fare is "confiscatory." The same plea is at the basis of the New York increased fare moves. As in New York, the Chicago lines are several hundred per cent "water." In past years dividends paid out have many times equalled the original investment and the present "failure to earn a reasonable return" is really a huge subterfuge in which city and state officials take part.

to prepare plans to present to the National Convention on September [illegible] and 23.

Plan Immediate Steps

Albert Weisbord, general secretary of the National Textile Mills Committee, is to open the regional conference by his presentation of an analysis of the present situation in the textile industry. The conference, its initiators state, will then occupy itself with planning immediate steps to be taken in preparation for the national convention.

The official call heralding the regional conference asks all active workers in Passaic, Patterson, Rutherford, West New York in New Jersey, New York City, Corona, Long Island, Bridgeport, Shelton and other mill centers in Connecticut to come to the conference to participate in the proceedings.

Big Event for Labor

The national convention in September, which is sponsored by the National Textile Mill Committees for the purpose of building a new industrial union in the textile industry, is seen to be one of the greatest developments of the labor movement in recent times. Of more than [illegible] workers engaged in the manufacture of textiles, an insignificant number belong to the A. F. of L. and other reactionary unions, who do not show the slightest desire to organize the large masses of unorganized in the industry.

For this and other reasons enumerated in the official convention call the Textile Mill Committees are calling all workers and their organizations to a New York gathering, where the foundations of a new textile workers industrial union will be laid.

THOUSANDS JAILED OR IDLE IN JUGO-SLAVIA

By HAROLD Z. BROWN
(Federated Press)

PARIS, July 17.—Jugoslavia, synthetic state created 10 years ago by world-fixers at Versailles, is rivaling fascist Italy in the number of political arrests, murders and exiles, asserts a recent press dispatch from the Committee of Fighting the White Terror in the Balkans.

Thoroughly mix sundry minorities of Dalmatians, Slovenians, Croatians and Macedonians with a dominant quantity of Serbs, and you have something that to a Jugoslav minister of the interior seems a "balance of peoples." To the committee it seems "the Macedonian Hell," a "balance of terror and misery."

White Terror

The balancing process has produced 30,000 political arrests and convictions, 7,000 political emigres, 15 political executions and 5,800 open and secret political murders. Further triumphs of "balanced" statesmanship are 200,000 unemployed workers and 100,000 starving peasants. On the other side of the ledger are 120 pensioned ministers, 140,000 holders of government jobs, 300,000 soldiers and 30,000 policemen.

One Belgrade citizen admits having voted 28 times at the last election. As a member of the reactionary nationalist party supporting the present government it was his duty to vote on behalf of himself and 27 dead and absent members of the party, and he got plenty of police protection while he did it.

Wages Low

Low wages and no overtime for workers fortunate enough to have jobs, is another achievement of the Jugoslav regime. Children of 12 do night work for meager wages. Workers who take too much interest in their unions receive domiciliary visits from the police, have their homes ransacked and may consider themselves fortunate if they are only held for some time incommunicado without charges being placed against them.

Political leaders who oppose the government are likely to be assassinated. Stefan Raditch, head of the Croatian peasant party, hangs between life and death now from bullet wounds inflicted in the chamber of deputies. Peasants suspected of the wrong kind of political activity are placed under police surveillance, which means that they must remain in their dwellings from nightfall until 6 a. m. and must rise at least once during the night to report to police, who enter and inspect their homes. They must not leave their villages, possess weapons or keep dogs.

Soldiers who keep this government in power complain that they are fed on insufficient quantities of putrid meat and unclean flour.

ley Everest. One even testifies to the fact that it was Lieutenant Cormier who blew the whistle which started a group of Legionaires on towards the hall for the purpose of breaking into it. The I. W. W.'s in the hall defended themselves against this criminal attack.

Witnesses in the court during the trial, whose testimony was twisted into conclusive proof of the prosecution's charges, now declare that their testimony was intended to prove no such thing, and quote from the court records to substantiate their present declarations.

A juror in the case, E. E. Torpen, swears that "if these men had not been affiliated with the I. W. W organization they would never have been convicted of the crime."

The International Labor Defense together with other labor and progressive elements, is now engaged in a vigorous campaign to obtain the release of all of the eight men who have suffered so intensely for their loyalty to the working class. The agitation for their release is particularly strong in the Northwestern part of the country, where labor and farmer organizations by the score have gone on record for the prisoners.

UNION LEADER WARNS MINERS IN ANTHRACITE

Papcun Shows Danger Facing Coal Diggers

By GEORGE PAPCUN.

It is now over two months since the special district convention in District 1 was held in which the Brennen, McGarry, Harris forces were the dominating factors and which expelled and removed Cappellini as president of District 1. It is very important for the miners of District 1 to take into consideration the action of the new district officials as it has become more evident that they will not carry out even the weak program which they adopted at the special convention because of being forced by rank and file. Immediately after the convention and even now in spite of the onslaught by Lewis against them the Harris, Brennen, McGarry and Issac combination still thinks that Lewis will recognize them, are still spreading the illusions among the miners about Lewis, saying that Lewis is different from Cappellini. Outside of establishing headquarters, the McGarry, Harris combination has done nothing.

Discrimination Remains.

The discrimination against the rank and file willing to fight is being intensified by the old officials and the coal operators. The contractors system still remains and is spreading rapidly. The Pennsylvania Coal Co. has again locked out the miners of the No. 6 colliery, the unemployment situation is getting worse, there is a general worsening of the conditions and wage cuts are taking place, yet the new district officials refuse to put up a fight and lead the miners in the struggle against these deplorable conditions. The rank and file thruout District 1 is ready for a fight. This has been demonstrated by the fact that many local unions have refused to pay the special assessment to the Lewis machine, and in many cases are sending money direct to the rank and file in the soft coal strike districts. There is the other proof that many local unions are daily on strike against the grievances which confront them.

The left wing in Pittston has shown up McGarry for what he actually is to the miners of Pittston. Here where the miners are the first to be attacked, the McGarry forces are doing nothing, the left wing presented a resolution for a general strike of all the Penn. coal miners. While the rank and file was for the resolution, McGarry saw fit not to bring the resolution to a vote.

McGarry is allowing the Penn Coal Co., the contractors and the Cappelini-Lewis-Kennedy machine to starve, demoralize and whip the miners into submission. The new district officials have consistently fought against the national movement of the miners to destroy the Lewis, Murray, Kennedy machine, and are at this time, though not openly, fighting against the National convention, which is to be held in Pittsburgh, Sept. 9 to 16.

Miners Must Fight.

The miners of the anthracite, particularly of District 1, must fight and force the new officials to fight for the National convention, and for the building of a new miners' [illegible]. The miners must understand that the movement cannot be limited to kicking out Cappelini, who is but a part of the Lewis machine. The whole machine must be kicked out. The so-called leaders must give up their scramble for office in District 1 with which they are destroying the miners' union. The miners must also ask why it is that the new district officials do not concern themselves with the condition of the miners in District 1. Why is it that the new officials are not preparing for the time of struggle when the operators will try to destroy the miners' union completely in the anthracite. It must be clear to everyone that the operators today are preparing to deliver the final blow to the miners' union at the expiration of the 5 year agreement or even sooner. The miners must also ask the new district officials why they are so anxious to form a new anthracite miners' union separated from the soft coal, as it is a well known fact that a union separated from the soft coal miners will tend to become a company union used by the company to promote their own purposes.

EGYPT'S MINORITIES AWAIT CITIZENSHIP

CAIRO, Egypt, July 17.—The draft of a law to regulate Egyptian nationality, now before parliament, is meeting with strong opposition from business and financial elements among the Egyptians, who fear that the nationality thus conferred would strengthen the power of the vigorous competitive minorities in the country.

The new law would confer Egyptian nationality upon every child born in Egypt of a foreign father or born in Egypt and attached by race to a people speaking the Arabic language or of the Moslem religion. This clause, particularly affecting Syrians, has met with bitter opposition.

Particular facilities are offered to Turks, many hundreds of whom, banished from their native land by the republican government of Mustapha Kemal Pasha, have found shelter in Egypt, but are deprived of any kind of legal status. Thousands of former Ottoman subjects are awaiting passing of the law to acquire legitimate status.

Within the frontiers of Egypt are thousands of former Ottoman subjects, who claim Egyptian subjection. The most important category of these are Syrians, the majority of whom are well educated and consequently have a great advantage over the average Egyptian. Practically the entire press of Egypt is in the hands of Syrians. In the administration most of the positions requiring higher qualifications are occupied by Syrians. Syrian doctors, dentists, chemists, and lawyers are legion in both Cairo and Alexandria. The commerce of Egypt is likewise controlled chiefly by Syrians, who own banks, enormous merchandise establishments in the chief cities, and are found directing every enterprise of importance.

French "Socialist" Party Executive Endorses Briand Policies by Huge Majority

COLLABORATION URGED; RHINE EVACUATION HIT

Call Rationalization Essential

(Wireless to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, July 17.—The enlarged executive committee of the French "socialist" party has ratified Paul Boncour's League of Nations mandate by a vote of 2,129 against 846.

The committee further declared that rationalization is absolutely necessary. No move was made, however, to protect the workers from the consequences of rationalization.

Collaboration between the workers and the capitalists along the lines of the scheme laid down by Lord Mond in England was also favored by the committee.

Defense of the fatherland was also approved by the "socialists." One section of the committee even went so far as to protest against the evacuation of the left bank of the Rhine.

The policies of Briand were given absolute endorsement.

The session reveals that the French "socialist" party has a completely bourgeois basis.

British See Screen for Armament Race

LONDON July 17.—In spite of obvious credulity concerning the power of the Kellogg multilateral peace treaties to function in time of crisis, the British government is apparently preparing to accept the Kellogg pact tomorrow.

Comments in the British press are frank in questioning multilateral issues, stating that they are obviously designed to protect American investors abroad. Skepticism is general concerning the feasibility of the treaties.

That the arrangement will not prevent the British from increasing their armament activities while affording them a diplomatic screen, is the best feature that some sections of the British press can see in the Kellogg plan.

Dr. Georges Eugene Ricklin, one of the principal figures among the autonomists, was not pardoned, however, the government alleging that Ricklin had appealed from his conviction, and hence a decision of the supreme court was necessary before action can be taken to free him. When the supreme court will decide has not been established.

Of the men pardoned, two, Rosse and Schall, are deputies to the French chamber.

BIG BUSINESS MOVES SOUTH CHEAP LABOR

(By Federated Press).

Southern industry, far from having ended its period of rapid post-war growth, is on the eve of its greatest expansion, according to a survey just completed by Case Pomeroy & Co. This firm lists $170,000,000 to be spent in establishing new manufacturing plants along the Southern Railway. This does not include millions appropriated for factories and mills along the Atlantic Coast Line, Louisville & Nashville, Illinois Central and a score of smaller lines.

Nor does it include enthusiastic estimates on tremendous expansion said to be just ahead for Texas. In the Lone Star State, itself an empire, industrialists are predicting that cotton mills within the next decade or two will rival Carolina's and far surpass New England.

Reason: Low Wages.

No less an authority than M. D. C. Crawford, of Fairchild Publications standard textile trade service, lends a willing ear to boasts that Texas through low wages of poor whites Negroes and immigrant Mexicans and proximity to the best cotton fields, will be the center of the American textile industry.

Carolina's future is seen to lie in finer grades of cotton goods while coarse goods will be made in Texas. Already, northern bankers and textile interests are complaining of the competition for labor in the larger Carolina communities. As for New England, Crawford remarks that "it is said by many textile men that New England would make the finest summer resort in America."

In these words is the threat of annihilation for jobs of at least 200,000 textile workers in New England's cotton mills.

Intense Activity.

From Virginia on the north, says the Case, Pomeroy report, stretching along the western fringe of North Carolina and on into more southerly states, notably Georgia and Alabama, and swinging northward into Tennessee, the plants projected by industries, either as extensions to present sites or as new locations, show an unparalleled era of construction activities.

Largest of all the projects is the plant of the Allied Chemical & Dye Corp. at Hopewell, Va., on which an estimated expenditure of $100,000,000 will be made. The Dupont Rayon Co. plans the erection of a $10,000,000 plant in Richmond and another in Tennessee, while further to the west, at Covington, Va., the rayon industry is being further expanded by the contemplated location of another $10,000,000 project of the Industrial Rayon Corp.

Also Morgan Firm.

At Elizabethton, in the northern corner of Tennessee, the American-Glanzstoff Corp. is listed as planning a $7,000,000 plant. This little mountain town has also been selected as the site of the $5,000,000 plant of the American Bemberg Corp Both are rayon (artificial silk) firms.

The DuPont Co.'s second rayon plant is to be located at Old Hickory, Tenn., a few miles north of Nashville, where a $5,000,000 plant is to be thrown up. The Troy Cotton & Woolen Mfg. Co. is to spend $5,000,000 at Waycross, Ga., where the raw supply may be grown alongside the mills. A like expenditure is to be made by the American Chatillon Co. in Rome, Ga.

The Viscose Corp., in Roanoke Va.; Bemis Bros. Bag Co. in Talladega, Ala.; Alabama Mills Co. in 10 towns in that state; Chevrolet Motor Co. which will erect a $2,250,000 factory in Atlanta; Pullman's $1,500,000 shops in the same city; and the various plants of the Kraft-Phenix Cheese Co. are among other projects.

Great Increases.

Additions to their present mills totalling $3,000,000 in each case, are contemplated by the Lincoln Mills in Huntsville, Ala. and the Gulf States Steel Co. in Birmingham. The five southern states listed are estimated to have manufacturing establishments valued at $869,000,000 The $169,000,000 expansion noted by Case, Pomeroy represents a 20 per cent addition.

FORUM ASSAILS SIGMAN SCHEME

Active Members Meet Tomorrow Night

Over eight hundred cloak and dressmakers, crowding Bryant Hall to capacity yesterday afternoon at an open forum called by the Joint Board of the Cloak and Dressmakers Union, demonstrated their contempt for the latest fictitious organization campaign now being heralded by the right wing organ, The Jewish Daily Forward.

The discussion revolved about the new maneuver of the bankrupt Sigman-Schlesinger machine to extract dues payments from the workers in these shops that recognize the scab union of the right wing, and in forcing more dismissals of left wing workers from those factories.

Free Discussions

Discussions at these open forums are conducted with the greatest freedom and are participated in by the majority of the rank and file. The slogan raised by the leaders of the Joint Board, who opened the discussion, was, "throw out of the shops any gangster agents of the Sigman clique" who appear.

The meeting elected a committee to go to the office of the Jewish Day to tell its "impartial" editors that they are excellent allies of Sigman. "The Day," now masquerading in a cloak of "impartiality" for circulation purposes, recently published an account of the fake Sigman organization drive ing spell for the Joint Council.

Other questions to be reported on are the burning issue of July wage raises for the fur workers.

This question is now the major campaign of the Joint Board. Not only has the Joint Board secured raises for the workers in their own shops but the campaign has so aroused the furriers that raises are being forced thru in shops not recognizing the Joint Board.

Order Attacks.

This despite the active opposition to wage raises put up by the Joint Council, who have gone to the extent of ordering the police industrial squad to beat up and 'arrest their own members when they strike for higher pay.

Inside the right wing Joint Council is a group of organized opposition to the gang in control. They are now broadening the fight for one union in the trade and have split so far from the crew in control as to issue leaflets denouncing them as betrayers and at the same time enumerating in detail the various sell-outs of the Stetsky-McGrady clique.
